About the Author

Mantak Chia

Master Mantak Chia is the creator of the Universal Tao System and is the director of the Universal Tao Center and Tao Garden Health Resort and Training Center in the beautiful northern countryside of Thailand. Since childhood he has been studying the Taoist approach to life. His mastery of this ancient knowledge, enhanced by his study of other disciplines, has resulted in the development of the Universal Tao System which is now being taught throughout the world.

Mantak Chia was born in Thailand to Chinese parents in 1944. When he was six years old, Buddhist monks taught him how to sit and “still the mind.” While still a grammar school student, he learned traditional Thai boxing. He was then taught Tai Chi Chuan by Master Lu, who soon introduced him to Aikido, Yoga and broader levels of Tai Chi.

Years later, when he was a student in Hong Kong excelling in track and field events, a senior classmate named Cheng Sue-Sue introduced him to his first esoteric teacher and Taoist Master, Master Yi Eng (I Yun). At this point, Master Chia began his studies of the Taoist way of life in earnest. He learned how to circulate energy through the Microcosmic Orbit and, through the practice of Fusion of the Five Elements, how to open the other Six Special Channels. As he studied Inner Alchemy further, he learned the Enlightenment of the Kan and Li, Sealing of the Five Senses, Congress of Heaven and Earth and Reunion of Heaven and Man. It was Master Yi Eng who authorized Master Chia to teach and heal.

When Mantak Chia was in his early twenties he studied with Master Meugi in Singapore, who taught him Kundalini, Taoist Yoga and the Buddha Palm. He was soon able to clear blockages to the flow of energy within his own body. He learned to pass the life force energy through his hands also, so that he could heal Master Meugi's patients. He then learned Chi Nei Tsang from Dr. Mui Yimwattana in Thailand.

A while later, he studied with Master Cheng Yao-Lun who taught him the Shao-Lin Method of Internal Power. He learned the closely guarded secret of the organs, glands and bone marrow exercise known as Bone Marrow Nei Kung and the exercise known as Strengthening and Renewal of the Tendons. Master Cheng Yao-Lun's system combined Thai boxing and Kung Fu. Master Chia also studied at this time with Master Pan Yu, whose system combined Taoist, Buddhist and Zen teachings. Master Pan Yu also taught him about the exchange of Yin and Yang power between men and women, and how to develop the Steel Body.

To understand the mechanisms behind healing energy better, Master Chia studied Western anatomy and medical science for two years. While pursuing his studies, he managed the Gestetner Company, a manufacturer of office equipment and became well acquainted with the technology of offset printing and copying machines.

Using his knowledge of Taoism, combined with the other disciplines, Master Chia began teaching the Universal Tao System. He eventually trained other Instructors to communicate this knowledge and he established the Natural Healing Center in Thailand. Five years later, he decided to move to New York, where in 1979, he opened the Universal Tao Center. During his years in America, Master Chia continued his studies in the Wu system of Tai Chi with Edward Yee in New York.

Since then, Master Chia has taught tens of thousands of students throughout the world. He has trained and certified over 1,200 instructors and practitioners from all over the world. Universal Tao Centers and Chi Nei Tsang Institutes have opened in many locations in North America, Europe, Asia, and Australia.

In 1994, Master Chia moved back to Thailand, where he had begun construction of Tao Garden, the Universal Tao Training Center in Chiang Mai.

Master Chia is a warm, friendly and helpful man who views himself primarily as a teacher. He presents the Universal Tao System in a straightforward and practical manner, while always expanding his knowledge and approach to teaching. He uses a laptop computer for writing and is totally at ease with the latest computer technology.

Master Chia estimates that it will take thirty five books to convey the full Universal Tao System. In June 1990, at a dinner in San Francisco, Master Chia was honored by the International Congress of Chinese Medicine and Qi Gong (Chi Kung), who named him the Qi gong Master of the Year. He is the first recipient of this annual award.

In December 2000, the Tao Garden Health Resort and Universal Tao Training Center was completed with two Meditation Halls, two open air Simple Chi Kung Pavilions, indoor Tai Chi, Tao Yin and Chi Nei Tsang Hall, Tai Chi Natural Swimming Pool, Pakua Communications Center with a complete Taoist Library, Internal World Class Weight Lifting Hall and complete 8 Court Recreational Facilities.

In February 2002, the Immortal Tao practices will be held at Tao Garden for the first time using Dark Room technology, creating a complete environment for the higher level Taoist practices.

He has previously written and published these Universal Tao books:

Acknowledgments

The Universal Tao Publications staff involved in the preparation and production of Cosmic Healing I: Cosmic Chi Kung extend our gratitude to the many generations of Taoist Masters who have passed on their special lineage, in the form of an unbroken oral transmission, over thousands of years. We thank Taoist Master I Yun (Yi Eng) for his openness in transmitting the formulas of Taoist Inner Alchemy.

Thanks to Juan Li for the use of his beautiful and visionary paintings, illustrating Taoist esoteric practices.

We offer our eternal gratitude to our parents and teachers for their many gifts to us. Remembering them brings joy and satisfaction to our continued efforts in presenting the Universal Tao System. For their gifts, we offer our eternal gratitude and love. As always, their contribution has been crucial in presenting the concepts and techniques of the Universal Tao.

We wish to thank the thousands of unknown men and women of the Chinese healing arts who developed many of the methods and ideas presented in this book. We offer our graditute to Master Lao Kang Wen for sharing his healing techniques.

We wish to thank Colin Campbell for his editorial work and writing contributions on the first printing of this book, as well as his ideas for the cover. We appreciate his research and great labor. We wish to thank Matt Gluck for his editorial contributions on the revised edition of this book, as well as thanking our instructors, Dennis Huntington and Annette Derksen, for their insightful contributions to the revised version. We thank Dirk Oellibrandt for his technical editing and clear writing throughout the book.

A special thanks goes to our Thai Production Team for their cover illustration and book design and layout: Raruen Keawapadung, Computer Graphics; Saysunee Yongyod, Photographer; Udon Jandee, Illustrator; and Saniem Chaisarn, Production Designer.

Thanks to the testing institutes: Gerhard Eggelsberger, Institute for Applied Biocybernetics Feedback Research, Vienna, Austria and Dr. Ronda Jessum, Biocybernetics Institute, San Diego, California.

We also wish to express thanks to Cosmic Healing Certification Retreat Organizers around the world who have worked with us for many years and helped us prepare this manuscript throughout the Retreats: Beate Nimsky, Vienna, Austria; Serguei Orechkine, Moscow, Russia; Christopher Larthe, London, England; Masahiro Ouchi, Rye, New York; Dr. Angela C. Shen, San Francisco, California; Dirk Oellibrandt, Hamme, Belgium; Brita Dahlerg, Frankfurt, Germany and Lizbeth Cavegn, Zurich, Switzerland.

We wish to further express our gratitude to all the instructors and students who have offered their time and advice to enhance this system, especially Felix Senn, Barry Spendlove, Chong-Mi Mueller, Clemens Kasa, Andrew Jan, Marga Vianu, Harald Roeder, Salvador March, Dr. Hans Leonhardy, Peter Kontaxakis, Thomas Hicklin, Gianni Dell'Orto, Walter and Jutta Kellenberger.

Words of Caution

The practices described in this book have been used successfully for thousands of years by Taoists trained by personal instruction. Readers should not undertake the practice without receiving personal transmission and training from a certified instructor of the Universal Tao, since certain of these practices, if done improperly, may cause injury or result in health problems. This book is intended to supplement individual training by the Universal Tao and to serve as a reference guide for these practices. Anyone who undertakes these practices on the basis of this book alone, does so entirely at his or her own risk.

The meditations, practices and techniques described herein are not intended to be used as an alternative or substitute for professional medical treatment and care. If any readers are suffering from illnesses based on mental or emotional disorders, an appropriate professional health care practitioner or therapist should be consulted. Such problems should be corrected before you start training.

Neither the Universal Tao nor its staff and instructors can be responsible for the consequences of any practice or misuse of the information contained in this book. If the reader undertakes any exercise without strictly following the instructions, notes and warnings, the responsibility must lie solely with the reader.

This book does not attempt to give any medical diagnosis, treatment, prescription, or remedial recommendation in relation to any human disease, ailment, suffering or physical condition whatsoever.

Chinese Medicine and Chi Kung emphasizes balancing and strengthening the body so that it can heal itself. The meditations, internal exercises and martial arts of the Universal Tao are basic approaches to this end. Follow the instructions for each exercise carefully and do not neglect the foundations, i.e, the Microcosmic Orbit and any other supplemental exercises. Also pay special attention to the warnings and suggestions. People who have high blood pressure, heart disease or a generally weak condition should proceed cautiously, having prior consent from a qualified medical practitioner. People with venereal disease should not attempt any practices involving sexual energy until they are free of the condition.

The Universal Tao is not and cannot be responsible for the consequences of any practice or misuse of the information in this book. If the reader undertakes any exercise without strictly following the instructions, notes, and warnings, the responsibility must lie solely with the reader.

Chapter I
Cosmic Healing

Cosmic Healing Chi Kung in the Universal Tao System

Cosmic Healing Chi Kung is an important branch of the Universal Tao, an entire system of Taoist practices for cultivating the body, the Chi and the spirit. Your level of skill in Cosmic Healing Chi Kung will be based upon your mastery of the Universal Tao System as a whole. One of the most important parts of the Taoist practices is working with the energy moving within the body.

Foundation of the Universal Tao System is the Microcosmic Orbit Meditation

This is the major practice to connect with the earth, cosmic and universal forces. This is the way to make a connection with the North Star and the Big Dipper's violet/red light which is one of the very powerful universal healing lights. Through this practice you learn to feel Chi and to use your mind/eye/heart power to guide the Chi flow through the primary energy routes in your body. This practice is later extended to include the arm and leg routes too; it is then called the Macrocosmic Orbit.

Many people, including Chi Kung Masters, come to me and say that they have been practicing Chi Kung for years and nothing is happening. They don't feel any energy and they think that they must be performing their Chi Kung incorrectly. I tell them that they also need to do meditation. Hand movements are nothing by themselves. There are hundreds of different Chi Kung forms in China. You could spend seventy lifetimes just learning the hand movements. The practice of the Microcosmic Orbit meditation will help you to feel the Chi more easily inside, outside or around the body and in the extremities of the hands and feet.

When I was a child I liked to practice Chi Kung so much I had to save my lunch money to learn. After many years of practice of many Chi Kung forms, I started to forget the first form, so I learned it again. One day when I tried to practice and review all the forms that I had learned, I couldn't remember many of them. I sat down and thought, "I only have two hands, two legs and one head. Why are there so many forms? And why are there are so many religions and beliefs." I said to myself that there must be one main thing that they have in common. I started to search and I found out that the most important thing is feeling the Chi within us. Being able to increase, transform, take in and stay in touch with the universal, the cosmic, nature and the earth force. Letting them all combine within us is what is important. Likewise in religion there is God (a Force in Taoism we call Wu Chi, the nothingness, the supreme power controlling the universe); with a good heart and virtue energy we can connect with this force.

The complete practice of the Microcosmic Orbit Meditation is fully described in the book "Awaken Healing Light of the Tao" by Mantak Chia.

Cosmic Inner Smile and the Six Healing Sounds

These are very important practices to make the connection among the organs, the colors and the good virtue energy; each organ color will enhance your connection to the cosmic and the Universal Healing power.

Fig. 1.1 Red for the Heart
White for the Lungs
Yellow for the Spleen
Blue for the Kidneys
Green for the Liver.

Each organ has its own vital color and when abundant it will radiate out as an aura for healing and protection. These organ colors and their associated universal connections have great healing power. The power of the 'Six Healing Sounds' will help enhance the connection to the cosmic source. Each sound will foster different healing energy. The practices also help balance, refine and transform the negative energy back to positive energy.

Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Bone Breathing

Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Bone Breathing are a system of standing meditations. These exercises help you to become grounded and to root your connection into the earth force, in order to build a good structure and absorb greater force. In turn, this will help draw in the heavenly force, which will combine with the very potent healing power of the earth's yellow light. The practice also strengthens the body so you can hold a higher energetic charge. These abilities are essential prerequisites for handling greater amounts of energy.

Iron Shirt Chi Kung also includes the art of 'Changing the Sinews and Washing the Marrow'. Through these aspects of Iron Shirt, you learn to absorb, store and discharge large amounts of energy through the tendons and bones. These practices are outlined in detail in the books "Iron Shirt Chi Kung" by Mantak Chia and "Bone Marrow Nei Kung" by Mantak Chia.

To attain skill in Cosmic Chi Kung, it will help if you practice Iron Shirt, Bone Marrow and meditation as a minimum requirement. Beyond the basic level, the Universal Tao System includes many other intermediate and advanced level Chi Kung practices and meditations. The further one advances, the greater one's mastery of Chi.

Your increasing level of skill in the Universal Tao system will reflect immediately in your Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice. Furthermore, you will discover that you can incorporate many of your Universal Tao practices directly into your practice of Cosmic Chi Kung. We will give you a simple combined practice of the Cosmic Healing Chi Kung, the Inner Smile, Microcosmic Orbit, Iron Shirt and the Sexual practices.

Stages of Mastering Chi

1. In the Universal Tao system, our first goal is to learn to conserve our Chi; when a battery is totally drained it is harder to charge; money makes money, Chi makes Chi. Conservation of Chi will help gain more Chi. To have more Chi we first need to maintain control of the gates through which energy normally leaks out and unwittingly drains our life force.

We leak energy: - through our reproductive system
- through negative emotions
- through constantly turning our senses outward

Without knowing how to conserve the Chi that we already have, what is the point of acquiring more?

2. We learn to balance our Chi; that is, we seek to keep a smooth and balanced flow of energy moving throughout the whole body. If our energy is imbalanced, we may have too much energy in some places and not enough in others; we may also be too yang or too yin. We may have excess or deficient heat, cold, damp or dryness. This imbalanced energy tends to make us go to extremes.

3. We learn to transform our Chi into more beneficial energies. For example, through the Taoist Sexual Chi Kung practices taught in the Universal Tao (the course known as Healing Love through the Tao), we can transform sexual energy back into basic life force Chi. Through other practices (such as the Inner Smile, the Six Healing Sounds, and Fusion of the Five Elements) we learn to transform negative emotional Chi into positive virtuous Chi. Thus Chi is not only the foundation of our health; it is also the basis of spiritual development in the Tao.

4. Once we have accomplished the three previous phases of mastering Chi, we then learn to increase it. Chi pervades all of heaven, earth and nature. In Cosmic Healing

Chi Kung we learn time tested ways to tap into these unlimited and transpersonal reservoirs of Chi and greatly expand the amount of energy available to us. It is very important to master first the stages of conservation, balance and transformation before we emphasize increasing our Chi. Otherwise we may waste the energy we bring in, or we may inadvertently amplify the imbalanced or negative energies that we have not yet learned to bring under control.

5. Finally, we learn to extend our mind to tap into the vast Chi of nature, cosmic and the universe, to heal our body, mind and spirit and to heal other people. Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice sensitizes your hands to the feeling and movement of Chi; it uses the mind-eye power to absorb cosmic Chi into the palm and crown and to send it out through the hands and beyond, so that you can help restore balance in others without touching them or draining yourself.

This may sound fantastic at first, yet recent researchers in Chinese Chi Kung hospitals have not only measured the energies emitted by Chi Kung masters; they have also discovered that different varieties and frequencies of healing Chi can be emitted. This research has been corroborated by experiments in the United States at such places as the Menninger Institute.

Four Sections of Cosmic Healing

The next step is to learn the four sections of the Cosmic Healing Chi Kung, the 'Empty Force' sequence. Each of the four sections of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung develops a different type of energy mastery. Each section begins and ends in the same way, yet has different movements in the middle.

Connecting to Heaven and Earth

The first section of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung emphasizes connecting to the external Chi emanating from heaven and earth. This ability is very beneficial for self-healing and is essential for healing others. If you do not connect to some source of external energy when healing others, you will draw upon your own personal reservoirs. Our personal Chi is limited by nature, and can easily become depleted if we give it away too freely.

Over the past decade external Chi healing has become very popular in China. There are now hundreds of Chi Kung hospitals and clinics throughout the country. Yet many of the Chi Kung therapists can only administer two or three treatments a day; they spend the rest of their day practicing Chi Kung to replenish their own Chi. Those who practice the more traditional Chi Kung know how to connect to the Chi of heaven, earth and nature.

In this first section, you will learn to sense the energies outside your body. You will then learn to draw and absorb these energies into your body and process them in order to use them for self-healing and healing others.

Opening the Bridge and Regulator Channels and Extending your Chi Outwards

The second section opens and strengthens four of the Eight Extraordinary Channels: the Yin and Yang Bridge and Regulator Channels. This section also teaches the student to extend and take in the cosmic Chi and emit Chi out of the body for healing others. This ability is the heart of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice.

Opening and Energizing the Governor and Functional Channels

The third section enhances the energy in the points along the two channels used in the Microcosmic Orbit. Opening the Microcosmic Orbit strengthens and balances one's own energy, and prepares one to heal others. Practicing this section will be of great help with the Microcosmic Orbit Meditation.

Activating One Finger Art and the Chi Belt

The fourth section of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung activates the hands and you will practice emitting Chi from each of your fingers and opening the "Chi Belt." This channel is also known as the Belt Route or Girdle Vessel.

Chapter II
Preparing for Cosmic Chi Kung

Preparatory Practices

In the Universal Tao, we teach Cosmic Healing Chi Kung within an entire system of exercise and meditation. As a part of this system, Cosmic Healing Chi Kung comprises the art of healing oneself and others. It focuses on energy work for projecting Chi to effect these healings. One can easily learn the simple movements of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung without doing any other Universal Tao practices, but if one truly wishes to master the art of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung, it is important to have a firm foundation in the basic Universal Tao practices. Therefore in this chapter we will introduce you to the basic Universal Tao practices that are used in conjunction with Cosmic Chi Kung.

The preparatory practice consists of a few parts; work through each part at your own pace and eventually join them together as a whole.

Always start with "warming the stove" at the abdomen and direct the fire down to the sexual center to transform the sexual energy. Next practice the Cosmic Inner Smile. The Cosmic Inner Smile is a powerful relaxation and self-healing technique that uses the energy of love, happiness, kindness and gentleness as a language to communicate with the internal organs of the body. Each organ corresponds to a specific element and color. For example, the kidneys will consist of the element of water and the color blue. The heart will consist of the element of fire and the color red. This makes it very easy to guide the healing power into each organ by using the appropriate color. The practice also aids the transformation of negative emotions into positive virtuous energy. This transformation is a very powerful Chi Kung practice. A genuine smile transforms negative energy into loving energy that has the power to relax, balance and heal. By learning to smile inwardly to the organs and glands, your whole body will feel loved and appreciated and enjoy more Chi. After the Inner Smile, practice Bone Breathing, Marrow Washing, Cosmic Healing and the Microcosmic Orbit.

Warm Up the Stove

1. Sit on the edge of a chair with your hands clasped together and your eyes closed.
2. Start by doing the "bellows breathing", moving your abdomen in and out quickly. Emphasize the exhalation by breathing out forcefully 18 to 36 times. Rest, cover your navel and feel nice and warm.
3. Next, do the "inner laughing" exercise; you feel the abdomen vibrate inside you. Practice this for a few minutes, allowing the movement of your inner laughter to grow stronger. Then rest and use the mind and eye power to gather the Chi (now felt as a warmth behind the navel) into the Tan Tien. Picture a stove with burning fire behind your navel. Feel nice and warm.

Transform the Sexual Energy

Once you feel the Tan Tien is warm enough, smile down and bring the warm Chi down to the sexual organs; women bring the Chi down to the uterus, men bring the Chi down to the testicles. It may feel like the 'sun shining on the water'. The rays of the sun purify the water until it becomes rising steam. Keep smiling down to the sexual organs and feel the warm or fiery feeling from the navel area continue to flow down to the sexual organs; this transforms the sexual energy into Chi, and this Chi rises up the spine into the brain helping to activate the 'crown' and 'mideyebrow' energy centers.

Focus your awareness in the sacrum. At the very tip of the sacrum there is a hole in the coccyx. Breathe into this hole until you feel some activity there. This may be felt as tingling, numbness or pulsing. If you can really activate this point it will generate 'suction'. Be aware of the sacrum opening. Feel the suction force pulling through the hole in the tailbone (sacral hiatus); breathe into it until you feel it becomes activated. When the sacrum is activated you will feel the suction easily, as well as breathing in the cranium and mideyebrow. Keep on gently smiling and softly breathing into the Tan Tien and feel the suction in the abdomen. Focus 95 % of your awareness in the Tan Tien and 5 % in the sacrum, the crown and the mideyebrow. Be aware of the Tan Tien breathing and observe internally the pulsing and breathing in the sacrum, the mideyebrow and the crown. Do this 36 times.

The bones have the ability to process Cosmic Chi (Chi above and around us) to be used by the body. The joints are also able to store Chi and they also serve as the cushion between the bones.

Be aware of your index fingers and thumbs; lightly raise the index fingers, feel a slight tension and open the thumbs to the sides and feel it magnify. Breathe into the finger tips, until you feel the sensation of Chi entering the fingers. The fingers will feel stiff as they stretch, to make way for the Chi entering the joints. Continue to breath in the Chi - the stiffness will spread to the other fingers, wrists, elbows and shoulder joints making the whole arm tense and stiff. The fingers and the arms become one piece. Eventually the Chi will fill every joint of the body making it into a complete unit.

Be aware of the big toes; breathe into the toes and feel the toes grow longer. When the Chi fills the joints the big toes become tense and stiff. Gradually it will fill the other toes rising to the ankles, knees, hips, sacrum and spine; the feeling may be one of tension and stiffness, numbness or like an electrical charge. The legs and the spine become one piece. You will certainly feel good.

Bone Breathing and Marrow Washing

Bone Breathing is one of the main practices of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung. This is a method of drawing external Chi through the skin into the bones to help replenish the bone marrow, thereby reactivating the production of white blood cells. Sending Chi into the bones will enhance functioning of the immune system. This process also helps to clean out fat in the bone marrow ("Washing the Marrow"), one of the main causes of osteoporosis (brittleness of the bones). Tension in the muscles close to the bones is decreased so Chi and blood can flow into the bones easily, enabling them to become stronger.

The Bone Breathing process uses the mind and the eyes to absorb Chi into the bones. The better your Bone Breathing is the better your Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice will be. Mind and eyes are also used immediately after the exercise to gather the energy at the navel. Once you have it, when you move your hand, the energy will follow easily. You will be able to absorb external Chi effortlessly, so you will not need to use your own energy in your healing work.

Bone Breathing

There are several variations in the Bone Breathing and Marrow Washing process. Here we will introduce you to the first type of Bone Breathing, inhaling and exhaling Chi through the skin and packing it into the bones. In this method, you imagine that your bones are like hollow tubes, and that you breathe and suck the Chi into the bones.

Bone Breathing is practiced in a three-stage process. Let your breathing follow a normal pace. Do not strain or hold your breath too long.

Fig. 2.2 Bone Breathing through the Fingers

1. You can do this practice in the sitting position or in the Embracing the Tree posture (or any other Iron Shirt Chi Kung posture). You will use your mind and eye power to breathe in a short breath and at the same time feel suction. Suck the Chi of the atmosphere into your hands, eventually expand to the universe and breathe in a few more times. Use a combination of 'mind/eyes/heart' power (Yi), to suck the Chi from the atmosphere into your hands, while taking small sips of breath. Once you can clearly feel the increase of Chi 'pressure' in your hands, you extend the feeling throughout your arms. The whole skin surface of the arms breathes in the Chi, feeling the skin holding this pressure.
2. Inhale one more deep breath and lightly contract the arm muscles to squeeze the Chi into the bones. Hold for a while to condense the Chi into the marrow of your bones. Exhale and at the same time feel a distinct heaviness in the bones, meaning that the Chi has been condensed and packed into the bones successfully. Eventually you will use more mental power (mind/eyes/heart power) and less muscle, using soft breathing, to draw the force into the bones. Do 6 to 9 times; rest and feel the Chi that has been condensed into the bones.

3. Proceed in the same way, breathing in progressively through the bones of the forearms, upper arms, scapulae, collarbone, sternum and ribs. You may feel a different sensation as you breathe in each area; in some areas the feeling is cool, in others warm or tingling, depending on the bone structure and the quality of the marrow.
4. Inhale and exhale in the same way through the toes, feet and legs; then, in a step-by-step progression, inhale up through the calf bones, thighbones, pelvis, coccyx and sacrum, and up the spinal column to the C-7 vertebrae.
5. Finally breathe in through the arms and legs simultaneously. Combine their energy as it flows up past C-7 and up through the neck and skull. Breathe in this way for at least nine breaths. Conclude by collecting energy at the navel.

Marrow Washing

You can wash your bone marrow with earth force, heavenly force or with cosmic force. This energy helps to cleanse and rejuvenate the bone marrow.

Heavenly Force Marrow Washing with Violet Light

1. Men place the left palm on the top of the head, and cover it with the right palm. Be aware of your 'Personal Star' (star that appears in your mind's eye and is located above your crown), above. Slightly press the palms and spiral in the clockwise direction, spiralling from the front to the right ear, to the back and the left ear 9 times; rest and feel the increased Chi pressure in the crown. Do 3 sets.
2. Women place the right palm on the top of the head and cover it with the left palm. Be aware of your Personal Star above you. Press the palms lightly and spiral in a counterclockwise direction, spiralling from the front to the left ear, to the back and the right ear 9 times; rest and feel the increased Chi pressure in crown. Do 3 sets.
3. Face your palms towards Heaven and feel that you are scooping a galactic Chi ball from above. This Chi ball contains the North Star (Violet) and the Big Dipper (Red). See the dipper fill with violet/red energy. Imagine you reach out your arms to hold the dipper handle and pour the violet/red liquid over your crown. It will feel like there is a numbness descending. Your palms face down to your crown and pour the whole galaxy onto your crown. You may perceive this energy as violet amethyst and red light frequencies. Smile.

4. Guide this sensation down into your skull, deep into your brain, cervical vertebrae, sternum, thoracic vertebrae, lumbar vertebrae and down through your legs. Feel it penetrating and enlivening your bones, deep into the bone marrow, washing, cleansing, energizing. This 'liquid-like' Chi spills all the way down to your feet. Feel it connecting with the earth through the soles of your feet; be aware of the bubbling springs in the feet (the K1 points of the kidney meridian) breathing and pulsating.
5. Touch your navel with the fingers of both hands. Focus on the door of life, and let the fire activate in the Tan Tien and kidneys. Chi will rise up to the brain.

6. Move your hands down touching your femur bones; feel your hands penetrate into the bone and into the bone marrow. Feel like an electric shock or a tingling moving all the way down through the bones of the leg and down to the soles of your feet.
7. Slowly move your fingers down touching the bone and into bone marrow and extend yourself down past the earth to touch the galaxy on the other side. Raise your sacrum and picture yellow light coming up from the earth and the other side of the galaxy; focus on the Lower Tan Tien and feel it fill with Chi. Do this three times. Go back down to the squatting position.

Fig. 2.4 Galaxies Spiral Star and the Direction of Spiral

8. Place the palms face down to the earth and be aware of the galaxy and the yellow light; make three to six circles to gather the Chi below. Gather the yellow Chi; touch your heels and feel the yellow Chi flowing up the leg bones. Feel the bubbling of your bones like an electric current running up through the feet, tibia and fibula, femur, pelvis, and spine. While touching your bone and bone marrow with your fingers, slide your hands up along the back of your legs; slowly come all the way up to touch the coccyx and the sacrum. Concentrate on your sexual center so the energy will flow and spread out to the sexual organs. Go back to the navel and gather the Chi into your Tan Tien.

Fig. 2.5 Hands circle to gather Earth Chi.

The Microcosmic Orbit Meditation awakens, circulates and directs Chi through the 'Governing Channel', which ascends from the base of the spine up to the head and the 'Functional' or 'Conception Channel', which runs from the tip of the tongue down the middle of the torso to the perineum. Dedicated practice of this ancient esoteric method eliminates stress and nervous tension, energizes the internal organs, restores health to damaged tissue and builds a strong sense of personal well being.

The Microcosmic Orbit is the foundation of Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice. Each new practice is dependent upon the high quality of your meditations and your ability to perfect the Microcosmic Orbit. In order to master Cosmic Chi Kung, one must practice meditation daily. The meditations in the Microcosmic Orbit also strengthen the 'Original Chi' and teach you the basics of circulating Chi. They allow the palms, the soles of the feet, the mideyebrow point and the crown to open. These specific locations are the major points where energy can be absorbed, condensed and transformed into fresh new life force.

- 1. Focus on the Lower Tan Tien (the area where the Original Chi is stored, between the navel, kidneys and sexual organs). Feel the pulsing in this area, observe whether this area feels tense or relaxed, cool or warm, expansive or contracting. Notice any sensations of Chi: tingling, heat, expansiveness, pulsing, electric or magnetic sensations. Allow these to grow and expand. Then let this energy flow out to the Navel Center.

- 2. Use your intention (mind-eye-heart power) to spiral in the navel point guiding and moving the Chi. Let the energy flow down to the sexual center (Ovarian or Sperm Palace).
- 3. Move the energy from the sexual center to the perineum and down to the soles of the feet.
- 4. Draw the energy up from the soles to the perineum and to the sacrum.
- 5. Draw the energy up from the sacrum to the Door of Life (the point in the spine opposite the navel).
- 6. Draw the energy up to the mid-spine point (the T-11 vertebrae).
- 7. Draw the energy up to the base of the skull (Jade Pillow).
- 8. Draw the energy up to the crown.
- 9. Move the energy down from the crown to the mideyebrow point.
- 10. Touch the tip of your tongue to your upper palate, press and release a few times; then lightly touch the palate, sensing the electric or tingling feeling in the tip of the tongue. Move the energy down from the mideyebrow to where the tip of your tongue and palate meet.
- 11. Move the energy down from the palate through your tongue to the throat center.
- 12. Move the energy down from the throat to the heart center.
- 13. Bring the energy down from the heart to the solar plexus and feel a small sun shining out.
- 14. Bring the energy back down to the navel.
- 15. Continue to circulate your energy through this entire sequence of points, at least nine times. Once the pathways are open, you can let your energy flow continuously like a river of energy without needing to stop at each point.
- 16. Conclude when you wish by collecting energy at the navel.

Men: Cover your navel with both palms, left hand over right. Collect and mentally spiral the energy outward from the navel 36 times clockwise, and then inward 24 times counterclockwise.

Chapter III
Cosmic Chi Kung

Opening the Three Tan Tiens to the Six Directions

Introduction

Opening the Three Tan Tiens is a Chi Kung meditation that strengthens our connection to the universe, opening us up to the primordial force of the Cosmos and the energy within Nature. We are dynamically connected to the infinite. "As above, so below" is an echo of wisdom heard from sages and mystics throughout the ages. When we can connect to and absorb the energy that surrounds us, we are able to tap into the many splendors of the universe.

We exist because of the unique combination of the forces that are around and within us. The two main forces are electricity and magnetism. 'Bio-electro magnetism' is the western term for life force, and what the Tao refers to as Chi. For the last 5000 years, the Taoists have utilized this bio-electro-magnetic energy to enhance their way of life and establish a relationship with the universe. Bio signifies life, electro refers to the universal energies (yang) of the stars and planets and the magnetic force refers to the earth force (yin) or gravitational force present on all planets and stars. As we align ourselves with these forces, we become a conduit through which we can absorb and digest these energies through the body, mind and spirit establishing a direct connection with the universe. The Taoists recognized this connection and created the Chi Kung form of 'Opening the Three Tan Tiens to the Six Directions' to enhance our relationship to and our understanding of this connection.

Humans normally access bio-electro-magnetic energy through food and air. Plants take the universal energies of the sun and the magnetic energies of the earth and digest and transform them, thereby making these energies available to all living beings. Taoists believe that the food sources with the purest form of energy are the green leafy vegetables. These have taken sunlight directly into their cells. Rather than waiting until the energy in the universe is processed through plants, the Taoist goes directly to the source of this primordial energy. Through Chi Kung and meditation, the Taoists direct the energy of the universe precisely. Opening the Three Tan Tiens is a meditational Chi Kung exercise that focuses on how to directly tap into the source of energy all around us.

The Tao views human beings as lamps filled with fuel. Many people burn this fuel at very high intensity, without ever taking the time to replenish the oil in the lamp. Alcohol, drugs, tobacco and promiscuity all quicken the depletion of this fuel. The Taoist exercises strive to continually refuel the energy within. The Taoist recognizes that we are limited in our nature as human beings, unless we connect the sources of energy within the universe, thereby becoming infinite. So, within the limitations of our human nature, we constantly fill ourselves with the unlimited abundance of energy around us.

Through their internal quest, the Taoists discovered a doorway to the universe. The more we open our internal energy, the more we are capable of connecting to the forces of energy around us.

Human beings have amazing potential and capabilities. We are unique creatures in the way we use our minds and hands. Look at the world around you, the skyscrapers, the architecture, computers, technology and the myriad creations of man. All have come about through the combination of the mind with the hands. In the Tao practice, we use the mind and the hands, in both Chi Kung and meditation, to connect to the forces of the universe. We use the mind to project a pattern of energy into the universe, to connect to the force, and to bring this energy back into the body.

The mind can travel millions of light years in a few moments. Taoists discovered the unlimited potential of the human mind. If you picture something in your mind; an ocean, a sunset or a mountain, you automatically connect with that image. The mind can take you anywhere you imagine. With the proper training you can connect to the energy of nature and the universe and project your Chi to combine with it, drawing these forces into the body. The hands are called the touching force, and like antennae they can transmit the frequencies and vibrations from space. With the mind and the hands, each of us can journey into the boundless energy of the universe.

Relaxation, Letting Go, Surrender and Ego

In some religions and spiritual paths, there is a great emphasis on surrender and letting go. This is actually a form of relaxation. Taoist practices emphasize relaxation, letting go, and emptiness. When a person is relaxed, the muscles are open, the breathing is soft, and the energy can flow through the channels of the body. There is no resistance and no fighting. This allows the creative and higher forces to flow into us.

Most religions have a similar process. To contact the higher self and the higher forces, one needs to let go and surrender in order to reach the level where one can be in contact and become one with the higher forces. Through the surrender of control, one opens up and touches the forces of nature. However, if you continue to surrender and let go, you will lose the energy you have sent out. In the long term, this will gradually drain you. The force will suck the energy out of you, rather than help you to bring the energy into yourself. To avoid this, at the moment that one is in touch with the higher forces, one again becomes aware of oneself and his or her own energy. One is then able to project his or her own thoughts, intentions and patterns into the force, integrating the outer with the doubling or tripling inner energies. You can bring this force back to your place, your house and into yourself.

One must remain open and empty while using one's intentions, mind and Chi to draw the energy into oneself. What might initially appear to be a paradox is reformed as one does the practice and learns how to be empty and open and to simultaneously retain enough consciousness to draw the force into oneself.

Mind, Organs and Sexual Organs

It seems that some people are disconnected from themselves and from their sexual organs. The mind and organs are therefore separate. Taoism believes that the mind, body and spirit must work together. The results depend on a person's practice.

Brain

The brain can access and generate the higher forces, but storing this energy in the brain itself is not easy. We need to train the brain to increase its ability and capacity to store energy. The brain energy, when increased to a certain level, can enable more synapses to grow, and can help turn protein into brain cells. The Tao believes that with training and practice, one can learn to grow more brain and nerve cells, as well as increase the number of synapses in the central nervous system.

Organs of the Body

The organs can also generate energy, but much less than the sexual organs and the brain. They also have a much greater capacity to store and transform energy.

Sexual Organs

The Tao discovered that the sexual organs are the only organs that can generate a significant amount of sexual energy (life force). However, the sexual organs cannot store the energy efficiently. When too much energy is generated, considerable amounts have to be dumped out. And this is the best energy that one has. It is the ‘creative’ energy.

Three Tan Tiens

The Three Tan Tiens can also store energy, transform it and supply it to the brain, spinal cord, sexual organs and other organs.

The aim of Taoist basic training is to integrate the brain, sexual organs and other organs into one system. If the brain generates too much energy, it can store the energy in the organs. The excess sexual energy can also be stored in the organs and the three Tan Tiens. If the brain generates too much of the higher forces and we are unable to store this energy, we have to throw it away. It is like preparing food for one hundred people, when only one person is eating. The rest gets thrown away. In the same way, when too much sexual energy is produced and there is no place to store it, it is wasted. We do not have enough of this energy to be able to waste it. We have a limited amount of energy and of time.

Some practices just deal with the spirit and ignore the body and the sexual energy. These practices can generate a lot of energy, but when one is not connected to the organs, it cannot be stored anywhere. One will end up draining oneself. Some people practice sitting quietly, emptying the mind, with the whole body relaxed and calm, but very little energy is actually generated. When one gets deep into the practice, some people find it hard to come back to society, because they have no energy and their mind power does not work well. These people have to depend on others to support them.

In the Universal Tao, we are learning to create a sacred and holy temple within ourselves. With the simple practice of smiling to all the organs, we can integrate our bodies, minds and spirits. They are no longer separate. The sexual practice connects the mind with the sexual organs and the brain. The separation between these parts of ourselves is bridged and a synergy is created.

The Taoist practice provides us with the resources to extend beyond the realm of our senses. By tapping into our internal resources and channeling the energy around us, we can perceive much more than the senses normally report to the mind. We want to extend our perception from the limited perspective of the sociologically conditioned senses to the unlimited awareness of the universe. For example, our senses tell us that the earth is flat, that we are stationary, and that heaven is above us. In reality, the earth is a sphere hurtling through space at thousands of miles per hour and the heavens are above, below and beyond the earth in every direction. The goal of the Three Tan Tiens is to connect with the forces from the six directions - above, below, left, right, front and back - and draw all these forces into the body. Eventually, with practice one can draw upon many different energies and use them as needed, thereby giving form to the formless energy that is abundant in nature.

Opening the Three Tan Tiens

Opening the Three Tan Tiens to the Six Directions is just another one of the many resources the Taoist practitioner uses to connect with the universe. The practice combines the power of the mind with the extension of Chi. This combination allows our personal consciousness to directly connect to the patterns and matrices of energy in the universe. When we put our thoughts into the web of the universe, we transform the electromagnetic energy into a force that is accessible to us. The combination of mind power and energy is what allows us to establish a relationship to these creative forces and the high sources of energy.

Three Tan Tiens

Once we make the connection with the forces of energy in the universe, we then want to be able to store this energy in the body. Energy is like money, if you are making a million dollars a year and spend a million dollars, you have nothing left to use in the future. That is the way we live and use our energy in our society. We are spending more energy than we are saving and we are living on borrowed energy, paying very high interest. Our credit will run out very soon.

In the Tao practice, we store energy in the Three Tan Tiens. The Three Tan Tiens are the reservoirs of energy within us.

Fig. 3.1 The Upper Tan Tien is in the brain (the Crystal Room*, third ventricle), and when it is full of energy, the capacity of the brain increases. We store our spiritual intelligence, the mind here. All the Tan Tiens have both yin and yang within them. In nature, the yin and yang are present in all things. Day (yang) turns into the sunset, which turns to night (yin). It is very important to feel the qualities of yin within yang and yang with yin (sunrise/sunset). One quality does not exist without the other. They are inseparable qualities of the same force.*

Fig. 3.2 The Heart Center Tan Tien, between the two nipples, is the Middle Tan Tien*. It is associated with the fire element. Yet, within fire there is always water. The original spirit (Shen) is stored here.*

Fig. 3.3 The lower abdomen at the Navel is like an empty universe, or ocean. We want to feel a universe of energy in the Lower Tan Tien*. Within this universe or ocean, there is a fire, like a volcano under the ocean; 'fire under water'.*

The Three Tan Tiens refer to the three reservoirs of energy within the body. These reservoirs are places where we can store, transform and collect energy. The reservoirs are the source of energy that flows through the body. The meridians are rivers of energy fed by these reservoirs. The goal of Opening the Three Tan Tiens is to continually fill and replenish the energy of the Three Tan Tiens. When we are connected to the Tao, life ceases to be a struggle. Through the observation of nature, the Taoists learned to flow with the stream of energy and connect to forces in the universe.

In these practices, we use a variety of hand movements and body postures to open to the energy around us. We draw the energy from the six directions into the body, activate the three fires, open the Three Tan Tiens and circulate this energy in the Microcosmic Orbit.

Combined Practice

Warm - Up Exercises

Rotating the Sacrum

Rotating the sacrum is an excellent exercise to open the lower back and activate the spinal cord. Place one hand over the sacrum and the other over the pubic bone. Rotate the sacrum in a circle, 36 times in each direction. This movement activates the sacral pump.

Spinal Cord Breathing

Inhale and expand the chest, arms bent at the elbows and extended to the sides of the body. Exhale, tuck the tailbone under you and round the back, bringing the elbows toward one another in front of the chest. Smile. Inhale, expand the chest, tuck the chin in toward the throat, push the chin back and raise the crown and bring the arms out to the sides. Repeat this back and forth movement 36 times. This movement activates the cranial and sacral pumps, and loosens all the joints in the spine.

Shaking

Shake the whole body loose, especially the joints, by bouncing up and down on the heels. Let all the joints open and relax. Also, shake the testicles and the breasts loose. This will open the sexual energy (the yin electric) and you do this on back as well.

The yin and yang are the negative and positive electric forces in the universe. The heart produces impulses (the yang electric) and the adrenal glands produce the adrenal hormone to stimulate the heart to beat. Of all the hormones inside us, this is the one that gives the vital force to our life.

When we concentrate on the sexual organs, the heart and the mind, we can make the yin and the yang electricity combine.

Fig. 3.4 Whole Body shaking and Lymphatic System

True Breath - Skin Breathing

We exist because of the physical food and the unique combination of forces that surround us. The daily requirement of calories is about 6,000 units, while we only get 2,000 calories from food. The other 4,000 calories come from the forces around, above and below us. These forces that surround us are electricity, magnetism, cosmic particle energy, light, sound and heat. If we don't know how to absorb and transform this cosmic food, we need to depend on others to supply us. We then need to ask a priest, monk or holy person to give us our daily spiritual food.

The Taoists discovered that we can learn to absorb these surrounding and universal energies through the skin and the major energy centers. Absorbing energy through the skin is called the True Breath. This powerful energetic technique requires the Inner Smile and relaxation. The more one can relax, the more the body and the skin can open to the energy around us. The practice allows one to extend the mind, to touch the force and to draw that energy back into the body.

Daily Practice: Opening, Connecting and Activating Chi Within and Cosmic Charging

Paradoxically, in order to project ourselves out into the immensity of the galaxies and the universe to gather limitless resources of Cosmic Chi for healing, we must take the first steps of the journey within ourselves. In order to 'go out', we must first 'go in'. The vehicle for this magical journey is powered by our ability to relax in mind and body. As we physically relax and let go of muscular and emotional tensions and joint and bone structures we gain access to the inner realms by turning on our very special subtle smile. It opens the pathways of the parasympathetic nervous system. This helps us to reduce the out flowing habits of our senses so that we can be more alert in sensing our inner universe.

This simple process of 'going in' enables us to develop our internal skills so as to safely 'go out' to the universe.

Practice

Relax and Let go - Smile to Connect with the Universe Within Smile to mideyebrow, eyebrows, eyes, mouth, jaw, tongue, lips, cheeks, ears, shoulders, ribcage and brain. Let the relaxed sensations and the 'Observer Mind' (Upper Brain) sink down into the Lower Tan Tien.

1. Smile to the mideyebrow. Relax and let go. Smile to the eyebrows and let them grow long to the sides. Lower these relaxed sensations down to the Tan Tien.

Fig. 3.5 Smile and Relax to the Mideyebrow and think of the eyebrows growing long.

2. Smile to the eyes: relax the eyes and feel how nice and cool they are. Let the eyes draw back in their sockets and start to sink down to the chest and gradually down to the abdomen, the home of your 'feeling and awareness mind'.

Fig. 3.6 Smile and relax the eyes, sink into the eye sockets and gradually feel the eyes dropping down into the Abdomen.

3. Relax the two broad muscles extending from the outer portions of the upper lips across the cheekbones, and lightly smile feeling their connection to the upper front of the ears. Gradually feel the ears growing 'long', up and down. Feel the ears grow all the way down and connect to the kidneys.

Fig. 3.7 Smile to the Ears and listen to the Kidneys.

4. Open your mouth and relax your jaw, separating the upper and lower teeth. Feel the jaw relax. Once the jaw relaxes the shoulders will relax and drop down. Continue to feel the jaw relax until you feel the saliva start to come out. Relax down to the rib cage. Feel the rib cage drop down, softening all the joints, relaxing down to the Lower Tan Tien. Let the tongue relax back in the mouth. Feel the tongue start to drop down into the throat to the chest and all the way down to the navel sinking the 'floating' sensation down to the Lower Tan Tien.
5. Smile to the shoulders and relax until you feel the shoulders drop and the rib cage relax.

Fig. 3.8 Relax the Jaw; and the Shoulders and Tongue will relax down to Lower Tan Tien.

6. Lightly close the lips, but keep the teeth slightly separated. Physically begin a child-like smile with the corners of the mouth gently uplifted and the outer edges of the eyes softly crinkled up. Breathe through your nose.
7. Smile into the brain and empty the upper (observing) mind down to the Tan Tien.
8. Become aware of your inner universe as a big empty space. Keep on sinking – sinking down, into the darkness of your empty space. Keep sinking and experience the vastness until you get closer and closer to the center, the 'original force.' Stay relaxed and alert so as to be able to see one dot of light. It becomes a galaxy spiraling inside you.

   Do the above practice several times until you become familiar and comfortable with it.

Tan Tien Consciousness: Second Brain

Already terms have been used like 'upper mind', 'feeling and awareness mind' in the abdomen and lower 'Tan Tien'. In the next phase of practice, the 'conscious mind of the heart' is introduced. For those readers who have not been updated on the scientific and medical revelations of the recent era about a 'second' and 'third' brain, we offer the following information.

Along with this, there is the long-standing Taoist practice of cultivating and training consciousness in the Three Tan Tiens, especially the Lower Tan Tien. There is my own experience in participating in brain wave measurements and 'brain energy potential' research in recent years. The combination of all these areas of knowledge and experience in our time, makes Cosmic Healing practices accessible for our minds while also being very 'down to earth.' Now let's talk about the Lower Tan Tien.

In addition to its importance as the control center for the mechanics of the physical structure of the body, the Lower Tan Tien also houses a treasure of even more far-reaching significance. It has been a well-kept secret in the western world, as well as in most of the rest of the world: our Second Brain. Most of us who have had Taoist training in Chi Kung, Tai Chi, various Chi meditations or healing practices have often heard the reminder, 'Be aware of your Tan Tien.' But, do most people really 'get' the meaning of the injunction to always be conscious of the Tan Tien? Probably not. Further, do we use our Second Brain as much as we can? Definitely not.

In western terms, do we actually understand "Be aware of your Tan Tien" as being a way to train consciousness and awareness, like educating a brain in the abdominal area, in our Tan Tien? Probably not. Throughout the world, there are institutions to train the brain in the head. That is good. But, what about training the 'second brain' in the abdominal area? I didn't think of it exactly like that in western terms, either, even though that is exactly what I have been doing all of my life in my Taoist training and teaching.

Personal Revelation

Suddenly I came to understand a few things which are so simple and so important, and that's what I am going to share with you. It started in 1994 in Los Angeles when a clinical psychologist there, Dr. Rhonda Jessum, wanted to start testing me. I agreed to do the testing, but the machines at that time didn't tell me much. However, it was discovered that when I did the Inner Smile meditation, my brain waves went down dramatically – but at the same time, my 'beta' waves increased to a very high level. That means the waves showed that I could be driving a car, but that my brain should have been resting and sleeping. So the researchers said, "Hey, how did you do that?" I didn't understand either – because it was not clear to me either.

Fig. 3.11 Second Brain

After that, I was invited to start testing in Europe by the Institute for Applied Biocybernetics and Feedback Research. My name is becoming known there because I teach in Europe a lot. One of the biggest institutes for training top athletes in Europe is in Vienna. They developed an instrument that can measure the brain's potential energy, which represents all the energy in the body. The doctors also said that this proves to the west that Chi exists, there is energy and a life force running in the body. That instrument picks it up in the brain and indicates how much potential brain energy you have. It also determines how much energy you have for the whole day and how much of that energy is for mental clarity and body power. They use these instruments to measure the athletes.

The study measures brainwave frequencies during four practices.

It's interesting because the energy I have been describing in my teaching is exactly what they were measuring during their testing. So I went there and did the measurements with them. I just did the Inner Smile, smiling into my abdomen. They picked up these readings very quickly and said, "Your brain waves are going lower, lower and resting – and you are nearly in the sleeping state." At the same time, the muscle tension was very low, the heartbeat was very low and the skin resistance was very low. After that, I surged the energy up to the brain and they started to see that the energy actually charged up there. When we are thinking, worrying or feeling anger, shame or guilt – the energy level in the brain actually decreases, and the brain doesn't get charged up. They were quite amazed, and said, "Hey, this is what we're looking for!"

They asked me what I was doing. I said, "I'm smiling to my abdomen." They kept on talking to me and asking me questions. They discovered that this brain (in the head) was not very active at all, meaning that there was not much activity in the brain. It was still in a very light resting state. But, how could I answer their questions? They said, "Hey, look! Master Chia is talking to us in his sleep. How can he talk to us in his sleep?"

After that, I said, "Oh, I understand now." Because, throughout the whole practice of the Tao is the injunction, 'train the second brain in order to use the second brain.' It took the westerners a long time to understand that. So, when the article about the 'Hidden Brain in the Gut' came out in The New York Times,[1] I started to understand that. You can be miserable; you can be happy; you can feel all kinds of feelings. But according to this article, they had also discovered that this brain in the gut, the enteric nervous system, can do a lot of functions. It says that this gut brain can send and receive impulses; it can record experience and respond to emotions. So, it is like a brain. In this article, they had only discovered that the large intestine and the small intestines have the same neurons as the brain cells. After that article, a new book, The Second Brain, was published.[2]

Now in medical science, I might add, they have begun to discover consciousness in the heart. They found that the heart can record a whole event, and it has its own brain. Dr. Paul Pearsall has written a new book, called The Heart's Code.[3] They have found that people who have a heart transplant actually get the emotions of the donor. They actually experience whatever the donor experienced. One of the cases is that of a girl who was brutally killed, and they didn't know who killed her. But, the heart was OK; so, it was transplanted into another girl. After that, the girl started to get nightmares and described somebody killing her. Then she described how the killer looked. Finally, the mother took the girl to a psychiatrist, and he in turn contacted the police. The girl gave the police an exact description and a police artist drew a likeness of the killer. With the information provided by the girl, the police were able to go and arrest the man. Afterwards, when confronted with clear details of the crime, the man confessed that he was indeed guilty of this crime. So, from that experience, medical scientists and others came to realize that the heart can record all of an event and remember it.

3 Pearsall, Paul, Ph.D. The Heart's Code (New York: Broadway Books, 1998)

The Lower Brain consumes less energy and can do a lot of daily work, like send and receive impulse records and experience and respond to emotions. When you lower down the Upper Mind, it will also lower the blood pressure and anxiety.

Fig. 3.21 Abdomen has it own Brain: the Awareness Mind.

On the second page of the Times' article, it says that even the large intestine is loaded with neurons. The question was posed, 'Can it learn?' But I say, "Hey, this goes back to 4,700 years of the Tao practice, which says: Train all the organs; train them how to do different things." You can rest the head brain when you're not using it – and use the brain in the gut. Why is it so important? Because the head brain is a 'monkey mind' riddled with doubt, shame, guilt and a suspicious mind. It is always thinking. Worrying, figuring things out things, head trips – it just keeps on, all the time. To be a God, you must let go of the past and empty the mind. Now we are in the information age; anything flits in – we think. Just one word flits in and we start an entire string of thought. When somebody says one bad word to you, you can think and figure it out for three days and three nights. 'How am I going to get revenge? How am I going to get revenge?'

Scientists have discovered that when people worry too much, thinking, planning, etc., this brain actually uses up a lot of energy. Depending on the type of person– some people are very physical types who use very little brain energy, but their physical body consumes a lot of energy. However, most people think and think and think. So the scientists give an approximation, by way of a percentage. This is just a number for comparison, not an exact number. They say that this brain in the head can use up to 80% of the body's energy. So, what happens is you have only 20% left for the organs.

According to the information about the brain in the gut, they have discovered that the brain in the head and the brain in the gut can do some similar jobs. For example, this brain in the gut is the emotional and the feeling brain. In the west you have the expressions, 'I feel you from my gut' and 'I have a gut feeling about something.' Why do people mention a gut feeling? Obviously people have some feeling in their gut. It's very interesting that the whole Tao practice is feeling, awareness and consciousness – using this gut to feel, to be aware, and to be conscious.

You can rest, relax the brain in the head by using the 'brain in the gut.' This is the first step. The first thing we learn in the Tao is to forgive and let go. When we keep on remembering past negative emotions, we will stop seeing the truth. To let go of the past is to empty the mind and use the abdominal mind, the awareness and consciousness. Here's an interesting point in the way of the Tao: This gut brain can do a lot of simple functions that are similar to the functions of the brain in the head. This is a feeling and awareness type of functioning similar to many of our 'right brain' functions. However, we need to use the brain in the head in order to perform complex functions such as reasoning, making plans and making complex calculations. For rational functions, we need to use the brain in the head for the 'left brain' functions.

For our daily life of consciousness, awareness and feeling, we can use either the brain in the gut or the brain in the head. When we use the upper brain less, it will become charged with more energy and its power will be increased – and more power will be available to the body. That is why we say in Taoism, that we have to train the brain in the gut, so that we can use it when the brain in the head is resting. When the head brain is resting, it can be recharged: brain repair and maintenance occurs. Also, it can grow new brain cells. With more charging we have more power for creativity or whatever we want to use it for. If we like, we can use it to develop our higher spiritual nature.

Fig. 3.23 When you are not using the Upper Brain allow it to rest by sending it down to the Lower Tan Tien.

The simple thing is, that for the same job that the head brain or the gut brain can do, the head brain charges you eighty dollars. The gut brain only charges you twenty dollars. So, which one do you want to use? No, of course we are not that silly to use this overpriced person for the same work. But when we come to our own actual life, we don't know how to do it. We always use this mind, this high-priced brain. To add to this, we continue using it and using it, until the brain energy is completely consumed – no more energy. When you get to a certain level the brain is empty. These brain energy measurements are not only for indicating mental energy levels, they also represent energy conditions for the whole body and spiritual energy.

Whenever I smile down, the brain waves go lower and lower very quickly – and the transformed energy from the Tan Tien and organs charges up the brain in the head! Just by flexing the facial muscles into the mode we use with a genuine smile, we can produce the effects on the nervous system that normally goes with the natural spontaneous feeling. We can actually make ourselves relaxed and happy by taking advantage of this built-in human mechanism. It's natural. Just do it! Learning to smile down to the abdominal area and maintain the awareness of the relaxed, smiling sensation in the Tan Tien is the first step in training the Second Brain! Think about it: Pure awareness and consciousness can change attitudes and emotions carried in the DNA.

Remember: Number 1: "Empty your mind down to the Tan Tien, and fill the Tan Tien with Chi." An axiom in the Tao is, where the mind goes the Chi follows. And, Number 2: "When your mind is empty, it will be filled!" This means that when the organs have extra energy, the extra organ energy will rise up and fill the brain with Chi.

Fig. 3.24 When the mind is empty, transformed energy from all the organs can charge the brain with Chi.

Practice

Three Minds into One: 'Yi' Power

Smile into your heart. Lower the Observation Mind, then the Heart Mind down to the Tan Tien. With the Feeling/Awareness Mind, Spiral the three minds into one.

1. Smile into your heart. Make it feel soft. Feel love. Feel joy. Feel happy and feel compassion in your heart. Feel the heart spiral.
2. Spiral in the upper mind. Lower your upper mind, the observation mind, down to the Tan Tien in your navel area.
3. Turn the consciousness in your heart, activated by your love and softness, down to your Tan Tien.
4. Combine the upper and middle minds with the energy of the feeling/awareness mind of the entire nervous system – the Second Brain in the abdomen. Merge the three minds into one mind by spiraling their energy, blending them together as one in the Tan Tien.

When the three minds merge into one they become the 'Yi' power, the three-mind power – activate the spiraling at the mideyebrow, crown and the soles of your feet – expand to the universe in six directions: up, down, front, back, left and right. Once you get it, the Yi, we will start to activate the six directions and the three fires.

Fig. 3.25 A. The Heart softens like a rose blossoming. B. Spiral the Upper Tan Tien to the Lowest Tan Tien and Three Mind 'Yi' Power.

Activating the Six Directions and the Three Fires

This powerful energetic technique allows one to extend the mind, to touch the force, and to draw that energy back into the body.

The Six Directions teaches you how to expand your mind and Chi for receiving healing power. By practicing the Six Directions daily you will increase your healing and cosmic power. Turn your mind and Chi into the cosmos, multiply them and draw them back.

Direction Below

When you achieve the three minds into one mind begin expanding into the Six Directions; press your hands down and start with the low direction. Picture yourself standing on the earth and you expand yourself very far away – deep down into the earth, very, very deep down into the earth. Your hands become very long; your feet become very long — they go all the way down into the earth and out past it into the galaxy below on the other side.

Push. When you push, connect with the galaxy below — pull and think about your Tan Tien filling with Chi. Push and pull. Push and pull. Fill your Tan Tien with Chi.

A. B. C.

Fig. 3.26 A. Hands expand through the earth and to the galaxy below.
B. Hands push forward and pull back. C. Smile to the primordial Chi from the universe back to the Lower Tan Tien and fill the Tan Tien with Chi.

1. Stand, feet together. Put you hands down, parallel to the ground. Expand your hands very far away and your mind very far away smiling into the ground. Continue expanding your hands, feet and your mind very far away beyond the earth below. Go down through the galaxy, way beyond to the primordial force. It's just like you are extending all the way to the primordial force before 30 million years ago.
2. Push, moving the hands forward six inches only.
3. Pull, moving the hands back by the sides. Think about your Tan Tien – Chi coming to the primordial force in your Tan Tien. Smile to your Tan Tien, dark, deep and vast.
4. Push: touch the primordial force in the universe.

A. B. C.

Fig. 3.27 A. Be aware of the universe in front.
B. Expand your hands very big and long to the universe in front.
C. Hold the fire ball to activate the Tan Tien Fire.

5. Pull back to your Tan Tien the dark primordial forces with your hands.

Push and pull: It's just like you go to an empty space – vast. Then you come back to your Tan Tien – also empty, just like the primordial condition before anything existed.That is where all the forces come from. Push and pull 3 – 9 times.

Front Direction and Tan Tien Fire

Next, be aware of the front direction; a huge fireball appears in front of you.

Open your palms: scoop up the Chi, scoop up the fire. Bring the fire into your Tan Tien. Activate the Tan Tien Fire.

1. You start with a small dot of light inside you. Expand your awareness smiling to the universe in front of you.
2. Become aware of a big fireball in front of you. Fell your hand become bigger and longer. Scoop up the fireball. You may close your eyes to help your inner sensing.
3. Use the fireball to light the fire in your Tan Tien. Feel the fire burning in the darkness, the 'fire burning under the sea.'

Fig. 3.28 Smile to the Burning Fire.

Back Direction and Kidney Fire

Be aware of the back of the Tan Tien, the Door of Life and the back or rear direction. Extend your mind very far away to the 'back'. Scoop up the fire and light up your 'Kidney Fire'.

Fig. 3.29 Be aware of the back direction, move the arms toward the back of the universe and scoop up the universal fire.

1. Expand your awareness all the way to the back. Move the arms toward the universe behind you.
2. Touch the universe; scoop up the fire. Activate the Kidney Fire. Maintain your awareness in the Tan Tien and expand smiling out to the universe. The energetic spiral glows in the Tan Tien. Spiral in the heart, spiral in your crown and spiral in the universe.

Heart Fire

Raise your hands up under your armpits, and feel yourself holding the two fireballs. Touch the heart by extending the fingers energetically in from the sides; feel your hands extending into your heart and very far away. Activate the Heart Fire.

Fig. 3.30 Activate the Heart Fire.

1. Move your hands up under your armpits and extend your fingers deep into your heart and very far away.
2. Tan Tien and the Universe: you are connecting to the 'charger,' charging more fire into yourself.
3. Feel your heart soft in the center as you smile down. Feel the warmth of the fire energy of love, joy and happiness in the heart.
4. You feel the connection with the unconditional love in the universe as you keep your heart consciousness in your Tan Tien and extend your awareness out to the universe.

Sacred Fire (Chi Fire)

Connect the Three Fires to combine into one Fire: Heart to Kidneys to Navel to Heart.

Fig. 3.31 Connect the Three Fires and Sacred Fire.

1. Move your hands together in front of your heart. Hold your hands together in front near the heart and feel the fire burning in there. Connect the Heart Fire to the Kidney Fire, the Kidney Fire to the Tan Tien Fire and back up to your heart; connecting them as one triangular Sacred Fire, circulating the Chi at 1,000 revolutions per minute, 10,000 R.P.M, 30,000 R.P.M and 60,000 R.P.M, doubling or tripling their collective power.

Open the Third Eye

Now, extend your hands out to the front, very far away – pushing, pushing, pushing. Push. Turn your palms inward, and extend your middle fingers inward toward your third eye. Picture a crack in the middle of your forehead, and pull the crack open. Feel the light from the heavens opening it and feel the light from the heavens shining into your brain.

1. Open your palms. Open your eyes, dimming the eyes. Look to the universe. Extend your hands to the front, palms vertical. Extend the arms from the scapulas. Smile and touch the universe.
2. Turn your palms inward and extend your middle fingers inward toward your third eye.

3. Picture a crack in the middle of your forehead and let the heavenly light shine into the brain; pull the crack open and let the light reflect into the organs.
4. Close the third eye. Again, open. Pull: open-close-open. And, close. With the third eye open, the light from the heavens shines into your brain and reflects down to all your organs. Open and close the third eye 3 - 9 times.

Fig. 3.32 Look as you smile into the Universe in front of you.

Front Direction: Push/Pull Master Practice

Now, turn your palms, pushing out. Push. Pull. This is the master practice that is imperative for successful completion. When you first start practicing you should do it at least one hundred times and increase up to 200 times. Push and pull. When you push, you feel your hands extended very far away – very long – reach the sky. Touch the universe.

1. Push: Extend your arms and hands to the front, palms vertical. Extend the arms from the scapulas.
   Expand: smiling, smiling, touching the universe – touching the force, touch -ing the Cosmic Chi.

Fig. 3.34
Master practice: Touch the Universe.

2. Pull: Draw the Chi back to you from the universe. Moving the arms from the scapulas, draw the hands toward your body in a horizontal position, drawing the Chi into the body.

Fig. 3.35 'Drawing' Universal Chi - feel your Tan Tien and fill it with Chi.

Pull. Think and smile to your Tan Tien. Push, very far away to the universe.
Pull. Push: Smile, relax, and let go, touching the sky, touching the universe.

Fig. 3.36
Let go - Push and Touch the Universe, do it 6, 9 or 18 times.

Now, move your hands to the left and right directions. Pull the Universal energy in. Push; touch the universe. Pull; think about your Tan Tien. Push – all the way, touching-touching-touching the universe.

1. Move your extended hands from the front horizon to the left and right sides.

Fig. 3.37 Touch the Universe Left and Right.

2. Pull Tan Tien: Smile to your Tan Tien. Keep smiling to your Tan Tien.
3. Push to both sides. Expand all the way, smiling and touching the universe.

   Push/Pull: touching, touching the universe drawing the Chi smile energy into you from both sides.

   Do 3-6 times.

Direction Above

Turn your palms up to the universe. Scoop up the Chi. Pour the Chi over your crown, and touch your crown. Project the Chi all the way down to the perineum and down through the earth to the universe below. Tan Tien and universe; always feel your Tan Tien spiraling, heart spiraling, crown spiraling and the universe around you spiraling.

Fig. 3.39 A. Raise the hands above the crown and feel it extend up to heaven.
B. Feel that the hands are big and long and that the bones are hollow. Fill and pack the bones with Chi.

Raise your hands up to the universe and expand your hands as big as the universe - feel the Chi charge into your bones.

Scoop and gather the energy turning the body three times to the left and three times the right drawing the smiling energy.

Open the Spine

1. Touch the back-crown point. Pour the Chi all over your crown. Think of your soles so that you feel like there is a waterfall of Chi flowing from your crown all the way down to your soles. Feel your finger grow long and the Chi penetrate down through your spine to the coccyx. Leave the fingers touchng the back of the crown, to maintain the energetic connection with the coccyx.

Spine

Fig. 3.41 Feel your fingers growing long, all the way down to the coccyx.

Turn 'Three Minds into One Mind' at the Lower Tan Tien, and expand the awareness to the universe. Let yourself be charged by the universe.

Like you are back in the womb.

Fig. 3.42 Universe charges Tan Tien power.

Beware of the Tan Tien and spiral it like universal energy in motion. Feel the heart center spiraling and the crown spiraling. Be aware of the universe spiraling above, below, front, back, left and right. Let all of the sick energy and the negative forces leave the body and go down into the ground for Mother Earth to recycle. Extend the Chi from above, all the way down through the earth and the universe below.

Fig. 3.43 Be aware of the Lower Tan Tien, Heart Center and Crown spiraling. Feel the Universe is spiraling and charging the Three Tan Tiens.

Open the Middle Channel and Perineum

1. Move to the mid-crown point. Touch the point and project your fingers inwards; go deeper, deeper through the middle of your body down to the perineum. Focus on the perineum. Feel the Chi from the universe flow into your perineum. Look for one dot of light. Look into the darkness, the vast darkness, the immense darkness; this is the primordial force, a cloudy moving force. Look for a dot of light at the perineum and extend your awareness all the way down through the ground and the universe below.

Fig. 3.44 Move the Hands to the Middle of the Crown and feel the Fingers Penetrate to the Perineum.

When finished opening to the Six Directions and igniting the Three Fires, gather the Chi in the center and bring this expanded awareness into the healing session.

Tan Tien and the Universe

The expression, 'Tan Tien and the Universe', is a reminder to feel your Tan Tien, heart, mideyebrow and crown spiraling and that you are connected to the universe spiraling in the six directions around you.

1. Establish a Complete Location

You will use your Yi, the three-mind power, repeatedly to recharge your Chi for various purposes. You recharge by connecting to the Universal Chi in the six directions of the universe simultaneously. When you charge a particular area or direct Chi into the body to a particular point, you first establish a connection point for the Chi by placing the hand or fingers at an appropriate location on the surface. This is like giving a location for the Chi to go to. Once the location is established and the Chi starts to go there, leave your hands there.

Then you move your attention to where you want the Chi to go in the body. Feel the Chi connected to and charging the intended location.

2. Charge Tan Tien from Universe

When the location connection is established, be aware of your Tan Tien, heart center, mideyebrow and crown spiraling. Be sure that the conscious mind of the heart is lowered to the Tan Tien and the awareness mind of the abdomen is connected to the mideyebrow crown and out to the universe. Feel them connected to the spiraling energy in the six directions of the universe. Let the universe charge your Tan Tien.

3. Don't Stop at the Location

With your focus in the Tan Tien, the Chi will go from there to the 'location' indicated by your hands and then to the intended location in the body. Don't let Chi stop there, however.

4. Direct Chi out the Opposite Side to Universe

Direct your attention to guide the Chi flow through the body and out the opposite side. You want to clear out any blockages and prevent any others from accumulating. You also want to release sick energy and negative forces down into the earth. Let the Universal Chi flow out through the universe and beyond.

Open the Three Tan Tiens

Move your hands down to the mideyebrow. Touch the mideyebrow.
We are going to open the three Tan Tiens, starting with the Upper Tan Tien.

Upper Tan Tien - Mideyebrow

1. Recharge. Remember: Tan Tien – heart consciousness in, awareness out. Spiral – Tan Tien, heart, third eye and crown. Universe – six directions spiraling.

Fig. 3.45 Raise hands and charge with Universal Chi.

2. Move your hands down and touch the mideyebrow. Feel your fingers grow very long (energetically) and penetrate all the way back to the base of the skull. Focus on the back. Remember: Tan Tien and the universe spiraling. With the spiraling, the Chi in the fingers will become hot. It will expand and penetrate out through the back of the head all the way to the universe behind.

Fig 3.46 Fingers touch mideyebrow and penetrate to the back of the skull and the universe at the rear.

Tan Tien and the Universe.

3. Picture your fingers like laser beams of Chi, 'Tan Tien and Universe': Feel your Tan Tien and the universe spiral and charge your fingers. Move your fingers out from the mideyebrow around the side of the head to the top of the ears. Your fingers are like lasers -cut-cut-cutting open your skull right in the middle, around to the top of the ear, cutting open your Upper Tan Tien. Cut and project your fingers long into the middle of your brain. Spiral your Tan Tien and the universe. Leave your fingers there. Concentrate on your Tan Tien spiraling – your heart, crown, the universe above, below, front, back left and right all spiraling. Your Tan Tien is a big empty space: primordial force; darkness. You can put so much Chi inside there! The Chi penetrates into your brain.

Fig. 3.48 Move the fingers to the top of the ears. Feel them growing longer and cutting the skull open, penetrating into the brain.

4. Move your hands all the way to the back, cutting to the back of the skull. Touch, and feel the Upper Tan Tien open.
5. Touch the base of your skull. Focus on the mid-eyebrow. Feel the Chi flow like a laser beam from back to front and out to the universe in front. Complete the opening process by moving the hands back around to the mideyebrow, cutting as you go.

Fig. 3.49 Chi moves like a laser, penetrating from the mideyebrow at the front, to the back of skull.

6. Recharge in the universe. Feel your bones and your arms are hollow. Fill and compact them with Chi.
7. Scoop the Universal Chi and pour it down over your crown and all the way down, down to the Middle Tan Tien.

Fig. 3.50
Recharge in the Universe, scoop and pour the Chi down to the Middle Tan Tien (Heart Center).

Middle Tan Tien - Heart Center - Conscious Mind

1. Move your hands all the way down to your heart center at the mid-sternum. Touch. Focus on the point opposite the heart, T5/T6, on the spine. Fingers 'long', Chi penetrates into your thymus gland. Light – golden light – penetrates into your thymus. Feel the Chi penetrate through your heart all the way through T5/T6 to the universe behind. 'Tan Tien and the Universe' also feel your Chi Fingers penetrate into the bone and bone marrow and spread out into your rib cage.

Fig 3.51 Golden light enters the heart, thymus, bones and marrow; feel it penetrate to the universe at the rear.

Recharge and cut around to the Armpits

1. Recharge In the universe, pour Chi over the crown down through the body and lower your hands down to the heart center. Touch with the fingertips. Move your hands around under your armpits, extending the Chi like laser beams cutting open this Middle Tan Tien. Pause under the armpits as you send the Chi into the center.

Fig. 3.52 Cut open the Middle Tan Tien by cutting around the armpits.

2. Continue to move your hands around to your back at T5/T6, touch and send the Chi from back to front. Let the beam of Chi penetrate out through the heart center to the universe in front of you. Then, move the hands back around the sides to the front, cutting as you go.

Fig. 3.53 Chi beam from T5/T6 penetrates to the Heart Center in front.

Lower Tan Tien - Navel - Awareness Mind

1. Recharge with Universal Chi. Tan Tien and Universe: Again, raise your hands and charge with the Chi into the universe. Your hands are very big, very long. The bones are hollow and compacted with compressed Universal Chi. Scoop the Chi from above and guide it down. Pour all the way down, down, down to the navel. Touch the navel, and focus on the Door of Life opposite on the spine between L2/L3. Touch and feel the Chi penetrate to the Door of Life Tan Tien and Universe. Feel the Chi penetrate through to the back and out to the universe behind.

A. B.

Fig. 3.54 A. Recharge the Lower Tan Tien and penetrate through to the Door of Life.
B. Raise the hands up to the universe and charge with Chi. Bring the power down to Tan Tien.

2. Open this Lower Tan Tien the same way as for the Upper and Middle Tan Tiens. Charge more Chi into your hands, and let them be like lasers cutting it open. Cut around to the sides. Pause. The fingers of the left and right hands are very long, extended energetically inside. Cut and feel the energy penetrate into the center. Focus at Tan Tien and universe and feel more Chi.

Fig. 3.55 'Cut' open the Lower Tan Tien with Laser Fingers.

3. Continue cutting to the Door of Life. Touch, and send the Chi from the Door of Life back to the navel and out to the universe in front.

Fig. 3.56 'Cut' open the Door of Life and send Chi to the navel and universe in front.

4. Move the hands back around the sides to the navel, extending the fingers and "cutting" the Tan Tien open as you go. Touch the navel: Tan Tien and the universe spiraling. Feel more Chi, and feel the Tan Tien open.

Activate Chi in the Bones of Hips, Legs and Sacrum

1. Now touch your pelvic bone by energetically extending your fingers from the front area near the hips to the back. Feel Chi penetrate into your pelvic bones: funny, laughing, happy bones.
2. Touch the femur bones. Tan Tien and universe. Charge the fingers. Also, feel the funny, happy, laughing vibration inside the bones and in the bone marrow. Be aware of the Three Tan Tiens. Spiral from the universe. Spiraling charging your Tan Tien. Charge your hands and your bones.

Fig. 3.57 Touch the femurs - happy laughing bones!

3. Now we are going to slowly lower the sensation of Chi down through the bones to the earth. Opening up the sacrum. Move the hands down the legs as you bend down.
4. Lower yourself all the way down to the ground and sit on your feet. Move the Chi with your hands down to your toes, down through the earth and the universe below.

A. B.

Fig. 3.58 A. Sink the Chi into the earth. B. Lower and sink the mind and Chi down to the universe.

5. Raise your sacrum up, keeping your hands at the toes. Smile to your Tan Tien and feel the Chi from the universe coming to fill the Three Tan Tiens. Opening up the sacrum.

Fig. 3.59
Raise the sacrum and smile to the Tan Tien.

6. Lower down again. Lower the Chi down to the earth and the galaxy below.
7. Once more, raise your sacrum up, maintaining hand contact with your feet. Smile to your Tan Tien.
8. For the third time, lower down. Open your palms, gathering the Chi from the earth below. Gather and scoop the Chi.

Fig. 3.60 Gather the Earth Chi.

9. Touch your heels and feel your bones as you slowly rise up. Fill your bones with Chi as you guide it up with your hands.
10. Fill the bones in the upper legs as you move your hands up.

Fig. 3.61 A. Fill the bones with Chi. B. Feel your fingers penetrate into the bones as you rise.

11. Feel your bones, and fill them with Chi all the way up to your coccyx. Touch your coccyx. Leave your fingers there, then be aware of the Chi and feel the Chi raising up to the Tan Tien and the universe. Feel it charge the fingers and the spine.
12. Come up to the sacrum. Feel the sacrum open. Focus at the Tan Tien and the universe.

A. B.

Fig. 3.62 A. Bring the Chi to the Coccyx.
B. Move your hands up to the Sacrum and feel the Chi rise up to the Crown.

13. Come up to the door of life, and then back to the navel. You may sit down to continue the next step in the Cosmic Healing Practice.

Practice daily till you feel the Chi. Then you can apply this Chi to the Healing Sessions.

Chapter IV
General Healing Session

The General Healing session practices are to be done with every student regardless of their age or health condition. These are for cleaning and strengthening the cells. Cells must be clean and strong to heal. The General Healing practices listed steps A-K are the most important part you must always do in every session. You can do this with one person or with many people at the same time. The following is a detailed decription of each of these steps. Become familar with them and they will flow easily one into the other.

A. Three Minds into One Mind

Smile down to the inner universe. Activate the heart consciousness and empty the mind and heart down to the LowerTan Tien, the Abdominal Brain. Gather the 'Yi' (mind-eye-heart power), combining three minds into one. Fill the Tan Tien with this Chi. Start to spiral. You are then ready to connect to the higher forces of Universal and Heavenly Chi. The Three Minds are the Upper, Middle and Lower, or three Tan Tiens. The Upper Mind is the one we have been closely related to most of our lives. It is the logical thinking, planning, calculating and worrying mind; it consumes 80% of our body's energy.
The key is to learn 'to releas the mind' by learning to sink the Chi to the Lower Tan Tien, whereby it can be used in synergy with the other two.

B. Activate the Six Directions

Activating the six directions is for opening the whole body, mind and soul to all of the Universal and Cosmic forces in all directions. We literally learn to draw in the Universal and Cosmic forces from all directions at the same time. This is important for healers so they are not using their own energy for healing but drawing on the limitless Universal forces.

Expand your awareness to connect to the universe and the Six Directions at the mideyebrow and crown; left, right, front, behind, above and below. Connect to the universe, collect and spiral the energy into your Lower Tan Tien.

C. Activate the Three Fires

Activate the Tan Tien, Kidney and Heart Fires to create a Sacred Fire Triangle. Move from the Tan Tien to the Heart, the Heart to the Kidneys and the Kidneys back to the Tan Tien.

D. Linking Personal Stars, Energy Bodies and the Universe

World Link is a way for intelligent life force to return to the source; inwards and upwards. Become aware of the 'personal stars' above the crown and below the earth.We link with our own personal stars and then with the stars of each person in a group. This links the energy bodies of everyone in a group together. Start to spiral your energy and connect to other peoples' stars and energy bodies. Make a left spiraling pattern, progressing around the circle in a clockwise rotation. Link all of these stars together and form one large energy body. Each meditator will become an individual unit in an integrated communication link. A link between the earth and the universe.

E. Protective Circle and Chi Field

We create Chi Fields, Protective Animals and call the Eight Forces to protect the group from disturbances and psychic attacks. Raise your right (or leading) hand in the air and access the 'Sacred Fire' of the universal cauldron. "Feel your fingers becoming big, long and hollow", as they reach into the Sacred Fire. The Chi will fill and pack your arm as you bring it down into your body. Use Yi-Power to create the Sacred Fire Protective Circle. The fire will purify and protect the circle. You can cast a circle around your community, house, room and body. This will create an energetic field of Chi around the whole room.

Then Create a Chi Dome. Invoke the 'guardian animals'; Blue Tortoise from the north, Red Pheasant from the south, Green Dragon from the east, White Tiger from the west, Yellow Phoenix from above and Black Tortoise from below.

Finally, activate the Eight Elemental Forces of Nature and the Universe. Call the forces of fire, water (ocean), thunder (lightning), lake (rain), earth, mountain, wind and heaven. Activate fire in the north, water in the south, lightning in the east, and rain in the west.

F. Chi (Sacred) Water Practice

Invoke the power of the Sacred, Chi or Holy Water practice to cleanse and heal the body's sick, toxic or negative energy. Make a request to receive healing energy and feel yourself touch a heavenly pool of sacred water energy. Feel the pool pouring down heavenly water to fill your arm.

Use the thumb and index finger to remove the sick energy from the cup, without touching the water. Talk to the sick cells. Let the sick energy return to the earth for recycling. Fill the water with your heart's compassion. Give the command: "This Sacred Water will give health, wealth and longevity". Cosmic Healing works on a cellular level. It is the water's 'job' to carry the message of the practice to all the cells, where it will remain. Drink the water in unison with the rest of the group.

G. Empty and Fill

The Empty and Fill technique is emptying the sick energy into the earth and filling with healing Cosmic Force Energy. Project your 'sword' hand (middle and index fingers) down to the ground. Project the hand 'very big and very long' and your feet 'very big and very long' - extended down to the ground. Now very slowly inhale, bring up the earth energy. Bring the energy up to your feet and into your bones. Let it enter all the bones, organs and cells. Feel it blending with all the sick energy. Turn your palm up, turn it back down again and exhale; let go of all the sick energy, the negative energy, the worries and burdens, all the way down into the earth. Repeat this three to nine times. Dig a hole and bury all the sick energy; tell it, "Do not come back; you will be happy down there." Smile.

H. Clean with Green Light

The Green light is for cleaning the cells. This is vitally important because the cells must be clean for healing. Green can help detoxify the toxic cells. Green Chi is mild and safe. Green Chi is used for cleansing, and as a decongestant for diseased parts. It 'loosens' the area. The light green Chi is used to break down dirty or diseased energy, like a detergent is used for washing clothes or dishes.

Afterwards, the cells will be rinsed with blue light, like clean water is used to rinse the detergent and residue from clothes or dishes.

When you carry out healing try to 'see' the cells enlarged and this green energy go in and blend with the dirty, black and cloudy energy. See it come out and let it go down to the earth. Dig a hole and bury it there. Tell it, "Don't come back. You will be happy down there". Become aware of the green light and spiral counter clockwise. Spiral down. Cleaning out the stress. Repeat as many times as you like, three times minimum.

I. Clean with Blue Light

Blue is like cold water; it has the yin power to dissolve all kinds of negative energy and sickness. It has an inhibiting effect. Blue yin energy is the opposite of red yang, which has a strengthening and stimulating effect.

Blue has a cooling effect; it can reduce pain and inflammation, and it can help blood clot. It stops bleeding and reduces fever. It can help to induce rest and sleep.

J. Charge with Violet Light

Charging with Violet light holds the highest healing energy. When the cells are clean they will absorb and hold the Violet light and the healing will take place. Luminous Violet has intelligence and can be programmed. The universe is full of violet light, especially the North Star and the Big Dipper. The color of the star of the higher self or soul, above the crown, is also violet. It is the color of Divine or Soul energy.

It has properties of other Chi colors. It has a rapid regenerating effect on damaged organs and nerves. Always use green and blue light before using violet. Violet light develops the crown center, the spiritual core. It is good for psychological ailments as well as for physical deficiencies.

K. Activate the Immune and Defense System

The body has various mechanisms which combine to provide protection and defense against illness and disease. These mechanisms enable the body to produce various cells and bodies which act against invading or unwanted substances. As soon as a foreign body is recognized, the immune system will be triggered and will act to provide the most efficient means of eliminating the danger and return the body to a balanced state of health. A strong and healthy body will have good resources to protect itself from negative or sick energy. The aim of these practices is to help you to realize the potential of true harmony within yourself. To activate the immune and defense system is to increase the production of red and white blood cells. To do this we activate the bone marrow and lymphatic system. Guide the student or whole group together in all of these steps. You will not lose energy by doing this. You will gain more energy because you are all connected together in the group power. The crucial part is to multiply your good intentions, Chi and virtue energy into the cosmos, making yourself and each person a direct line from the Universe. After you finish the General Healing session you can tailor the healing techniques in the next chapters to the individual's needs.

Practice

A. Three Minds into One Mind

1. Smile to the Inner Universe

Place your palms together in salutation, in front of your heart. Feel the Laogong points in your hands connect, creating an energy loop running from your heart through your arms and hands and back again.

A. B.

Fig. 4.1 A. Empty the mind down to the lower abdomen.
B. Activate the heart's compassion.

2. Activate the Heart Compassion Energy

Smile to the heart and feel it softening. Feel love, joy, compassion and happiness. Smile down and empty the mind to the Tan Tien, the Abdominal Brain. Fill the Tan Tien with Chi and start to spiral. When the abdomen is warm, it is full of Chi. The Chi can then charge up to the brain.

3. Combine the Three Minds into One

1. Turn Upper Mind to observation mind.
2. Turn consciousness (Middle Mind) down to Lower Tan Tien.
3. Combine three minds into one mind at the Lower Tan Tien (the Yi).
4. Manifest out at the mideyebrow.

Fig. 4.2 'Three Minds into One'.

B. Activate the Six Directions

Expand the awareness to connect to the universe and the Six Directions at the crown, mideyebrow, heart and Tan Tien.

Fig. 4.3 Trust and believe - turn visualization into actualization.

C. Activate the Three Fires

1. Tan Tien Fire - Activate the Tan Tien Fire:

Smile down to the abdomen to create a burning stove near the lower lumbar and sacrum. Create a fire ball behind the navel, above the stove.

2. Kidney Fire - Activate the Kidney Fire:

Always retain awareness at the Tan Tien and keep it spiraling.

3. Heart Fire - Activate the Heart Fire:

Keep the heart soft and fill the heart with joy, love and happiness.

Fig. 4.4 A. Activate the Lower Tan Tien Fire. B. Activate the Kidney and Adrenal Fires. C. Activate the Heart Fire.

4. Sacred Fire Triangle

The Sacred Fire Triangle has triple force. Make a triangle from kidneys to navel (Tan Tien). From the heart make the connection to the kidneys. Move from the Tan Tien up to the heart.

5. Cosmic Star and the Earth Star

At the moment of conception, the two forces yin and yang connect with such a force, then only fractions of a moment later, the two forces explode into nine different Energy Centers. Seven of them we find in the body and two of them outside the body, forming our personal stars.

Fig. 4.5 Three Fires into One

Fig. 4.6 'Personal Star' Energy

The two personal stars are in fact energy centers connecting the aural field of each individual with the universal forces and the earth forces. In a way one can see the aim of Taoist Inner Alchemy in bringing these nine forces together, merging them into one force and thus enabling the return to the original force, the Wu Chi.

There is a star about six inches above your crown and another one about one to three feet below the soles of your feet. They are also known as the higher self, guidance, protector, adviser. These stars are our connection to the cosmic force, the universal force and the earth deep below us.

Always make sure your Tan Tien is warm and the sacrum and mideyebrow are breathing. Be aware of the crown breathing and see a star or a small sun above you. Be aware of the crown and feel a light beam extend out of the crown and make a connection to the star above you. Keep on breathing until you feel a strong connection. Feel how the star above you is exercising a strong pulling force on your crown. Once you feel this pull on your crown you will also feel a strong pull down from the earth. Be aware of the star above and the earth and universal force below you. Feel that both of them have a strong pull on you.

1. Reconfirm the star above you and the earth directly below you.
2. Fix the image of the North Star and the Big Dipper six to nine feet above your crown. See the cup of the Big Dipper filling with the violet light, which gathers Chi from the North Star and the universe.

3. Reach up with your left hand, and hold on to the handle of the Big Dipper. Pour the violet light down to your personal star 4 to 6 inches above your head, in order to predigest the energy of the violet light. Then let it flow down to your crown, into the Upper Tan Tien, to be processed and flow down to the heart center (Middle Tan Tien) or to the back of the head down to C-7 (Cervical 7) and T-2 (Thoracic 2) and down to the palms.

   In Taoism we consider that the North Star emits a violet light, which is regarded as the highest healing light and the Big Dipper as emitting a red light.

   You can do these meditations sitting, or standing in the Chi Kung posture. The standing position will support a stronger structure and provide a better connection with the earth.

Fig. 4.7 The North Star, Big Dipper and Galaxy spiral above.

4. Always remember to breathe in slowly so you can process the awareness of the Lower Tan Tien. Feel a suction, warmth (Chi) and continue to breathe in and be aware of the suction of the crown, North Star and Big Dipper above you.

D. Linking Personal Stars, Energy Bodies and the Universe

Be aware of your 'personal stars' above and below and connect to other peoples' stars and energy bodies.

Three minds unite, one mind aware of the stars above you and a star below you. Connect these stars to the people around you. Think about the bright light above the crowns of other people. Start to spiral your energy to connect to each of them. Group all the stars into one energy body and connect all the way to the center of the universe.

3. Connect your Personal Star to the Personal Star of each person Connect your personal star to each person and then to the universe.

4. Create a Chi Body becoming the major connecting point. Counterclockwise spiral to connect each person's star into a larger group star.

Fig. 4.11 Link with Each others Personal Stars.

Fig. 4.12 Connect into Group Star.

5. Meditators become satellite links and create a group energy body.

The World Link meditations become an integrated communication link. They are linked to the earth and the universe. Spiral and connect each person's star together and group the energy into one energy body. This energy body becomes an integrated communication center for each person in the group. We can be connected, wherever we are. Each person can connect and become their own 'Center of the Universe'.

Fig. 4.13 Form a Satellite Link and create a Group Energy Body.

E. Protective Circle and Chi Field

Raise your hand up and become aware of the 'Sacred Fire' in the universe. Feel that your fingers are very 'big', very 'long' and touch the fire. Bring the fire down. Make a circle around your community, your house, Tao Garden, the meditation hall and around your bodies. Create an energetic field of Chi around the whole room.

Sacred or Chi Fire
Connect and Receive Fire from the Universal Cauldron

1. Activate the Sacred Fire in the Universe

Be aware of yourself. Feel your arm and fingers 'big', 'long' and 'hollow'. Reach to the universe to the Sacred Fire. Let the Sacred Fire fill and pack your arm.

2. Use Yi-Power to Create Sacred Fire Protective Circle

Use the Yi Power to draw the Sacred Fire Circle on the ground around your house, office and the room you work in.

A. B.

Fig. 4.14 A. Create a Group Energy Body. B. Sacred Fire 'Protection'

3. Create a Chi Dome

Set up the 'guardian animals', Blue Tortoise in the north, Red Pheasant in the south, Green Dragon in the east, White Tiger in the west, Yellow Phoenix above and Black Tortoise below.

Fig. 4.15 Create and surround yourself with a Chi Dome and the Guardian Animals.

4. Activate the Eight Elemental Forces of Nature and the Universe

Activate all eight forces; wind, mountain, fire and thunder on the east. Earth, lake, water and heavenly power on the west.

Call the Eight Forces; fire, water (ocean), thunder (lightning), lake (rain), earth, mountain, wind, and heaven.

Fig. 4.16 Activate the Eight Forces.

In the next sections F,G,H,I are practices that are for cleaning the cells. The more you clean the cells the more the Cosmic Healing can take place.

F. Chi (Sacred) Water Practice

The Sacred Water practice (also known in the West as Holy Water) is to exercise the right of being the creators of the Cosmos. With strict and absolutely regular daily water intake to prevent the stresses and associated damages of dehydration, the chief conductor and supervisor of the body's well being – tryptophan and its neurotransmitter derivatives, serotonin, tryptamine and melatonin will be well positioned to regulate all functions. Regular daily walks will keep muscles well coordinated and correct any physiological processes that are established in the body as a result of anxiety or emotional stress.

A well hydrated and healthy skin needs water to constantly replace that which it loses to the outside environment. This then allows blood vessels to the face and the body to open up and provide necessary nourishment for exposed skin cells.

Science has discovered that even if we clean water through filtration processes, although it may look and taste alright, closer analysis using high powered microscopic technology, indicates that its cell structure is 'unclean'. Water, like humans, maintains the memory of its old 'self'. We store our 'memory' within our DNA; water stores its memory within its cells.

The world is about 70% water

Fig. 4.17 Water is Life.

The following three pages contain extracts from the book 'The Message from Water' by Masaru Emoto. It advises us that 'water is telling us to take a closer look at ourselves - water is a mirror reflecting our mind.'

After offering a prayer to the Fujiwara dam the message is reflected in the water.

Chi and Love

Love-Appreciation

Let's do it

Fig. 4.18 The Human Body consists of 70% Water.

When we project Chi and love into water and then freeze it; it will turn into a 'regular' and well structured crystal. If we project negative energy into water, the opposite will apply. Our projections will access the cellular level, clean out the polluted cells and reprogram those remaining with the essence of our affirmation.

When we project a nice, loving instruction or thought into water, like 'let's do it' the water will pick up this vibration and restructure itself. If we project negativity into the water, like a command, 'do it!', the water will acknowledge this accordingly. When we look into a pond we see our image. If we drink a glass of negative image water its destructive energy will enter our system and attempt to multiply.

Research has demonstrated that if we completely filter polluted water, using every process available, it will still maintain its old vibration and unstable structure. It will maintain memory in the same way that a computer does. We must therefore reprogram the cells with our intent.

If the water we drink contains too many pollutants and antioxidants it will eventually poison us.

As we can see from these pictures, there is an enormous difference between natural spring water and regular city water. It is now quite clear that if we program water so that it becomes, sacred, holy or Chi water, then it will have the power to remove all antioxidants and pollutants – all sickness. It will have the power to reprogram the water within our bodies, to carry the same pure structure.

We can also use music to program a vibration into water. Classical music will create a vibration that synchronizes with our own health, whereas heavy metal music will have a tendency to 'shatter'!

"You make me sick", or "I will kill you".

Healing Music

Fig. 4.20 Power to heal or harm?

Similarly, when we program our emotions regarding other people into water, the effects are the same. If we think negatively of someone, then the response will produce a bad vibration. If we think kind, loving thoughts then the structure will be like a beautiful crystal. If we love Mother Theresa and send this energy into the water, a wonderful crystalline structure will be created. Sick water can be transformed into healthy water. Healthy water can be transformed into sick water. The human body consists of 70% water. The key is your intent and your ability to believe that healing comes from the nature of your vibration. Always be open to receive.

A positive mental attitude will be transmitted into the cells of the water contained within our own body. We must consciously practice inner work until it becomes reflexive.

Outline of Sacred Water Practice

Invoke the power of the Sacred Water practice to cleanse and heal the body's sick, toxic or negative energy. If you are working with a group of people, direct your energy through the energy body overhead and into each person's star, as you guide them through the procedure.

I. Hold a glass one quarter full of water in your left hand, folding the middle and the ring fingers into the center of the palm.

II. Hold the glass in front of your body as you point the 'Sword Fingers' of your right hand up to Heaven.

III. Make a request to receive healing energy and feel yourself touch a heavenly pool of sacred water energy. Feel the pool pouring down heavenly water to fill your arm.

IV. Place your fingers on the cup and ask:
Command 1: "Yin power and good fortune come from the east. Yin power please dissolve all negative energy, all sickness and bad fortune". Make a cross over the top of the cup.

V. Bring your arm down and point the sword fingers around the inner rim of the glass. Smile as you circle the fingers around the rim.
Command 2: "By my request. Please carry out the order now." Repeat this three times, charging the water with Yin Power. Project your thoughts into the water.

VI. Use the thumb and index finger to remove the sick energy from the cup, without touching the water. Do this three times. Talk to the sick cells. Tell them to listen to your command:
Command 3: "All sick cells please listen: Clear, clean and bright, this Sacred Water will take all the sickness away."

VII. Repeat the order and visualize yourself removing the sick energy from the cells and giving it to Mother Earth for recycling.

VIII. Hold the cup with both hands near your heart.
Command 4: "This Sacred Water will give me/you health, wealth and longevity."
Project love, joy, thankfulness, gratefulness, appreciation and the energy of compassion into the cup.

IX. The Sacred Water will carry the message of the practice to all the cells, where it will remain. If you are practicing in a group, drink the water in unison. If you are working with a student, pass them the glass to drink using both hands.

Step I: Prepare the Hands and Arms to Receive the Universal Chi

Left Hand Position: Prepare to hold a cup or glass with the left hand by folding the ring and middle finger into the center of the palm. Hold the glass in front of the body.

A. B.

Fig. 4.23 A. Fold Ring and Middle Fingers. B. Hold Glass in Front of Body.

Step II: Prepare the Sword Hands to Receive the Universal Chi

Right Hand Position: Form the right hand into a 'sword hand' by folding the pinkie, ring fingers and thumb into the palm. Straighten and hold the index and middle fingers together and extend them upward.

Fig. 4.24 Prepare to receive the Universal Chi.

Step III: Fill your Arm with the Power of the Heavenly Pool

Sense the sword fingers and the arm as being 'long' and 'big' as you raise them towards Heaven. Sense that the middle of the arm is hollow and bottom is sealed at the shoulder. The mind's attention is focused on merging with the primordial Chi of the Universe, the energy of your thoughts will be multiplied.

As you make your request to the Universe, feel that you are touching a heavenly pool of Sacred Water Energy. Feel that the pool is pouring down like a waterfall to fill the arm. When it is full compact, compress the Sacred Energy into it as much as you can.

Fig. 4.25 Touch the Heavenly Pool.

Step IV: Make the Cross on the Top of the Cup

Put Sword Fingers on top of the Cup. Ask for the Yin Power: Command 1: "Yin Power and good fortune, come from the east. Yin has the power to dissolve all negative energy, all sickness and bad fortune."

Command 2: Make the cross on the top of the cup and say "By my request.....".

Fig. 4.27 Give the command: "Fortune comes from the East - Yin has the power to dissolve all negative energy, all sickness and bad fortune. By my request....".

Step V: Charge the Water to Transform it into Sacred Water

Bring your arm down and point the sword fingers into the glass of water. Smile and circle the sword fingers around the inner rim of the glass.

Continue to order: "Please carry out the order now." Repeat 3 times to charge the water with the Yin Power. As you do this, project a good thought into the water.

Fig. 4.28 "Please carry out the order now" Repeat three times, charging the water with the yin power.

Step VI: Command 3: "All sick cells please listen : Clear, Clean and Bright, this Sacred Water will take all the Sickness away."

Give the above command. Use the thumb and index finger to pick up sick energy from the cup, without touching the water. Do this three times.

Step VII: Let go of the Sick Energy to be transformed by the Earth

As you repeat the order, picture yourself removing the sick energy from the cells and discarding it down into the Earth to be transformed and recycled.

Fig. 4.31 Sick Energy return to the Earth.

Fig. 4.32 See the Cells become Clean, Bright and Smiling.

Step VIII: Fill the Water with Compassion

Hold the cup with both hands near the heart and project goodness into the water. Command 4: *"This sacred water will give me/you health, wealth and longevity."

Project love, joy, thankfulness, gratefulness, appreciation and the energy of compassion into the cup.

Fig. 4.33 "This Sacred Water will give you health, wealth and longevity."

Step IX: Drink the Sacred Water

The Sacred Water will carry the message to all the cells. It will keep the message of the Sacred Water practice in all the cells. Use both hands to pass the Sacred Water to the student you are working with, or drink it yourself and/or in unison with your group. Feel the water go into all the cells of your body. Feel it removing the sick cells and purifying your body.

You can also sprinkle it on to any area that requires healing.

Fig. 4.34 Drink the Sacred Water.

G. Empty and Fill

Ask for permission to work on the student by communicating with their personal star. Point your sword hand down to the ground. Project your hand 'very big and very long' and your feet 'very big and very long' - extended down to the ground. Now very slowly inhale, bring up the earth energy. An important part of the practice is to extend a 'line' down from universe into yourself and one into the student. The line sinks through the Tan Tien into the universe below. You can send your energy up to your energy body and it will be brought down to the energy body of the other person.

Fig. 4.35 Feel your hands are long as down into the earth they extend.

Fig. 4.36 Project the other person's legs deep into the earth.

Fig. 4.37 Blend the universal energy and Earth Chi - bring it into all of the bones and cells.

Bring the energy up to your feet, into your bones. Let it enter all the bones, organs and cells. Feel it blending with all the sick energy. Turn your palm up, turn it back down again and exhale; let go of all the sick energy, the negative energy, the worries and the burdens all the way down to the earth. Down, down, down to the earth. Again from the earth up. Do it at least three, six or nine times. When people are very sick, you need to clean them thoroughly. Bring the earth energy up into your bones again. Feel numb, tinkling electricity flowing in all your cells. Return the energy down, down, down to the earth. Relax, let go; worries, burdens, let everything go. It is very important to say to yourself or group: "You must let go of all your sick energy. Let go of all your burdens. Let go of all your worries, down to the earth". Repeat it once again. Inhale from the universe and into the earth. From the earth let it enter into your bones. From the bones all the way to your inner self. Feel the energy blend with the sick energy. Exhale and let go of all your sick energy, any negative emotions burdens, worries, anxieties; release them all the way down into the earth.

Fig. 4.38 Bring the Universal Chi down and let it blend with the sick and negative energy. Bring it down into the earth and bury it there.

Empty negative, sick energy, burdens, worries, go deep down into the earth. Dig a hole and bury them there - tell them "Do not come back; you will be happy there."

Feel that the feet are long and extended into the earth. The hollow bones have been compacted with compressed Chi.

Once again guide the good Chi from earth up to the fill the person again. See the cells as big as the stars and fill them with Chi to blend with the dirty and sick energy. Then empty them again down to the earth.

Fig. 4.39 You can also use a Tree to guide the Chi down into the Earth.

H. Clean with Green Light

Become aware of your liver and breathe into your throat center. Feel that you are breathing the green light into your throat center and let it blend in the Tan Tien. The Chi comes up to blend in the heart, up to the crown, spirals and goes up to the universe. Raise your hand in a spiraling motion up to the universe. Use your 'one hand' to spiral in the universe. Spiral clockwise first. Spiral green light from the universe. Now reverse, counterclockwise - multiply and spiral counterclockwise, bringing the Chi down to clean out your communities, your house, the Tao Garden, the meditation hall, your bodies and all of the people that are 'here' - fill yourselves with Chi. You will use this power to see the cells.

Fig. 4.40 Spiral Sick Energy Counterclockwise down to the Earth. Smile to the Cells and let the Green Light clean out the sickness, flushing it down into the Earth below.

See the cells enlarged and this green energy go in and blend with the dirty, black and cloudy energy. See it come out and let it go down into the earth. Dig a hole and bury it there. Tell it, “Don’t come back. You will be happy down there”. Become aware of the green light and spiral counterclockwise. Spiral down, cleaning out the stress. Clean out your house. Send everything down into the earth. Repeat three, six, nine, thirty six or one hundred and eight times. This depends on how much sick energy you are dealing with in your body.

Green:

Fig. 4.41 Clean with green.

Green cleans and detoxifies all of the body’s cells. Green Chi is mild and safe. Green Chi is used for cleansing, and as a decongestant for diseased parts. It ‘loosens’ the area. The light green Chi is used to break down dirty or diseased energy, like a detergent is used for washing clothes or dishes. Afterwards, the cells will be rinsed with blue light, like clean water is used to rinse the detergent and residue from clothes or dishes.

Throat Center Green

Be aware of the liver’s green color, the throat and the forest. Breathe into the throat, feel yourself breathing in the green light. Guide it down to the Tan Tien, blend and move it up to the heart and the crown.

Project it to the universe; spiral and let it multiply.

Channel one direct line down to the student, one to your crown and one to your palm.

Fig. 4.42 Blend Green Chi into the Three Tan Tiens - project to the Universe, multiply and bring the Energy back down to the Student.

Be aware of the liver, the gall bladder, the forest and the throat breathing.

Be aware of the green light in the universe. Let the light come in and blend in the Tan Tien, up to the heart to blend with the compassion in the heart, and up to the crown.

Project the light up to the universe. See it spiral and let it multiply.

Always keep your Lower Tan Tien Fire warm. Spiral in your Tan Tien and spiral the energy down to the student. Spiral 1,000 revolutions per minute, 10,000, 30,000 and 60,000.

Fig. 4.43 Draw down the Green Light from the Universe.

Cleanse and Remove Sickness

Extend your arms up, with palms facing the heavens. Use one hand to spiral the green force down. The other hand holds the position and connects to the universe. Let this big pool of green light in the universe spiral down – through your community, your home and then into your crown.

Let the Green light blend into the cells and bond with sickness and toxins. Let the green light bring the sickness out of the cells and flow down to the center of the earth.

Dig a hole and bury it. Give the command: “Don’t come back. You will be happy down there. You will be transformed into good Chi.” Smile. Always smile.

Repeat it six, nine or eighteen times. For people who are very sick, who have cancer or may be terminally ill, you can do this two or three hundred times.

Fig. 4.44 Green Light bonds with the Sickness and Toxins before returning them to the Earth.

I. Clean with Blue Light

Be aware the blue light, kidney blue. Breathe the blue light into the throat center. Now slowly blend the blue light in the Tan Tien. Blend the blue light in the heart, in the crown and project it up to the universe, spiraling clockwise. Then feel the universe pouring the blue light back down; counterclockwise. Spiral down. Look at the cells and see the blue light, like water, go in to the cells to rinse and clean all the dirty things, down, down, down to the earth. All the way down. Repeat three, six or nine times. Smile.

Fig. 4.45 Rinse with Blue.

Blue is like cold water; it has the yin power to dissolve all kinds of negative energy and sickness. It has an inhibiting effect. Blue yin energy is the opposite of red yang, which has a strengthening and stimulating effect. Blue has a cooling effect; it can reduce pain, inflammation and can help blood to clot. It stops bleeding and reduces fever. It can help to induce rest and sleep.

Throat Center Blue

Be aware of the kidneys' blue color and breathe the blue light into your throat. Guide it down to the Tan Tien, blend and move back up to the 'heart of compassion' and then the crown.

Project up to the universe, spiral and let it multiply.

Channel one direct line down to the student, one to your crown and one to your palm.

Fig. 4.46 Multiply the Universal Blue Light - guide the Energy from the Throat, Heart and Crown into the Universe and back down.

Be aware of the kidneys, the bladder, the oceans and the throat breathing.

Be aware of the blue light in the universe. Let the light come in and blend in the Tan Tien, up to the heart to blend with the compassion and up to the crown.

Project the light up to the universe. See it spiral and let it multiply.

Fig. 4.47 Draw the Blue Light from the Universe - rinse clean and remove sickness.

Rinse and Flush

Extend your arms in the air, with palms facing heaven. Use one hand to spiral the green force down. The other hand holds the position and connects to the universe. Let a big pool of green light in the universe spiral down – through your community, your home, and then into your crown.

Let the blue light flush into the cells and flush out sickness and toxins towards the center of the earth.

Dig a hole and bury them. Give the command: "Don't come back. You will be happy down there. You will be transformed into good Chi."

Repeat it six, nine or eighteen times. For people who are very sick, who have cancer or who may be terminally ill you can do this up to thirty six, seventy two or one hundred and eight times.

Fig. 4.48 Blue Light flushes out the sickness and toxins before returning them to the earth.

J. Charge with Violet Light

Fig.4.49 Intelligent Luminous Violet

Luminous Violet has intelligence and can be programmed. The universe is full of violet light, especially the North Star and the Big Dipper. The color of the star of the higher self or soul, above the crown, is also violet light, the Divine or Soul energy.

It has properties of other Chi colors. It has a rapid regenerating effect on damaged organs and nerves. Always use green and blue light before using violet. Violet light develops the crown center, the spiritual core. It is good for psychological ailments as well as for physical deficiencies.

Primordial Force

Turning the three minds into one mind, go deep into the empty space of the cell and deep into the chromosomes, magnify the space as you enter into the DNA and return to the original cells. The empty space is the Wu Chi. When you enter this stage you turn the subconsciousness into consciousness and you can talk to your body and cells. You can change the programming of DNA and RNA.

Ask for the power to see the cells and look at the brain cells spread out into the space. “Brain cells please listen. Clear, Clean, and Bright: fill with violet light and return to normal function”.

Violet Light into the Cells

See violet light. Be aware of your crown. The Tan Tien Chi and the negative Chi all combine in the crown. Extend a violet light up to the universe. See the North Star in the Big Dipper. Tell the student to hold their arms in the air, so that they can funnel the Chi into their personal star. Bring the North Star and the Big Dipper down; hold the handle of the Big Dipper and pour the violet light over the student’s personal star. The higher cells will be programmed. Let the Chi enter the brain and ask for the power to see the brain cells. “Brain cells listen to the command”. If there is sickness in the brain, give the command. “Sickness go away”.

The North Star is a major source of violet light.

The Big Dipper is a major source of red and infrared light. Taoists understand that the cup of the Big Dipper gathers all the violet light from the universe. The left hand holds the handle of the big dipper - pour it down to your crown. It then flows down throughout the body.

Fig. 4.51 Practitioner connects with Universal Violet Light.

Bring the violet light down to the student's personal star above their crown. Pause to let the higher cells of the brain reprogram the violet light at the personal star. Continue to spiral the violet light down through the cells of the brain and down through the cells of the whole body.

Fig. 4.52 Pause to reprogram the Violet Light at the other Person's Personal Star.

Fig 4.53 Lead the person and guide them to follow you.
Tell them to focus on the part of their body that you are working on.

Fig. 4.54 “Clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal functions”.

2. Ask for the power to see the cells of the sense organs. Ask the student to move their hand to cover their senses. Give the command: “Eyes, ears, nose, tongue and mouth cells listen to the command. Sickness go away. Clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function”.

Fig. 4.56 “Eyes, listen; clear, clean and bright; fill with Violet Light and return to normal function”.

Fig. 4.59

"Thyroid, parathyroid and thymus glands - listen; clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function".

4. Move your hands to the heart and the lungs. Ask for the power to see the cells of the heart and lungs. Give them the command: “Lungs and heart cells, listen to the command”. If there is no sickness, just clean them out. See the cells and clean them out with violet light. If there is sickness, tell the sickness to “go away - be clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function”. Make sure that you say this part aloud. Give the command in a very firm tone of voice.

Fig. 4.60
“Heart and lung cells please listen; clear, clean & bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function”.

5. Move your hands to cover the left and right sides of the ribcage. Ask for the power to see the cells of the liver, gallbladder, spleen, pancreas and stomach. Give them the command: “Liver, gallbladder, spleen, pancreas and stomach cells, listen to the command”. If there is no sickness, just clean them out. If there is sickness, tell the sickness to, “go away - be clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function”. Make sure that you say this part aloud. Give the command in a very firm tone of voice.

Fig. 4.61
“Liver, gallbladder, pancreas and spleen cells please listen; clear, clean and bright: fill with violet light and return to normal function”.

6. Move your hands to the large and small intestine on the front of the abdomen. Ask for the power to see the cells of the intestines. Give them the command: "Large and small intestine, listen to the command". If there is no sickness, just clean them out. See the cells and clean them out with violet light. If there is sickness, tell the sickness to, "go away - be clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function". Make sure that you say this part aloud. Give the command in a very firm tone of voice.

7. Move your hands to the kidney and sexual organs and ask for the power to see their cells. Give the command: "Kidney and sexual organ cells listen to the command: Clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function". Gather the violet light again and let it pour down and fill all the cells. See the violet light again and feel and see that all the cells are, "clear, clean and bright". Smile.

K. Activate the Defense and Immune System

The Defense System relates to the white blood cell and the immune system relates to the Lymphatic System.

Fig. 4.66 Ask the cells to listen to the command.
The bone marrow produces red and white blood cells. The lymphatic system cleans the toxic and polluted material and bacteria from the cells.

Fig. 4.67 "Immune Cells and Vertebrae please listen: clear, clean and bright; fill with Violet Light and return to normal function".

Sacrum: The sacrum controls all the bones and marrow. It effects the production of red and white blood cells. The bone marrow produces the lymphatic cells (white blood cells). When the blood is full of Chi it becomes lighter. Negative emotions make the blood thick and acidic. The blood cells in a healthy body can live up to ten times longer than in a weak or diseased one.

Bone Marrow: A tissue rich in fats, containing plenty of nourishment for the comprehensive production of the different blood cells: red cells for the transport of oxygen, blood platelets for clotting and the various white cells for the immune system.

Bacterium: Represents the foreign invader, but it is only one of many invaders. Parasites, fungi, viruses, chemicals, mineral fragments, metal particles—these and a great deal besides, set the immune system to work.

Thymus Gland: Perhaps the most important organ of the immune system. The vital training of the different T-lymphocytes takes place inside. When they pass through the thymus they receive a program to convert them into 'T' lymph cells. When they pass through the liver and large intestine they become 'B' cells and helper cells.

We have obtained Fig. 4.68 and the following text from the publication 'The Body Victorious' by Lennart Nilsson and Jan Lindberg.

We hope that you find this short selection of material as informative as we did.

"The illustration below is a highly schematic and simplified picture of our immune system. Top left, the pale yellow 'house' symbolizes the bone marrow, where all blood cells are born. Bottom Right, a solitary bacterium (yellow) represents the foreign invader that the immune system needs to combat. The light blue path represents the older defenses, with various feeding cells that tackle all foreign substances and also function as a kind of cleaning system. They deal with all the old, dead and used-up material in the body. The newer, special defense force, which develops later, follows the green path. Its cells are more specialized; they obtain their special training and reach maturity in organs such as the thymus gland and in the lymphoid tissue around the intestines and in the liver. In the lymphoid tissue, the yellow 'half-way house' (far right), the 'B-lymphocytes are trained. These are the precursors of the large plasma cells - the pale green cells (far right) in the illustration, which produce the body's sniper ammunition, the antibodies (Red and Y-Shaped).

Bone marrow, bacterium and thymus please listen: clear, clean and bright; fill with violet light and return to normal function".

The three paths from the thymus are intended to show that there are different types of T- lymphocytes - among others, aggressive killer cells, helper cells and suppressive cells. All of them have specialized tasks to perform when the immune system launches a counterattack. The three blue paths of the older defenses have three different kinds of feeding cells. First, the large and powerful macrophages (orange) advance on the enemy; then come the granulocytes (blue), smaller and faster moving, followed by the (pink) monocytes. The nuclei in the shimmering cell bodies are faintly discernable. In addition, there is an important complement system (middle), symbolized here by a multicolored range of small spheres flocking toward the foreign bacterium. These molecules play a large part in increasing the efficiency of both antibodies and feeding cells. In addition, they have the capacity to destroy bacteria by shooting holes in them. The complement factors are produced in many different cells in the body.

Chi Kung has a very strong effect against viruses. Altough medical science is struggling to discover a medicine that will kill them, Chi Kung practice is able to prevent them from occuring in the first place. Whether we are sick or healthy, we all need our defense system to be in good shape.

Defense System - Outline of Practice

1. Work on yourself first to activate your sacrum. Project the sacrum as big as the universe. See the eight holes in the bone and visualize them breathing. Breathe and compress the Universal Chi into the bones. Feel the Chi begin to rise up the spine and into your mideyebrow and temple bones. When you feel that there is enough Chi, project it out to the universe, multiply it and spiral it back down. Project it towards the student and ask them to touch their sacrum. Rub your hands until warm and touch the sacrum. Picture the sacrum getting bigger and bigger, breathing into the eight holes. Tell the person to smile at the sacrum and start to work on your Tan Tien and universe. Multiply more energy and picture the Chi from the universe coming down to the sacrum of the other person (and your own) and then charge up the spine, to the rib cage, to the temple bone and to the mideyebrow.

Fig. 4.69 Visualize and feel the Bone Marrow filling with Chi.

2. Tell the student to move their hands to the hip bones. Tell them to smile to these bones. Feel them as 'funny, laughing, happy bones'. Tell them to feel the electricity in the sacrum and bone marrow.
3. Touch the femur bones. Feel the electricity running up the legs.
4. Touch the humerus bones. Feel the electricity running up the arms.
5. Touch the lower part of the sternum and feel the Chi penetrate into the bones and spread out to the rib cage. Feel the electricity run throughout the rib cage.

Practice

1. Touch the sacrum, feel your fingers grown 'long' and penetrate into the marrow. Feel that the sacrum is as big as the universe and that the Chi has been compacted. Fill the sacrum with Chi. The eight holes are breathing. Let the fingers touch the sacrum and become aware of the Tan Tien spiraling, until you feel the crown and the mideyebrow spiral and connect to the universe. Hold until the universe fills the sacrum once again and rises up the spine to the mideyebrow.

Bone Marrow Cells

Fig. 4.70 Touch the Sacrum - see the Eight Holes breathing - fill the Sacrum, Mideyebrow and Crown with Chi - empty to the universe and 'fill' again.

Sacrum Breathing to get Chi

Breathe through the sacrum; feel red and yellow light enter. Guide it into Tan Tien. Blend the Chi in the Tan Tien. Move up to the Heart Center. Move up to the Crown and project up to the universe; let it blend and multiply. Multiply in the universe

Open a direct channel down to the other person, and one to your palm.

Sacrum Chi

Project the student's feet down to the earth and connect to the earth's core.

Third Eye and Temple Bones are aligned in a triangle.

Activate the Sacrum until you feel the Chi rising up the spine and feel it pulsing; be aware of the Temple Bones.

Fig. 4.71 Activate the Sacrum - Be aware of the Temples.

2. Tell the student to move their hands to the hip bones. Tell them to smile to these bones. Feel them as 'funny, laughing, happy bones'. Tell them to feel the electricity in the sacrum and bone marrow. Tell the student to pack and compress the Chi into the bones in order to revitalize and revive bone marrow. Give the command. "Produce healthy white and red blood cells".

Fig. 4.72 "Hip Bones produce healthy White and Red Blood Cells".

White Blood Cell
(Neutrophil)

Leave the fingers touching the hip bones and start to spiral in the Tan Tien until you feel the crown and the mideyebrow also spiral. Expand your awareness to the Universe and the Universe will charge into the hip bones.

Fig. 4.73 Touch and feel the bones. Leave your fingers there - lower your mind into the Tan Tien and the universe.

3. Touch the middle part of the femur bone to help increase the production of healthy red blood cells. Feel the electricity running up the legs. Give the same command for the femur bones: "Funny, laughing, happy bones produce healthy white and red cells." After that put your mind into the Tan Tien and universe so that the Chi can charge into the bones. Feel electricity run throughout the whole skeleton.

Fig. 4.74 "Funny, laughing, happy femur bones produce healthy white and red blood cells".

4. Touch the humerus bones. Feel the electricity running up the arms.Give the same command: "Funny, laughing, happy bones produce healthy white and red cells." After that, put your mind into the Tan Tien and universe so that the Chi can charge into the bones. Give the same command for the lower part of the sternum. Chi penetrates into the bone and spreads out into the rib cage 'Tan Tien and Universe'. Put your mind into the Tan Tien and the universe so that the Chi can charge into the bones.

5. Touch the lower part of the sternum and feel it and the rib cage as funny, happy, laughing bones. Feel the Chi and electricity penetrate into the bones and spread out to the rib cage. Touch the lower part of the sternum. Give the same command again. "Produce healthy white and red cells". After that you put your mind into the Tan Tien and universe so that the Chi can charge into the bones.

You have finished activating the defense system.

A. "Humerus bones produce healthy white and red blood cells".
B. Tan Tien and the Universe.
C. "Lower sternum produce healthy white and red blood cells".

Immune System

1. The Immune System starts with the top part of the sternum. Touch the top part of the sternum. Project your fingers 'very long' into the bone and feel them penetrate right into the thymus. Activate the thymus gland. Gradually, feel the fingers rising up to the thyroid and parathyroid. Activate the thyroid and parathyroid and throat center. Give the command, "Clear ,clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".

Fig. 4.76 Touch the Top of the Sternum & activate the Thymus, Thyroid and Parathyroid Glands.

Fig. 4.77 Activate the Tonsils and Jaw Bones.

3. Touch the mideyebrow and crown, which control the pituitary and pineal glands respectively. Touch the third eye, feeling it open and feel the light from heaven entering into your brain and into your body. Touch the crown. Feel your fingers reaching deep inside and feel the Chi penetrating all the way down to your perineum. Give the command, "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".

Fig. 4.78 Third Eye, Mideyebrow and the Crown affects the Immunity and Defense Systems.

4. Rub both of your hands until they are warm and cross the hands on the neck and feel the lymphatic system has been activated. Cross your arms and hold your hands under your armpits. Picture the lymphatic system of the armpits as you activate the lymph nodes. Give the command; “Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function”. The lymphatic system of the upper body is clear, clean and bright and the lymphatic fluid flows! Smile.

Fig. 4.79 Lymphatic System of the Neck and Armpits are clear, clean and bright.

5. Move the hands to the cover the groin area. Give the command to the lymph nodes there. Next, cover the lymph nodes of the navel area, and give the command; “Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function”. The groin and the navel area lymph nodes become clear, clean and bright.

Fig. 4.80
Activate the Lymph Nodes in the Groin.

6. Place your palms over your navel and activate the lymph nodes. Give the command; “Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function”. See them become clear, clean and bright. You have now activated the immune system.

Fig. 4.81
Touch and activate the Lymph Nodes in the Navel.

Summary - General Healing Session

This General Healing Session will help everybody.

A. Three Minds into One
B. Activate the Six Directions
C. Activate the Three Fires
D. Linking Personal Stars, Energy Bodies and the Universe
E. Protective Circle and Chi Field
F. Chi Water (Sacred Water) Practice
G. Empty and Fill
H. Clean with Green Light
I. Clean with Blue Light
J. Charge with Violet Light
K. Defense and Immune System

A. Three Minds into One

Smile to the inner universe, activate the heart compassion energy; feel the love and joy within. Smile and empty the mind and heart down into the Tan Tien. Fill the Tan Tien with Chi and spiral the energy. When the Tan Tien is full, the energy will rise up to fill the brain. Manifestation will occur at the mideyebrow.

B. Activate the Six Directions

Expand the awareness to connect to the Six Directions at the crown, mideyebrow, heart and Tan Tien.

C. Activate the Three Fires

Activate the Tan Tien, Kidney and Heart Fires.

Activate the Sacred Fire Triangle circulating the energy between the Tan Tien, kidneys and the heart. Feel the energy's force multiply.

Activate the personal stars; the cosmic star above the head and the earth star below the soles of the feet.

Keep the Tan Tien warm, and spiral at the sacrum and mideyebrow. Turn your eyes to look upwards and see the crown spiraling, connecting to the cosmic star about six inches above the crown point. Feel the cosmic and earth stars pull the body simultaneously towards heaven and earth. See the cup of the Big Dipper fill with Violet Light, gathering Chi from the North Star and the universe. When the cup is full, pour the light down into the cosmic star above your head. Feel the violet light spreading throughout your entire system, filling the Upper, Middle and Lower Tan Tiens.

D. Linking Personal Stars, Energy Bodies and the Universe

Feel the central channel running from your cosmic star, through your three Tan Tiens and connecting to the earth energy below. Use you 'Yi' power to connect to the personal or cosmic star above the head. Connect the personal star to the stars of each other person in the meditation. Create a Chi body and become the major connecting point. Create a left spiral pattern to connect all the stars into a larger group. All the meditators then become a satellite, creating a group energy body.

E. Protective Circle and Chi Field

Raise the hands and touch the Universal Fire. Use your Yi to bring the energy down and manifest a Sacred or Chi Fire around the room, creating a protective circle. Create a Chi Dome and set up the guardian animals and/or angels. Activate the eight elemental forces of nature and the universe.

F. Chi Water (Sacred Water) Practice

Invoke the power of the Sacred Water practice to cleanse the body of all sickness, negative energy and bad fortune. Energize and renew the self at a cellular level with health, wealth and longevity.

G. Empty and Fill

Empty any remaining negative energy, sickness, burdens and worries, down in the depths of the molecular mother, the earth. Bury the energy there so that the earth can recycle it. Bring recycled energy up from the center of the earth into the body. Fill and compact the Chi into the 'hollow bones'. See all of the cells on the horizon of your mind's eye; spread them across the panorama and see the cells as big as the stars in the night sky. Fill them with Chi, blending it with any sick or grey energy. Then empty again, as you guide the all of the Chi back into the earth for recycling. If you wish, you can fill with earth Chi once again before you begin to 'clean with green'.

H. Clean with Green Light

Green cleans and detoxifies all of the body's cells. Green Chi is mild and safe. Green Chi is used for cleansing, and as a decongestant for diseased parts. Be aware of the liver's green color, the throat and the emerald forest. Breathe into the throat, feel yourself breathing in the green light. Guide it down to the Tan Tien, blend and move it up to the heart and the crown.

Project it to the universe; spiral and let it multiply. Channel one direct line down to the student, one to your crown and one to your palm. Bring the energy back down and blend it with any sickness in the liver, gallbladder or anywhere else in the body. Spiral the energy counter clockwise and down into the earth. Continue cleaning with green until you see that all the cells have been charged with the emerald light of the forest.

I. Clean with Blue Light

Be aware of the kidneys' blue sapphire color and breathe the blue light into your throat. Guide it down to the Tan Tien, blend and move back up to the 'heart of compassion' and then to the crown.

Project up to the universe, spiral and let it multiply. Channel one direct line down to the student, one to your crown and one to your palm. Then feel the universe pouring the blue light back down; clockwise. Spiral down. Look at the cells and see the blue light, like water, go into the cells to rinse, clean and remove any sickness. Spiral the energy counter clockwise and down into the earth. Continue rinsing with blue light until you see that all the cells have been charged with the sapphire blue.

J. Charge with Violet Light

Luminous Violet has intelligence and can be programmed.

Turn three minds into one mind, go deep into the empty space of the cell and deep into the chromosomes, magnify the space as you enter into the DNA and return to the original cells. Ask for the power to see the cells and look at the brain cells spread out into the space. "Brain cells please listen. Clear, Clean, and Bright: fill with violet light, back to normal function". See violet light. Be aware your crown. The Tan Tien Chi and the negative Chi all combine in the crown. Extend a violet light up to the universe. See the North Star and the Big Dipper. Tell the students to hold their arms in the air, so that they can funnel the Chi into their personal star. Bring the North Star and the Big Dipper down; hold the handle of the Big Dipper and pour the violet light over the student's personal star. The higher cells will be programmed. Let the Chi enter the brain and ask for the power to see the brain cells. "Brain cells listen to the command". If there is sickness in the brain, give the command. "Sickness go away". Continue to spiral the violet light down through the cells of the whole body.

1. Ask for the power to see into the cells of the Brain. Ask the student to move their hands to cover their brain. "Brain Cells listen to the command;"Sickness go away. Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal functions".

2. Ask for the power to see the cells of the sense organs. Ask the student to move their hand to cover their senses. Give the command; "Eyes, Ears, Nose, Tongue and Mouth cells listen to the command. Sickness go away. Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
3. Move your hands down to your Throat Center and give the command; "Thyroid, Parathyroid and Thymus Glands listen to the command; Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
4. Move your hands to the heart and the lungs. Ask for the power to see the cells of the heart and lungs. Give them the command; "Lungs and Heart Cells listen to the command; Clear, clean and bright; Fill with violet light and return to normal function".
5. Move your hands to cover the left and right sides of the ribcage. Ask for the power to see the cells of the liver, gallbladder, spleen, pancreas and stomach. Give them the command; "Liver, Gallbladder, Spleen, Pancreas and Stomach Cells listen to the command; Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
6. Move your hands to the large and small intestine on the front of the abdomen. Ask for the power to see the cells of the intestines. Give them the command; "Large and Small Intestine, listen to the comm and Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
7. Move your hands to the kidney and sexual organs and ask for the power to see their cells. Give the command; "Kidney and Sexual Organ Cells listen to the command; Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function". Gather the violet light again and let it pour down and fill all the cells. See the violet light again and feel and see that all the cells are "clear, clean and bright". Smile.

K. Defense and Immune System

Defense System

1. Work on yourself first to activate your Sacrum. Project the sacrum as big as the universe. Breathe and compress the universal Chi into the sacrum until it rises up to fill your brain. Project out into the universe, multiply the energy and spiral it back down. Project it to the students and tell them to touch the sacrum.
2. Tell the students to move their hands to the Hip Bones. Tell them to smile to these bones. Feel them as 'funny, laughing, happy bones'. Tell them to feel the electricity in the sacrum and bone marrow.
3. Touch the Femur Bones. Feel the electricity running up the legs.
4. Touch the Humerus Bones. Feel the electricity running up the arms.
5. Touch the lower part of the Sternum and feel the Chi penetrate into the bones and spread out to the Rib Cage. Feel the electricity run throughout the rib cage.

Immune System

1. The Immune system starts with the top part of the Sternum. Touch the top part of the sternum. Project your fingers 'very long' into the bone and feel them penetrate right into the Thymus. Activate the thymus gland. Gradually, feel the fingers rising up to the thyroid and parathyroid. Activate the Thyroid and Parathyroid and Throat Center. Give the command; "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
2. Move the fingers to touch both sides of the Jaw Bones to help activate the Tonsils, the body's first line of defense. The jaw bone affects the Lymph Nodes beneath, which includes the tonsils. Fill them with Chi. Give the command; "Clear clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
3. Touch the Mideyebrow and Crown, which control the Pituitary and Pineal Glands respectively. Touch the third eye, feeling it open and feel the light from heaven entering into your brain and into your body. Touch the crown. Feel your fingers reaching deep inside and feel the Chi penetrating all the way down to your perineum. Fill the glands with Chi. Give the command; "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
4. Rub both of your hands until they are warm. Cross your arms and hold your hands under your Armpits. Picture the Lymphatic System of the armpits as you activate the lymph nodes. Give the command; "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function". The lymphatic system of the upper body is clear, clean and bright then the lymphatic fluid flows! Smile.
5. Move the hands to the cover the Groin area. Give the command to the Lymph Nodes there. Give the command; "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function".
6. Place your palms over your Navel and activate the Lymph Nodes. Give the command to the lymph nodes there. Give the command; "Clear, clean and bright fill with violet light and return to normal function". You have now activated the immune system.

Chapter V
Cosmic Healing I - Basic

Source of Chi and Color

There are different sources of Chi in the universe: cosmic (air), earth, nature and human. Different parts of the human body have different energies and are correlated with the universe and nature. Each part of our body, especially the organs and glands can produce, receive, transform and emit different Chi and color.

Fig. 5.1 Planet, Bone and Cosmic Colors

Earth Chi

While Cosmic Chi (the atmosphere over us and the universal force) is ethereal in nature, what is called earth Chi is not. This Chi appears as the line visible above the horizon when the sun is low in the sky, and seems to hover just above the ground. It actually also sinks into the ground.

Earth Chi contains yellow and some white Chi. When the ground and the cosmic (air) combine they will become white Chi. This Chi has a very powerful healing energy, not too overheated, but balanced and mild.

When treating a problem, white Chi, in the proportion 7:3 (7 white to 3 of the selected color) acts as a brake on colors which are hot or too active. This enables the body to take in chi more easily.

Fig. 5.2 Use White Chi to blend all the other Colors.

Special Note: Many of the color references came from the following books: "Let There be Light" by Darius Dinshah and "Advanced Pranic Healing" by Master Choa Kok Sui.

Human and Nature Chi

These include the things we can see on the earth: the mountains, lakes, seas, forests, streams, caves, valleys, rocks and precious stones. Taoism classifies five elemental forces: earth, metal, water, wood and fire.

So there are five elements in our body and five elements in nature; there are five elements in the cosmic and five elements in the universe.

According to the Taoists, when we can make the connection and control our body's elements, we will quickly make connections to nature and the universal forces and employ them very easily.

Solar Chi

Before sunrise or sunset there is more white Chi in the air, which we can use abundantly for health and healing. White Chi affects the lungs and the large intestine, so we direct this Chi to these organs. This will generate further Chi to maintain our daily activities. All colors of the spectrum are present in white.

Simple Practice

Look at the horizon at sunrise and sunset. Stand still and extend your palms toward the sun, smile and absorb the rising or setting sun's energy into yourself.

General Information

Energy can be introduced to the affected area of the body by moving the hand clockwise in a spiral.

Move the hand anticlockwise with a spiraling motion to clean, flush and remove energy from the treatment area. After this, brush down the whole body, to direct the sick energy into the earth.

Use an anticlockwise spiraling movement in order to clean, then expel the energy.

Use a clockwise movement to bring energy in and an anticlockwise one to take it out.

As a general rule and especially when you are beginning to practice the techniques, keep the color combinations simple. Always use blue (to cool, calm and stabilize), green to clean, white to harmonize and violet (which carries the properties of all the other colors) to program.

Although it is important to learn all of the applications, it is more important to begin practice, maintaining a serene state of mind throughout. You will immediately realize that Cosmic Healing provides the practitioner with as much benefit as the student. The more you practice the more you heal.

Healing Colors

White Chi

The color of the chi from the air, earth and sun is always white and acts as a calming agent for the surplus chi produced by the other colors. It also redirects this chi to areas of the body which need it. For this reason, use white in combination with another color in the proportion 7:3.

Shining white chi should be concentrated at the center, while colored Chi goes to the edge. This can also be reversed. It is also possible to blend the white and colored Chi together.

It is safe to use white chi when you are not sure which color might be suitable for a patient, especially when treating babies, toddlers, the elderly and the weak. People with minor problems can be treated with blue, green or mauve, while gold colored Chi or mauve/white Chi is better when the problem is serious.
For a stimulating and strengthening effect use white-red.

When it becomes necessary to switch from one color to another, an abrupt shaking movement of the hand should ensure a smooth transition to a new color.

There is a very strong violet light in the North Star. You can dilute the color with white. White Chi is composed of red, orange, yellow, violet and blue.

Blue Chi

The effect of blue Chi is one of cooling, and hindering similar to yin or water energy. The opposite effect can be obtained with the use of red Chi.
When we draw the energy down, some peoples' bodies can't adjust to the energy immediately, so using blue Chi is always good. "Water blue' is the one element that always brings harmony and does not cause any harm.

a. Blue Chi, like yin, water energy, has a cooling effect. It also can act as a restraining agent.
b. Because of blue Chi's ability to cool, soothe and numb, it is particularly appropriate for promoting relaxation and sleep, reducing abnormally high body temperature, minimizing pain and swelling. It can also hinder the proliferation of viruses and bacteria and assist in the rapid clotting of blood.

Blue (and green) can detoxify and also energize.

Green Chi

While tangerine Chi can be quite dangerous, the action on green chi is gentle and harmless. Freeing up a damaged area so that cleaning can then take place may be done with green Chi. Once it's loose you can then use blue or organ's color Chi to expel the disease completely. It can therefore remove the disease and bad energy by locally sweeping either to and then out of the arms for the upper body or out of the legs for the lower body.

If there is a need to energize with the organ's color Chi, first energize with pale green Chi. Always use green chi before using the colors purple, tangerine and red.

Use the throat to activate and draw the green Chi up to the crown, rising to the universe to be multiplied and brought back down for use. Always add blue Chi when there is pain. The motion of pushing and pulling through the affected part is very powerful. You also can also use the 'sword finger' in a small area and for infection.

Green can also be used for energizing together with violet; first use green and follow with violet.

Pale green and pale tangerine chi can be employed in sequence, as the first acts on the 'sick' energy, reducing it to a form which can easily be driven out by the second.

Simultaneous use of pale green pale tangerine and white chi in the ratio 2:1:7 is recommended to treat stubborn areas because the effects are intensified when these proportions are used together.

In the treatment of cancer, dark green and tangerine Chi may be employed, preceded by blue. This can assist in toxin removal, and in the cleaning and freeing up of disease affected areas so that necrotic cellular tissue is released. These colors can relieve congestion and free up 'sick' energy which is 'stuck' when used with brushing movements over the affected areas. They also help with treatment of colds and elevated body temperatures, and in the dispersal of blood clots.

Red Chi

Cerise chi makes the area to which is applied stronger, while crimson chi has the opposite effect. When using color for healing, project luminous white in the center and cerise at the edges for a strengthening effect. Always combine red with blue and green; never use it on its own.

Cerise mixed with white, because of its expansion abilities, can help widen blood vessels and breathing tubes. It also helps those with heart and asthma problems.

Red chi with its qualities of warmth and expansion, has a number of benefits. It is good for the circulatory and respiratory systems and the blood, as it expands blood vessels and other tubes, thus improving circulation and breathing, particularly for heart patients and asthma sufferers. It also brings increased energy into the blood and helps allay feelings of fatigue or weakness, driving out 'sick' energy along with toxic substances and other waste materials. It can also help those who are sensitive to allergens. It may help those whose lives are near the end have a longer period on earth, and promote revival of consciousness.

Avoid the use of dark colors, which may cause an adverse reaction. If a person is suffering from a sexually transmitted disease, it is not advisable to treat him or her with chi which is crimson. Chi of this color makes the microbes that cause such diseases multiply at a fast rate and can also produce an inflammatory or constrictive reaction.

Tangerine Chi

When using orange Chi, always use blue Chi first; to tone and calm down the ailing body area, before applying the vitality of orange.

Pale tangerine chi with added white can be used; however certain areas are inappropriate for treatment by this color because of its power. Do not use with the eyes (including retinal problems), heart, head, throat, brain (for example bleeding in the brain) or the spleen.

The large intestine benefits from the use of tangerine chi, but this color should be used sparingly on areas like the solar plexus and navel. Appendix problems should not be treated with this color as it could exacerbate the problem. Tangerine chi has an effect on the bowel, and can also aid in returning an unconscious person to consciousness or in stimulating someone who is dying.

To treat cancers of certain types, dark green and dark tangerine are suitable because of their ability to destroy. Always avoid the head and the heart when using orange.

Forcible removal of waste products, toxic substances, 'sick' energy, viruses and bacteria Menstrual difficulties
Waste elimination problems
Freeing up 'sick' energy
Breakdown of clots in the blood
Problems of the urinary and respiratory systems Diseases of joints and connective tissue
Common cold
Problems caused by allergens
Cysts

Yellow Chi

Yellow Chi has a close connection to the nerves, the bones and the bone marrow. It is the color of the spleen; in Taoism we feel the spleen is involved in the assimilation and processing of food and the appetite. This doesn't mean eat a lot, but when the spleen is balanced the appetite will be controlled.

Chi which is yellow in color is beneficial in the treatment of nerves as it promotes re-growth. It also helps in the repair of fractures and cells. It is good for the health of bones, tissues and organs. It has the power to increase bone marrow production.

Violet Chi

Violet Chi has the properties of all the other colors. It's used for severe types of sickness.

The qualities found in all colors are contained in purple chi, therefore it is particularly effective for serious illnesses. Mauve (light purple) chi which contains elements of blue and green, helps to restore organs and nerves affected by disease or trauma. Although mauve chi can be employed on certain kinds of severe infections, chi which is dark purple should be avoided when diseases of the respiratory system are present, as it could cause the proliferation of disease causing microbes.

Violet Chi is use chi that is pale white/green or pale white/tangerine and, selecting each in turn, with a brushing movement apply to the whole spinal area and especially to the area where the trauma is located.

If purple chi is used in combination with other colors, it will intensify their qualities and if used together with red, tangerine or yellow chi can be dangerous; it may cause the undesirable proliferation of some cells.

Dark electric violet can be used for tumors or cancers. Always use the blue or green first.

In order to make an area which has become weak stronger, mauve mixed with white can be used, but for really fast strengthening use cerise mixed with white.

Both white and violet have the properties of all the Chi colors. The difference is that violet Chi has a greater penetrating effect and is easier to assimilate than white.

Because bright purple chi has been acted upon by the soul, it has the capacity for independent thought and action.

Energy or chi which comes from the air, the earth and the sun is called purple chi. There is a second type of chi with this color, but having more brightness – this has been called bright purple chi and is derived from the soul through the crown of the head, the point connected to the North Star or Big Dipper.

Bright purple chi can only be brought down from the universe via the crown point if the practitioner has highly developed senses, The effects of chi from air, earth and the sun depends on the development of the practitioner's soul.

In contrast to purple chi, the chi which is bright purple in color has a much greater potency because it can help in the restoration of nerves and organs which have been affected either by disease or trauma. This bright purple chi can be used to remove infection and to promote fast healing, even in the case of serious illness. In addition, this chi has been said to possess its own consciousness (Master Choa Kok Sui. Advanced pranic healing:49)

When cancer and other growths are being treated, use bright purple chi because it has the ability to destroy. However, beforehand, the affected area should be energized with pale blue chi.

Do not use bright purple chi at the same time as chi which is yellow, green, tangerine or red because it will intensify and increase the effects of these colors. In addition, the use of any dark colors with bright purple chi (either preceding or following its use) should be avoided, as this will produce a very damaging result. As a general guideline, use blue before electric violet.

Golden Chi

Gold colored chi, which has almost the same qualities as bright purple chi, is formed when bright purple chi meets the spirit body. The color changes to cerise (pale red) when this gold colored chi enters the physical body. However, this chi is does not have as much influence as the bright purple chi, being gentler and therefore less effective as a cleansing agent. Gold colored chi should be used to treat a very local area, while bright purple chi can be employed over a wider area.

Spleen

The spleen is connected to the solar plexus and the navel, the major center that connects to all the organs. Holding solar energy or a white ball at the solar plexus will help distribute Chi to all the organs.

If the solar plexus gets clogged up the liver and spleen will also become blocked. The spleen, the Door of Life and the navel are all linked together; the navel and the Door of Life sit opposite each other. We call this an emotional link. Many diseases are caused by emotional links; people use psychology to deal with it which can work to a certain level, but all the energy would eventually get stuck at this main juncture or plexus. White chi is taken in mainly at the spleen, and before being sent to the various parts of the body, is split into its colored forms of red, green, purple, blue and tangerine.

If the spleen is not clean, the immune system will be affected, together with the production of bone marrow. The blood will be dirty and diseases of the joints and connective tissue encouraged.

Cosmic Healing Chi Kung works very well with Chi Nei Tsang. The Cosmic Healing Chi Kung, Chi Nei Tsang and all the other Universal Tao practices all play a unique role in working to heal the physical and subtle bodies. When you combine these three in synergy, it allows you to perform many healing tasks. The spleen (located under the left side of the rib cage), spleen center or navel can absorb white Chi directly into the front or back. The Chi will be broken down into color and distributed to other centers and their associated organs.

There is one thing that I always advise: the recipient or student should be under a doctor's supervision and that they should alternate between the medicine from the doctor and the work with us at the Universal Tao. The doctor should be advised of what we intend to do with the student.

Cosmic Healing Planetary Colors

In Taoism we give each planet a color which enhances the healing power. Have the 'Planets' chart (located at the beginning of this chapter) in front of you, look at the relevant planet and close your eyes. Hold the planet in your mind.

Fig. 5.3 Channel the Cosmic Planetary Energy into the body.

Mars: Focus your awareness on the star above you, turn your eyes up and look up to the crown. Hold the image of Mars and extend your sight beyond the crown, looking up into infinity. See the Red Light and gradually bring it down to your head about 6 feet above you. Form it into a red ball, a holographic image of the planet Mars shining its red light above you. Invite it to flow down to your 'star' (located above your crown) and continue to flow into your Upper Tan Tien for processing. Let it flow down to the heart (or T-2) and down to the palms. Red and orange light also can be breathed in through the sacrum. Feel the sacrum pulsing and breathing in the red and orange light. Practice 9 to 18 times, rest and shake your hands.

Venus: Become aware of the star above you, turn your eyes up and look up to the crown and into infinity, seeing the expanse of White Light. Gradually bring the light down to your head, about 6 feet above you. Form it into a white ball, a holographic image of the planet Venus shining its white light above you. Invite it to flow down to the star above your crown and continue to flow into your Upper Tan Tien, for processing. Now it may flow down to your lungs freely.

Saturn: The Yellow Light from Saturn can also be absorbed via the earth through the soles of your feet and perineum. This is for your spleen. Follow as above.

Mercury: The Blue Light from Mercury may be absorbed through the throat center. This is for your kidneys.

Jupiter: The Green Light from Jupiter can also be absorbed through the throat center. This is for your liver. Follow as above.

Summary - Working with Color

(Practitioner to Student)

There are two ways of doing this type of healing session:

One way is to focus on the specific location in your own body, using your hands and ask the other person to do the same. Together you complete the entire route.

Another way is to focus on your own energy body and ask the student to do the same. Bring a channel or line down from your energy body into your physical body and do the same for the student. Once again, complete the routes together.

For reasons of clarity this text only mentions one student and uses the male gender; this session may however be performed with a group also. Before starting the session do some group meditation practice and warm ups.

1. Be aware of the Tan Tien and connect to the universe. Let the student sit with his back to you. You are behind him. Be aware of your Sacrum area and feel the Chi; wait for the Chi to rise up to the crown and to the universe. Spiral the Chi down to the student's and your own energy body and it will flow into the physical realm.
2. Draw in the green light with your palm, push it right through the sacrum and disperse the sickness throughout the other side of the universe. Pull the green light from the universe through the sacrum and push the sick Chi out to the universe. Do this 6 to 9 times until you feel the sacrum has been cleaned. When you pull back stop the green Chi at the student's sacrum; there is no need to pull it back to you.

   Yellow light from the earth will help strengthen the sacral bone. Visualize the sacrum and vitalize the complete bone structure with yellow light passing throughout.
3. Be aware of the energy body above the Crown; extend yourself up from above your crown and channel down the white light from the center of the universe and the violet light from the North Star. Using your 'mind-power' ask the inside of the bone structure to open, allowing the white and violet light to flow into the marrow. Focus on the energy body; you can picture the energy body's sacrum and bone structure to help guide the energy inside and see the whole body light up from deep within.

4. Then focus on the Door of Life and the Navel. First flush them through with green light, cleaning them out. Draw the green light from the Door of Life through to the navel, and then push back through. To cool down the Door of Life (if necessary), draw the blue light and push it through from the navel to the Ming Men, connecting with the universe. Then bring the white or violet light down and activate the Lower Tan Tien. Always teach people about their Tan Tien. It is like an ocean and the body is like a hollow bamboo. The bamboo can bring the water up. This way energy will never dry up.
5. Concentrate on the Solar Plexus and the Chi Chung (T-11). Once again, draw the green light, spiral it, use it to flush, then energize with white and violet light. As before, always allow the energy to stream through both the points completely. The solar plexus holds all the emotions. When working on the solar plexus, the most important thing to remember is to connect the 'backside' to the universe. There is literally no end to this connection. Just allow the Chi to come all the way down and then pull it towards the rear slightly. Simply clean out the path. Allow the information to condense; allow any images to manifest and then release. Then stabilize the energy. Picture the Chi-Field enveloping the person as a big protective bubble. Cool down with blue.
6. Proceed to the Heart and the Shen Dao (T5/ T6). Draw in the green light, push it through and repeat several times. Now scan the heart with your palm, sensing its strength; then select an appropriate hue, i.e., not too dark. Send the red light through the heart to strengthen it.

   Cool down any excess heat in the heart, flushing down and out, using blue color. Draw in the white Chi; push it through to the Wing Point (T5/T6). Energize the center at the back of the heart using violet and golden Chi. Picture the heart surrounded by a golden aura.
7. Move up to the Throat Center, flushing through to C-7, using blue light first to open and clear it and then green light to clean.
8. Next activate the mideyebrow. Focus on the mideyebrow in your own body. Use golden yellow Chi; use it to flush and stabilize the mideyebrow. Flush it all the way through to the backside of the head. Energize with violet golden light.
9. Proceed up to the third eye in the middle of the forehead. Connect to the Kun Lun at the back of the crown. Flush through both points using the pale violet light. Energize with electric white or golden light.
10. Concentrate on the crown. Use violet or golden light to enter and flush all the way down through the central channel, leaving the body at the perineum. Cool down the system by showering blue light over the whole body.

    When people have a serious infection, they should consult a doctor. It is common for infections to take a long time to clear up nowadays, even when using antibiotics.

There are two ways to deal with this; allopathically or naturally. The Taoist practices are in great conflict with 'contemporary (i.e., not alternative/natural) western concepts'. The western concepts recommend a full course of antibiotics. Using the theories of Chi Kung, a baby for example, would absorb natural antibiotics via the bones. Western Allopathic Practice consider antibiotics as wonder drugs. The only 'wonder' is when will they realize the many harmful effects that it has on the body? Babies that have been 'fed' with antibiotics frequently suffer many organ related problems by the time they reach 20 to 30 years of age. The worst thing is that they are given to children nearly every time that they become ill. If you scan (cosmically) the solar plexus, thymus or spleen of such a person, the area feels like a hollow void. This means that the immune system is totally non-functional. The same thing applies to Aids: the immune system no longer functions. Any virus can enter the body - medicine cannot kill it. There is nothing left to 'fight with'.

In my experience and following my own experiments, in circumstances like the above my own practices are as follows: I clean my colon; there are a few ways to do that. I eat fiber, vegetables, especially green leafy ones. I eat a big bowl of vegetable soup. I also add things like onion, pumpkin, carrots and cabbage, which will give it a sweet taste. I don't eat any meat and drink a lot of water. The colon is cleansed within two days. I also brush the skin, which is a very good detoxifier. The vegetables will provide natural carbohydrates which are digested and absorbed very quickly. A healthy diet consists of many whole natural foods. It is 'alkaline' as opposed to 'acid' based. I also use the 'colema' which I feel is the best cleanser.

Chapter VI
Individual Healing Session

The Individual Healing session embodies all of the techniques that you have used previously and consolidates them for use on a one-to-one basis. The session comprises the following three parts:

A. Almighty Knife (Chi Knife)

The almighty knife can be used for any health problems. We can charge the knife with Yin or Yang energy. We charge the almighty knife most often with Yin Power. Yin is the cold energy and is used for any inflammation, pain or heat. Yin is used to break up illness. Charge the almighty knife with Yang for strengthening, melting or expelling. Only use the Yang when there is no pain.

B. Energizing and Activating the Immune System

C. Cleansing the Internal Organs

A. Almighty Knife

Fig. 6.1 Almighty Chi Knife

Since the dawn of ages and our descent into the material realm, we have constructed, manufactured and used tools to facilitate the progress of events. They are an extension of ourselves that enable us to enhance, mould and magnify our intrinsic nature as inquisitive playful beings.

We have used implements to help nourish, protect and amuse ourselves and further our progress in attempting to understand the 'how' and 'why' of existential reality. The knife has served as a means to carve our way into the present. It is a simple, yet powerful 'friend' and derives as much power as we wish to lend it.

Its design may consist of any combination of the five elements (Earth) which when combined with Universal (Heaven) and Cosmic (Man) forces, provide a unit of energetic substance which receives and transmits magnification, purpose and power in accordance with the human will that governs it. 'Chi Knife' and "Powers of Ten' adopt the precepts of a truly magical existence. When we arrive at our destination we will realize that we have indeed turned "the Wheel of Law'. In achieving this end we will have completed the cycle and returned to the beginning of the journey. We will understand that the simple things in life, like the knife, contain the same amount of power as state of the art technology.

We are all returning to the Garden of Eden. Complex telescopic and microscopic equipment now enables us to see the truth:

"Inside has no outside; outside has no inside".

They are one in the same thing. When they merge together we will indeed enter the Kingdom of God.

Outline of Practice

1. Hold the knife in the right hand (left, if you are left handed). Hold the other hand near your body, with the thumb and index finger touching. Project the Chi Knife as big as the universe, 'long and big - reaching to Heaven'. The bones in your arm are hollow and the 'bottom' is sealed at the shoulder. Feel them 'fill and pack' with the power coming from above.
2. Then give the command: "Power comes from the east. This Chi Knife has the power to dissolve all the negative energy, sickness and bad fortune. By my request, please carry out the order now." Wait until you feel that your arm and the knife are heavy and full of Chi.

Eye Problems

Use the thumb and the index finger to hold the eye wide open.

You hold the knife like holding a pen, 3 to 6 cm away from the eye. Use the little finger for leverage and support.

WARNING!

DO NOT USE A KNIFE. THE MASTERS OF GREAT EXPERIENCE USE RITUAL SCALPEL TYPE KNIVES. THE STUDENT SHOULD USE THE "SWORD HAND" FINGERS (P.76, FIG. 4.24).

DO NOT USE SHARP OBJECTS NEAR THE EYES.

Fig. 6.2 Hold the knife three to six cm. from the eye.

Fig. 6.3 “Almighty Chi Knife helps eye all problems”.

“Almighty Knife, please destroy all kinds of wounds, warts and tumors”. Cut up, down and sideways in the cross pattern through the part that has the ‘condition’.

Fig. 6.4 “Almighty Knife, please destroy all kinds of wounds, warts and tumors”.

The almighty knife can be used for any problem in the body. Follow the same procedure to carry out ‘energetic surgery’ on all parts of the anatomy. It is especially good for soft tissue repair, including the brain.

When you feel that the Chi Knife is full of sick Chi, spiral counter clockwise and discard it down to the ground. When you feel that the knife is ‘empty’ charge it with Chi from the universe.

B. Energizing and Activating the Immune System

In cases of severe illness, you will want to do this technique many many times, because it is essential to stimulate the body's defence-systems. This technique is also beneficial for debilitation and infection. You may also want do this in a preventative manner.

Activating the immune system always involves the bone structure, especially the round bones in the arms and legs and the flat bones in the skull, jaw, rib cage, hips and spine. All of these are involved with the production of white blood cells. The thymus gland and the spleen are of special importance to the immune system, because they are involved with programming and training the white blood cells (called T-Cells) to do the right job. The lymphatic system is involved in removing toxic waste from the body; it is therefore beneficial to stimulate the lymph flow as well. This is best done in combination with Chi Nei Tsang. For details refer to the Chi Nei Tsang Books.

Fig. 6.7 Happy Cells.

If you work on a one-to-one basis, first perform the general cleansing session, where you 'pour energy' over the other person. After that use your hands, drawing Chi and pushing it through. Remember to push the energy all the way through and connect it with the universe beyond. Ask your student to concentrate on the areas that you are treating, preferably by guiding them, touching each point as you go.

Outline of Practice

Guide the student as you practice together. Work with your own energy body and tell the student to work with theirs. Presuming that you have already done the previous set of general healing, you can start with the coccyx.

Fig. 6.9 Touch the Sacrum.

1. Be aware of your Tan Tien and connect to the universe. Direct the Chi down to the fingers. Touch your coccyx with the fingers concentrating a beam of white light on to it. Picture the sacrum opening and the white light streaming inside, flowing up the spine and streaming out over the whole bone-structure. Transfer the feeling of Chi in the coccyx up to the universe, multiply it and guide it down to your energy body.
2. Always be aware of the Tan Tien and the universe first. Attract the yellow light; spiral and condense the healing light into the tip of your fingers; move the fingers up to touch the sacrum. Send out a beam of yellow Chi into the sacrum, directing it up the spine. This will stimulate the production of red blood cells. If you are not sure whether you are able to send it right into the marrow, picture the marrow or emit the Chi from your fingers, while at the same time concentrating on the bone marrow of the energy body. Transfer the feeling of 'Bone Chi' up to the universe and down to the energy body.

3. Proceed to the crown, showering it with violet light. Then spread from the crown throughout the bones of the body. Repeat several times. Instruct the student to feel the bone structure breathing. Ask him/her to extend up from the crown to the Big Dipper and North Star, channelling down the red and violet light into the thymus gland.

4. Continue to the throat, stroking down with your palms, using green color to move the lymph down towards the backside of the heart. (Never stroke up towards the head. Only guide the lymph down).

A. B.

Fig. 6.10 A. Channel the Violet Light of the North.
B. Use your Palms to bring the Lymph flow back to the Heart.

5. Proceed to the lymph nodes under the armpits and across the sternum. Next activate the lymph nodes in the groin. From the groin you guide the lymph up to the navel center (Not down where it will get stuck in the legs).
6. Return to the navel center. Send the energy deep inside, energizing the lymph nodes at the back. Pull back, drawing green energy, flushing out any waste products that are stuck in them.

C. Cleansing the Internal Organs Technique

Healing Some Common Illnesses

This session can be used for any kind of ailment and carried out with any number of students. It can take place on a singular, paired, small group or large group basis. Numbers can range from one person, one hundred, one thousand, ten thousand, ad infinitum. It is more likely that a greater energetic current will be created in much larger groups. In the case of 'mass' healings, there will always be a 'guide' or 'conductor', to open the channel for the students to follow. In the case of solo practices you will of course be the guide. The following instructions have been set out on a one-to-one basis.

By connecting to heaven, earth and your student, you will maximise the wholistic healing potential to your physical and subtle bodies. We recommend you spend about twenty minutes on the general healing before moving on to the more localized practices of emptying and cleansing the body's centers, systems and organs, contained within this chapter. We recommend that you spend between five to fifteen minutes on all of these. Always perform the Sacred or Chi Water practice before.

It is important to remember that if there is no energy in your Tan Tien, then there will be no energy to work with. 'Connecting the Tan Tien and the Universe' means connect your center to the infinite source of the universe, the Tao. When you make the connection you access this power. Always hold on to your center; it is the only thing that is truly yours. Keep the fire warm and spiraling. When you are aware of your Chi, you can direct heavenly light straight into your energy body and then into the student's.

General Principles

1. Push and pull the energy through the student's body. Push and disperse the sick energy into the universe and out to the planets, where it will be transformed and recycled.
2. Pull the energy back and stop it between yourself and the student.
3. Spiral the energy counterclockwise until you see the green light mix and clean the sick energy. Spiral and flush the energy down into the earth.
4. Spiral with blue light; see it mix and flush the energy within the student's body. Spiral this energy down to the ground.
5. Energize the student with white or violet light.
6. You can also use both hands to channel Chi when you 'push and pull' through the body.
7. Energy can be introduced to the affected area of the body by moving the hand clockwise in a spiral.
8. Move the hand anticlockwise with a spiraling motion to clean, flush and remove energy from the treatment area. After this, brush down the whole body, to direct the sick energy into the earth.
   Use an anticlockwise spiraling movement in order to clean, then expel the energy.
   Use a clockwise movement to bring energy in and an anticlockwise one to take it out.
9. When you begin pushing, pulling and sweeping, you may feel resistance in the body. As you progress and the energy centers open, this feeling will diminish.
10. There are many color combinations that can be applied to the various parts of the body. When you start practice, stick to the basic 'blue, green, white, violet and blue' formula. When you are working on a specific area, you can keep this book near by, or write a short 'color recipe' before you begin. In this way, you will be able to relax your mind.
11. 'Pushing and pulling' is like fanning and venting the body; when you fan your hands in front of your face, it will have a cooling effect. Ventilation enables the stagnant, sick energy to leave the body.
    Below is a list of the body's organs in relation to their tendency to 'store heat'. They are listed in descending order, i.e, the head is the hottest:

Head, heart, liver, lung, stomach and spleen, large intestine and small intestine, kidneys and sexual organs (which become hot when aroused).

Outline of Practice

Occupying a position amongst most of the internal organs, the solar plexus acts as a kind of clearing center for energy generated by the emotions. It also lies in between the lower and higher energy centers.

1. Scan; ask for the power to look at the cells.
2. Push, pull and give the command, “Disperse”. Push until you feel the solar plexus clear and open.
3. Spiral green Chi counterclockwise. Talk to the sick energy; tell it to “leave”, you will take it to “a better place, where it will be happy”. Give the command, “Out”.
4. Spiral Blue Chi counterclockwise, flushing out any remaining sickness. Guide the sick energy into the earth.
5. Spiral and sweep Blue-Green and Red Chi into the solar plexus, sweeping the organs. If the patient is expecting a baby, has an infection or bleeding in the intestinal area; do not use this method.

Fig. 6.12

Fig. 6.13 Charge your Hands with Chi - project the Hand Bones into the Universe and feel them fill and pack with Chi.

Work on cleaning out the organs. Scan the person and see which parts are hot. A lot of people will have an overheated solar plexus, which means that this area will require a lot of attention. You will feel the heat when you scan.

You can clean the organs by 'pushing and pulling'. Picture the organ and push; feel your hands are very 'long', extending through the organs and reaching out to the universe. Project all the sick energy down into the earth and out to the universe. Use your intent to guide it into the earth and out to the other planets in the solar system, where it will be processed and recycled. Pull the universal energy back towards yourself; push and disperse all the negative energy out to universe. Pull; when you pull the Chi back past the student, stop in between the two of you. Push, pull, push and pull, until you feel the energy or power. Ask; "Give me the power to see". Feel your Chi entering into the organs with ease.

B. 'Clean and energize with Green' - push and pull to help loosen the solar plexus. Spiral counterclockwise with a Green Light. Blend with the sick energy and guide it down to the ground.

Clean with Green Light. Spiral counterclockwise. Feel the green light mixing with the sick energy. Push and pull until you feel the energy in the solar plexus begin to disperse. Spiral the energy counterclockwise and guide it down to the ground.

A. B.

Fig. 6.15 A. 'Push and Pull' to help disperse the energy in the Solar Plexus.

Rinse and flush with blue light. Picture ocean blue and flush down to the earth. See and feel the solar plexus becoming cleaner. Flush the sick energy down to the earth.

Now clean out the whole body again. With all the organs: from the lungs, heart, liver, gall bladder, pancreas, spleen, stomach, small intestines, large intestine, kidneys and sexual organs. Clean all the way down to the earth. When you clean the solar plexus and all the other organs you remove all the negative emotional energy.

Energize the spleen, liver and kidneys with blue or white light. Then project green, followed by orange light to the cores of the liver and kidneys. Clean with the green and orange light and stabilize with blue light.

Work on the back of the spleen and kidneys. Energize them with blue-white light. The spleen is on the student's left and kidneys on the right and left. They all help to clean the blood. Spiral the energy clockwise into the spleen. See it in your mideyebrow. See the cells and spiral the light into them. Give the command, "Stay". This is very important; it makes sure that none of the cells hide from the dazzling light that you are sending. Give the command again. Then stabilize them with blue light. Picture the kidneys and see their cells and feel the blue light go into the cells.

Work on the Liver on the student's right hand side. Smile and laugh to the liver and see all of its cells. Give the command, "Stay"; then send in the healing light. Send in blue or white (energize), followed by green (energize and clean), blue (rinse and stabilize), violet (recharge and reprogram) and then blue to stabilize again.

Spleen - Front and Rear

Liver

Fig. 6.16 'Push and Pull' to help disperse the energy in the Liver and Spleen. Clean with Green and flush and stabilize with blue. Flush the sick energy down into the Earth.

It is essential that you feel and talk to any sick energy. If the student is healthy then you will feel their 'light'. Ask their energy body to tell you where it may need some healing. Send in 'light radar'. Transmit green light and flush down to the earth. When you feel that energy is accumulating, start to spiral more. Push and pull and give the command for the sick energy to leave.

The more you clean, the more you heal. Tell your student to practice at home after the session, at an agreed time. You can then carry out 'absent or distance' healing, linking everyone's personal star, energy body and the universe. With time, you will master the techniques, imprinting them with your own manner. Eventually symptoms disappear, as the blockages are cleared and the flow returned.

Cleansing the Spinal Cord

Spine

Always cleanse the spinal cord, which protects the entire body from diseased and negative energy, both physical and psychic. When you open the spinal cord and solar plexus you can release many energy blockages. Sweep the hand in a clockwise motion to energize the spine with either/or a combination of; blue, green, white and ultra-violet. Then spiral counterclockwise and brush the spine down to the ground. Continue sweeping until you feel that the spinal cord has cooled down. Remember not to use orange or red.

Cleansing the Blood (Lungs)

Pale green/white and tangerine/white chi work as cleaning agents for the blood. Diseases of the blood and arteries can be treated. The chi first energises the lungs and as the blood passes through them, it takes in the chi, thus becoming purified. The benefit is then carried to the rest of the body as the blood circulates. Serious infections can also be treated in this way; however, the technique should not be used on women who are pregnant.

Fig. 6.17 A. Cleansing the Blood and emptying the Lungs.
B. Become aware your Three Tan Tiens. Connect to the Universe and ask for 'the Power to See'.

Outline for Cleansing the Blood/Lungs

Lungs

1. Scan the student.
2. Push through and open the lungs from the back to the front.
3. When the lungs need to be given energy, use pale green/white followed by pale tangerine/white chi beginning at the front and moving top the rear.
4. To make weak patients stronger, cerise/white chi can be employed as this will bring energy into the lungs.
5. Purification of the blood is carried out by the liver, kidneys and spleen. Use white chi to bring energy to these areas, after first pushing and pulling through them.
6. The blood requires a lot of cleaning on a regular basis.
7. Energize with white Chi. Germs can only grow in the dark. 'Fill yourself with the light'.

Circulatory/Heart System General

One of the basic problems pertaining to the circulatory system and heart is hypertension and hypotension. Once again, the sacrum and solar plexus are involved. The sacrum controls the bones; indirectly, it stimulates the marrow and enhances the quality of the blood. Good blood is like running the highest quality motor oil through the engine of a motor vehicle.

(Within the Universal Tao System we also have the view that the sacrum controls the Chi-pulse. If there is enough Chi, the heart does not have to work so hard, because the Chi pushes the blood).

The solar plexus relates to the emotions, affecting the heart through two mechanisms:

- It may affect the heart directly, causing rhythmic disturbance or pressure around the heart muscle
- Malfunction in the liver or digestive tract, leading to high cholesterol levels or gas which pushes up towards the heart from the intestines and causes unwanted heat and pressure.

Cleaning out the Solar Plexus will greatly improve these conditions. If you have been trained in Chi Nei Tsang you can use it in combination with the Cosmic Healing techniques.

Specific

Working on the Heart Muscle:
Clean out the Solar Plexus as outlined above. Push and pull with green and blue.
Detoxify the liver, flush with green.
Enhance with white and violet light.
Use the finger to work on the lower left and upper right part of the heart.
Remember that the heart muscle is very delicate.
You draw the force, you spiral and you push.
Stabilize with white.
For enlarged heart use blue.
Carefully use the red light to balance the blood and open the blood vessels.
Sweep the sacrum with green, red and blue.
Sweep the solar plexus with green, blue, red, white and violet.
Energize and cool down the throat center, using blue.
Working on Hypertension (High Blood Pressure):

Overactive adrenals/ kidneys often cause hypertension. Clean out the solar plexus first, because the adrenals (T11) are connected to it. The adrenal glands produce adrenaline, the hormone that stimulates the heart to pump. Overactive adrenal glands will eventually affect the heart.
Tune-up the Door of Life with blue, calming it.
Take the pressure from the heart, use green.
Energize the heart, use violet.
Flush down from head to feet with blue;
The basic problem with hypertension is that the Chi goes up and cannot come down. Work on the sacrum, using orange and yellow.

Working on Hypotension (Low Blood Pressure):
In hypotension the Door of Life and T11 are underactive.
First clean out the Solar Plexus, this time focus on removing blocks or stuck energy.
Energize the Door of Life, using green and red.
Energize the Sacrum (same colors).
Energize the Base of Skull with green and violet.

Stomach Pains

Pass your hands over the patient and brush the whole abdomen, especially the solar plexus, navel and lower abdomen. The navel should be treated with a combination of green and blue, and blue should be used at the end to firm up the energy.

If problems persist: A) Treat with Chi Nei Tsang B) Seek the advice of a qualified medical practitioner.

Relieving Pain: Blue Chi

Chi that is associated with the colors blue and green can be utilized in different ways. While green chi acts to free up energy that has become ‘sick’ and ‘stuck’, blue chi can act as a painkiller because of its ability to reduce the severity of pain.

1. Push and pull the through the affected part out to the universe or ground the sick energy until partial relief is attained.
2. A large amount of pale blue/white chi together with pale green/white chi should be used to transmit energy to the problem area.
3. For the alleviation of pain, use pale green/white chi and pale tangerine/white chi in turn.

Energize means draw the Chi into the part that you want to receive healing. Cleansing means push energy through the affected part and send it out to the universe. Pull the new Chi back into the same area. Light green Chi is used in loosening and cleansing delicate organs like the eyes and the brain.

Headache: Light Whitish Green and Light Whitish Blue Chi

1. To check for areas that are congested or lacking in energy, the eyes, temples, spine and solar plexus area should be scanned. Also, the crown, mideyebrow, forehead and back of the head and neck.
2. The eye and temple areas should be brushed down when the headache is because of eyestrain and then flushed into the ground.
3. The whole head, particularly the painful section should be brushed and then pale green/white, blue/white and pale purple/white Chi used to bring energy into the area.

Migraine Headache: Light Whitish Green Blue and Violet Chi

1. Persons who suffer from prolonged or chronic headaches including those types termed 'migraine' headaches have an abnormal accumulation of energy in various parts of their bodies. Starting with the solar plexus, this energy follows a route up the vertebral column and thence into the neck and head. As a result the various blood vessels in the head expand, causing pain in the head area. Mental strain and emotional disturbances usually cause this type of headache.
2. Use a pushing movement to clean and open the solar plexus and liver areas. First use pale green/white, then pale blue/white and finally mauve/white chi to bring energy to the solar plexus area.
3. In order to send the 'sick' red chi into the ground, brush down the spinal column.
4. The back of the heart can be opened by pushing through in order to remove the dirty Chi. Then bring energy to the heart by using pale green/white and purple. Use your mind to see the heart center expanding and opening.
5. Brush down the dirty chi from the head area and send it into the earth.
6. Use a combination of pale green/white, blue and purple to bring energy to the back of the head, the crown point and the forehead.

Toothache: Light Whitish Green and Blue Chi

1. Brush down the area with pale green/white Chi.
2. Energy should be brought into the area with pale green/white, mauve/white and blue Chi.

Broken Bone: Orange-Yellow Chi

For anything relating to the bones always activate the sacrum. Light orange-yellow Chi is used to encourage broken bones to knit quickly, Chi which is pale yellowish tangerine may be employed. The sacrum attracts the orange-yellow Chi; feel the eight holes in the bone breathing. The orange-yellow Chi enters, transfers up to the crown and is sent up to the universe to multiply.

1. The fracture area should be brushed using a combination of pale green/white and pale tangerine/white chi.
2. To promote fast knitting of fractures, a daily treatment with pale tangerine yellow Chi mixed with white can be employed, in the ratio of 7:1.5:1.5 of white (for the center), yellow and tangerine respectively. Push through and brush the sacral and navel areas, using a cerise (light red) Chi mixed with white.

Back Injury: Light Whitish Blue and Green Violet Chi

1. Scan the student to see which parts are congested.
2. Use chi that is pale white/green or pale white/tangerine and, selecting each in turn, with a brushing movement apply to the whole spinal area and especially to the area where the trauma is located.
3. To bring energy to the damaged area, use a combination of pale blue/white, green and purple.
4. White chi should be used with a brushing movement on both the back and front of the solar plexus area.

Infection and Inflammation: Light Green Chi

Treat the damaged area with green and tangerine/white chi, using a brushing movement. For the heart and spleen, these colors should be replaced with green and purple.

Bring energy to the area by the use of mauve, white, tangerine, green and blue and strengthen the natural immune of the body.

Cysts: Light Green and Blue Chi

During the course of the session, repeatedly pass your hands over the patient's body. Treat the solar plexus area with a combination of green and blue chi. The cyst can be removed using a chi knife, spiraling clockwise with green and tangerine chi; moving the 'stuck' red chi out of the body and grounding it in the earth. After, blue chi should be used for a calming effect, while green and tangerine can also provide energy. For maximum benefit, sessions should be thrice weekly.

As foods containing a lot of highly spiced ingredients have a lot of red chi, these should be kept to a minimum. The patient should use the Inner Smile to calm and balance his/her emotional state.

It is sometimes necessary to sweep 100-200 times, to cool the affected area. Scanning will enable you to take a temperature reading. If the area is still hot then continue sweeping until it reaches a satisfactory temperature.

Fever

1. Brushing can be done with blue or green Chi.
2. Push and pull through the affected part, sweeping the spleen with green and blue. Clean and rinse thoroughly.
3. The solar plexus area can be treated with tangerine and blue Chi but tangerine should not be used on a patient with diarrhea.
4. The thymus gland can be stimulated by the application of green, tangerine and purple Chi. First, brush the heart area with green and blue. This helps the body to ward off infection.
5. Both lungs should be brushed and energy brought into the back of the lung area by the use of tangerine and green.
6. Sweep the spleen with green.

If the student has a fever then they must lie down to receive the healing. This applies in all cases where the student is unable to sit up comfortably.

Insomnia: Green and Blue

Inability to sleep may be the result of too much activity in the solar plexus and the sacral area. The solar plexus may also be congested. Similar problems can also occur in the throat, mideyebrow and forehead, as well as at the crown point.

Repeatedly pass your hands over the patient's body as the treatment progresses and use a combination of blue and green chi to clean the sacral and solar plexus areas.

Sleep can be brought on by use of blue, as it soothes the solar plexus area. Use blue and green to brush the mideyebrow, forehead and crown point and white and tangerine on the navel. Finish with blue.

Do not eat food late in the evening.

Sleep in a separate bed from your partner. You can place two beds next to each other.

Tinnitus

Relates to weakened kidneys. Work on the kidneys, mideyebrow and forehead.

Blood Clotting: Blue Chi - Fresh Burns: Green and Blue Chi

Because of the cooling and calming properties of blue chi, it can be used to remove the heat from burns. Green has a similar effect.

The area needing treatment should be scanned, then brushed with a combination of pale green/white and blue Chi until relief is felt and the heat in the cells released.

Old Minor Burns: Green and Red Chi

Pass your hands over the damaged areas and repeat this during the treatment period. Use pale green/white and tangerine, but do not use on the head, eyes or brain, or other sensitive organs.

To reduce discomfort in the damaged area and promote fast healing, firstly pale blue Chi mixed with white should be employed, followed by cerise mixed with white, and green in equal proportions as this mixture optimizes the breaking down of necrotic cellular material. However, cerise should not be used in the head area but be replaced by mauve mixed with white.

Use cerise/white chi to brush the sacral and navel areas and follow with blue which assists in the release of the stagnant Chi. This session should be repeated for 2 or 3 days.

Old Severe Burns: Green and Red Chi

1. Scan at the beginning and end of the treatment (Note:I do not think scan can be seen as plagiarism and I don't know what other word to use in this context as I do not have the full text)
2. The local area should be brushed first with pale green/white and then with pale tangerine white. Keep repeating but make sure to omit sensitive organs and the head area.
3. To speed up healing and reduce pain and infection, the damaged area should be filled with energy from pale blue white, pale green white and mauve with white Chi.
4. To help speed up the healing process, wait a few days until there is much less pain, then use pale green white and cerise mixed with white Chi. If the head area is affected, use mauve mixed with white in place of the cerise.
5. Brush in the sacral and navel areas and to speed up healing use white Chi.
6. After making your healing intent stable, release it.

Old Wounds: Green and Red Chi

Green chi, in equal proportion of pale green/white and pale red/white should be employed on injuries which are not new as, when used in large quantities, it attacks and disperses damaged cellular matter, promoting fast healing. On recent injuries, it will have an adverse effect because it is likely to cause the trauma area to become moist, and it also will not be able to work quickly.

Scan at the beginning and end of the treatment, and brush the damaged area with pale green/white and pale tangerine/white Chi. Some pale blue/white can be employed locally to energise the area. Use of pale green/white followed by cerise mixed with white can speed up the healing process and assist in the breakdown of cellular material.

The navel and sacral areas should be brushed using pale cerise/white Chi. This will fill the area with energy and make the wounds heal faster. Before the Chi is let go, it should be stabilized.

Some Specific Points and Ailments

The following descriptions are mere guidelines. Each case is different and much depends on your own abilities. One needs practice to detect diseases. Best results with Cosmic Healing will be obtained when practiced in combination with Chi Nei Tsang.

Remember that these techniques are not meant to replace the doctor, but merely to assist him. The student must always work with the practitioner. The practitioner is a channel, the student the healer.

Solar Plexus: Blue Chi

The Solar Plexus is the connection point for practically all the nerves inside the body. That is why it becomes laden with emotions so easily. When the Solar Plexus jams up and overheats, the liver will overheat; when this happens, the heart will also overheat; this will in turn affect the thyroid and parathyroid; finally the brain will be affected. Cleaning out this center is therefore extremely important. This type of cleaning may be done from the top down (as in the general cleansing session) or aimed at the Solar Plexus directly. Draw the green light, spiral it, flush with the green light, then energize with white and violet light. As before, always allow the energy to stream through both the points fully. The Solar Plexus holds all the emotions. When working on the Solar Plexus, the most important thing to remember is to connect the backside to the universe. There is literally no end to the 'other' end of this connection. Just allow the Chi to come all the way down and slightly pull inwards a little. Simply clean out the path. Allow the information to condense, allow any images to come out. Then stabilize the energy. Picture the Chi-field enveloping the person as a big protective bubble. Cool down with blue.

Skin Infection: Blue Chi

The skin is related to the lungs and the kidneys. Whenever there is an infection, the immune system is involved.

1. Enhance immunity as outlined in pages 101-108.
2. Focus on strengthening the lungs. Always start with green to flush out. Then send orange light into the lungs. Make sure you are not sending it up to the brain. Energize the lungs with blue and white.
3. Detoxify the kidneys, purify the blood (green) and energize with blue. Ask the person to visualize a fresh mountain-stream to stimulate the kidneys.
4. Treat the area locally, using your hands. If the area is big, use your palm, if small use the fingers. Do not focus on your palms - refer to the section 'Forget About Your Palms'. on page 152. Draw green Chi from the forest, and then energize with violet.
5. To diminish pain or itch, use blue to cool down. Also use the Chi knife to work on the infection.

In case the skin problem is allergy-based, you should also treat the mideyebrow; there might be some irritation here. First clean with green, then either energize with violet (if resistance is low) or soothe with a light shade of yellow. If the skin problem is related to asthma, open the lungs with bright red clean the throat center with green and energize it with (deep) blue.

If the problem is due to toxicity, also clean out the liver flushing with a combination of green and orange. Energize with green. Enhance the immune system by working on the sacrum.

Eyes: Green Chi

The right and left eye are governed by the forehead and mideyebrow respectively. The eyes are also linked to the temples. Ask the person to touch their temple bone and guide them to take in the (white or light violet) Chi. Send Chi through the mideyebrow and forehead (all the way through). Ask the person to visualize the light coming in. Use soft shades of green with golden yellow to stimulate the optic nerve. Use blue to calm the eye muscles and light violet to stimulate the inner eyesight.

The eyes are connected to the liver. Scan the liver and energize with green. Scan the jawbone to see if there is any unreleased anger. Cool down with blue. Channel bright green into the liver.

Ears: Violet Chi

The right and left ears are governed by the forehead and mideyebrow respectively. Push and pull green Chi to clean. The ears are connected to the kidneys, so you can work on them also. The ears are also connected to the sinuses and upper respiratory tract. This means that infections need to cool down before you can use any cleaning technique. Use blue to cool and clean with violet. As long as fever and severe infection persist, use blue to cool them down. When clean, energize with violet.

Have Better Health, Less Stress and Remain Young

Brush specifically on the areas of the solar plexus, liver, stomach and pancreas.

White chi brings energy to the crown point, head (at the back) and both sides of the brain.

Both the front and rear of the heart and lungs can receive energy from white/purple Chi.

Both the front and rear of the spleen, the navel and lower abdominal area, the spinal cord, the kidneys, using white Chi.

On the sexual center use white chi but if the problem is difficult to shift, use green. You can also use white Chi on the sacral area, and green or purple on other organs.

White Chi can be employed for the arms and hands, while the legs and feet should be treated with white and purple Chi.
Eye problems with green/yellow energy.

After a session, patients who are particularly weak should not bathe for one full day. The energy which has been put into their bodies can thus be kept there by application of pale blue/white Chi at the end of the session.

Fig. 6.18 Use Compassion, Love and Kindness.

Summary of Individual Healing Session

A. Chi Knife
B. Energizing and Activating the Immune System
C. Cleansing with the Internal Organ Techniques

General Outline of Practices

1. Gain experience by working with one person. Stand in front of them with your feet shoulder width apart. Hold your hands at your heart in salutation. Transmit your love and compassion and ask for their permission to help them to help themselves heal.

2. Connect to the student's and your own cosmic star above your head and ask for universal permission. Radiate your love and transfer three minds into one mind. Lower your Upper Tan Tien. Activate your consciousness: Three minds become one mind. Expand your awareness in the mideyebrow and the crown. Feel the Tan Tien, heart, mideyebrow and crown spiraling. Expand to the universe.
3. Visualize the person's legs as being 'very long', extending down to the earth. Activate the Sacred Fire and bring it down. Clean out the room and make a big Chi field around you and the student.

A. Chi Knife

1. Hold the knife in right hand (left, if you are left handed). Hold the other hand near your body with the thumb and index finger touching. Project the Chi Knife as big as the universe, 'long and big - reaching to Heaven'. The bones in your arm are hollow and the 'bottom' is sealed at the shoulder. Feel them 'fill and pack' with the power coming from above.
2. Then give the command: "Power comes from the east. This Chi Knife has the power to dissolve all the negative energy, sickness and bad fortune. By my request, please carry out the order now." Wait until you feel that your arm and the knife are heavy and full of Chi.

   Carry out energetic surgery, cutting and slicing the affected area with cool yin energy. When you feel that the Chi Knife is full of sick Chi, spiral counterclockwise and discard it down into the ground. When you feel that the knife is 'empty', charge it with Chi from the universe. Continue until you feel that the area has been cleansed.

B. Energizing and Activating the Immune System

In cases of severe illness, debilitation and infection, it is essential to stimulate the body's defence systems. You may also want do this in a preventative manner. Guide the student as you practice together. Presuming that you have already done the previous set of general healing, you can start with the coccyx.

1. Be aware of your Tan Tien and connect to the universe. Touch your coccyx with the fingers concentrating a beam of white or yellow light on to it. Picture the sacrum opening and the light streaming inside, flowing up the spine and streaming out over the whole bone structure. Feel the Chi rising up to the universe, multiply it and guide it down to your energy body.

2. Be aware of the Tan Tien and the universe. Attract the yellow light; spiral and condense the healing light into the tips of your fingers; move the fingers up to touch the sacrum. Send out a beam of yellow Chi into the sacrum, directing it up the spine. This will stimulate the production of red blood cells. Transfer the feeling of 'Bone-Chi' up to universe and down to your energy body.
3. Proceed to the crown, showering it with violet light. Then spread from the crown throughout the bones of the body. Repeat several times. Instruct the student to feel the bone structure breathing. Ask him/her to extend up from their crown to the Big Dipper and North Star, channelling down the red and violet light into the thymus gland.
4. Continue to the throat, stroking down with your palms, using green color to move the lymph down towards the backside of the heart. (Never stroke up towards the head! Only guide the lymph down).
5. Proceed to the lymph nodes under the armpits and across the sternum. Next activate the lymph nodes in the groin. From the groin you guide the lymph up to the navel center (Not down where it will get stuck in the legs).
6. Return to the navel center. Send the energy deep inside, energizing the lymph nodes at the back. Pull back, drawing green energy, flushing out any waste products that are stuck in them.

Activate the points at the inside of the elbows and the knees.
Shower the whole body with healing light and energize the perineum with blue Chi.
Always remember to ground any sick energy by sending it deep into the ground. Ask the student to do the same and it will be more effective. You should do this while giving the session as well as when closing it.

C. Cleansing the Internal Organs (Repeated from pages 132-133 and pages 136-137)

This session can be used for any kind of ailment and carried out with any number of students. It is important to remember that if there is no energy in your Tan Tien, then there will be no energy to work with. When you are aware of your Chi, you can direct heavenly light straight into your energy body and then into the student's.

General Cleansing Procedure

1. Push and pull the energy through the student's body. Push and disperse the sick energy into the universe and out to the planets, where it will be transformed and recycled.
2. Pull the energy back and stop it between yourself and the student.
3. Spiral the energy counterclockwise until you see the green light mix and clean the sick energy. Spiral and flush the energy down into the earth.

4. Spiral with blue light; see it mix and flush the energy within the student's body. Spiral this energy down to the ground.
5. Energize the student with white or violet light.
6. You can also use both hands to channel Chi when you 'push and pull' through the body.
7. Spiral in - spiral clockwise to bring energy into the body and energize it.
8. Spiral out - spiral counterclockwise to cleanse, flush and remove energy.
9. When you begin pushing, pulling and sweeping, you may feel resistance in the body. As you progress and the energy centers open, this feeling will diminish.
10. There are many color combinations that can be applied to the various parts of the body. When you start practice, stick to the basic 'blue, green, white, violet and blue' formula. When you are working on a specific area, you can keep this book near by, or write a short 'color recipe' before you begin. In this way, you will be able to relax your mind.
11. 'Pushing and pulling' is like fanning and venting the body; when you fan your hands in front of your face, it will have a cooling effect. Ventilation enables the stagnant, sick energy to leave the body.

    Below is a list of the body's organs in relation to their tendency to 'store heat'. They are listed in descending order, i.e, the head is the hottest.

    Head, heart, liver, lung, stomach and spleen, large intestine and small intestine, kidneys and sexual organs (which become hot when aroused).

Outline of Practice

The solar plexus is the clearing house for emotional energy and is situated in between the lower and higher energy centers and in the center of most of the internal organs. All the organs dump their negative emotions here. The internal organs can be cleansed by sweeping the solar plexus, energizing, cleaning and flushing it of sick energy. When you feel sick energy in the body, give the command: "Stay". This is very important; it makes sure that none of the cells hide from the dazzling light that you are sending in.

1. Scan; ask for the power to look at the cells.
2. Push, pull and give the command "Disperse". Push until you feel the solar plexus clear and open.
3. Spiral green Chi counterclockwise. Talk to the sick energy; tell it to "Leave", you will take it to "a better place, where it will be happy". Give the command "Out".
4. Spiral Blue Chi counterclockwise, flushing out any remaining sickness. Guide the sick energy into the earth.
5. Spiral and sweep Blue - Green and Red Chi into the solar plexus, sweep the organs. Do not use in cases where there is intestinal infection and internal bleeding (which can be worsened) or in the presence of pregnant women.

Cleansing the Spinal Cord

Always cleanse the spinal cord, which protects the entire body from diseased and negative energy, both physical and psychic. When you open the spinal cord and solar plexus you can release many energy blockages. Sweep the hand in a clockwise motion to energize the spine with either/or a combination of: blue, green, white and ultra-violet. Then spiral counterclockwise and brush the spine down to the ground. Continue sweeping until you feel that the spinal cord has cooled down. Remember not to use orange or red

Cleansing the Blood (Lungs)

The blood can be cleansed by energizing the lungs with whitish green, then with light whitish orange. The blood passing through the lungs will absorb the green and orange Chi, thereby cleansing the blood plasma and vessels and the rest of the body. This technique is very useful for treating ailments of the blood and of the arteries and for severe infections. Do not use it on pregnant women.

Outline of Practice

1. Scan the student.
2. Push through and open the lungs from the back to the front.
3. Energize the lungs from front to back with light whitish green, then with light whitish orange. Push through.
4. If the student is weak, energize the lungs with light whitish red, which will provide a strengthening effect.
5. The spleen, liver and kidneys purify the blood. Push and pull through the organs and energize with white Chi.
6. The blood requires a lot of cleaning on a regular basis.
7. Energize with white Chi. Germs can only grow in the dark. 'Fill yourself with the light'.

General Principles

Energy can be introduced to the affected area of the body by moving the hand clockwise in a spiral. Flush means to return the sick energy to the earth for recycling.

Stabilize means to return the area to normal functioning.

Spiral in a clockwise motion when you are 'stabilizing'.

Use blue or white light to energize the area that you are working on.

Use green light to energize and clean the area that you are working on.

Use blue light to flush and stabilize the area that you are working on.

Use violet light to balance the sick energy and reprogram the cells of the body.

For general infections always use green (energize and clean) and blue (stabilize) light. Use violet light to balance the sick energy and reprogram all the cells. Use the 'Chi Knife' for infections as well. Never use orange on the head, heart and spleen.

Give the command "Stay" to make sure all the cells receive the light you are sending in. Remember that germs and bacteria cannot hide in the light.

Energize means to draw the Cosmic Chi into the part that requires healing.
Cleanse means to clean all the cells being treated.

You can also work on yourself. You may need some help when working on the back. If you obtain optimum health and practice the Cosmic Orbit regularly then you will never 'need' to apply any of these techniques to yourself.
Like all Chinese medicine, Cosmic Healing works on the system as a whole, balancing the entire organism, treating the cause to cure the symptoms.

The techniques really are simple.

When in doubt use; blue, green, white, violet, blue.
You can always use white and violet.
Upper organs - use violet.

You can practice group healings and then link your students' personal stars together, at an agreed time later in the day. You can then perform the World Link Cosmic Healing.

Work on any other ailments that the student may have.
The simplest way to learn is to begin practicing today.
The simplest way to heal is to allow yourself to be healed.

Chapter VII
Different Hand Techniques

Forget about your Palms

An extremely important theory of Cosmic Healing Hand Techniques is to ‘forget about your palm’. This means that you should only use the palm (which is incredibly sensitive), for ‘guiding’ the universal energy into the right spot, sending out a minute beam of light, like a laser, that marks the place where the energy should be sent. Your palm is connected to your brain, which has been sunk into your Tan Tien. The light marker will serve as a beacon for the force that is directed down by your mind. Draw down the Universal Chi, guide it to the right spot and give the command; "Stay". This is very important, otherwise the Chi will disappear once you move your hand.

When you practice Cosmic Healing it makes no difference how many people you treat, because you are not transferring your own energy.

Don't Focus your Mind on the Sick Part

If you direct your attention towards something, your energy will go there. If you focus on some ailment, you are already sending out your energy. Instead you should try to connect with a greater source, Universal Chi, extending your mind very far away. This way you won't lose your power. The only thing you do as a practitioner is to form the connection between nature, the student and the sick energy or between the universe, the Chi field and the sick part.

Cosmic Healing is Teaching

One of the best methods of protection for a practitioner is the Fusion practice (Refer to ‘Fusion of the Five Elements I by Mantak Chia). Perhaps even better is for the practitioner not to perceive him/herself as a healer, but as a person that comes to guide people in something they have to do themselves. When you say; "I am a healer", the sickness or bad energy, has already found a new home. When you check it out, first it will try to hide, and then it will try to attach itself to you. But if you don't interfere, the energy will go straight to the ground. So it is very important to clarify that you are not a healer, but a practitioner that can help, and that the student or sick person has to do most of the job.

Fig. 7.1 The Stronger your Awareness of your Inner Body, the Easier it will be for others present to pick up this Sense.

If you guide those present, this will greatly enhance your healing session. Sit or stand facing your student. Any time you want him or her to focus on a particular point of the body, ask them to touch it with their hands. For example, "Now place your hands on your navel", while you do the same thing yourself. As soon as you feel the Chi there, you instruct them to focus on the navel themselves. This way you are actually helping them to deepen their bodily awareness. The stronger your own awareness of your inner body, the easier it will be for the others present to pick it up. This means that if you are treating some part of another person's body, or if you see that the person is not aware of any energy in some part of the body, you can help by focusing your awareness on this particular part of your own body.

Chi Kung Diagnosis: Hand Scanning

Hand scanning is a simple and effective diagnostic tool of External Chi Healing. It involves passing your palm over the body of your student from one inch to one foot above the surface of the skin and being aware of the energetic state of the various bodily areas. What one senses is described as the electromagnetic field, the aura or the energy body.

General Variations in the Energy Field

The variations you may sense with scanning that have diagnostic significance are:

Temperature

Heat generally indicates excess, while cold indicates deficiency. However, some areas of the body are naturally warmer or colder than others. This is described below under "Hand Scanning the Internal Organs."

Thickness

A feeling of thickness over the area would indicate excess, while thinness may indicate deficiency.

Wind

You may feel sensations of wind leaving the body at various places. This may indicate internal wind at a given location, or it may point to an area of the body that is "leaking energy" and needs to be ‘patched’ or ‘sealed’. It may also be a positive sign that you are driving wind out of the body.

Peaks and Valleys

Peaks in the energy field will feel like mountains or hills in the aural landscape. They may actually push your hand away. Valleys feel like depressions or energy vortexes drawing you in. They may also feel empty, like a hole or pit. Peaks indicate excess or stagnation, while valleys indicate deficiency.

Tingling

Accumulations of sick Chi may cause your hand to tingle, feel prickly, throb, or even hurt. These are excesses of energy and upon inquiry, the student may complain of pain in this area.

Hand Scanning the Internal Organs

Each Organ Emits a Different Aura

Each organ emits a different kind of force or aura through the skin. By passing a hand one or two inches above the skin, you can feel different sensations that reflect the condition or state of the internal organs. You need to develop the sensitivity to receive and identify the vibration or frequency of each organ. Practicing the Cosmic Chi Kung Meditations will help develop such sensitivity.

Liver and Gall Bladder Scanning

Healthy liver and gall bladder energy feels warm.

Negative Emotions: When you pass your hand over the liver, under the right side of the rib cage, you will feel a charged energy come up to your hand. This is a sign of anger in the liver.

Overactivity: When you pass your hand over the liver and feel a rush of hot energy, this indicates that the liver is overheating because of toxins or emotional stress.

Underactivity: When you pass your hand over the liver and you feel a dense and hot energy, the liver is weak, congested and sick.

Lungs Scanning

Healthy lung energy feels cool and dry.

Negative Emotions: Pass your hand over the lungs. Do the Lungs' Sound and listen to the echo of the sound as it rebounds from the lungs. Sadness will feel like a deflating ball pressed between your hands.

Overactivity: Energy that feels dry and hot indicates an overworked organ.

Underactivity: Energy that feels damp and cool under the scanning hand indicates underactive or congested lungs that can lead to respiratory problems.

Heart Scanning

Healthy heart energy feels warm and energetic.

Negative Emotions: Hot and charged energy indicates impatience, hastiness and arrogance in the heart.

Overactivity: If your hand detects hot, charged and overly expansive energy, this indicates that the heart and blood may be overheating.

Underactivity: Energy that feels cool and less expansive indicates an underactive or congested heart.

Spleen Scanning

Healthy spleen energy feels lukewarm.

Negative emotions: Energy that feel damp and sinking indicates excessive worry.

Overactivity: The energy feels hot and damp when the spleen is overactive.

Underactivity: The energy feels cool and damp.

Kidneys Scanning

Healthy kidney energy feels cold, but not too cold.

Negative emotions: Energy that feels cold and chilly indicates fear.

Overactivity: When the kidneys are overworked or overstimulated by excessive exercise or improper diet and liquid intake, the energy can feel damp, stick and hot.

Underactivity: When toxins are blocking the organs, the energy can feel damp and cold.

Hand scanning is an art, and may take a while for you to feel confident using it. Practicing Cosmic Chi Kung is one of the best ways to develop greater sensitivity in hand scanning.

Chapter VIII
Cosmic Chi Kung
Palm and Finger Training

Why We Practice the Cosmic Chi Kung

The Cosmic Chi Kung is also known as Buddha Palm. The reason we train with the Empty Force practice in connection with the Cosmic Healing is to learn how to project Chi through the space in the cosmos, the space between your hands and to project Chi through the space to your students. Usually when we touch the student we pick up sick energy. This practice will teach you how to ground the sick energy to the earth and to disperse it into the Universe to be decomposed and recycled by the planets.

Practice until you can project Chi out from your palms and fingers and when you feel the Chi coming into your body through your hands. The most important part is to always remain connected with the Universal Force coming from all six directions. If you focus on healing from your hands or your Tan Tien you will use up your own energy. You must be connected to the Cosmic Universal Force.

Expand your awareness to nature, the oceans, the lakes, the forests and mountains. Smile to nature and feel it smile back to you; inhale and draw the Chi into your palms. Expand your awareness to connect to the light, the Milky Way and the cosmos.

Be aware of the heart and the red light in the heart; expand your awareness to infinity. The light will come close to you; picture the red planet Mars above you. See it shine down to your crown, feeling the light in your palms. Be aware of the six directions, feel your body growing bigger; until you touch the sky, your feet still planted in the earth.

Opening Heaven and Earth Force in the Palms with Heaven and Earth Spirals

The purpose of this technique is to draw in the forces of heaven and earth through the palm. Activate the spirals, the symbol for the heaven and earth force in the center of the palm.

Fig. 8.1 Enhances the symbol of Heaven and Earth Force, in the Laogong - Pericardium 8.

This is accomplished by drawing these spirals with the palm itself. As you draw the spirals, you should actually feel the palm breathing, inhaling these forces in. In the beginning, however, you may only be able to use your own mental imagery and imagine that you are absorbing these forces. In time the feelings will replace your imagination.

You breathe in Heavenly Chi when you draw the heaven spirals, and breathe in Earthly Chi when drawing the earth spirals. You may draw in both in one session; you may also choose just to draw in either Heaven or Earth Chi if you feel you need more of one or the other. It is important to balance these energies whenever you do this exercise.

1. Begin by raising the right hand to about shoulder height with the elbow sunk and the palm facing forward. Slightly pull back (open) the index finger, and slightly stretch the thumb forward and down. This will activate the Laogong point on the palm.

At the same time, touch the tips of your left thumb and index fingers together. This will allow the right hand to draw in the Heaven and Earth Chi. The left hand will then be held palm up to draw in the heavenly force, or held palm down to draw in the earthly force.

2. Begin drawing the heaven spiral by moving the palm in a clockwise motion, with the circles getting smaller and smaller, spiraling inward. At the same time, your left hand is held at your side, palm up with thumb and index tips touching each other. Draw seven or nine (planets of our solar system) small spirals with your right hand in this way, drawing in the violet heavenly energy.
3. Next, lower your right hand slightly and turn your left palm down to face the earth. Then begin drawing the earth spiral by moving the right palm in a counterclockwise motion with the circles getting larger and larger. Draw five spirals (five elements), drawing in the blue earth energy as you move. Inhale into the palm, feeling the energies.
4. You may now bring both hands down to the beginning position of Cosmic Chi Kung, or you may open the Cosmic Channel to the planets for healing. This is discussed in the next section, Part I, 'Opening to Heaven, Earth and Cosmic Chi'.

Cell Breathing

By understanding the operations of our cells, we establish a foundation for our experience of Cosmic Chi Kung. Each cell is a living, breathing entity, absorbing energy with each inhalation and releasing toxins with each exhalation. Thus with every breath, we are creating more Chi.

We are made up of over one hundred trillion cells (one trillion is one thousand billion). Each one of these cells is constantly breathing. In order for our cells to function optimally, we must follow nature's teachings.

Fig. 8.2 Each Cell is a Living, Breathing Entity.

The first thing is to keep your cells free of toxins. Eat nutritional foods. This helps the Chi to flow smoothly through your energy channels and aids greater assimilation of vitamins and minerals. Learn and apply Five Element nutrition principles, eating according to the seasons and to your own constitution.

The second thing is to keep your cells free of excess emotions. Develop the skill of acting positively to situations, rather than reacting, especially negatively. Don't allow anyone to make you sad and unhealthy. Some people like to say, "You make me angry," or "You made me worry." We cannot allow other people to make us so emotional. We do not need to accept the negative emotions that other people try to dump on us. Cellular and psychic boundaries are related. Negative emotions disturb the cells' ability to absorb Chi and to generate the energy necessary for healing. We need all the Chi that we can get. Learn and apply the Six Healing Sounds, the Cosmic Inner Smile and the Fusion of the Five Elements meditation to transform negative emotions into personal power.

Third, create more energy by cultivating a happy attitude, so that your cells can regenerate more easily. Smiling and loving are the two quickest ways to make more Chi. In order to have an ample supply of Chi, develop an attitude of joy and love in yourself and towards others.

Mind, Eyes, Heart and Intention (YI)

The opening of the mind, eyes, heart and use of intention is vital for further activating and increasing your Chi. In the Tao we achieve this by cultivating our "Yi" (pronounced "yee"). "Yi" means mind power, intention, awareness and concentration. The Yi leads and guides the Chi. With our mind we control thought patterns. With our eyes we control the senses of sight, hearing, smell and taste. With our heart we control all our organs and their related emotions: the kindness/anger of the liver, the joy/impatience of the heart, the openness/worry of the spleen, the courage/sadness of the lungs and the gentleness/fear of the kidneys.

Every excellent achievement in our lives depends upon the quality and efficient operation of our Yi. Combining the awareness of the mind, eyes, heart and intention into one, causes the creation of a rich and rare alchemical mixture. The power of the Yi is the magical catalyst that assures energetic results.

The basic teachings are all in the Microcosmic Orbit, the Cosmic Inner Smile and the Six Healing Sounds. As long as you are alive and healthy, you are able to draw in energy from the universe and nature. The stronger the battery, the better it is able to store this energy. If you're weak and sick, you have no way to draw any energy from nature or the universe. When the cells stop drawing in energy, life ends. If you have perfected these practices, you have all the personal physical, mental and spiritual power that you need. Everything comes together. Your mind is aware of the original force. From the knowledge of Oneness, you are inwardly aware of your mind, senses and heart; you are outwardly aware of the universal energy. Now you are capable of receiving the abundantly available healing power of the universe; you can tune into everything, inwardly and outwardly in all directions. This is what we are here for: to heal and become whole again. We have higher goals to reach. The foundation for reaching our goals is a strong and healthy body.

Cosmic Healing Chi Kung is merely an extension of the universe within yourself. You draw the universe in through your palms, skin, heart and crown. With your Yi you breathe in the cosmos through these various open cavities of receptivity in your body, absorb its power, condense it, transform it and use it for the benefit of all.

Connecting the Bridge

Contracting the muscles of the perineum, sexual organs and anus activates our connection with the earth energy. By pulling up these areas and drawing in energy through the soles of the feet, we immediately become grounded and bring the earth (yin) energy into the Microcosmic Orbit. Pulling up should be done gently and directed by the Yi.

When we speak of "Connecting the Bridge," we are referring to the above exercise, except that we do not pull up on the perineum. Pull up gently and lightly on the sex organs and anus while leaving the perineum totally relaxed. After performing the first contractions, when you then relax the perineum, the earth energy will continue to flow into the body using the principles of a siphon. We thus connect the "Bridge" across the perineum from the sexual organs to the anus using the Yi to direct the energy. This actively combines the earth energy and your sexual energy and directs it into the Microcosmic Orbit. This energy is circulated during Cosmic Chi Kung. Holding a very gentle contraction will keep you grounded during the exercise. It can be done sitting or standing.

Women lightly contract the Vagina

Men lightly contract the Perineum and Anus

Fig. 8.4 Connect the Bridge - combine Earth and Heavenly Energy.

Cosmic Chi Kung Preparation

Cosmic Chi Kung can be practiced either in a sitting or a standing position.
Sitting, relax as much as possible and invoke the Cosmic Inner Smile.

1. Be aware of your heart and listen to your kidneys with your inner senses. Smile to your heart and kidneys and feel them pulsing; feel them communicating and interacting with each other. The Kan and Li; the water of the kidneys and the fire of the heart, balance and begin to mix.
2. Open the arm pits as if you were holding a ping pong ball there and slightly move the fingers to activate the Chi flow. Relax. Feel the sensations of the Chi flow: tingling, warmth, pulsing, electric and magnetic feelings.
3. Be aware of your palms. Draw in Chi by activating the bone breathing process. Become aware of the perineum; slightly pull up the perineum, sexual organs and anus and "connect the bridge." (Remember to relax the perineum).
4. Breathe into the palms of the hands and soles of the feet, further enhancing your connection to the earth force. Smile to the blue earth energy as it flows up your arms and legs and suffuses your body with pleasant Yin energy.
5. Breathe into the mideyebrow point and activate your connection with the Cosmic Force. Smile to the golden light of the cosmic energy as it swirls into your mideyebrow point and flows throughout your body, healing and balancing your energy.
6. Breathe into your crown point and activate your connection with the Heavenly Force. Smile to the red and violet light of the heavenly force as it flows into your brain and washes your body with subtle pure Yang energy.

Fig. 8.6 Invoke the Cosmic Inner Smile.

Fig. 8.5
Place the Tip of the Tongue on the Upper Palate.

7. Place the tip of your tongue on the upper palate behind the teeth in a comfortable position.

8. As you begin to move through the postures of Cosmic Chi Kung, always be aware of the Chi flow and its attending sensations.

Cosmic Chi Kung Preparation Standing

1. Stand with your feet parallel and shoulder width apart.
   Tilt your sacrum and pelvis slightly forward until you feel your feet press more firmly into the ground. As you tilt the pelvis, feel your lumbar vertebrae pressing outward; this is called "Opening the Door of Life."
2. Relax your chest and sink your sternum. Draw your chin in slightly, and hold your head, neck and spine erect as if your head and spine were suspended from above by a string.
3. Follow the same instructions for the preparations of Cosmic Chi Kung.

Opening to Heaven, Earth and Nature

The natural world is the source of our power. Cosmic Chi Kung teaches us about nature and its energies. In the Tao, nature and the universe are equivalent to God. You are a part of nature and can easily learn to open to the forces in the macrocosm and let them flow through you. This is very simple. Just tune into the frequencies around you. Your fingers are antennae, which transmit and receive.

1. To begin your practice of Cosmic Chi Kung, simply stand up and feel the energy around you. When you stand or sit, be aware of your soles (Bubbling Spring points) making a good connection with the earth. Your perineum (Hui Yin point) is relaxed and open. You are connecting to the earth force and can expand further down on to the other side of the universe. This is one type of energy.
2. When you draw your chin in, slightly relax your chest and tilt your head slightly forward; you begin to be aware of the heavenly force. This is another type of energy.
3. The qualities of the Five Elements reveal themselves as woody trees (growing force), fiery deserts (expanding force), earth mountains (stabilizing force), metal air (contracting force) and watery oceans and lakes (gathering force). We call the combination of these elements the 'Cosmic Force'.

Thus, your mind and body learn to gather, absorb, direct and transform the heaven, earth and cosmic energy for your own use. This is the essence of Chi Kung. Today there is a lot of emphasis on learning movements and forms of Chi Kung. However, if the inner feeling is not there, the movements are of little value.

Heavenly force is Yang. Earth force is Yin. By learning to connect to the energies of heaven and earth, you have a powerful tool for restoring and maintaining your inner balance of Yin and Yang.

Outline of Practice

Before practicing each of the Cosmic Chi Kung sets in this chapter and in the following chapters begin with the heaven and earth spirals as outlined on page 157.

First Create the Chi Field.

Hold each of the Cosmic Chi Kung postures for at least 5 - 30 seconds, gradually lengthening the time to 60 - 120 seconds per posture.

Note: While holding the postures count the breath from 5 to 15 seconds, being aware of the Tan Tien and feeling the Chi in the Tan Tien which then moves up to the crown and expands up to the universe; fuse your Chi with the Universal Chi and let it multiply down to your palms. Just concentrate on the 'Tan Tien and the Universe'; do not concentrate on the palms at all.

Throughout parts I, II, III and IV 'Tan Tien and Universe' means to spiral into the Tan Tien and spiral out into the universe connecting 'Tan Tien and Universe'.

Part I
Opening to Heaven, Earth and Cosmic Chi

Opening Movements

Three Minds into One Mind

Empty the mind and heart down to the Tan Tien.
Hold the hands together at the heart center.
Smile and make the heart feel soft; feel love, joy and happiness.
Turn your consciousness inward and your awareness out.

Fig. 8.7 Empty your Mind and Heart down to your Lower Tan Tien.

Feel your legs lengthen extending down to the center of the earth.
Feel your hands lengthen extending to the universe below.
Let the mind expand and be aware all the way down to the universe.
Feel the 'long' bones of the arms and legs and begin bone breathing.
Feel universal Chi filling, packing and compressing into the bones.
Draw this Chi down to the back of your crown and feel a heavy pressure press on the crown; feel slightly numb or a light electric downward flow, like oil dripping down. 'Focus at Tan Tien and Universe'. Count to five.

Channeling the Earth Force - Washing the Bone Marrow

Smile into the perineum, palms and crown. Then slowly raise the arms, palms facing each other, to chest height keeping the elbows relaxed and sunk. Rotate the arms slowly until the palms are facing down. Be aware of the mideyebrow and feel your breath and lightly contract your eyes and round muscles around the eyes. Connect the perineum bridge by slightly squeezing the sex organs and the anus; do this a few times.

Rest and smile to soles of the feet, feel the Chi bubbling and feel like you are standing on a hot spring starting to bubble up.

Be aware of your Tan Tien and expand your mind down past the earth to connect with the galaxy below you. Multiply and bring your mind back to the Tan Tien. Gradually feel the Chi being absorbed through the whole body and absorb it into the bones and body like a rising steam or mist. Feel the earth force move through the center of the bones and enter the bone marrow move up the calves and thighs (femur bones) through the hip bones, spine, scapula, arms, neck and skull. Finally swirl the energy around your brain. 'Focus at Tan Tien and Universe'.

Raise your index finger slightly upward to activate the Hegu Point (Large Intestine).

Tiger's Mouth

Fig. 8.9 Open the 'Tiger's Mouth'.

Then stretch your thumbs out to the sides and down, so that they end up pointing downwards toward the earth. This activates Large Intestine 4 (Hegu). Large Intestine 4 is found in the webbing between the thumb and index finger. It is called the "eye of the hand"; this area is also known as the "Tiger's Mouth."

Slowly draw the elbows back and lower the hands until your palms are facing down beside the "eye of the hip" (the iliac crest) with the "eye of the hand" (Large Intestine 4) aligned with the "eye of the hip. "Be aware of the Tan Tien (Yi, the abdominal brain) and expand your mind out into space, the Cosmos and the universe. Remember: The fingers and the energy point act just like a laser to help guide the universal force flow; as soon as you focus on the fingers or the palms you are starting to use your own energy. Feel your Tan Tien and the crown full with Chi. Just use your second mind intention, lightly aware of the area between the hips and LI-4 points. Focus at Tan Tien and the universe. This will activate the lungs and large intestines. Hold for a 30 second count and gradually you will feel the ascending colon and the sigmoid colon have been activated; you may feel some movement around this area.

Use your Yi to rotate your hands so that the fingers first point out, then back, turn the palms up and finally point the middle finger in toward the eye of the hip. Tan Tien and the universe - 95 % aware of the 'Tan Tien and the Universe' and 5 % aware of energy flowing back and forth between the tips of the middle fingers (Pericardium 9); feel the Chi passing through the hips. This will activate the pericardium.

Rotate the hands again until the fingers are pointing forward with the palms facing up. Align the knife edges (Small Intestine 3) with the eyes of the hip. 'Focus at Tan Tien and the Universe'. Be lightly aware of the energy passing back and forth between the two hands. This will activate the heart and small intestine.

Fig. 8.11 Activate the Heart and Small Intestine.

Absorb the Heavenly Force Washing the Bone Marrow - Crown to Soles

Extend the arms forward to chest height with the palms facing upward.

Laogong Point (Pericardium 8)

Fig. 8.12 Draw Heavenly Energy into the Palms.

Become aware of the Tan Tien, the Crown and the Star above you. Expand your mind (YI) out to the universe and connect to the galaxy. Be aware of the palms and the crown which are connected to the galaxy. Activate the Laogong point (Pericardium 8).

Feel the heavenly energy come directly to your palms, and be aware of the violet light of the North Star and the red light of the Big Dipper both shining radiantly.

Fig. 8.13 Hold the Big Dipper.

Picture yourself holding the handle of the Big Dipper and turn the 'cup' pouring the light over your head. Draw this light in through the palms and the crown point and feel it washing your bone marrow. Always remember your Tan Tien. Direct the sensations down through the skull, cervical vertebrae, clavicle, scapulas and sternum. Activate your thymus gland and continue drawing the healing heavenly light down through the rib cage, arms, spine, hips, femurs and calf bones, feet and toe bones. Be aware of the soles bubbling up to the perineum and up to the crown.

Lightly rock yourself like riding a horse; this will help keep your spine open and Chi can flow easily throughout the practice.

Absorb the Earth Force and the Other Side of the Galaxy

Rotate the arms until the hands are palms down.

Raise the index fingers slightly and extend the thumbs first towards each other and then toward the ground. Be 95% aware of the Tan Tien and the Universe, and 5 % aware of the index fingers and the big toes. Wait until you feel the Chi enter. Fill the joints of the fingers and up to the wrists; feel 'tense but not tense' and let the Chi continue to fill the joints up to the elbows, up to the shoulders and gradually up to the neck and the head. Go from the toes up the legs to the hips and on into the spine and the rib cage completing all the joints of the body.

Be aware of the Tan Tien and the universe and only slightly aware of the palms (Laogong), the soles of the feet (Kidney 1-Bubbling Spring), and the perineum (Conception Vessel 1-Hui Yin) bubbling. Activate these points, feel the earth energy and continue smiling through the earth to connect with the galaxy, Milky Way, and the universe. Draw this light in through the palms and soles and let it wash up through the center of your bones from the feet up. Let it steam and cleanse your marrow. Picture any impurities or illness dripping out of your bones and draining down into the earth, where they will be recycled and purified.

Fig. 8.14 Open the index fingers.

Core Movements of Part I

Grasping the Moon

Open Position: Heaven Force - Slightly raise the index fingers to open the palms. Bring the arms up , bending the elbows so that the left hand is under the right elbow with the left index finger pointing up to Heart 3.

The practice uses the 'Empty Force'; this means that there is no contact. The fingers must be 'tense without tensing'. When you tense and raise the index finger, you will feel the Laogong point opening.

Close Position: Tan Tien, earth and the universal force - keeping the arms in the same position, move both index fingers to point down. The right index finger will now point toward the Large Intestine 11 point of the left arm and the left index finger will point downward toward the earth and continue down to connect to the universe. Draw in the earth force through the left index finger, bringing it through the bones of the left arm, across the shoulders through the right arm to the right index finger and out into the Large Intestine 11 point of the left arm. Continue cycling in this way, completing the earth circuit.

Open and close three times altogether ending in the open position. Hold each count for five seconds.

Holding and Activating the Chi Ball

Turn the left palm upward and lower it to the Tan Tien with the pinky pointing inwards.

Lower the right palm to the navel, palm down, as though you were holding a small Chi ball. Lower the right thumb to point toward the left Laogong point. This opens the eye of the right hand (LI-4), then point it toward the navel. Be aware of Tan Tien and universe.

Fig. 8.16 Right Side over Left - 'Holding the Ball'.

Yin/Yang Palms

Separate the hands and extend them out in front of the body at navel level. The left palm is still pointing up, and is Yang drawing in the heavenly force through Laogong. The right palm is still facing down, and is Yin drawing in the earth and the galactic force from below.

Conclude by turning the left palm over to face downward. Draw in the earth force through both palms.

Fig. 8.17 'Yin and Yang Palms' - Right Hand connecting to Earth and Left to Heaven.

Fig. 8.18 Open the Heavenly Circuit. Then the bottom hand slides and turns 'Palm-Up' and the Top Arm slides to 'hold the Chi Ball'

Fig. 8.19 Holding the Chi Ball - Left Side over Right.

Closing Movements

Activate the Chi Channels - Balance the Organs

Fig. 8.20 Finger Points

The closing movements balance organ energy while activating the Chi Channels.

Hold the arms extended forward with the palms down at solar plexus level. Hold each stage for a count of five seconds.

Index Fingers:

Tense all the fingers and feel the Chi filling all the joints; open the index fingers, raising them up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level.

Large Intestine

Fig. 8.21 Activate the Index Fingers - Up.

The tension should be like the string of a tuned musical instrument. When lightly tense the Heavenly Chi will be drawn in through the index fingers.

Relax the hands and bring the index fingers back to the neutral position, level with the other fingers.

Energy to Large Intestine

Fig. 8.22 Draw Earth Energy through the Index Fingers - Down.

Stretch out and tense all the fingers and press the index fingers to point down toward the earth and continue down to the universe. Keep the other fingers level. Draw in earth energy through the index fingers and circulate it through the body.

Bring the index fingers back to neutral and relax your hands.

Once again open the index fingers by raising the index fingers up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in the Heavenly Chi through the index fingers.

Bring the index fingers back to neutral again and relax your hands.

Ring Fingers:

Stretch the ring fingers down toward the earth, keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in earth energy through the ring fingers and circulate it through the body.

Fig. 8.23 Draw Earth Energy through the Ring Fingers.

Bring the ring fingers back to neutral and relax your hands.

Once again open the index fingers by raising the index fingers up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level, and draw in the Heavenly Chi through the index fingers.

Bring the index fingers back to neutral again and relax your hands.

Thumbs:

Stretch the thumbs out and down toward the earth, keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in earth energy through the thumbs and circulate it through the body.

Bring the thumbs back to neutral and relax your hands.

Fig. 8.24 Draw Earth Energy through the Thumbs.

Once again open the index fingers by raising the index fingers up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level, and draw in the Heavenly Chi through the index fingers.

Bring the index fingers back to neutral again and relax your hands.

Pinky Fingers:

Stretch the pinky fingers out and down toward the earth, keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in earth energy through the pinky fingers and circulate it through the body.

Small Intestine

Fig. 8.25 Draw Earth Energy through the Pinky Fingers.

Bring the pinky fingers back to neutral and relax your hands.

Once again open the index fingers by raising the index fingers up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in the Heavenly Chi through the index fingers. Bring the index fingers back to neutral again and relax your hands.

Middle Fingers:

Stretch the middle fingers out and down toward the earth, keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in earth energy through the middle fingers and circulate it through the body.

Bring the middle fingers back to neutral and relax your hands.

Once again open the index fingers by raising the index fingers up, while keeping the rest of the fingers level. Draw in the Heavenly Chi through the index fingers.

Bring the index fingers back to neutral again and relax your hands.

Heart

Fig. 8.26 Draw Earth Energy through the Middle Fingers.

Crane's Beak and Swallow the Saliva:

Form the "Crane's Beak" with both hands by bringing all the fingertips together with the thumbs inside. Inhale and contract the sexual organs.

Move your tongue and suck the mouth to activate the saliva. Divide it into three parts, tighten the neck and gulp down the first part to the center of the navel; force the second mouthful of nectar down to the left side of the navel and the third to the right side of the navel. Raise the forearms up to shoulder height with the fingers pointing down. Slowly open the palms and begin to lower the arms to the sides, until the palms are facing each other before the starting position.

Fig. 8.29 Lower Arms to the Sides.

Fig. 8.30
Palms facing each other to cover the Navel.

Conclusion:

Bring awareness to the navel. Notice the quality and intensity of the energy generated and collect your energy at the navel. Men place hands over the navel with the right hand on top; women vice versa. Rest.

Summary:

Practice Part I daily for one or two weeks until you can do it well. Then you can proceed to learning Part II.

Part II
Opening the Bridge and Regulator Channels

Theory

Chi flows through your body along numerous channels or meridians. The channels are divided into two major groups: the extraordinary or special channels and the ordinary channels. After your mother's egg and your father's sperm joined together to form a single cell, that cell began to divide. The extraordinary channels were the first energy channels formed as a result of that early cell division.

There are Eight Extraordinary Channels:

Governor Channel
Functional or Conception Channel
Thrusting Channel Belt Channel
Yang Regulator Channel
Yin Regulator Channel
Yang Bridge Channel
Yin Bridge Channel

Later, as your fetus developed, your Original Chi flowed through the eight extraordinary channels to help create your internal organs and their energy channels. These twelve "ordinary channels" are divided into yin and yang. The yin Channels are connected to the solid organs, and the yang channels are connected to the hollow organs.

The Twelve Ordinary Channels:

Lung (Yin) Channel
Large Intestine (Yang) Channel Stomach (Yang) Channel
Spleen (Yin) Channel
Heart (Yin) Channel
Small Intestine (Yang) Channel
Bladder (Yang) Channel Kidneys (Yin) Channel
Pericardium (Yin) Channel
Triple Warmer (Yang) Channel
Gall Bladder (Yang) Channel
Liver (Yin) Channel

These twelve organs serve to extract energy from the food and water we ingest and the air that we breathe to create energy through the metabolic processes of respiration, circulation, digestion, elimination and reproduction. This energy is called PostNatal Chi, as it comes in after we are born. Thus the extraordinary channels serve as the link between our Original or Prenatal Chi which came from our mother and father, and our Postnatal Chi which comes from our food and air as a result of metabolism.

General Functions of the Eight Extraordinary Channels

They serve as reservoirs of Chi.

About two thousand years ago, one of the great texts of Chinese medicine, the Nan Ching was written. This classical text describes the twelve ordinary channels as rivers and the eight extraordinary channels as reservoirs of Chi. When the ordinary channels become low in energy, they can draw from the reservoirs of energy in the extraordinary channels. On the other hand, if the ordinary channels become too full, the excess can be taken up by the extraordinary channels. In this way the extraordinary channels help us to maintain a balance in our energy body.

They store and circulate Ching Chi.

The extraordinary channels all draw their energy from the kidneys, which are the storehouse of Ching Chi (essence or sexual energy) in the body. Thus the extraordinary channels circulate the Ching Chi around the body, particularly to the skin and hair, and to the five ancestral organs: the brain and spinal cord, the bone marrow, the blood, the uterus and the liver and gall bladder.

They circulate Defensive Chi to protect the body.

The Chi that protects the body against invasion by external pathogens is called Defensive Chi or Wei Chi. The extraordinary channels circulate Defensive Chi over the back, abdomen and thorax. These functions are performed by the Governor Channel, the Functional Channel and the Thrusting Channels, respectively.

They regulate our life cycles.

In the first chapter of the Yellow Emperor's Classic of Internal Medicine (Huang Di Nei Ching Su Wen), another of the classical texts of Chinese medicine, the life changes of women and men are described in 7 and 8 year cycles respectively. The Functional Channel and the Thrusting Channel govern these cycles.

Eight Extraordinary Channels and Chi Kung

There are few texts available today that describe the purpose and function of the eight extraordinary channels and their place in Chi Kung practice. To make matters more confusing, the extraordinary channels and points used in Chi Kung are often quite different from those used in acupuncture, even though they may bear the same names.

Most acupuncturists pay little attention to the eight extraordinary channels in diagnosis and treatment with the exception of some modern Japanese researchers. By contrast, the extraordinary channels have been of special importance to Taoists and Chi Kung practitioners for thousands of years. Taoists see the extraordinary channels as the foundation of our bodily energy, as the bridge between our Original or Prenatal Chi and our Postnatal Chi; these channels affect us on the deepest level of our basic constitutional energy.

Therefore, Taoists focus on opening up the flow of energy through the eight extraordinary channels as a prerequisite for opening the energy flow in the twelve ordinary channels. In the Universal Tao system, you first open up the Governor Channel and the Functional Channel in the Microcosmic Orbit Meditation. The second pair: the Thrusting Channels and the Belt Channels are opened in the Fusion of the Five Elements II Meditation. The last four channels, the Yin and Yang Bridge Channels and the Yin and Yang Regulator Channels are opened in the third level of Fusion of the Five Elements Meditation. After opening all eight channels, in the next level of Taoist inner alchemical meditation called the Lesser Enlightenment of Kan and Li, the twelve ordinary channels are then opened.

Special Functions of the Bridge and Regulator Channels

The Bridge and Regulator Channels have no points of their own. They borrow points from the other 'ordinary' channels linking together and controlling the flow through all the separate channels of the body. The Bridge and Regulator Channels travel along the same paths. There is no 'real' difference between them. Both of them connect or 'bridge' and 'regulate' the flow of Chi in the body's meridians.

Fig. 8.31 Yin Bridge and Regulator Channels

Bridge Channels Yin and Yang Chiao Mo Function

The Bridge Channels, also called the Heel Vessels as they originate at the heels, regulate the amount of energy being used by all the other meridians in the body. They act like a bridge linking together the stored Chi in the body and the areas in need of Chi. Usually if any meridian uses more energy than it needs to flow properly, then other meridians become deficient as a result. Thus the Bridge Channels seek to assure that your energy is distributed in a balanced way. The Yin Bridge Channel runs along the front or yin side of the body, while the Yang Bridge Channel runs along the back of the body.

Fig. 8.32 Yang Bridge and Regulator Channels

Disorders of the Bridge Channels

Excess Yang Energy

When yin energy is slowed down in the Bridge Channels, yang energy flows more rapidly. The excess yang can cause the following problems: insomnia, difficulty in closing the eyes, hypertension, stiff back and waist, inability to bend down, thigh tumors, bad colds, spontaneous sweating, headaches, painful eyes, paralysis of the arms and legs, vomiting of milk in infants, deafness, epilepsy, nose bleeding, swelling of the body, pain in the joints and head sweating.

Excess Yin Energy

When yang energy is slowed down in the Bridge Channels, yin energy moves more rapidly. The excess yin causes the following problems: sleepiness, difficulty in keeping the eyes open, hypotension, choking, painful urination, stomach rumbling, vomiting, diarrhea, difficult bowel movements, difficult labor and unconsciousness.

Regulator Channels

Yin and Yang Wei Mo Function

The Regulator Channels, also called the Linking Vessels, bind together all the meridians in the body. The Regulator Channels are also divided into yin and yang. The yin aspect, which runs along the front of the body, moves the yin energy and regulates the blood and inner parts of the body. It connects with all the yin channels: the Liver, Spleen, Kidney, Heart, Pericardium and Lung channels. If the yin aspect becomes imbalanced, the person may suffer from heart pains.

The yang aspect, which runs along the back side of the body, moves the yang energy, controls Defensive Chi, regulates resistance to external infections, and regulates the external parts of the body. It connects with all the yang channels: the Stomach, Bladder, Gall Bladder, Large Intestine, Triple Warmer & Small Intestine channels. If the yang aspect becomes out of balance, the person may catch colds and fevers easily.

By joining together the various channels, the Regulator Channels help to maintain a harmonious and cooperative interaction between the different channels.

The Regulator Channels in Taoist Yoga and Chi Kung are slightly different from those presented in acupuncture texts. The Chi Kung Regulator Channels include the yin and yang arm routes as well; some Taoist Yoga texts also refer to the arm routes as the Yin Yu and the Yang Yu. Acupuncture texts, by contrast, include only the leg, trunk and head routes. Many recent Chi Kung texts, unaware of these differences, depict illustrations from acupuncture texts alone, further adding to the confusion.

Disorders of the Regulator Channels

Excess Yang Energy

When yin energy is slowed down in the Regulator Channels, yang energy moves more rapidly. The excess yang can cause the following problems: swelling and pain in the joints, cold knees, paralysis of the arms and legs, painful back and sides, aching muscles, pain in the head, neck and edge of the eyebrows, fever, rashes, night sweating, tetanus, painful red eyes, colds and superficial fevers.

Excess Yin Energy

Similarly, when yang energy is slowed down in the Regulator Channels, yin energy moves more rapidly. The excess yin can cause the following problems: heart pain, diarrhea with stomach rumbling, difficulty swallowing, pain on both sides of the chest, diseases associated with cold and convulsions.

Summary

The Bridge and Regulator Channels link all of the yin and yang channels in the body together and regulate the flow of energy in these channels to maintain a state of energetic balance in the body. The channels used for meditation are somewhat different from the ones seen in Chinese medical text and acupuncture charts. This is because their purposes are different.

Chinese medicine aims to restore sick people to health. The points being treated must be superficial so that they can be activated by acupuncture needles.

Chi Kung and Taoist meditation aim to maintain health and to take one beyond mere physical health to spiritual immortality. The channels and points can be deep within the body, since the energy is guided by the mind or by postures and movements rather than by needles.

The movements used in Cosmic Chi Kung Part II to activate the Bridge and Regulator Channels are relatively simple. To completely master the Bridge and Regulator Channels, you must learn and practice the third level of Fusion of the Five Elements Meditation. Once you have done so, this part of Cosmic Chi Kung practice will be particularly powerful and balancing for you.

Practice

Opening Movements

The Opening Movements for this second part of Cosmic Chi Kung are the same as for the first part. By now you should be familiar with these movements, so they will be described briefly. For a more detailed description, refer to Part I, Opening Movements.

Hands down at sides, palms facing each other. Commence Bone breathing. Be aware of the Tan Tien and absorb Cosmic Chi. Be aware of the Tan Tien and channeling the earth and galactic forces.

Washing the Bone Marrow

Raise arms to chest height - palms facing each other. Rotate arms until palms face down. Open the 'Tiger's Mouth' - Index finger up, thumb down.

Fig. 8.33 Hands lower to the Sides. Lower the Mind to the Tan Tien.

Fig. 8.34 Open the 'Tiger's Mouth'.

Activate and Beam to the Eye of the Hip

A. Large Intestine 4 - Eye of the Hand
B. Pericardium 9 - Tip of the Middle Finger
C. Small Intestine 3 - Knife Edge of the Hand

Fig. 8.35 Activate the Large Intestine, Pericardium and Small Intestine.

Be aware of the Tan Tien and absorb the Heavenly Force Washing the Bone Marrow Crown to Soles.

Extend the arms forward - palms upward. Be aware of the Tan Tien and absorb the heavenly force. Rotate the arms until the palms face down. Raise the index fingers slightly. Absorb the Earth Chi.

Core Movements of Part II
Opening the Bridge and Regulator Channels

Keeping the elbows sunk, raise the left palm first so that it is about 1 inch in front of the throat center (Conception Vessel 22), palm facing in. Then bring the right hand up so that it is about 1 inches in front of the left hand, palm facing in. Align the Lung 10 point in the middle of the eminence of the left hand with the throat center. Feel the Chi go through the neck to C-7. Continue smiling to the universe and connect to the back side of the universe. Hold for a 5 to 30 count and feel the throat center activated.

Fig. 8.37 Connect to the Throat Center.

Fig. 8.38
Feel the connection to the Universe at the Back.

Move both hands out slowly like you're pulling silk; when the feeling is diminished or the silk starts to break stop there. Be still and feel the beam connect the throat center to C-7 and the universe. Maintain the energy beam as you move in and out three times altogether ending with the hands as above.

Activate Mideyebrow Point - Right Side

Be aware of the Tan Tien and the universe. Keeping the Lung 10 points aligned, raise the hands up to the level of the mideyebrow point about one inch in front of the face. Keep the points aligned and beam the energy passing through both hands into the mideyebrow point and through to the base of the skull. Continue smiling and extending to make a connection to the back universe for a 5 to 30 count.

Use only 5% of the awareness to move both hands very slowly out, like you are pulling silk; continue to move out as long as your can feel the connection to the mideyebrow, C-7 points and the universe, maintaining the energy beam as you move.

Move in and out three times altogether, ending with the hands as above.

Fig. 8.39 Connect to the Mideyebrow, Jade Pillow and the Universe at the Back.

Keeping the palms and thenars (Lung 10) aligned, move the hands back down to the position in front of the throat center. Keeping the forearms horizontal at shoulder height, separate the hands so that the Laogong point is aligned in front of Stomach 13, just below the clavicle on a vertical line above the nipple or mammillary line. The middle fingertips should almost be touching. Beam energy from the Laogong points into ST-13 through the back on the side of the spine and connect to the universe. You will be following this vertical line, which passes through the nipples, down the torso to the level of the navel, stopping to focus and beam energy into key points along the way. On each of these, focus your Yi on beaming energy into the organs inside each position. Stomach 13 is the location that activates the Heart and Lungs. Feel the change in your breathing as you activate the lungs.

Fig. 8.40 Beam Energy into ST13.

Move the hands down the mammillary line to Stomach 16, about one inch above the nipple (in the space between the third and fourth ribs). Chi connects to the back and to the universe. Again, beam energy to energize and balance the heart and middle of the lungs. Move the hands down to Liver 14 (about 2 - 3 inches below the nipple in the space between the 6th and 7th ribs). Beam healing energy into the liver and gall bladder. Feel the Chi or the vibration of the palms activate the liver and feel the energy moving inside there.

B. Energize and balance the Liver and Gallbladder at LV14.

Move the hands down to Spleen 16 (just below the rib cage on the mammillary line). Beam healing energy into the stomach, pancreas and spleen and the liver. Picture the organs receiving the Chi from the cosmic and the universe.

Move the hands down to Spleen 15 (on the mammillary line to the level of the navel). Beam healing energy from your palms into the small intestine and the Tan Tien.

Hold the Chi Ball - Right Hand on Top

Turn the left palm up and align the Chi Ball with the Tan Tien. Turn the right palm down and align the eye of the hand (LI-4) with the navel. Feel your palms holding a Chi ball and feel a Chi ball inside the Tan Tien. Feel the Chi ball connect to the Cosmic Chi outside. Feel the north (usually left) and south (usually right) poles in the hands. Lower the right thumb to point toward the left Laogong point.

Hold the 'Chi Ball' - One in the Tan Tien and the other in the hands - Right Hand over Left.

Yin/Yang Palms

Separate the hands and extend them out in front of the body at solar plexus level. The left palm is still pointing up and is yang drawing in the Heavenly Force through Laogong. The right palm is still facing down and is yin drawing in the Earth Force energy. 'Be Aware Tan Tien and Universe'.

Fig. 8.44 Connect to Heaven and Earth.

Conclude by turning the left palm over to face downward. Draw in the 'Earth Force' through both palms.

Fig. 8.45 Draw the Earth Force through the Palms.

Repeat the sequence with the left palm over the right.

Start by moving the right palm to the throat and then the left palm. Scan the body, as in the previous sequence, using both palms to connect to the points running down the front of the body. Remember to maintain a sense of the Chi flowing between the points in the front and their corresponding points in the back of the body.

Continue with the left side, now pulling the silk at throat (C-7).

Closing Movements

The closing movements, crane's beak and finish are the same as before.
Activate the Chi channels - balancing the organs.

Crane's Beak

Form the crane's beak with both hands by bringing the fingertips together with the thumbs inside. Activate the saliva and swallow down three times to the Tan Tien. Raise the forearms to shoulder height with the fingers pointed down, inhaling gently as you raise. Open the palms slowly and begin to lower the arms to the sides as you exhale, until the palms are facing each other in the starting position.

Finish

Bring the awareness to the navel and notice the quality and intensity of the energy generated. Collect energy at the navel. Men, place the hands over the navel with the right hand on top; vice versa for women.

Part III
Opening the Functional and Governor Channels

Theory: Functional and Governor Channels

The Functional and Governor Channels are the first two of the eight extraordinary channels described earlier in this chapter (beginning p.178). They serve as the reservoirs of yin and yang energy in the body. The Functional or Conception Channel is yin and all of the ordinary yin channels connect to it. Similarly, the Governor Channel is yang and all of the ordinary yang channels connect to it.

Fig. 8.56 Cosmic Orbit

Chi Ball

In Part III we also begin to focus more on the sensation of Chi being emitted from our palms. This energy is emitted from the Laogong points primarily, but you can also feel it throughout the palms and fingers. It will feel like a balloon between your hands that is expanding and contracting or like two magnetic fields repelling and attracting each other.

Once you have practiced Cosmic Chi Kung for awhile and have become skillful at it, you may find that Grasping the Chi ball is all you need to do to activate your flow of healing energy before doing a session. As you become sensitive to the sensation of your own Chi, it becomes an easy step to feel the Chi of others.

Fig. 8.57 Grasping the Chi Ball.

Opening Movements, Hands Down at Sides, Palms Facing Each Other
Bone Breathing - Absorbing Cosmic Chi

The Opening Movements are the same as in the sequence in Part I, 'Opening to Heaven, Earth and Cosmic Chi', on page 164.

A. Channeling the Earth Force - Washing the Bone Marrow Raise arms to chest height - Palms facing each other. Rotate arms until palms face down. Open the Tiger's Mouth - Index finger up, thumb down.

B. Activate and Beam to the Eye of the Hip

C. Absorb the Heavenly Force Washing the Bone Marrow - Crown to Soles

Core Movements of Part III

Grasping the Chi Ball

Slowly rotate the hands so that your palms face each other in front of your navel.

Fig. 8.58 Hold the Chi Ball.

Fig. 8.59 Stretch and squeeze it.

Feel the invisible ball of energy between your hands. Allow the energy to push your hands apart keeping the feeling of connection between your palms. When you have less feeling stop the palms and hold it there and reestablish the feeling of the Chi ball.

Let the energy draw your hands back toward each other, like a magnet, until you feel as if you were squeezing and compressing the ball.

Stretch and squeeze the Chi ball three times by opening and closing your palms in this way.

Activate the Outer and Inner Arm Gates

Activate Waiguan Triple Warmer 5 and Neiguan Pericardium 6 - Right arm on top. Slowly rotate the arms so that both palms face down.

Cross the right wrist over the left wrist with 1 inch of space between the hands. Align PC-6 of the right wrist with TW-5 of the left wrist. Feel the two gates activate each other like metal and magnet drawn to each other. Hold for a 5 to 30 second count.

Fig. 8.60 Align and activate PC-6 (Right) with TW-5 (Left).

Keeping the wrists crossed, slowly rotate hands turning the palms upward. Now TW-5 of the right wrist will be aligned with PC-6 of the left wrist. Hold and count and feel the points activated. 'Be aware of Tan Tien and Universe'.

Open the Functional Channel with LI-4

Bring the left hand down to the level of the Tan Tien with the Chi Knife facing in. Lower the right hand, palm down and align the eye of the hand, the LI-4 point with your navel. Feel the Chi ball between your two hands, and at the same time beam energy from LI-4 into the navel point.

Fig. 8.63
Magnify the Power of the Beam to the Solar Plexus.

Fig. 8.64 Activate all the Points.

Raise the right hand up the Functional Channel, stopping and aligning LI-4 with the solar plexus, hold for a 5 to 30 second count and feel the points open and starting to activate each other.

Fig. 8.65
Beam to the Heart Center.

Fig. 8.66
Beam to theThroat

Fig. 8.67
Beam to the Mideyebrow

Continue to move up to the heart, throat (CV-22) and mideyebrow points. Beam energy from the eye of the hand into each of these points and at the same time, continue to feel the Chi ball connection between the two hands.

Return down the Functional Channel in the same manner, starting from the mideyebrow and stopping to beam energy into each point.

Next beam into the throat center, heart center, solar plexus and finally the navel. Hold the Chi ball at the navel with the right hand over the left.

Yin/Yang Palms

Separate the hands and extend them out in front of the body at solar plexus level. The left palm is still pointing up and is yang drawing in the heavenly force through the Laogong point. The right palm is still facing down and is yin drawing in the earth force energy.

Fig. 8.68 Separate the Hands, one palm facing up and one down - draw in the Forces of Heaven and Earth.

Fig. 8.69 Draw in Earth Force.

Conclude by turning the left palm over to face downward. Draw in the earth force through both palms.

Activate the Chi Ball, Tan Tien and the Original Force

Turn the right palm upward and lower it to the Tan Tien with the Chi knife pointing inwards.

Lower the left palm to the navel, palm down. Lower the left thumb to point toward the right Laogong point. This opens the eye of the left hand (LI-4), pointing it toward the navel.

After going up the functional channel come down the channel with the left hand.

Holding a Chi Ball: Open the hands with the palms facing each other holding a Chi ball. Stretch and squeeze the Chi ball a few times in order to feel the Chi as a substance; open and then relax the palms as you squeeze.

Double Palm and Double Beam - Palm to Palm

Bring the left palm in first to face the navel, about 1 inch away, aligning the Laogong point with the navel. Follow by bringing the right hand in front of the left hand, aligning the Laogong of the right palm with the Laogong of the left hand and the navel. Both palms are now facing in. Beam energy through both Laogong points to the navel and through the body to the Door of Life, between L-2 and L-3 (Lumbar Vertebrae). Hold for a 5 to 30 second count and feel the vibration of the palms and Chi beam penetrate through the two points; feel them link together.

Next raise the left palm up to the solar plexus, aligning the Laogong point with the solar plexus.

Follow with the right palm aligning the Laogong to the left palm. Beam energy into the solar plexus point and through the body to the T-11 point (thoracic vertebrae).

Fig. 8.77

Continue in the same way with the left hand leading to the heart point and wing point, the throat point and C-7 (cervical vertebrae), the mideyebrow point and Jade Pillow, and the crown point and perineum. Always remember 'Tan Tien and the universe'.

Fig. 8.79 Beam into the Heart Center and to the back of the Heart.

Fig. 8.80 Beam into the Throat Center and to C7.

When you reach the crown lightly spiral the palms and feel the Chi slowly penetrate deep into the body reaching the perineum; this will also open the Thrusting Channels. This might take a longer time, try a 30 to 60 second count.

Fig. 8.82 Beam from the Crown down to the Perineum.

Return down the front, point by point in the same way, leading with the left hand.

Go up and down this way three times. The double palm and beam activate both the Functional and Governor Channels. The energy beam passes all the way through the body at each point.

Grasping the Chi Ball

Separate the hands and slowly extend the arms in front of you at navel level, palms facing each other, holding the Chi ball.

Crane's Beak

Form the crane's beak with both hands by bringing the fingertips together with the thumbs inside. Activate the saliva and swallow this elixir down three times to the Tan Tien. Raise the forearms to shoulder height with the fingers pointed down, inhaling gently as you raise.

Open the palms slowly and begin to lower the arms to the sides as you exhale, until the palms are facing each other in the starting position.

Finish

Bring awareness to the navel and notice the quality and intensity of the energy generated. Collect energy at the navel. Men, place the hands over the navel with the right hand on top; vice versa for women.

Part IV
Activating the Yin and Yang Channels and the Chi Belt

Theory

In this final part of Cosmic Chi Kung, you will focus on opening the yin and yang channels of the arms and on activating the Chi Belt around the waist. Mastery of Part IV of Cosmic Chi Kung will enhance your ability to project Chi through your fingers for healing.

Yin and Yang Channels of the Arms

There are six important energy channels flowing through the arms. These channels are paired together with each pair comprised of a yin channel and a yang channel. The yin channel of each pair flows down the inside of the arm from torso to fingertip, while its yang counterpart flows up the outside of the arm from fingertip to head.
The pairs are as follows:

Metal Element - Yin - Lung Channel - Thumb
Yang - Large Intestine Channel - Index Finger
Fire Element - Yin - Pericardium Channel - Middle Finger
Yang - Triple Warmer Channel - Ring Finger
Fire Element - Yin - Heart Channel - Pinky Finger
Yang - Small Intestine - Pinky Finger

Projecting Healing Energy through the Fingers

Emitting Chi from the fingers for healing is known in China as the "One Finger Art." Because the various energy channels of the arms either end or begin at the fingertips, the fingers are very effective instruments for projecting healing energy. Your fingers can focus energy like a laser beam toward a concentrated area such as a specific acupuncture point. You can also emit energy from all the fingers at once creating a combined effect to target an area. Part IV of Cosmic Chi Kung will stimulate all of the arm channels and will give you an opportunity to activate all of the fingers for beaming energy.

Fig. 8.92 "One Finger Art"

Activating the Chi Belt - Dai Mo

The Chi Belt or Belt Channel (also called the Girdle Vessel) is the only channel in the body that runs horizontally. It encircles the body at the waist level, connecting together all the vertical channels running through the torso. Thus, the Belt Channel plays an important role in maintaining a good energetic communication between the upper and lower body. In women it strongly affects the uterus and the menstrual cycle in particular.

In Taoist Chi Kung, the Belt Channel is not limited to the waist region. It encircles the entire body, almost like weaving an energetic cocoon around you from head to foot. Activating the Belt Channel strengthens the aura and helps to defend and protect you from outside negative energies.

Fig. 8.93 Belt Channel

Practice

Opening Movements

These opening movements have been described in Parts I, II, III. Refer to Part I to refresh your practice.

Hands Down at Sides - Palms Facing Each Other - Bone Breathing - Absorbing Cosmic Chi.

Channeling the Earth Force - Washing the Bone Marrow.
Raise arms to chest height - Palms facing each other.
Rotate arms until palms face down.
Open the Tiger's Mouth - Index Finger up, thumb down.

Activate and Beam to the Eye of the Hip.
Large Intestine 4 - Eye of the Hand.
Pericardium 9 - Tip of the Middle Finger.
Small Intestine 3 - Knife Edge of the Hand.

Absorb the Heavenly Force - Washing the Bone Marrow - Crown to Soles.
Extend the arms forward to chest height - palms upward.

Absorb the Earth Force.
Rotate the arms until the palms face down.
Raise the Index Fingers slightly.

Fig. 8.94 Mother Earth's Healing Power

Core Movements of Part IV Yin and Yang Channels - Chi Belt

Turn the palms down and slightly open the index fingers. Smile to your palms and soles and channel the earth force.

Turn your right palm up and pass it just one inch below the left arm yin channels from the left palm to the armpit, without physically touching the arm. Feel the Chi moving. Turn your right palm to face your left rib cage and pass your right hand down the left side of your abdomen along the descending colon, and a cross the pelvis to the right side to activate the yin energy.

Fig. 8.98 Pass it to the Left.

Next point the right ring finger toward the left palm and project Chi making very small circles from the right ring finger (Triple Warmer channel); emit the Chi to the left palm for 30 to 60 seconds.

Then return the right index finger to neutral position. Point the left ring finger up toward the right palm, project into the right palm for 30 to 60 seconds, and then return to neutral.

Next both ring fingers project toward the opposite palms at the same time for 30 to 60 seconds and then return to neutral. Notice that the energy may meet in the middle.

Fig. 8.99 Project Energy and balance Left and Right.

B. Pass the Right Palm over the Left Arm's Yang Channels.

C. Pass the Right palm across the chest and scoop under the Right Armpit, Fingers first.

D. Press both Palms forward, relax and channel the Earth Force.

Fig. 8.100 Balance Left Side Yin and Yang and Channel Earth Energy.

Fig. 8.101 Balance right side yin and yang and channel earth energy

Then repeat Activating the Yin and Yang Channels with the other fingers and channels in the following order:

Index Finger - Large Intestine
Thumb - Lung
Pinky Finger - Heart and Small Intestine
Middle Finger - Pericardium

Fig. 8.102 One Finger Art - activating the Laogong.

Activate the Chi Belt - Right Foot Forward

Step forward with the right foot. The right palm covers the navel and the left palm covers the Door of Life. Feel the Chi beam penetrate from palm to palm.

Fig. 8.103 Activate the Chi Belt - Right Side.

Channel the Earth Force

Bring the hands forward and rotate the palms to face downwards. Smile and channel the earth force as before.

For these Closing Movements see the pictures beginning on page 171.

Crane's Beak

Form the crane's beak with both hands by bringing the fingertips together with the thumbs inside. Swallow the saliva. Raise the forearms to shoulder height with the fingers pointed down, inhaling gently as you raise.

Open the palms slowly and begin to lower the arms to the sides as you exhale, until the palms have returned to the starting position.

Finish

Bring the awareness to the navel and notice the quality and intensity of the energy generated.

Collect energy at the navel. Men, place the hands over the navel with the right hand on top; vice versa for women.

Healing Others

Summary and Combined Practice

After learning the four sets of Cosmic Chi Kung, you may want to combine them all into a short and simple daily practice. This combined set, previously called Buddha Palm I, synthesizes the movements from the first three sets into one basic sequence. The movements are done on the right side only, so the entire set can be completed in ten to twenty minutes.

Cosmic Chi Kung: Simple Combined Sequence

Opening Movements

Bone Breathing - Absorbing Cosmic Chi

1. Stand with your hands down by your sides. Feel your Chi moving and activate the bone breathing.
2. Activate the cosmic force by using your mental intention (Yi) to spiral at the mideyebrow point and draw in the golden light energy. Breathe through the mideyebrow point in the same manner as in bone breathing, allowing the energy to flow through the Microcosmic Orbit. Alternatively you can breathe the golden light down into your navel to charge up your Original Chi at the Tan Tien. You can also simply circulate the golden light throughout your body. Relax, smile and enjoy the sensation of your entire body breathing in the cosmic energy.

1. Connect with the earth force by activating the perineum and the soles of the feet, Kidney 1, Bubbling Spring. Connect the bridge by slightly squeezing the sex organs and the anus. Wash the bone marrow from the soles to the crown.
2. Smile into the perineum, palms, mideyebrow and crown. Then slowly raise the arms, palms facing each other to chest height keeping the elbows relaxed and sunk. Then slowly rotate the arms until the palms are facing down. Absorb the Earth Chi through the soles, perineum and palms; feel it being absorbed into the bones and body like a steam or mist rising from the earth. Feel the earth force move through the center of the bones, up the calves, thighs (femur bones), through the hip bones, spine, scapulas, arms, neck and skull. Finally swirl the energy around your brain.

1. Raise your index finger slightly upward to activate the Laogong point (Pericardium 8). Then stretch your thumbs out to the sides and down, so that they end up pointing downwards toward the earth to activate Large Intestine 4 (Hegu). Large Intestine 4 is found in the webbing between the thumb and index finger. It is called the "eye of the hand"; this area is also known as the "Tiger's Mouth."
2. Slowly draw the elbows back and lower the hands until your palms are facing down beside the "eye of the hip" (the iliac crest) with the "eye of the hand" (Large Intestine 4) aligned with the "eye of the hip". Use your mind intention to beam the energy back and forth between your two LI-4 points. This will activate the large and small intestines.
3. Rotate your hands so that the fingers first point out, then back and finally point the fingers in toward the eye of the hip. Beam energy back and forth between the tips of the middle fingers (Pericardium 9) passing through the hips.
   Rotate the hands again until the fingers are pointing forward with the palms facing up. Align the knife edge (Small Intestine 3) with the eyes of the hip, and beam the energy back and forth between the two hands.

Absorb the Heavenly Force - Washing the Bone Marrow - Crown to Soles

Extend the arms forward to chest height with the palms still facing upward.

Become aware of the palms and the crown. Activate the Laogong point (Pericardium 8). Feel the heavenly energy, and be aware of the violet light of the North Star and the red light of the Big Dipper shining down. Draw this light in through the palms and the crown point and feel it washing your bone marrow. Direct the sensations down through the skull, cervical vertebrae, clavicle, scapulas and sternum. Activate your thymus gland and continue drawing the healing heavenly light down through the rib cage, arms, spine, hips, femurs, calf bones, feet and toe bones. Feel your bones activated with a positive electrical force (the positive force comes from heaven, negative from the earth).

Absorb the Earth Force

1. Rotate the arms until the palms face down.
   Raise the index fingers slightly, extend the thumbs first towards each other, and then towards the ground.
2. Become aware of the palms (Laogong), the soles of the feet (Kidney 1, Bubbling Spring) and the perineum (Conception Vessel 1, Hui Yin). Activate these points, feel the earth energy, and be aware of a gentle blue light or white light rising up from the earth like a pure steamy mist. Draw this light in through the palms and soles and let it wash up through the center of your bones as it steam cleans your marrow. Picture any impurities or illness dripping out of your bones and draining down into the earth, where they are recycled and purified.

Core Movements

Grasping the Moon - Connecting the Heaven and Earth Forces

1. Open Position: Heaven Force - Bring the arms up to shoulder height, bending the elbows so that the left hand is under the right elbow with the left index finger pointing up to Heart 3.
2. The right forearm is over the left forearm with the tip of the right index finger held above the Large Intestine 11 point of the left arm. The right index finger is pointing up toward heaven.
4. Close Position: Earth Force - Keeping the arms in the same position, move both index fingers to point down. The right index finger will now point toward the Large Intestine 11, point of the left arm and the left index finger will point downward toward the earth. Draw in the earth force through the left index finger bringing it through the bones of the left arm, across the shoulders through the right arm to the right index finger and out into the Large Intestine 11 point of the left arm. Continue cycling in this way completing the earth circuit.

   Open and close three times altogether ending in the open position.

Activate the Throat Center

1. Draw the elbows out to the side and rotate the palms to face in so that the left palm is about 3 - 6 inches in front of the Throat Center (Conception Vessel 22), palm facing in, and the right hand is about 1 - 3 inches in front of the left hand, palm facing in. Align the Lung 10 point of the right hand with the Lung 10 of the left hand, and align the Lung 10 points in the middle of the thenar eminence of the left hand with the Throat Center. Keep the points aligned and beam the energy passing through both hands into the Throat Center.
2. Move both hands about 12-18 inches out from the Throat Center maintaining the energy beam as you move.
3. Move in and out three times altogether in this way ending with the hands in as in preivous point above.

Activate the Third Eye

1. Keeping the Lung 10 points aligned, raise the hands up to the level of the mideyebrow point. Keep the points aligned and beam the energy passing through both hands into the mideyebrow point.
2. Move both hands about 12-18 inches out from the mideyebrow point maintaining the energy beam as you move. Move in and out three times altogether in this way, ending with the hands as previously.
3. Keeping the palms and thenars (Lung 10) aligned, move the hands back down to the position in front of the Throat Center.

Open the Bridge and Regulator Channels

1. Keeping the forearms horizontal at shoulder height, separate the hands so that the Laogong points are aligned in front of Stomach 13 just below the clavicle on a vertical line above the nipple or mammillary line. The fingertips should almost be touching. Beam energy from the Laogong points into ST-13. You will be following this vertical line, which passes through the nipples, down the torso to the level of the navel stopping to focus and beam energy into key points along the way. On each of these, focus your Yi on beaming energy into the organs inside each position. Stomach 13 is the location that activates the Heart and Lungs. Feel the change in your breathing as you activate the lungs.
2. Move the hands down the mammillary line to Stomach 16, about one inch above the nipple (in the space between the third and fourth ribs). Again, beam energy to energize and balance the heart and lungs.
3. Move the hands down to Liver 14 (about 2 - 3 inches below the nipple in the space between the 6th and 7th ribs). Beam healing energy into the liver and gall bladder.
4. Move the hands down to Spleen 16 (just below the rib cage on the mammillary line). Beam healing energy into the stomach, pancreas and spleen.
5. Move the hands down to Spleen 15 (on the mammillary line to the level of the navel). Beam healing energy from your palms into the small intestine and the Tan Tien.

Grasping the Chi Ball

1. Slowly rotate the hands so that your palms face each other in front of your navel. Feel the invisible ball of energy between your hands. Allow the energy to push your hands apart keeping the feeling of connection between your palms.
2. Let the energy draw your hands back toward each other, like a magnet, until you feel as if you are squeezing a ball.
3. Stretch and squeeze the Chi ball three times by opening and closing your palms in this way.

Activate the Outer and Inner Arm Gates
Waiguan - Triple Warmer 5 and Neiguan - Pericardium 6 - Right Arm on Top

1. Slowly rotate the arms so that both palms face down.
2. Cross the right wrist over the left wrist with 1-3 inches of space between the hands. Align PC-6 of the right wrist with TW-5 of the left wrist.
3. Keeping the wrists crossed, slowly rotate hands turning the palms upward. Now TW-5 of the right wrist will be aligned with PC-6 of the left wrist.

Open the Functional Channel with LI-4

1. Bring the left hand down to the level of the Tan Tien with the Chi Knife facing in. Lower the right hand, palm down, and align the eye of the hand, the LI-4 point with your navel. Feel the Chi ball between your two hands, and at the same time beam energy from LI-4 into the navel point.
2. Raise the right hand up the Functional Channel stopping and aligning LI-4 with the solar plexus, heart, throat (CV-22) and mideyebrow points. Beam energy from the eye of the hand into each of these points, and at the same time continue to feel the Chi ball connection between the two hands.
3. Return down the Functional Channel in the same manner stopping to beam energy into each point. Go up and down the Functional Channel in this way three times.

Yin/Yang Palms

1. Separate the hands and extend them out in front of the body at solar plexus level. The left palm is still pointing up and is yang drawing in the heavenly force through Laogong. The right palm is still facing down and is yin drawing in the earth force energy.
2. Conclude by turning the left palm over to face downward. Draw in the earth force through both palms.

Double Palm and Beam to Activate the Functional and Governor Channels

1. Bring the left palm in first to face the navel, about 3 - 5 inches away, aligning the Laogong point with the navel. Follow by bringing the right hand in front of the left hand, aligning the Laogong of the right palm with the Laogong of the left hand and the navel. Both palms are now facing in. Beam energy through both Laogong points to the navel and through the body to the Door of Life.
2. Next raise the left palm up to the solar plexus aligning the Laogong point with the solar plexus. Beam energy into the solar plexus point and through the body to the T-11 point. Your right hand remains at the navel level beaming energy to the navel and the Door of Life.
3. Raise your right hand up to the outside of the left hand at the solar plexus level, and beam energy through both hands into the solar plexus point and the T-11 point. Continue in the same way with the left hand leading to the heart point and wing point, the throat point and C-7, the mideyebrow point and jade pillow and the crown point and perineum.

4. Return down the front, point by point in the same way, leading with the left hand. Go up and down in this way three times. The double palm and beam activate both the Functional and Governor Channels. The energy beam passes all the way through the body at each point.

Grasping the Chi Ball

1. Separate the hands and slowly extend the arms in front of you at navel level, palms facing each other holding the Chi ball.
2. Stretch and squeeze the Chi ball three times as before by opening and closing the palms.

Channel the Earth Force

Rotate the hands to face downward, and draw in the earth force through the palms, soles and perineum.

Closing Movements

Crane's Beak

1. Form the crane's beak with both hands by bringing the fingertips together with the thumbs inside. Raise the forearms to shoulder height with the fingers pointed down, inhaling gently as you raise.
2. Open the palms slowly and begin to lower the arms to the sides as you exhale, until the palms are facing each other in the starting position.

Finish

1. Bring the awareness to the navel and notice the quality and intensity of the energy generated.
2. Collect energy at the navel. Men, place the hands over the navel with the right hand on top; vice versa for women.

Chapter IX
Universal Tao Practices

Cosmic Inner Smile

Fig. 9.1 Inner Smile

The Inner Smile begins at the eyes and the mideyebrow point and moves down to the heart. As you activate the heart, the loving energy will flow out and you will feel the energy of your Inner Smile flow down the entire length of your body like a waterfall. This is a very powerful and effective tool to counteract stress, tension and negative Chi.

1. Be aware of the mideyebrow, imagining that your are in one of your favorite places in the world, a place where you feel safe, relaxed and happy. Recall the sights you might have seen there, the sounds you might have heard, the scents, sensations and flavors that you associate with that place.
2. Imagine that one of your favorite people is standing in front of you, smiling to you with loving, happy, radiant shining eyes. Smile to your face and slightly lift up the corners of your mouth.
3. Feel yourself responding to that special person's smile with a smile of your own. Feel your eyes smiling and relaxing.
4. Smile down to the thymus gland and picture a white flower blossoming. Gently inhale into the thymus gland, connecting your breath to the olfactory organ. Smell the good fragrance.
5. Aim your inner attention at your heart, picturing the heart before your inner eye and smile to it. Smile until you feel the heart smile back to you. Picture your heart like a red rose, gradually opening. This will activate the love and fire of compassion in the heart. Once you feel the red light and loving awareness it will activate the cosmic red healing light or mist from above and around you.
6. Smile at the light or mist and very slowly with a soft, long, deep breath draw the red mist, love and compassion into the mideyebrow, down through the mouth and throat, into the heart and gradually overflowing to the small intestine. Exhale, but retain the red light and the love and compassion in the heart and small intestine. At the same time exhale the cloudy, black or negative energy. Keep on doing this breathing 18 to 36 times waiting until the heart becomes bright red before your inner vision and starts to radiate out to the tongue, mouth, nose, ears and eyes. Allow the red light to whirl around you and form a red aura. Feel your skin glowing with red energy.
7. Let the heart's loving energy radiate out to the lungs. Aim your attention at the lungs; picture them before your inner eye and smile to them. Smile until you feel the lungs smile back to you. Picture your lungs like a white rose, gradually opening; smell the good fragrance. This will activate the courage in the lungs. Once you invoke the white light and courage into the lungs, you will also activate the cosmic white healing light or mist from above and around you.
8. Smile at the light or mist and very slowly, softly take a long deep breath and draw the white mist into the mideyebrow, the mouth and down to the lungs, gradually overflowing into the large intestine. Exhale but retain the white light and the feeling of courage in the lungs. At the same time exhale the cloudy, black or negative energy. Keep on doing this kind of breathing 18 to 36 times, waiting until the lungs become bright white and start to radiate out to the nose, ears, eyes, tongue and mouth. Invite the white light to whirl around you and form a white aura covering your skin like autumn dew.
9. The spleen, pancreas and stomach correspond to the yellow color of the earth element. Connect to these organs and smile down into them from the mideyebrow.

First connect to the heart, then attract the clear yellow light from above and around you. You might see the golden yellow aura of a wheat field ready for harvest. Expel feelings of worry; exhale the cloudy, sticky energy. Breathe in the golden yellow aura, filling your spleen center with golden yellow light. Repeat to complete 18 to 36 cycles, then allow the light to radiate out to your mouth, nose, ears, eyes and tongue. Wrap the golden aura around you, leaving a golden shine on your skin.

10. The kidneys and bladder correspond to the blue color of the water element. Gentleness is contained within the blue healing light. Inhale the blue aura into the kidneys. Expel feelings of fear or stress on breathing out. Allow your energy field to expand, breathing in and out the blue energy 18-36 times, until it starts to radiate out from your kidneys to your ears, eyes, tongue, mouth and nose. Gather the blue mist on your skin enveloping you with a blue aura.

11. The liver and gall bladder connect to the green color of the element wood; kindness replaces anger, which is expelled on breathing out. Do the same as above and create a green aura around you. Exhale the dark red, cloudy heat. Inhale the nourishing green of the forests. Do 18 to 36 cycles, until the green light has completely filled the liver and starts to radiate out to your eyes, tongue, mouth, nose and ears. Invite the green light to form a green aura around you.

12. Smile down to the sexual organs and reproductive system. Feel love and sexual arousal and the heart and sexual organs uniting. Observe how this process transforms the sexual energy into Chi. Channel down orange and red light to the sexual organs. Thank them for their work in keeping you alive and healthy. Rest. Do nothing. Gather and store the energy by smiling and spiraling in the Tan Tien.

Six Healing Sounds

The Six Healing Sounds enhance Therapeutic Work

Everyone has heard stories about gifted beings who possess great healing powers. People seek out gifted healers. Yet even in the best of circumstances, how much time can a great healer spend with you? One hour a day? An hour a week? What about the rest of the time? Thus you must learn how to take care of yourself; you must learn how to clear out your negative energy and transform it into positive healthy energy. If you maintain yourself in this way it will surely enhance any other therapy you are receiving.

The Six Healing Sounds are a simple yet powerful tool to promote physical, energetic and emotional healing and balance. If you are healing others, you can teach your students one or two of the Six Healing sounds each session, to enhance the effects of your therapeutic work. During the practice of the sound the resting period is very important. Growing the good virtue of the organs is essential so the negative or sick energy has less room to grow.

The sounds are also used to generate certain frequencies for specific healing. Each sound can generate different energy for the healing of the different organs.

Once the movements, sounds and information have been integrated into your practice you can simplify and make the Six Healing Sounds more powerful. For example, when you are settled into the lung sound and you are breathing white healing light and feel the mideyebrow wide open, you put the awareness in the 'Tan Tien and Universe'.

Chi will flow from the universe into the Tan Tien and just the right amount and quality will flow from the Tan Tien into the lungs and large intestine. Just set up the location (the organ) and connect to the universe and the Chi will flow to the correct location!

When doing these, the eyes are open only while making the sound.

Six Healing Sounds - Practice

Lung Sound

Element: Metal
Associated Organ: Large Intestine
Sound: SSSSSSS (Tongue behind Teeth)
Emotions: Negative - Grief, Sadness, Depression Positive - Courage, Righteousness, High Self Esteem Color: White, Clear, Metallic
Season: Fall
Direction: West

Position: Sit in a chair with your back straight and your hands resting palms up on your thighs. Have your feet flat on the floor about a hip's width apart . Smile down to your lungs and be aware of any sadness, grief or excess heat in your lungs. Slowly inhale and raise your hands up your center line with your fingers pointing toward each other. When your hands pass your shoulder level, begin to rotate the palms out as you continue raising your hands up in front of you and above your head with the palms up. Point your fingers towards the fingers of the opposite hand and keep your elbows slightly bent.

Sound: Part your lips slightly, keeping your jaw gently closed. Look up through the space between your two hands and push your palms slightly upward as you slowly exhale and make the sound, "SSSSSSS". Picture and feel any excess heat, sadness, grief, depression, sickness and dingy white color expelled and released as you exhale slowly and fully.

Resting Posture: When you have completely exhaled, rotate the palms to face downward with the fingers still pointing toward each other. Slowly lower the palms and bring them just in front of the chest feeling the lung's aura.

Close your eyes and be aware of your lungs. Smile into your lungs, and as you inhale, imagine that you are breathing in a bright white mist of light. Breathe this light into your lungs and feel it cooling, cleansing, invigorating, healing and refreshing your lungs. Feel it flowing down to the large intestine to balance the energy of the yin lungs and yang large intestine, allowing the courage quality of your lungs to emerge. Grow more courage, so sadness and depression have less room to grow. With each inbreath, feel yourself drawing in cool fresh energy. With each outbreath, mentally make the Lung Sound and release any remaining sadness or hot energy.

Repeat at least three times. For the first two repetitions, you can make the sound aloud. On the third or last repetition, make the sound sub-vocally (vocalizing the sound so softly that only you can hear it) Repeat six, nine, twelve or twenty four times to alleviate extreme sadness, depression, colds, flu, toothaches, asthma and emphysema.

Kidney Sound

Element: Water
Associated Organ: Bladder
Sound: CHOOOOOO (with your lips forming an "O" as if blowing out a candle.)
Emotions: Negative - Fear, Shock
Positive - Gentleness, Wisdom
Color: Dark Blue or Black
Season: Winter
Direction: North

Position: Now move the hands to cover the kidneys. Smile to your kidneys, and be aware of any excess cold or heat in the kidney region. Then bring your legs together, ankles and knees touching. Lean forward and clasp the fingers of both hands together around your knees. Inhale and pull your arms straight from the lower back while bending the torso forward (this allows your back to protrude in the area of the kidneys). Tilt your head upward as you look straight ahead, still pulling on your arms from the lower back. Feel your spine pulling against your knees.

Sound: Round the lips slightly and slowly exhale while making the sound "CHOOOOOO." Simultaneously contract your abdomen, pulling it in toward your kidneys. Imagine any fear, sickness, imbalances, excess cold or heat energy being released and squeezed out of the fascia surrounding the kidneys.

Resting Posture: After you have fully exhaled, slowly sit erect and return the hands to touch the aura of the kidneys. Close your eyes and again be aware of your kidneys. Smile to your kidneys and, on the inbreath, imagine you are breathing a brilliant luminous blue light mist into them; feel this mist healing, balancing and refreshing your kidneys and bladder and picture them glowing a bright blue color. On the outbreath, imagine you are still making the Kidney Sound.

Repeat at least 3 times, as with the previous sound. Repeat six, nine, twelve, or twenty four times to alleviate extreme fear, fatigue, low-pitched ringing in the ears, dizziness, back pain, bladder and urinary infections or other problems of the reproductive system.

Liver Sound

Element: Wood
Associated Organ: Gall Bladder
Sound: SHHHHHHH
Emotions: Negative - Anger, Frustration, Resentment Positive - Loving Kindness, Benevolence, Forgiveness Color: Green
Season: Spring
Direction: East

Position: Place the hands on the liver. Smile to your liver and be aware of any anger, frustration, resentment or excess heat. Slowly begin to inhale a deep breath as you extend your arms up from the sides with your palms up. Continue to raise them over your head. Interlace your fingers together and turn your joined hands over to face the sky, palms up. Push out through the heels of the palms and extend the arms up, keeping the shoulders relaxed. Bend a little to the left and stretch your right arm slightly to gently open the area of your liver.

Sound: Open your eyes wide (the eyes are the sensory opening of the liver). Slowly exhale, making the sound, "SHHHHHHH" sub-vocally. Feel that you are releasing any trapped excess heat, anger, illness and negativity from your liver and that these are riding out of your body on your breath.

Resting Posture: Once you have fully exhaled, separate your hands, turn the palms down and slowly lower your arms to the sides, leading with the heels of the hands. Smile and inhale a shiny spring green mist, illuminating the liver and gall bladder. Bring your hands back to rest on the liver's aura. Close your eyes and smile into your liver. With each inbreath, breathe fresh Chi into your liver and gall bladder and mentally make the Liver Sound with each outbreath.

Repeat at least three times, as with the previous sound. Repeat six, nine, twelve or twenty four times to alleviate extreme anger, to relieve red or watery eyes, to remove a sour or bitter taste in the mouth or to detoxify the liver.

Heart Sound

Element: Fire
Associated Organ: Small Intestine
Sound: HAAAAAAAW
Emotions: Negative - Arrogance, Harshness, Cruelty, Hatred Positive - Joy, Honor, Respect, Love, Happiness Color: Red
Season: Summer
Direction: South

Position: Let both hands rest on the heart. Smile to your heart and be aware of any arrogance, haughtiness, hatred, giddiness, cruelty or hastiness. Slowly begin to inhale a deep breath as you extend your arms up from the sides with your palms up, as you did with the Liver Sound. Continue to raise them over your head. Interlace your fingers together and turn your clasped hands over to face the sky, palms up. Push out through the heels of the palms and extend the arms up, keeping the shoulders relaxed. Bend a little to the right and stretch your left arm slightly to gently open the area of your heart.

Sound: Keep your eyes soft and relaxed, looking up through your hands. Slowly exhale, making the sound, "HAAAAAAAW" sub-vocally. Feel that you are releasing any trapped heat, negative emotions, illness and imbalances from your heart and that these are riding out of the body on your breath.

Resting Posture: Once you have fully exhaled, close your eyes, separate your hands, turn the palms down and slowly lower your arms to the sides, leading with the heels of the hands. As you move inhale a bright red mist into the heart and small intestines. Bring your hands back to rest on your heart's aura . Smile into your heart. With each inbreath, breathe fresh Chi into your heart with each outbreath mentally repeat the heart sound.

Repeat at least three times, as with the previous sound. Repeat six, nine, twelve or twenty four times for the heart and small intestines; feel them balanced. This will alleviate extreme impatience, hastiness, arrogance, nervousness, moodiness, jumpiness, irritability, tongue ulcers, palpitations, sore throat, heart disease, insomnia and detoxify the heart.

Spleen Sound

Element: Earth
Associated Organ: Pancreas, Stomach
Sound: WHOOOOOOO (gutturally from the throat)
Emotions: Negative - Worry, Excess Sympathy, Overthinking Positive - Fairness, Balance, Equanimity, Justice, Openness Color: Yellow
Season: Indian Summer
Direction: Center (where you stand, looking out to the Six Directions)

Position: Place your hands on the body covering the spleen, pancreas, and stomach area. Be aware of your spleen and smile sincerely into it. Inhale deeply as you move the arms outward in an embrace and aim the fingers up under the left rib cage. Place your fingers of both hands just beneath the sternum and rib cage on the left side.

Sound: Look out, lean into your fingers and gently push your fingertips in. Exhale slowly and make the sound, "WHOOOOOOO," from the depths of your throat. Feel yourself releasing any trapped heat, worry, mental fixations or excess sympathy.

Resting Posture: Once you have fully exhaled, close your eyes, slowly release the hands and extend the arms out embracing the earth; return your hands to the resting position on the spleen's aura. Smile to your spleen, pancreas and stomach. Inhale fresh Chi to your spleen, pancreas and stomach as a brilliant luminous yellow healing mist that cleanses and refreshes your organs. Mentally do the Spleen Sound with each outbreath.

Repeat at least three times, as with the previous sound. Repeat six, nine, twelve or twenty four times to alleviate extreme indigestion, heat or cold in the stomach or spleen, worry, nausea, hemorrhoids, fatigue, organ prolapse or loose stools.

Triple Warmer Sound

The Triple Warmer refers to the upper, middle and lower body, and to the distinct metabolic transformations that occur within each area. The Upper Warmer is the area above the diaphragm, where the heart and lungs are located. This area tends to become hot and is responsible for respiration and cardiovascular circulation. The Middle Warmer, the area between the diaphragm and the navel, becomes warm and is where the digestive organs are located. The Lower Warmer, the area below the navel, is responsible for reproduction and elimination and is cool in temperature. The sound "HEEEEEEE" balances the temperatures of the three levels by bringing hot energy down to the lower center and cold energy up to the higher centers.

Position: Lie on your back with your arms resting palms up at your sides. Keep your eyes closed. Smile. First breathe into the upper part of your lungs to expand the Upper Warmer; then breathe into the middle of the lungs to expand the Middle Warmer; finally, with the last part of your inhalation, expand your lower lungs and fill the Lower Warmer. Breathing in this way creates more space inside for each organ, helping to release and circulate any internal heat or cold.

Sound: Exhale with the sound "HEEEEEEE" sub-vocally, first flattening your chest, then your solar plexus, and finally your lower abdomen. Feel the dark and cloudy color, cold and chill energy exit from the tips of the fingers.

Resting Posture: Once you have fully exhaled, do not to focus on any emotions or purification process at all. Just let go and relax your body and mind completely.

Repeat at least three times, as with the previous sound. Repeat six, nine, twelve or twenty four times to alleviate insomnia and stress.

When you have completed the Six Healing Sounds just rest, smile and do nothing.

Regular daily practice of the Six Healing Sounds will help you to keep in touch with the energetic and emotional state of your internal organs. Most importantly do the sounds in the evening before going to sleep. This will help clear out the negative emotions before sleeping, so you can feel that the night's rest recharges your energy positively. This practice will greatly benefit your personal Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice. It will help sensitize you to the varieties and differing qualities of Chi. This knowledge will also help you in diagnosing and treating others.

For more details of this practice please see the book "Taoist Ways to Transform Stress Into Vitality", by Mantak Chia.

Appendix

Guide to the Acupuncture Points used in Cosmic Chi Kung

The following is a detailed description of the acupuncture energy points used in the Cosmic Chi Kung practice. It is necessary to know the exact location of the points to do the practice well. However, you do not have to know the traditional Chinese medical functions and energetics of the points to do the practice. These are included in this appendix as an item of interest.

The names of the points are given first by the channel and number, second by the English translation of the traditional Chinese name for the point and finally by the name in Chinese.

We are emphasizing the traditional Chinese medical therapeutic properties of the points given herein. Many of these points also have very different purposes in Taoist Yoga. For a description of the Taoist Yoga energetics, refer to "Awaken Healing Light of the Tao" by Mantak Chia.

About the Author

Mantak Chia

Master Mantak Chia

Master Mantak Chia is the creator of the Universal Tao System and is the director of the Universal Tao Center and Tao Garden Health Resort and Training Center in the beautiful northern countryside of Thailand. Since childhood he has been studying the Taoist approach to life. His mastery of this ancient knowledge, enhanced by his study of other disciplines, has resulted in the development of the Universal Tao System which is now being taught throughout the world.

Mantak Chia was born in Thailand to Chinese parents in 1944. When he was six years old, Buddhist monks taught him how to sit and "still the mind." While still a grammar school student, he learned traditional Thai boxing. He was then taught Tai Chi Chuan by Master Lu, who soon introduced him to Aikido, Yoga and broader levels of Tai Chi.

Years later, when he was a student in Hong Kong excelling in track and field events, a senior classmate named Cheng Sue-Sue introduced him to his first esoteric teacher and Taoist Master, Master Yi Eng (I Yun). At this point, Master Chia began his studies of the Taoist way of life in earnest. He learned how to circulate energy through the Microcosmic Orbit and, through the practice of Fusion of the Five Elements, how to open the other Six Special Channels. As he studied Inner Alchemy further, he learned the Enlightenment of the Kan and Li, Sealing of the Five Senses, Congress of Heaven and Earth and Reunion of Heaven and Man. It was Master Yi Eng who authorized Master Chia to teach and heal.

When Mantak Chia was in his early twenties he studied with Master Meugi in Singapore, who taught him Kundalini, Taoist Yoga and the Buddha Palm. He was soon able to clear blockages to the flow of energy within his own body. He learned to pass the life force energy through his hands also, so that he could heal Master Meugi's patients. He then learned Chi Nei Tsang from Dr. Mui Yimwattana in Thailand.

A while later, he studied with Master Cheng Yao-Lun who taught him the Shao-Lin Method of Internal Power. He learned the closely guarded secret of the organs, glands and bone marrow exercise known as Bone Marrow Nei Kung and the exercise known as Strengthening and Renewal of the Tendons. Master Cheng Yao-Lun's system combined Thai boxing and Kung Fu. Master Chia also studied at this time with Master Pan Yu, whose system combined Taoist, Buddhist and Zen teachings. Master Pan Yu also taught him about the exchange of Yin and Yang power between men and women, and how to develop the Steel Body.

To understand the mechanisms behind healing energy better, Master Chia studied Western anatomy and medical science for two years. While pursuing his studies, he managed the Gestetner Company, a manufacturer of office equipment and became well acquainted with the technology of offset printing and copying machines.

Using his knowledge of Taoism, combined with the other disciplines, Master Chia began teaching the Universal Tao System. He eventually trained other Instructors to communicate this knowledge and he established the Natural Healing Center in Thailand. Five years later, he decided to move to New York, where in 1979, he opened the Universal Tao Center. During his years in America, Master Chia continued his studies in the Wu system of Tai Chi with Edward Yee in New York.

Since then, Master Chia has taught tens of thousands of students throughout the world. He has trained and certified over 2,000 instructors and practitioners from all over the world. Living Tao Centers, Chi Nei Tsang Institutes, Cosmic Healing Forums & Immortal Tao Mountain Sancutaries have opened in many locations in North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia.

In 1994, Master Chia moved back to Thailand, where he had begun construction of Tao Garden and the Universal Tao Training Center fifteen miles outside of Chiang Mai.

Master Chia is a warm, friendly and helpful man who views himself primarily as a teacher. He presents the Universal Tao System in a straightforward and practical manner, while always expanding his knowledge and approach to teaching. He uses a word processor for writing and is totally at ease with the latest computer technology.

Master Chia estimates that it will take thirt-five books to convey the full Universal Tao System. In June, 1990, at a dinner in San Francisco, Master Chia was honored by the International Congress of Chinese Medicine and Qi Gong (Chi Kung), who named him the Qi gong Master of the Year. He is the first recipient of this annual award.

In December, 2000, the Tao Garden Health Resort and Universal Tao Training Center was completed with two Meditation Halls, two open air Simple Chi Kung Pavilions, indoor Tai Chi, Tao Tao Yin and Chi Nei Tsang Hall, Tai Chi Natural Swimming Pool, Pakua Communications Center with a complete Taoist Library, Internal World Class Weight Lifting Hall and complete eight Court Recreational Facilities.

In February, 2002, the Immortal Tao practices were held at Tao Garden for the first time using Darkness Technology, creating a complete environment for the higher level Taoist practices.

Master Mantak Chia has previously written and published these twenty-four Universal Tao books:

Acknowledgements

The Universal Tao Publications staff involved in the preparation and production of Karsai Nei Tsang: Genital Therapeutic Cleansing Massage extend our gratitude to the many generations of Taoist masters who have passed on their special lineage as an unbroken oral transmission over thousands of years. We wish to thank the thousands of unknown men and women of the Chinese healing arts who developed many of the techniques and concepts presented in this book.

Mui Yimwattana

We also wish to thank the Chi Nei Tsang teacher Dr. Mui Yimwattana, and Taoist Master Yi Eng, both of whom worked so patiently to teach their students.

Bunjong Pun (Ni)

A unique genital health massage service is now available at Tao Garden Health Resort. A Thai Massage masseuse with twenty-six years of professional experience does this special masage. In addition to being highly skilled and effective in all of the forms of Thai Massage that one is likely to encounter, our new staff professional, 'Ni', has acquired this secret specialist training that most of us have never come across before. Her professionalism, knowledge and sensitivity in this delicate area of the sexual organs and glands massage has gained immediate trust and respect from all of us here who have been privileged to benefit from her massage. Not to be confused--this is not a 'sexual' massage--it is for the sexual organs, glands, associated parts and areas.

We offer our eternal gratitude to our parents and teachers for their many gifts to us. Remembering them brings joy and satisfaction to our continued efforts in presenting the Universal Tao System. As always, their contribution has been crucial in presenting the concepts and techniques of the Universal Tao.

Buathon Thienarrom

Buathon Thienarrom was formerly the Medical Manager and Chi Nei Tsang Practitioner at the exclusive Chiva-Som International Health Resort in Hua Hin, the Royal seaside resort south of Thailand. She hopes to be able to pass on her knowledge of healing to those who are interested in the approach to Holistic Health. Due to her comprehensive background knowledge in Nursing, Psychology and Health Sociology, she has been able to easily grasp the fine balance between traditional/alternative medicine and modern medicine. She fully understands the connection of harmony between body and mind in order to achieve spiritual development, which are the keys to personal fulfillment. She has undergone extensive training in alternative/holistic medicine. She has appeared in the BBC program on Holistic Health, Discovery Channel (Asia) on Alternative Therapies, and various other interviews on television, radio and the press. She has also given many lectures on Holistic Health topics at various leading universities throughout Thailand. She has practiced her healing tehniques in Hong Kong, Singapore and the United Kingdom.

We wish to thank the thousands of unknown men and women of the Chinese healing arts who developed many of the methods and ideas presented in this book. We express special thanks to Saumya Comer for her writing and editorial contributions. We appreciate her research and great labor. We express deep appreciation to Udon for his illustrations, book layout and beautiful cover. We thank Wilbert Wils, and Jean Chilton for their assistance in preparing, editing, and proofreading the manuscript. We wish to thank Jettaya Phaobtong and Buathon Thienarrom for their editorial contributions in the revised edition of this book.

A special thank you goes to our Thai Production Team for their cover illustration and book design and layout: Raruen Keawpadung, Computer Graphics; Saysunee Yongyod, Photographer; Udon Jandee, Illustrator; and Saniem Chaisarn, Production Designer.

Saumya Comer has been a student, teacher and practitioner of the healing arts since 1984. She began her studies in the field of Somatics, learning how to bring people to deeper connection with their bodies through bodywork and sensory/movement awareness. She now combines different forms of bodywork such as Chi Nei Tsang, Craniosacral Therapy and Visceral Manipulation to assist her students in releasing their limiting physical, emotional and spiritual blockages. Saumya is an instructor of the Universal Tao System and uses the powerful self-healing techniques of Chi Kung to teach her students self-care. She lives mostly on the west coast of the United States and teaches Chi Kung internationally. She travels to Thailand twice a year to teach and assist in the Universal Tao trainings at Tao Garden.

Words of Caution

The practices described in this book have been used successfully for thousands of years by Taoists and Thailand trained by personal instruction. Readers should not undertake the practice without receiving personal transmission and training from a certified instructor of the Universal Tao, since certain of these practices, if done improperly, may cause injury or result in health problems. This book is intended to supplement individual training by the Universal Tao and to serve as a reference guide for these practices. Anyone who undertakes these practices on the basis of this book alone, does so entirely at his or her own risk.

The meditations, practices and techniques described herein are not intended to be used as an alternative or substitute for professional medical treatment and care. If any readers are suffering from illnesses based on mental or emotional disorders, an appropriate professional health care practitioner or therapist should be consulted. Such problems should be corrected before you start training.

Neither the Universal Tao nor its staff and instructors can be responsible for the consequences of any practice or misuse of the information contained in this book. If the reader undertakes any exercise without strictly following the instructions, notes and warnings, the responsibility must lie solely with the reader.

This book does not attempt to give any medical diagnosis, treatment, prescription, or remedial recommendation in relation to any human disease, ailment, suffering or physical condition whatsoever.

The Universal Tao is not and cannot be responsible for the consequences of any practice or misuse of the information in this book. If the reader undertakes any exercise without strictly following the instructions, notes, and warnings, the responsibility must lie solely with the reader.

Introduction

Blockages and Karsai happen in all parts of the body. Karsai means the sedimentation in the veins. These blockages come from the aging process, emotional and physical traumas, toxins, heavy metals, the air-pollution that we breathe, poor nutrition, from the pesticides put into our food, polluted water and too much stress. These may cause speed up at the blockages. There are many different types of blockages. There are blockages in our circulatory systems that affect blood and lymphatic flow, blockages that cause our organs to function poorly; especially the kidney, bladder, spleen, pancreas, lung, prostate gland,testicles, uterus and vagina, energy blockages, blockages in our tendons plus fascia and muscles, to name just a few.

Karsai Nei Tsang focuses on the blockages in the genital area, especially the blockages that take the form of sedimentation in the veins. In order to have healthy, functioning genitals we need a rich supply of blood flow. When this blood flow becomes blocked with crystal like sedimentation and fatty deposits, the human sexual arousal response is greatly affected. With a poor blood flow to the genital area men will experience difficulty in getting and maintaining a good erection. Because a woman's arousal also depends on a healthy blood flow, she will have difficulty with getting the proper swelling of her labia and clitoris and producing the sexual fluids. Karsai Nei Tsang releases the blockages and sedimentation that cause poor blood flow so that men and women can regain healthy sexual function.

Another important benefit of Karsai Nei Tsang is an improved hormonal balance. When the circulatory flow in the genital area increases, hormones are more easily released. A healthy balance of hormones stimulates the sexual and brain functioning. When we have healthy hormonal function we are given some protection against many of the age related problems such as memory loss, back pain, poor circulation, problems associated with menopause, and sexual libido.

Karsai Nei Tsang is especially important for men and women over the age of forty and for anyone who feels blocked sexually. The age of approximately forty is when the blockages and sedimentations become manifest.

Our sexual organs play a major role in our physical, emotional and spiritual health. Because every part of the body is connected, tensions in one area have an affect on the rest of the body. This is also true for the genitals. When the genitals suffer from blockages, the jing chi (sexual chi) is not free to circulate through the body. The body is then deprived of this powerful healing energy. We need arousing, orgasmic energy for the healthy functioning of our beings.

We have neglected our sexual organs for far too long, our genitals need attention and expert care just like the rest of our bodies. Karsai Nei Tsang provides this care. The Karsai Nei Tsang practitioner uses a sensitive touch with deep, direct pressure and small circular massage movements to dissolve the sedimentation in the circulatory system, release the toxicity in the organs, and assist the student in letting go of any past emotional blockages held in this area.

Karsai Nei Tsang addresses the common problems associated with our sexual organs; impotency, frequent and difficult urination, painful menstruation, painful intercourse and low sexual libido. It is also quite effective in alleviating lower back pain, improving the body's alignment, strengthening the pelvic floor muscles and increasing general vitality.

Chapter I
Preparation for Karsai Nei Tsang

Preparation for the Practitioner

As a Chi Nei Tsang practitioner, it is important for you to maintain a clear, healthy body with abundant Chi flow and healthy boundaries. Because of the sensitive nature of genital massage this is especially true for the Karsai Nei Tsang practitioner. It is a prerequisite for you as a Karsai Nei Tsang practitioner to have worked out any issues of past sexual trauma and to have gained enough experience in the Universal Tao Healing Love and Basic practices so that you have good management of your sexual energies. As a practitioner you represent yourself as a standard of physical, emotional and spiritual health. It is your responsibility to stay clear and centered in your own energies. Any exchanging of your sexual energies with your student is just a distraction from the healing purposes of Karsai Nei Tsang and it invites negative influences for both you and your student. Unclear boundaries create an opening for the repressed negative energies of your student to enter into your body or vice versa; your unprocessed negative energies to enter into your student. This is obviously not the purpose of any Chi Nei Tsang session and can adversely affect your abilities as a healer in the future. The simplest way is to stay present in your integrity and you will be rewarded ten fold. Following are 12 steps for becoming an effective healer.

1. Establishing a Strong Connection with your Sources of Energy

First it is necessary to establish a connection with your sources of energy and connect with the energies emanating from heaven and earth. This ability is very beneficial for self-healing and is essential for healing others. If you do not connect to some source of external energy when healing others, you will draw upon your own personal reservoirs. Our personal Chi is limited by nature, and can easily become depleted if we give it away too freely.

Refer to Mantak Chia's book*, Awaken Healing Light of the Tao* for a description of this practice. Stay connected with these energies while you are giving treatments. You will discover that you have ample energy of the correct quality and quantity to help your student.

2. Preparing Yourself Physically

When creating the strong, healthy body necessary to practice Karsai Nei Tsang, bear in mind that energy flows to wherever it is needed. If your energy is lower than your student, his energy will flow to you and you will become weaker. In emphasizing physical preparation, it is important to know that tendons, muscles, fasciae, channel systems, and bones draw in power that can be channeled to another. Following is a list of physical practices that are important for you to do.

Fig. 1.1 Preparing Yourself Physically

A. Iron Shirt Chi Kung

The Iron Shirt Chi Kung exercises allow you to draw energy from the Earth, Cosmos, and Universe to strengthen the tendons and clean out and energize the fasciae. This provides protection and opens the channels so that they can receive more energy.

B. Tai Chi Chi Kung

By practicing Tai Chi you can learn to move the body in one unit using Chi instead of muscle power. You can build inner strength by circulating energy through the channels, muscles, tendons, bones, and fasciae. This ability is very important in Karsai Nei Tsang for protection and for storing and channeling energy. The Universal Tao's Tai Chi Chi Kung, which can be learned very quickly, is a short but powerful way of achieving such results.

C. Bone Marrow Breathing

The Universal Tao has published a book on the subject of bone marrow breathing entitled Bone Marrow Nei Kung. By studying and practicing bone marrow breathing, you can cleanse and grow bone marrow, refresh the blood, and develop enormous power. You can develop the ability to channel energy through breathing while using less muscular force and passing on more energy.

D. Diet

Whether or not you are familiar with cooking using the Five Phases of Energy theory, you may find it very interesting because it is so full of novelty and surprise. Culinary artists who incorporate the Five Phases of Energy (Five Element) theory in their cooking skills using the produce and foods of their countries or regions are quickly creating new and exciting trends in cooking.

The Five Element theory of cooking that pervades much of the world of Chinese cuisine is served in many wonderful restaurants. In fact, its cooking rules are a part of every Asian culture. Asian cooks balance their food in five ways, separating food according to five tastes, five colors, hot, cold, and PH balance. Then the foods are combined and beautifully prepared.

The stomach, spleen, and saliva sort out the food and distribute it to the organs according to taste and color. Each color and taste feeds energy to its own particular organ group. Each organ will only accept that energy designed for it by nature.

3. Practicing Meditation Daily

To maintain your energy, meditate every day by connecting with the outer forces and burn out any of your sick and undesirable energies. The Six Healing Sounds Meditation, Microcosmic Orbit Meditation and the Fusion Meditations are especially effective for these purposes. Refer to Master Chia's Awaken Healing Light of the Tao and Fusion of Five Elements books for instructions of these meditations.

The Healing Hands Meditation, when practiced every day, increases the ability of your hands to channel the Universal, Human Plane (Cosmic Particle), and Earth Energies. You will be able to feel the energy emerging from your palms and fingers as you touch the student. Refer to Mantak Chia's Chi Nei Tsang I for this meditation.

4. Recognizing that Healing is a Gift of Nature

Everyone in good health can heal. The healing ability means having a powerful life-force with good intention. A powerful life-force means having a higher vibration. Usually, it takes one year for a person to absorb enough Universal Energy to be effective. That is the time it takes for the Earth to revolve around the Sun. (Fig. 1.2) With the practice of the Cosmic Particle Chi Circulation and the Embracing the Tree exercises, you can quicken the process of energy absorption and transformation without overheating your system or creating a problem of cosmic energy indigestion. The energy is then immediately useful.

Fig. 1.2 Ordinarily, it takes one year for a person to absorb enough Universal Energy to be an effective healer. Meditation can quicken the absorption process.

5. Becoming a Channel for Powerful Forces

The more channels you open, the better off you are. Therefore, to receive energy, it is important to open at least the two major channels (Functional and Governor) of the Microcosmic Orbit. It is better still to add the Thrusting and Belt Channels. By doing so you will know first hand the way your energy flows. Then you can direct and draw in healthy energy, and use it to burn sick energy out of your system. By first opening the energy channels within yourself, you become more efficient as a healer and can avoid succumbing to the illnesses that you are removing from another.

The quickest way to open your Microcosmic Orbit is to take a weekend workshop with a certified Universal Tao Instructor. You may also teach yourself by using the Awakening the Healing Light book or video. To open the Thrusting and Belt Channels, you could study with us, a certified instructor, or teach yourself by using the Fusion of the Five Elements book and Fusion I, II, and III videos. Audio tapes are also available.

6. Preventing the Depletion of your Energy

It is important to channel the energies of the Universal, Human Plane Cosmic Particle, and Earth Forces rather than using your personal storehouse of energy. When practitioners rely on their own energies they soon become depleted and then it is very easy for disease to take hold.

As you try to help a person and your life-force energy flows into him or her, be sure your energy is healthy. Otherwise any sick energy you send will create the same sickness in that person.

The reverse also holds true. As you send energy into a person, his or her energy passes to you. This means that this person's problems become your problems. There is no such thing as becoming involved with the healing without also becoming involved with the problem. This is how many people in the healing arts get sick. Their energy systems are not efficient enough to counteract the effects of the sick energy to which they have exposed themselves.

Young and healthy people who enter these professions can get by with no apparent ill effects because they have "energy to burn". However, they are depleting their energies and the sick energies they take on eventually do affect them. This is why it is important to think that you are not simply healing them, but you are a teacher and an adviser. Developing and maintaining an open channel to the Universal, Human Plane, and Earth Energies will help you avoid picking up sick energy and help you burn out the sick energy when it enters you.

7. Healing from your Heart

Chi Nei Tsang is full of brilliant and wonderful techniques that have the potential to significantly alter the basic way we care for ourselves and for each other. Even though the techniques are powerful and can relieve both chronic and acute illnesses, they will not work effectively unless they are activated and animated by a love and compassion that is given sincerely and abundantly from your heart. Your fingers and hands can become healing hands only when you are full of good intentions.

Fig. 1.3 Healing with Love from the Heart.

When you touch others, touch them with all the love, care, and compassion that you can find within yourself. Connect yourself with the forces of the Universe, the Cosmic Particle or Human Plane, and the Earth and become a physical channel for these forces. Apply your hands with the tenderness of a mother touching her child. If your touch is from your center to theirs, they will open like the petals of a flower in the morning sun. Every life and body has a self-healing mechanism that you can help to awaken. Once the center at the navel is activated and freed and the organs are detoxified, the process of healing can be completed by your students through their own discipline.

8. Educating your Students to Heal Themselves

A universal law states that energy cannot be destroyed; it can only be transformed. As you engage in healing your student, Chi Nei Tsang I, II and III techniques will help you locate the problem and boost the level of energy. You will help your student to transform their toxic, blocked energy. As a healer it is you that starts the fire, but it is the student's responsibility to maintain it and not let it die out. The main role of the Chi Nei Tsang practitioner is educator not healer. The philosophy and purpose of Chi Nei Tsang is to teach people how to heal themselves by providing insights into their own immense, internal healing powers. If you teach the student the Inner Smile, the Six Healing Sounds, and the Microcosmic Orbit, along with the CNT self massage, you will help them transform their sick, negative energies into good life-force energy. Chi Nei Tsang practitioners, therefore, never refer to their students as "patients" or "clients". A student who has awakened his or her own healing energy can continue the process by practicing at home and teaching family and friends. One must always remember that the most important healing energy comes from within oneself.

9. Clearing your Energy after each Session

When helping someone it is possible to accumulate sick energy on the surface of the skin of the hands and arms. Do not allow it to go beyond the shoulders and enter the body. If you practice daily, your mind's power can hold back the encroachment of the sick energy.

There are many different theories on how to get rid of this unwanted energy. Some people advocate washing the hands. If you do this, make sure that you use cold, running water, or you can drive the energy into your body further.

One method is to place your hands on a surface conductive to Earth Energy and connected to a ground (e.g., a water pipe). Iron will do, as will a brick or cement wall that has a footing. It will pass the sick energy down to the earth. The earth can help neutralize sick energy.

With some sick energy this grounding method is not effective or powerful enough. Therefore, our advice is that you meditate as well so that you are sure to be clean.

10. Restoring the Force after Each Session

It is important that after each practice session you sit and meditate. Be sure that you are free of sick energy before ending your meditation. You may feel coldness in the hands and itchy skin, let it go down to the ground and bury them them under the ground.
Meditate until you feel warmth in your navel area and your hands; it will burn out the sick energy. Use the Fusion I practice to get more energy into the navel and transform the sickness into positive life-force.

11. Know Thyself

A healer is knowledgeable and, above all, careful with his or her treatment of life-force energy. Only then can the healing experience be gratifying both for the teacher and the student.

Upon arising in the morning, spend a few moments checking your energy level. If your energy level is not good, take time to raise its level. Put your fingers touch the navel and keep on smile to the navel and feel it warm and the chi started flow up to the head andstarted flow down to the tongue and circulate it around the whole body.

Never overdo anything. If your energy is low, or if you do not feel well, do not attempt to give a session to anyone. The meditations mentioned or described above and below are very important to help you raise your energy to a higher level. The Microcosmic Orbit and Fusion exercises are very powerful means of checking and replenishing your energy level. Fusion II is very useful for warding off most illness effects by using the Thrusting Channels and especially, the Belt Channel.

At all times it is wise to take precautions and to know what you are doing. Advice and warnings about healing energy and sick energy are consistently given throughout the Chi Nei Tsang books. It is extremely important that you follow instructions on how to care for yourself carefully.

12. Using the Earth and Trees for Healing

Spending time with nature is an excellent way to purge any toxicity and replenish your energy. Trees and other plants are very good at taking the sick energy into the Earth. Houseplants, however, do not receive the direct energy of the Sun, nor are they directly connected with the Earth. They can only absorb limited quantities of sick energy.

The sick energy of other people can seep into your inner organs and accumulate there. It is a very dense, coarse energy and can feel both cold and biting. This is, by far, the worst way to experience sick energy. A tree can handle this energy by sending it into the healing Earth.

Fig. 1.4 Passing Sick Energy to a Large Tree

A detailed section on training, protection and self-care for the practitioner is found in the first Chi Nei Tsang book. It covers the Healing Hands Meditation and the Microcosmic Orbit, Inner Smile, Six Healing Sounds and Fusion Practices in order to prevent depletion of energy, and to be able to give, take and transform energy. There are many Universal Tao practices that can be a great complement to your practice of KNT. For example, practicing Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Tai Chi Chi Kung can help you to relax and work with your whole body as a unit in a harmonious way. Cosmic Healing is also an effective protection against absorbing negative Chi because it focuses on using external energies for healing and not your own energy.

Preparation for the Student

Before you work with your student, hold an interview with him /her in order to review the level of care that is required for a successful outcome. It is important that students take responsibility for helping themselves, so they need to prepare their bodies before you start working with them and then continue the self-care throughout the treatment.

If people are not willing to take care of themselves, all the effort and energy expense is on your part, and you will be pouring your energy into a bottomless pit. If this is the case, you need to be very open, gentle and honest and tell them you cannot work with them unless they are willing to work on themselves as well.

Before the session, it is important for your students to detoxify and clean the colon. You can give or send them a printed sheet explaining the procedure. Students should also become aware of their breathing patterns and focus on breathing properly. The following is an overview of what students need to focus on before the session.

1. Detoxification

When the body is full of toxins it is impossible for the organs to function properly. By releasing toxicity and tension, more free flowing energy is available to balance and heal the organs.

In order to prepare their body for the treatment, two or three days prior to the session students should drink plenty of water and follow a special diet, eating only the following:

1. Brown rice (to carry out poisons from the blood).
2. Congee (thin rice soup) made with six parts filtered water to one part organic rice,
3. Vegetable soup. It may be seasoned with a bit of organic chicken, but the chicken should not be eaten.
4. Juice from green vegetables and leaves (i.e. spinach), which are naturally rich in chlorophyll.
5. Fresh, natural fruit and vegetable juice.

2. Cleaning the Colon

When the colon is clogged, the body becomes more acid and reabsorbs toxins intended to be eliminated. After one day of stagnation, the large intestines send the toxins back for storage, causing discomfort and pain.

For CNT treatment to be successful the colon must be clean, otherwise you simply massage past stool in the large and small intestines. Some people can carry many pounds of impacted fecal matter and many unfriendly bacteria in the colon. A great deal of sick energy can accumulate in old, putrefied stool. My teacher would never do Chi Nei Tsang on someone whose colon was not clean.

Colonics can be very helpful in moving out old mucus, gas and hard impacted fecal matter, and they also help restore proper peristaltic action of the intestines. Parasites can be eliminated with colonic irrigation and the use of fresh raw organic garlic cloves ground and filtered into the water (cooking garlic even slightly eliminates its detoxifying and antiparasitic properties).

To support the colonic cleansing it is good to massage the sigmoid colon in the lower left quadrant, then the descending colon, the two upper flexures in the corners under the spleen and liver, the transverse colon and finally the ascending colon and ileocecal valve. (For a more detailed explanation, refer to the CNT I book.)

To release and facilitate the movement of waste through the intestines while doing a colonic treatment it is good to take a teaspoon of psyllium seed husks and a tablespoon of bentonite mixed in a glass of room temperature water (8 ounces), and then drink another glass of water.

It is good to cleanse the colon two or three times per year and after periods of travel or dietary excess. In addition to many well-trained, competent colon therapists, home colonic units with slant boards are now available. At Tao Garden, our training center in Chiang Mai, Thailand, where there is plenty of fresh air, filtered water and sunshine, there is a special seven-day cleansing program.

3. Importance of Breathing Properly

The way we breathe is the way we feel. It reflects on the way we stand and move and how we perceive ourselves in the world. Most people have a habit of not breathing deeply, fully inhaling and exhaling, especially during periods of stress.

By blocking our breath, we block our access to feelings. We protect ourselves from experiencing certain feelings, and these become trapped energy in the organs generating imbalances and wind problems. Getting sick is the way our body draws our attention to the blocked and neglected organs. As we breathe into them, we release the winds and emotions that are trapped inside.

Fig. 1.5 Abdominal Breathing

Breathing appropriately means using the diaphragm. Relax the chest and breathe in deeply drawing the air into the abdomen, feeling it expand in all directions (front, back and sides) and expel the breath by drawing the abdomen up, squeezing in on all sides of the abdomen and breathing out through the nose. (Fig. 1.5) In cases of hernia, asthma, heart attack and strokes, proper breathing allows the wind to move out.

The Tao Yin exercises from the Universal Tao series (now available in book and video) are very helpful to teach students to breathe deeply into the lower abdomen and progressively feel the breath expand upwards, filling the entire lungs as the diaphragm moves down.

Deep Belly Laughing

Deep belly laughing is the best form of breath work. Laughing from the abdomen 4-5 times per day stimulates the intestines to move waste out and promotes the circulation of blood and lymphatic, eliminating energy stagnation. Also, as we move from the sympathetic to parasympathetic system with laughter, the blood becomes more alkaline.

Laughter stimulates a healing set of brain chemicals, and fosters self-loving, joyous feelings. Dr. Bernie Siegel's approach to self-healing through laughter shows that people have healed themselves from serious illnesses with laughing therapy.

Fig. 1.6 Laughing Practice

In a harmonious way, Cosmic Healing is also an effective deterrent to absorbing negative Chi because it focuses on using external energies for healing and not your own energy.

Contraindications for Treatment

Before treatment it is important to interview your student carefully so that you can ascertain whether or not a Karsai Nei Tsang treatment is appropriate. Karsai Nei Tsang is contraindicated for women who use an intrauterine device for birth control (IUD) and for pregnant women. It is also contraindicated for anyone with venereal disease. People with high blood pressure, heart disease, cancer or generally weak constitutions need to first consult with a physician and then proceed cautiously.

Chapter II
Refining your Chi Nei Tsang Skills

Karsai Nei Tsang is an advanced practice and it requires a high degree of sensitivity on the part of the practitioner. It is an absolute requirement for practitioners to have practiced Chi Nei Tsang I and II for a number of years before studying and applying the techniques of Karsai Nei Tsang.

What exactly are the gifts of an effective healer? On the following pages you will be introduced to the individual elements that when synthesized and integrated make a great healer.

Inner Cultivation

There is a wise saying that states: we can only help others to heal themselves to the extent that we have healed ourselves. This is the primary reason why developing your own personal spiritual and healing practice is so important.

Create an Open Hearted Healing Space

Fig. 2.1 Opening your Heart

It is important to let go of your personal agenda for all healing sessions. Ground yourself to the earth forces and open your heart to the unconditional love of the universe. Realize that you are not the healer but a facilitator for healing. Let yourself be guided by the healing process. Sometimes healers just work from a routine. It is important to have the sensitivity to know where you need to focus more and when to introduce new elements. For example, when you find an area of the body that is highly sensitive and tight, do you automatically just press in or do you ask the area what it needs in order to release? Perhaps this area needs a softer approach and to be contacted in just a certain way. Do you dialogue with your student to see what emotion might be hiding out in this area? Do you wait and give room for your student to tune in and feel their feelings? Move through each session with these questions and let yourself be guided by the needs of the moment. The healing process may shape your sessions in ways your monkey mind would not have thought of. Trust this guidance and you will be surprised by the wisdom of the healing process.

Connect to the Forces of Heaven and Earth

As a preparation for every session it is of primary importance to connect to the external Chi emanating from heaven and earth. This ability is very beneficial for self-healing and is essential for healing others. If you do not connect to some source of external energy when healing others, you will draw upon your own personal reservoirs. Our personal Chi is limited by nature, and can easily become depleted if we give it away too freely.

Mastering your Awareness of Chi

Understanding the nature of Chi and being able to distinguish its positive and negative qualities is of the utmost importance. Without a clear working knowledge of Chi, the practitioners of Chi Nei Tsang have no means of protecting their own bodies and energies from the negative influences of others. They also may find themselves giving away more energy than they can spare. Becoming a master in detecting the subtleties of chi will greatly enhance the effectiveness of your sessions.

A. In the Universal Tao system, the first goal is to learn to conserve our Chi. When a battery is totally drained it is harder to charge; money makes money, Chi makes Chi. Conservation of Chi will help gain more Chi. To have more Chi we first need to maintain control of the gates through which energy normally leaks out and unwittingly drains our life force.

We leak energy:
- through our reproductive system
- through negative emotions
- through constantly turning our senses outward

Without knowing how to conserve the Chi that we already have, what is the point of acquiring more?

B. We learn to balance our Chi; that is, we seek to keep a smooth and balanced flow of energy moving throughout the whole body. If our energy is imbalanced, we may have too much energy in some places and not enough in others; we may also be too yang or too yin. We may have excess or deficient heat, cold, damp or dryness. This imbalanced energy tends to make us go to extremes.

C. We learn to transform our Chi into more beneficial energies. For example, through the Taoist Sexual Chi Kung practices taught in the Universal Tao (the course known as Healing Love through the Tao), we can transform sexual energy back into basic life force Chi. Through other practices (such as the Inner Smile, the Six Healing Sounds, and Fusion of the Five Elements) we learn to transform negative emotional Chi into positive virtuous Chi. Thus Chi is not only the foundation of our health; it is also the basis of spiritual development in the Tao.

D. Once we have accomplished the three previous phases of mastering Chi, we then learn to cultivate Chi. Chi pervades all of heaven, earth and nature. In the Universal Tao workshops students learn time tested ways to tap into these unlimited and transpersonal reservoirs of Chi and greatly expand the amount of available energy. It is very important to master first the stages of conservation, balance and transformation before emphasizing the cultivation of Chi. Otherwise we may waste the energy we bring in, or we may inadvertently amplify the imbalanced or negative energies that we have not yet learned to bring under control.

E. Finally, we can learn to extend our mind to tap into the vast Chi of nature, cosmic particles and the universe. We learn to heal our body, mind and spirit and to heal other people. The Cosmic Healing Chi Kung practice of the Universal Tao sensitizes your hands to the feeling and movement of Chi. It uses the mind-eye power to absorb cosmic Chi into the palm and crown and to send it out through the hands and beyond.

Develop Sensitivity in your Hands

Practice the art of seeing with your hands. Learning to feel specific blockages will come with time and experience. Practice your sensitivity by observing changes in temperature, density, lack of movement, too little or too much chi, or perhaps you will see colors and images as you work. Sometimes it is easier to feel a restriction or a blockage of chi by taking your hands 5-6 centimeters off the body and scanning for energy changes. Remember to empty your mind down to your lower Tan Tien and sense with your abdominal brain. The mind brain is not the best tool for feeling the subtleness of chi blockages.

Sensing Sedimentation,Knots and Tangles

Sedimentation

These are toxin settlements under the skin. When you lightly touch you will feel sand like deposits there. Gradually use the fingers and circulate over the area slowly dissolving the toxin settlements. When you get to a deeper level, you might have the same sensation in particular organs which have sedimentation and blockages. With a one finger technique you can slowly dissolve the settlements.

Knots

As knots and tensions in the body grow, they build up pressure against the nerves coming out of the spine. Nerves do not tense up: muscles tense up. The nerves just transmit information. When one is subjected to stress, whether through anger, illness, or fear, the sympathetic nervous system is stimulated, causing contraction in the muscular system. As a result, the muscles, nerves, lymphatic system, and blood vessels contract into knots. Sometimes the knots can feel like small plums. It is important to move past the surface tension to dissolve the “seed” knot inside. These knots pull on other areas of the body, causing contraction and pain. (Fig. 2.2)

Fig. 2.2 A knot in the abdomen can cause pain in distant areas of the body by pulling and creating tension.

Dissolving Knots

If an area is especially knotted and tight, do not first work directly on the knot. Instead, find an area that is loose and relaxed and work there. Extend the relaxed area to surround the area of the knots with relaxed tissues. By the time you get to the knot, the area won’t be as painful for the contracted area will have relaxed.

(1) Ask your student to tell you where there is any discomfort. Observe the face of the student since it will reveal the painful or uncomfortable condition.

(2) Press down gently on the knot and spiral. You may start by using the palm, then the heel of the palm, then three fingers, then two fingers, then one finger. This is not a rule, however. You can start with two fingers and go to one finger. You will discover a personal technique after having worked on several people.

(3) The process of clearing knots can continue after the session has finished. Finish by teaching the student how to do their homework.

Tangles

Tangles occur more deeply than knots. Tangles may consist of nerves, blood and lymphatic vessels and tendons that are twisted together. (Fig. 2.3) They may have lymphatic nodes and fatty tissue inside them. Tangles, in part, may be composed of small layers of connective tissue that are growing all over the organs, holding them in place. This tissue should be supple, and the organs should be able to float and move. When the connective tissues get tangled and become rigid, they hold the organs very tight.

The less movement in the tissues, the tighter they will be held. The important work here is to make the connective tissues stronger by stretching them and moving them around.

Fig. 2.3 Tangle of Nerve, Arteries, and the Lymphatic System

Dissolving Tangles

a. Loosen the whole abdomen. Practice skin detoxification. Relax any knots.
b. Work at the edge of the tangle. The tangles can feel like a big ball of yarn with a head and a tail. Work on the edges of it until you feel it start to unravel.
c. When it starts to unravel, work toward the center and untangle it.
d. Be very patient. It could take weeks to attain successful results. Assign homework, and advise the student not to drink coffee. Coffee tightens the abdomen.

Differentiating Knots and Tangles

Knots are usually surface blockages that can appear as thickened or lumpy areas. They entangle with the superficial fasciae, lymphatic system, small nerves, and capillary beds. Tangles occur more deeply than knots and involve the larger structures of nerves, lymphatic system, tendons, muscles, arteries, veins, fasciae, and the organ systems and their energies. A light touch when doing KNT will keep you in contact with the knots, while a heavier touch will keep you in contact with the tangles. With a little practice you can feel the size and texture of the tissues on both levels.

Untangling Nerves

Freeing a tangle of nerves allows the blood and Chi to flow freely. (Fig. 2.4) Numbness occurs where there is a tangle of nerves that does not permit the blood to flow. Feel for such a tangle and first work the tangled nerve upward away from the navel. If the condition does not change, work in the opposite direction. (Fig. 2.5)

When you listen and become sensitive to the tissues of your student's body you will receive information on how best to release the blockage. Following are different massage techniques for releasing the knots, tangles, calcifications and sediments in the tissues of the body.

Normal Ramification of Nerves from the Spinal Cord.

Abdomen Ramification of Nerves from the Spinal Cord.

Fig. 2.4 Nerves can get tangled.

First work the knot upward, away from the navel.

If the condition of the knot does not change, work downward toward the navel.

Fig. 2.5 Working on Knots

1. Spiraling Technique

The Spiraling Technique is the main technique for releasing the blockages. Gently use both hands on the abdomen to loosen the tissues. Begin by massaging with the thumbs, finger, or fingers together in small, tight, clockwise circular motions. (Figs. 2.6-2.7) The sequence for each point is to press in, spiral, and loosen the skin. Continue to create tight, clockwise circles outward from the previous points you have worked on.

If your student's abdomen is tense, nervous, hot, hard, and too Yang, this means there is excessive energy and you should drain some off. Spiral counterclockwise to withdraw the energy. Use your concentration. Ask the energy to leave. Direct it into the Microcosmic Orbit, where it can be circulated and stored safely in the Navel Center. You can also direct it to go into the Navel Center.

If the abdomen is cold, soft, weak, sick, and too Yin, this means that there is deficient energy. Spiral clockwise to add energy. Concentrate to direct some of your energy to pass from your fingertips into the student's abdomen, to help warm the area.

When you finish the finger spiraling technique, apply the following hand techniques. You will become very familiar with these techniques, for they are used repeatedly.

b. Use Four Fingers

c. Use a Single Finger

Fig. 2.6 Spiraling Technique: Use the (a) thumbs, (b) fingers, or (c) one finger to press in, spiral, and loosen the toxins locked in the skin.

Fig. 2.7 Create tight spirals. Move in clockwise circles beginning at the navel; gradually spiral out toward the perimeter of the abdomen.

2. Scooping Technique

With your fingers together, press inwardly and scoop in, or press downward and scoop out. There are many variations to the direction and use of this technique. (Figs. 2.8, 2.9, and 2.10)

Fig. 2.8 Pushing with the Palm-Heels and Scooping with the fingertips

Fig. 2.9 Scooping with Two Hands

Fig. 2.10 Scooping with One Hand

3. Rocking Technique

Use all the fingers to hold the area of blockage while rocking forward and back. (Fig 2.11)

Fig. 2.11 Rocking

4. Kneading Technique

Use all the fingers of both hands to scoop up the area of restriction. Follow by pressing with the heels of the palms into the area as though you were kneading a loaf of bread. (Fig. 2.12)

Fig. 2.12 Kneading

5. Shaking Technique

Use either the index or middle finger to press on the knot or problem area. Move the finger quickly up and down or from side to side. Use two or three fingers to cover a larger area. (Fig. 2.13)

Fig. 2.13 Shaking

6. Patting Technique

Pat around the navel and the entire abdominal area with the fingers and with a soft, open palm. (Fig. 2.14) (Patting is generally used to finish a CNT session.)

Fig. 2.14 Patting

7. Elbow Press

Remember, if you are working on someone who is very large or very muscular, sometimes the only way you can have an effect is to use you elbow. Press straight down or spiral in gently with your elbow.

Fig. 2.15 Elbow Press

Root to the Earth while you work

An important part of not draining your energy reserves is to stay aware of your body mechanics while working on your student. Be familiar with the practice of Iron Shirt and while you are working place your body in a modified Iron Shirt position that is suitable for the movements that you are making. This is very important for maintaining the health of your joints. It is especially important to pull back your Ming Men point while you work because this gives you added protection from picking up the negative energies of your student. There is a high degree of burn out with all kinds of body workers because they use their muscles rather than the power from their tendons and bones. If you use good body mechanics and combine this with connecting to the earth and universal forces you will be able to perform massage for a very long time.

Have a working Knowledge of Anatomy

It is necessary to have a working knowledge of the internal organs and their functions: the lymphatic, circulatory, and nervous systems, the energy channels, the muscles and fasciae (connective tissues), and the interrelationships among all of these facets of the body.

Be familiar with the body's energy channels

Become familiar with the energy meridian lines of the body, the acupuncture points and the special Chi Nei Tsang treatment points covered in Chi Nei Tsang I. Knowing your energy anatomy will enable you to have a global awareness of your student's whole physical and energy bodies.

Understand the Relations of Emotions with the Internal Organs

We store our unresolved emotions in our bodies. When we have feelings and just let them go there is no trace left in the body. But when we hold onto our feelings they become emotions and there becomes a habitual physical contraction that is stored in the body. When this blockage is released in the body there can be a return of the original emotions. As a practitioner it is important to be aware that your student might need help in processing these emotions so they can let them go. Giving them this chance will help them to open up and release both physically and emotionally.

Understand the Inseparable Relationship between Sexual Energy and the Human Experience

With Karsai Nei Tsang you are working with the genital area. This is an area where a particularly high number of emotions are stored. These emotions can come from potty training, shame about the genitals (pudenda, the Latin word for genitals also means shame), pain from traumatic sexual experiences and the disconnection from the genital area that is so prevalent in many cultures. As a practitioner when you touch this area be aware of these connections. In addition to stored emotions, any touch in this area is very intimate and makes us very vulnerable. Keep all these considerations in mind and approach Karsai massage with extra sensitivity.

Chapter III
Opening the Abdomen and the Sexual Palace

Genital massage is practiced with a mixture of sesame oil, Citronella oil and coconut oil. It is important for the practitioner to wear latex gloves as a precaution against sexual transmitted disease.

The beginning sequence of techniques for Karsai Nei Tsang is the same as it is in a Chi Nei Tsang session. It is important to open the gates and clear out the winds in the abdomen at the beginning of every session. This will release the tension blockages and sedimentation in the organ veins on the abdomen area so when the genital area is worked on the circulation of the genitals may freely flow. It is extremely important that these preliminary techniques be successfully applied before proceeding further.

Techniques 1 through 3 are performed with the practitioner sitting or standing to the side of the student. The student is lying in a supine position.

Technique 1
Opening the Abdomen

Fig. 3.1 Become familiar with the anatomy of the abdominal area.

A. With your fingers together and using the full palm of your hand, scoop first with one hand following the perimeter of the abdomen. Follow with your other hand moving from the lower right abdominal quadrant to the upper right quadrant, over to the upper left quadrant and down to the lower left quadrant. As you move your hands over the large intestine feel for any blockages and chi stagnation. With your yi (mind, eye and heart power), Tan Tien and universe connection focus on releasing the stagnations and restoring a healthy flow of chi. (Fig. 3.2-3.3)

Fig. 3.2 Making Circular Massage Movements

Fig. 3.3 Opening the Abdomen, and feel with hand for settlement in the abdominal.

B. Stand to the right side of your student and directly face the abdomen. Reach across to the left side and use your finger pads of both hands to pull up on the descending colon. With the palms of your hands push in on the ascending colon and massage it towards the midline of the abdomen. Repeat this movement making a rhythmical motion, pulling the left side of the abdomen toward you as you then push the right side of the abdomen away from you. Work with this motion on the full length of the abdomen. (Fig. 3.4)

Fig. 3.4 Kneading the Abdomen from Side to Side

Technique 2
Releasing Specific Blockages

Use both thumbs, press down to the area that you feel by hand in hand stimulation. The sedimenation will feel like sand or small petals. The hand stimulation will make them dissolve. Then place one hand over your other hand with your fingers together and slowly press your hands in to the depth of the restriction. Hold your pressure directly on the restriction until you feel a softening and a return of chi flow. You may also move your fingers in small circles directly into the restriction, slowly breaking up any stagnation. (Fig. 3.5)

Fig. 3.5 Releasing Specific Blockages

Technique 3
Opening the Wind Gates

Fig. 3.6 Sequence for releasing the blockage and sedimentation on the Pakua

Place your left hand over your right hand and place your right fingers directly below the navel. Press in with your finger pads to the level of tension and then pull slightly away from the navel. Hold this pressure until you feel a softening of the tissues under your fingers. Continue to work around the navel, working in the order of the Pakua symbol. This will discharge the tension from the abdomen, release tight nerves and reestablish the healthy circulation of blood and lymphatic flow. (Fig. 3.6-3.7)

For more information on opening the gates around the navel refer to the Chi Nei Tsang I and II books.

Fig. 3.7 Opening the Wind Gates

Techniques 4 through 8 are performed with the student lying supine on the massage table and the practitioner sitting cross legged on the table at the base of the student's pelvis. The student rests her legs over the practitioner's bent knees.

Technique 4
Releasing the Aorta and Interior Vena Cava

Fig. 3.8 Aorta and Interior Vena Cava

Place one hand over the other hand with your fingers together and press under the navel and find the aorta which is pulsing and interior vena cava with your hands flat and at a slight angle. Press in and then slightly down with sensitive firmness. Feel any blockages and tangles in the aorta and vena cava and slowly use force to lightly press to break the sedimentation. When you feel a blockage, hold the pressure longer or make small circles with your finger pads over the restriction. When you feel the tissues releasing, move your hands a few centimeters down towards the pubic area and repeat following the aorta and interior vena cava. Continue pressing and releasing until you reach the pubic bone. (Fig. 3.8-3.9) and start again from the solar plexus down to the navel.

Fig. 3.8 Pressing out the Restrictions in the Aorta and Inferior Vena Cava.

Technique 5
Releasing the Energy Meridians Lines

Fig. 3.9 Energy Meridians Lines: Karsai I and II

A. Energy Meridians Lines Karsai I and II

– Karsai I starts at the navel. It extends from the navel and runs down to the urethra. Karsai II starts from the navel and extends down to the anus. These two energy meridians lines are important meridians for energizing and improving the circulation of the genitals. They are also indicated for treating frequent urination, female infertility, irregular menstruation and uterine bleeding. (Fig. 3.9)

Treatment for Karsai I and II - Place your right hand over your left hand with your fingers together and press your hands below the navel. Push in and slightly pull down toward the pubic bone. Hold the pressure until you feel a release such as a softening, a return of energy, a warming sensation, etc. Repeat, each time moving your hands down a few centimeters until you have worked your way down to the pubic bone. (Fig. 3.10)

Fig. 3.10 Releasing the Energy Meridians Lines: Karsai I and II

Fig. 3.11 Energy Meridians Lines: Karsai III and IV

B. Energy Meridians Lines Karsai III and IV - These are identical meridians, one for each side of the body. They start on the insides of the feet, run up the insides of the legs, cross the midline of the inguinal ligaments and then cross the lower abdomen on a diagonal line, ending at the navel. Releasing these meridians is also very effective for energizing and improving the circulation of the genitals. Treating these energy meridians lines is indicated for diseases of the Urogenital system. (Fig. 3.11)

Treatment for Karsai III and IV - Place your left hand over your right hand with your fingers together and press your hands below the navel. Push in and slightly pull down at a 45 degree angle toward the midline of the inguinal ligament. Hold the pressure until you feel a release. Repeat, each time moving your hands down a few centimeters until you have worked your way down to the inguinal ligament. (Fig. 3.12)

Fig. 3.12 Releasing the Energy Meridians Lines: Karsai III and IV

Technique 6
Releasing the Psoas Muscles

It is important to work on the psoas because of its close relationship to the kidneys, sexual energy, solar plexus, nerves and many blood vessel in this area. When the psoas is held in contraction this disrupts the free flow of sexual energy. (Fig. 3.13)

Fig. 3.13 Become familiar with the Psoas Muscles.

With your fingers together and using the pads of your fingers press deeply into the area of the psoas. If you are unsure whether you are on the psoas you can help your student to raise the same sided knee and bring it to his or her chest. Ask her/him to rotate the leg and move it back and forth as you search for the psoas. The psoas muscle is engaged by this movement of the knee and leg and this movement will help you to find it. When you feel the psoas contract, press your finger pads down to the depth of the psoas and line your fingers up on the length of the psoas. Continue pressing down and feel for any excessive contractions. You may also feel a spiraling contraction of the psoas. When there has been excessive fear, the psoas often responds by contracting with a spiraling force. Maintain your deep pressure and slowly move the pads of your fingers in a lateral direction, unwinding the spiraling force and tension of the psoas. Continue with this pressure and lateral movement, slowly working the full length of the psoas. (Fig. 3.14)

Fig. 3.14 Releasing the Psoas Muscles

Technique 7
Massaging around the Iliac Crest

Fig. 3.15 Iliac Crest and Iliacus Muscles

The iliacus muscle joins the psoas muscle in the lateral wall of the pelvis to insert onto the lesser trochanter of the femur. The iliopsoas is the most powerful flexor of the leg at the hip joint and when this muscle is held in flexion it disrupts the circulation and flow of energy in the genital area. (Fig. 3.15)

Press with your right thumb into the inside curve of the anterior, superior iliac spine (the pelvic crest). Place the rest of your right hand around the back side of the pelvis for stabilization. Move your right thumb into the inside curve and follow the edge of the ileum massaging the ligaments attached to the iliacus and the iliacus muscle. Feel for a softening and an increase of space in this area. (Fig. 3.16)

Fig. 3.16 Massaging the Iliacus Muscle and Iliac crest

Technique 8
Balancing and Smoothing out the Tissues

This is an important movement to make after working specifically on the knots, tangles, sedimentation and deep congestion. After you finish working an area in detail use your palms and fingers to gently smooth out the skin and tissues. Make sweeping motions moving your hands up the midline and back down the outside edges of the lower abdomen. Then you can reverse and move your hands up the outsides and back down the midline to the pubic bone. It is good to be creative and let yourself get a sense of what the tissues need to integrate the deeper work. With these integrating movements you are letting your student's body, mind, emotions, and spirit feel reassured and safe. This will assist them in releasing the blockages. (Fig. 3.17)

Fig. 3.17 Balancing and Smoothing out the Tissues

Massaging the Sexual Palace

Place your two hands side by side with your fingers together. Press into the lower abdomen above pubic bone, and make small circular movements, moving with the pads of your fingers up, around and down. Work from the right side over to the left side, from the area under the small intestines all the way down to the pubic bone. Feel for any congestion and knots. When you feel a restriction you can pause and press with more intention, circle more directly into the restriction. You can ask your student to breathe into the restriction and upon exhalation assist you with the release. When the superficial layer is released and the healthy flow of chi has returned, you can repeat this sequence, gently moving your fingers deeper. In this deeper layer you can access the tangles of the nerves and the deeper circulatory flow. As you move deeper, slow your movements down, the deeper you work the slower your movements need to go. (Fig. 3.18)

Fig. 3.18 Massaging the Sexual Palace

Technique 10
Releasing the Inguinal Ligament

Fig. 3.19 Inguinal Ligament

The circulation system of the genitals is greatly affected when the inguinal ligaments are overly contracted. When the inguinal ligaments are shortened from poor alignment or other causes the fascial tissue will also tighten and shorten. This will then affect the blood flow and lymphatic flow in the genitals. (Fig. 3.19)

Using the pads of your fingers or the outside of your thumb, press into the base of the inguinal ligament where it attaches at the pubic bone. Slowly move your hand up, feeling the ligament lengthen under your touch until you reach its attachment at the crest of the pelvis. Repeat this movement a few times until you feel the ligament soften and relax. (Fig. 3.20)

Fig. 3.20 Releasing the Inguinal Ligament

Technique 11
Lymphatic Drainage over the Inguinal Ligament

Fig. 3.21 Lymphatic Ducts and Vessels of the Lower Abdomen and Inguinal Canal

Place the flat of your fingers over the inguinal ligaments, working both sides at the same time. Make gentle pushing movements towards the navel. Feel the lymphatic ducts releasing and the lymphatic fluid flush to the deeper nodes. Repeat several times on both sides. (Fig. 3.22)

Chapter IV
Female Karsai Nei Tsang

Genital massage is especially helpful for most women. There are many internal physiological changes that start to take place in women at about middle age. These many changes create extra winds in the body and the potential increases for these winds to become trapped. Any past traumas from childbirth, physical injury, issues around sexuality, sexual abuse, etc, increase the likelihood of problems developing in this area. Also, with age, plaque can build up in the veins of the lower abdominal and genital areas and this exacerbates the problem of chi flow in the genitals even further. These massage techniques are a safe and effective way for women to address the health of their genitals. Female genital massage helps to keep the blood and lymphatic circulating freely, the genital organs aligned and healthy, the hormones balanced and the sexual energy flowing. It can help with problems such as menstrual cramps, PMS, frigidity and infertility.

It is important to keep this area open to permit the sexual energy to flow.

Sexual or reproductive energy is one of the primary energies. Any stagnation of energy in this area will have a corresponding emotional blockage. It is of ultimate importance to work in this area with sensitivity and take the amount of time necessary to help your student process her emotions. Always refer on to a psychotherapist if you feel your student needs professional help beyond your capabilities.

Note:* Do not work on women when menstruating, women using an IUD, pregnant women or women with venereal disease or cancer.

Technique 1
Releasing the Uterus

The uterus is connected within the body by ligaments that frequently tighten through internal congestion and require adjusting. The broad ligaments connect the uterus to the lateral walls of the internal pelvis. The round ligaments are thin cords that connect from the uterus, through the inguinal canal and finally merge with the labia majora. The uterosacral ligaments connect the uterus to the rectum and sacrum. When these ligaments become tight they pull the uterus out of alignment and the arterial, venous and lymphatic circulation of the pelvis and lower extremities will be adversely affected. The small intestines, large intestines, bladder and kidneys are closely associated with the uterus. It is important to regard the body as a whole functioning unit and remember that it is impossible to treat one part of the body in isolation. Always be careful to release the abdominal restrictions before working on the ovaries and uterus.

The uterus is shaped like an inverted pear and is located between the bladder and rectum. The uterus has three sections; the dome shaped portion is the fundus, the central portion is the body and the narrow part opening to the vagina is the cervix. The uterus has two fallopian tubes that connect to the ovaries; these tubes pass the ova to the uterus. These tubes often get twisted or tied together. (Fig. 4.1-4.2)

Fig. 4.1 Become familiar with the shape and position of the uterus.

Fig. 4.2 Be familiar with the Anatomy of the Lower Abdomen.

You can locate the uterus by asking your student to place her thumbs together at the navel and form a triangle with her fingers together. The index fingers will lie at the location of the uterus.

Fig. 4.3 Locating the Uterus

This technique is performed with the practitioner standing to the side of the student.

Place your eight fingers to one side of the uterus and your thumbs together on the opposite side. Press in with the flat of your fingers and pull the uterus toward your thumbs. Now press in your thumbs and push towards your fingers. Continue with this motion, kneading the uterus between your fingers and thumbs. Massage any tangles or twists and hold the uterus for a while in the center with both of your hands. Repeat on the other side. (Fig. 4.4)

Fig. 4.4 Releasing the Uterus

Techniques 2 through 6 are performed with the student lying supine on the massage table and the practitioner sitting cross legged on the table at the base of the student's pelvis. The student rests her legs over the practitioner's bent knees.

Technique 2
Releasing the Fallopian Tubes

Fig. 4.5 Be aware of the shape and position of the Fallopian Tubes.

With your fingers together apply gentle circular massage over the fallopian tubes. Start at the uterus and work you way over to the ovary. Notice if you feel any crimping or twisting in the tube. The fallopian tube and veins can become twisted. Slowly massage out the twists, knots and tangles. Repeat on the other side.

Fig. 4.6 Releasing the Fallopian Tubes

Technique 3
Releasing the Ovaries

The ovaries are paired glands, one on either side of the uterus, and are approximately the size and shape of an almond. (Fig. 4.7) They can usually be located by asking your student to place her thumbs in her navel and her fingers together forming a triangle. (Fig. 4.8) The ovaries are usually in the area where the tips of the little fingers lie, yet it is important to remember that every woman's anatomy is different. It is common for a woman's ovaries to gradually descend as she ages so it is good to suggest to your students to practice the Healing Love exercises from Master Chia's book, Cultivating Female Sexuality. These exercises tone the tendons, ligaments and muscles of the genital area and are very helpful for keeping the sexual organs healthy and in proper alignment. (Fig. 4.7)

Fig. 4.7 Be aware of the Shape and Position of the Ovaries.

Fig. 4.8 Locating the Ovaries

Always make sure that any congestion in the cecum and sigmoid colon is released before you work on the ovaries. It is important to first clear the space around the ovaries so you can easily reach them. Very often this is all that must be done to relieve the congestion or pain in the ovaries.

It is essential to be very sensitive when working on the ovaries. The ovaries are as sensitive for the female as the testicles are for the male, so massage them with great care. Healthy ovaries feel soft, like jelly.

Touch the ovaries and feel the energy flow. If the egg is just beginning to move the area will be warm. If ovulation is near they will be hot and after the cycle they will be cool.

Feel whether the ovaries are in their proper alignment. The two ovaries should be approximately even in height. If they are uneven in height, the high ovary will often drain down to the lower ovary. The higher ovary can then become weak, dry and tight. This can cause cramps during menstruation and make pregnancy difficult. The ovum may not leave or cause pain when it does leave. Also check to feel if one ovary is closer to the skin surface then the other.

Bring your awareness to the arteries and veins around the ovaries. It is possible that they have become tangled or knotted together with the ovaries. Patiently work out the tangles and knots with the massage.

These techniques can also be effective for removing ovarian cysts. Massage improves the circulation by breaking down the congested matter. If the hardness does not release, you should advise the student to have a medical check-up. If there is a medical problem, work only with the authorization of the doctor.

The following techniques will help to release the congestion in the ovaries and gradually return them to their proper position. Moving the ovaries to their correct position may be a slow process. It is best to do a little at a time and repeat the techniques over time.

Bring your fingers together and press into the ovary with your fingers flat and relaxed. Feel for any tightness in the connecting ligaments and congestion within the ovary. Make small circular movements and free the ligament connections to the ovary. Massage directly into the ovary and feel for the return of chi flow. Releasing congestion in the surrounding area can help the ovaries return to their proper place. Repeat on the other side. (Fig. 4.9)

Fig. 4.9 Releasing the Ovaries

Technique 4
Releasing the Urogenital Diaphragm

Fig. 4.10 Urogenital Diaphragm

This technique releases the blockages in the small muscles, ligaments, arteries, veins and nerves of the urogenital diaphragm. As you move your thumb along the outside of the labia majora you will be affecting the ischiocavernosus muscle, the broad ligament of the uterus, the edge of the bulbocaernosus muscle, and the perineal muscles. You will also be affecting the rich supply of arteries, nerves, fasciae and lymphatic vessels. (Fig. 4.10)

Bring your right hand over to the right labia majora and use the flat of your fingers to pull the labia over to the right side. With your left hand stabilizing the genitals to the left, use your right thumb to massage up the outside of the labium, along the ischiocavernosus muscle. When you feel knots, tangles or congestion, press in and pull the tissues to the crease of the leg. Repeat many times, until you feel the area soften and the chi flow return. Sometimes it is possible to feel a spiraling of the muscle or a tangling of the veins and nerves. Work slowly and carefully to bring space back to the different structures. Repeat many times, until you feel the area soften and the chi flow return. Repeat for the other side. (Fig. 4.11-4.12)

Fig. 4.11 Releasing the Urogenital Diaphragm

Fig. 4.12 Releasing the Urogenital Diaphragm

Technique 5
Releasing the Circulation of the Clitoris

Fig. 4.13 Be familiar with the Location of the Clitoris.

With your thumbs on either side of the clitoris press into the outsides of the clitoris and the inside surfaces of the labia majora. You are pressing into the upper end of the ischiocavernosus muscle and the veins and nerves that feed the clitoris. Feel for any spiraling in the muscle and tendon or tangling in the arteries and nerves. Press until you feel a positive response. It may take many massages to fully release the blockages in this area. (Fig. 4.14)

Fig. 4.14 Releasing the Circulation of the Clitoris

Technique 6
Releasing the Inner Thigh

Fig. 4.15 Muscles and Tendons of the Inner Thigh

Move a little away from your student and rotate her right leg exteriorly so that the inside of the right leg is exposed. In this position the gracilis and adductor muscles will contract and bulge out a bit. Place your right hand over the genitals and stabilize them to the right. Press in with your left thumb underneath the bulging muscles and to the outside of the labia majora and massage with a long stroke down the inside of the leg. Any tension in the genital area will also express itself down the inside of the legs. Repeat these movements until you feel a softening in the muscles and the leg release. Repeat on the other side. (Fig. 4.16)

Fig. 4.16 Using Long Strokes for the Inner Thigh

Technique 7
Lifting the Uterus

Fig. 4.17 Be familiar with the Position of the Uterus.

It is common for the uterus to drop down toward the pelvic floor with age and trauma. This is an effective technique for stretching the ligaments of the uterus and positively affecting its alignment. The student bend her knee up. The practitioner stands to the side of the student and facing her pelvis, shapes the hands like the bottom of a bowl and scoops up the underside of the uterus. Lift the uterus gently but firmly upwards toward the solar plexus. You will be more effective if you feel the path of movement as the ligaments will stretch with the least resistance. The movement of the uterus upwards is never perfectly linear. After repeating these movements a few times smooth out the tissues in the abdomen as in technique 9. (Fig. 4.18-4.19)

Fig. 4.18 Pressing on the Uterus

Fig. 4.19 Lifting the Uterus

Technique 8
Lifting the Ovaries

Fig. 4.20 Become familiar with the Position of the Ovaries.

Standing to the side of your student, reach across to the opposite side and scoop into the inside rim of the pelvis with the flat surface of your eight fingers. Gently lift the ovary and move it in the superior and medial position stretching it away from the pelvis. Be sensitive to the direction the tissues move and follow the path of least resistance. Move to the opposite side and repeat for the other ovary. (Fig. 4.21)

Fig. 4.21 Lifting the Ovaries

Spreading the Energy

Sit between your student's lower legs, stretch out your right or left leg and press the sole of your foot into her pelvic floor. Hold the pressure for two to three minutes. Ask your student to be aware of where she feels the chi flowing through her body; she might be more aware of the flow moving upwards or more aware of the flow downwards to her legs. This is a nice technique to finish with after the specific work on the genitals. (Fig. 4.22)

Fig. 4.22 Spreading the Energy

The following techniques are performed with the student prone on all fours, resting her weight on her knees and her elbows. The practitioner is sitting on the table facing her pelvis.

Technique 9
Massaging the Buttocks and Sacrum

At this point in the massage there has been much release of energy in the genitals and pelvic floor. It is important to clear the pathway for this energy to rise into the sacrum and continue along the microcosmic orbit. (Fig.4.23) This technique focuses on releasing the intricate pathway of nerves along the sacrum and buttocks as well as releasing the tension in the buttocks muscles so the sexual energy (jing chi) can move upwards and be transformed into healing energy. (see Healing Love book)

Fig. 4.23 Microcosmic Orbit

Using the full palms and fingers of your hands, start at the level of the ischial tuberosity and move your thumbs upwards along the edges of the sacrum with your fingers out to the sides of the buttocks. Bring your fingers and thumbs together as you reach the top of the pelvic crest and then sweep your hands down along the outsides of the pelvis. Repeat this movement a few times and feel for any restrictions. Pause when you feel a blockage and press in. If the restriction feels like it needs movement in order to release, make small circular movements. (Fig. 4.24)

Fig. 4.24 Massaging the Buttocks and Sacrum

Technique 11
Releasing and Balancing the Area of the Perineum

Fig. 4.25 Pelvic Floor

It is important for an individual's health to have good tonus in the muscles of the perineum / pelvic floor. When these muscles, the levator ani, coccygeus and transverse perineus are weak, the abdominal organs lose their support and an individual is drained of chi. Because of our sedentary lifestyles, it is a common occurrence for the muscles of the pelvic floor to be weak and inadequate. Releasing the tendons, ligaments, nerves and circulatory system of the pelvic floor will greatly improve the natural tonus of the muscles. It is very helpful if you advise your student to continue with pelvic floor muscle and tendon strengthening exercises. Please refer to Master Chia's Healing Love book for these exercises.

A. Between the Anus and Coccyx

With your left thumb press into the left side of the anococcygeal ligament, in the area between the coccyx and anus. Stabilize the right crest of the pelvis with your right hand so that the pressure you exert with your left thumb will not shift the position of the pelvis. Next, move your thumb directly under the coccyx and above the anus, and press into the anococcygeal ligament. Notice if there is any twisting or stagnation in the ligament. Now move your right thumb just to the right of the ligament and press in. Press these points until you feel a return of chi flow. And repeat on the other side. (Fig. 4.26)

Fig. 4.26 Releasing between the Anus and Coccyx

B. Anus

Fig. 4.27 Releasing the Anus

C. Ischial Tuberosity

Working both sides together, press your thumbs below and a little to the medial surface of the ischial tuberosity. Feel for any congestion, knots or tangles in the veins and nerves. Making small circle movements into the restriction will help the area release. (Fig. 4.28)

Fig. 4.28 Releasing the Tuberosities

Technique 12
Releasing the Sciatic Nerve

Fig. 4.29 Be familiar with the Path of the Sciatic Nerve.

Press your thumbs into the pathway of the sciatic nerve. (Fig. 4.30) Feel for any knots and tangles and make small circular movements to release the restrictions.

Fig. 4.30 Releasing the Sciatic Nerve

The following technique is performed with the student prone and the practitioner kneeling on the table facing the student's pelvis.

Technique 13
Forearm Press – Anus to Sacrum

Lean over the student's buttocks and place your forearm, ulna side down, along the midline from the anus to the sacrum. Rest your bodyweight down for two to three minutes and feel the energy flow up the spine. (Fig. 4.31)

Fig. 4.31 Releasing the Anus to the Sacrum

The following techniques are performed with the student crouching on all fours and the practitioner standing to the side.

Technique 14
Releasing the Circulation of the Pelvic Floor

Fig. 4.32 Be familiar with the Pathways of Blood Flow.

By working from the posterior direction it is possible to release the circulatory system of the pelvic floor. This technique affects the perineal vein, pudendal vein, hemorrhoidal vein, urethral vein and the vein of the clitoris.

Place your right middle finger to the outside of the right labia majora and move the flat of your finger forward, massaging along the crease of the leg and labia. Repeat this motion a few times and repeat on the opposite side. (Fig. 4.33)

Fig. 4.33 Improving the Blood Flow

Technique 15
Massaging the Lateral Edges of the Abdomen from Underneath

Stand to the right side of your student with your right side touching the massage table. With your right fingers flat, make a scooping motion into the medial surface of the pelvic crest and massage down to the pubic bone. Repeat this sweeping motion a few times and then move over to the opposite side and repeat on the other side. (Fig. 4.34)

Fig. 4.34 Massaging the Abdomen from Below

Lifting the Ovaries and Uterus from Underneath

Kneeling to the right side of your student, scoop the right ovary up with your right hand and gently pull upwards. Make this same scooping motion to lift the uterus, feeling the uterus drop into your hand as it becomes free from any posterior restrictions. Move to the other side and repeat for the left ovary. If the uterus feels more restricted on the left side, repeat the movement for the uterus while standing on the left side. (Fig. 4.35)

Fig. 4.35 Lifting the Ovaries and Uterus

The herbal massage is performed with the student supine and the practitioner standing to her side.

Herbal Packs – The herbal packs are important for soothing and cleansing the tissues after the massage. They will stimulate the blood and lymphatic flow to speed up the detoxification process after the genital massage.

These herbal packs are made from a special blend of Thai herbs. They are applied at a fairly warm temperature, to the tolerance of the student. They are shaped like a ball with extra material at one end so it is easy to hold them when they are hot.

Technique 17
Herbal Packs over the Abdomen

Press the herbal ball into the upper abdomen and make a fairly rapid circular motion over the skin. Use the whole ball, the bottom and all the sides to rotate the herbal ball over the skin. Work your way down to the pubic bone, being careful to reach to the sides of the abdomen. Spend extra time with the herbal ball in the lower abdomen where so much of the massage took place. (Fig. 4.36-4.37)

Fig. 4.36 Roll the Herbal Ball over the Abdomen.

Fig. 4.37 Rolling the Herbal Ball over the Abdomen.

Herbal Packs pressed into the Genitals.

Ask your student if the herbal ball is too hot before you press directly into the genitals. Press and hold. Hold for 15 seconds or so and then finish the massage by moving the herbal ball up and down from the anterior to posterior pelvic floor and back. Feel the energy move up through the central channel to the pineal gland. (Fig. 4.38)

Fig. 4.38 Roll the Herbal Ball over the Genitals.

Chapter V
Male Karsai Nei Tsang

As people age, the lower abdominal area often becomes quite congested. This expresses itself in the presence of toxins in the organs and blockage in the circulatory system. This buildup of toxicity and sedimentation in the veins and lymphatic vessels creates many problems for the genital area.

As the circulation slows down this inhibits the healthy exchange of nutrients and the cleansing of the toxins. When the circulatory system is congested male potency can be affected. The circulatory structures that are most affected are the inferior vena cava, and more specifically, the internal and external spermatic vessels, pudendal veins, perineal veins, urethral veins, deferential veins, testicular veins and the pampiniform plexus and the group of arteries flowing to the testicles. There are numerous lymphatic nodes in this region that need to stay open and flowing with lymphatic fluid. When the lymphatic system clots, the body's defense system is inefficient. The primary lymph vessels in the genital area include the superficial and deep inguinal nodes, external iliac nodes, cloquet's nodes, and the rich network of lymphatics in the prostate and testicles.

This increased toxicity and pressure also weighs heavily on the nerves. With any added pressure, pulling from knots and tangles from other nearby structures, excess heat, dampness, or cold winds, the nerves lose their ability to effectively communicate with the genitals. The nerve impulses will then travel very weakly and slowly and the genitals will lose their ability to respond in a healthy manner.

Technique 1
Releasing the Blood Supply to the Testicles and Penis

Fig. 5.1 Be familiar with the anatomy of the male genital area.

With your left hand lift the testicles and penis and stabilize them up and over to the left side. Place your right thumb on the lower right edge of the scrotal sac. Move your thumb upwards, following the edge of the scrotal sac and the crease of the leg. As you work, observe any deposits you feel in the veins. Pause when you feel a deposit and work this area with a small circular movement pressing into the restriction. Smooth out the area with long, lighter strokes before you move on to the next technique. (Fig. 5.2)

Fig. 5.2 Releasing the Blood Supply

Technique 2
Energizing the Prostate through the Perineum and Supine Position

Fig. 5.3 Be familiar with the Anatomy of the Perineum.

With your left hand lift the testicles and penis upwards and stabilize them away from the perineum. With the pad of your right middle finger push directly into the million dollar point until you feel the base of the prostate. Hold this pressure until you feel the prostate vitalized with chi. (Fig. 5.4)

Fig. 5.4 Energizing the Prostate through the Perineum

Technique 3
Releasing the Sedimentation in the Scrotal Sac

Fig. 5.5 Become familiar with the anatomy of the testicles.

This is an explanation of the testicle massage but it is highly advised that no one practice this technique without taking the Chi Nei Tsang course in Genital Massage. This following massage technique requires finely skilled hands because it is extremely easy to hurt your student and cause swelling of the testicles. This technique is only used on the superior boundary or the testicles. Do Not work on the sides of the testicles or the inferior border of the testicles. This can cause serious problems. The practitioner will sit in between the student's legs.

Place your eight fingers under the testicles and let the weight of the testicles rest into your hands. Place your left thumb between the two testicles, stabilizing the left testicle by pressing your left thumb down to meet your left fingers. Press down with your right thumb into the superior boundary of the right testicle holding the underside of the right testicle firm with your right fingers. Now start to search for sedimentations in the veins with your right thumb and fingers. You will feel the sediment as sand.You are looking for the veins that are just above the testicle. Press into the sediment and make small circular movements and focus on breaking up the sediment. Feel the sediment dissolve between your fingers and thumb. Continue searching for sediments in this area and patiently work them one by one. Now repeat this procedure for the left testicle. (Fig. 5.6)

Fig. 5.6 Releasing the Sedimentation in the Scrotal Sac

Technique 4
Smoothing out the Veins in the Upper Scrotal Sac

Fig. 5.7 Be familiar with the Veins in the Scrotal Sac.

Place your fingers under the scrotal sac supporting the testicles and place your thumbs on top of the scrotal sac and superior to the testicles. Gently move your thumbs along the veins in the scrotal sac to the base of the penis. Repeat this movement a few times balancing and smoothing out the chi flow. (Fig. 5.8)

Fig. 5.8 Smoothing out the Arteries

Technique 5
Stimulating the Circulation through the Scrotal Sac

Fig. 5.9 Be familiar with the veins and lymphatic nodes that supply the sexual organs.

This is another effective technique for stimulating the blood and lymphatic flow in the genital area. By working through the scrotal sac you can directly affect the lymphatic nodes, deferential veins, dorsal veins of the penis and the pampiniform plexus.

Move your middle finger through the top of the scrotal sac and to the side and base of the penis. You will feel that your finger is on top of the pubic bone. Sweep your finger from side to side, stimulating the circulation of the testicles and penis. If you find a restriction, pause and press into the restriction while you make small circular movements. (Fig. 5.10)

Fig. 5.10 Stimulating the Circulation through the Scrotal Sac

Technique 6
Testicle Rub

Fig. 5.11 Outer and Inner Anatomy of the Testicles

The purpose of this technique is to stimulate the circulation on the sides and lower edges of the testicles. It is important to be gentle yet firm with the testicles. Avoid all quick and sharp movements. Do not overly squeeze the testicles nor push in too hard.

With a firm yet sensitive touch wrap your left thumb and forefinger around the base of the scrotal sac and slightly rotate the testicles clockwise to the right. This will place the testicles in a small space at the bottom of the scrotal sac under a bit of tension. With the palm of your right hand rub in a circular motion, somewhat vigorously, all around the sides and base of the testicles. Repeat this movement, now using your right thumb and forefinger to encircle the base of the testicles and rotate the testicles counterclockwise to the left. Now use your left palm to massage. (Figs. 5.12-5.13)

Fig. 5.13 Rubbing the Testicles

Technique 7
Releasing the Inner Thigh

Fig. 5.14 Muscles and Tendons of the Inner Thigh

Move a little away from your student and rotate his right leg exteriorly so that the inside of the right leg is exposed. In this position the gracilis and adductor muscles will contract and bulge out a bit. Place your right hand over the genitals and stabilize them to the right. Press in with your left thumb underneath the bulging muscles and to the outside and massage with a long stroke down the inside of the leg. Any tension in the genital area will also express itself down the inside of the legs. Repeat these movements until you feel a softening in the muscles and the leg release. (Fig. 5.15)

Fig. 5.15 Using Long Strokes for the Inner Thigh

The following techniques are performed with the student prone on all fours, resting his weight on his knees and his elbows. The practitioner is sitting on the table facing his pelvis.

Technique 8
Massaging the Buttocks and Sacrum

At this point in the massage there has been much release of energy in the genitals and pelvic floor. It is important to clear the pathway for this energy to rise into the sacrum and continue along the microcosmic orbit. This technique focuses on releasing the intricate pathway of nerves along the sacrum and buttocks as well as releasing the tension in the buttocks muscles so the sexual energy (jing chi) can move upwards and be transformed into healing energy. (see Healing Love book)

Using the full palms and fingers of your hands, start at the level of the ischial tuberosities and move your thumbs upwards along the edges of the sacrum with your fingers out to the sides of the buttocks. Bring your fingers and thumbs together as you reach the top of the pelvic crest and then sweep your hands down along the outsides of the pelvis. Repeat this movement a few times and feel for any restrictions. When you feel a blockage pause and press in. If the restriction feels like it needs movement in order to release, make small circular movements. (Figs. 5.16-5.17)

Fig. 5.16 Massaging the Buttocks and Sacrum

Fig. 5.17 Massaging the Buttocks and Sacrum

Technique 9
Releasing and Balancing the Area of the Perineum

Fig. 5.18 Pelvic Floor

It is important for an individual's health to have good tonus in the muscles of the perineum and pelvic floor. These muscles are the levator ani, coccygeus and transverse perineus muscles. When they are weakened, the abdominal organs lose their support and an individual is drained of Chi. Because of our sedentary lifestyles, it is a common occurrence for the muscles of the pelvic floor to be weak and inadequate. Releasing the tendons, ligaments, nerves and circulatory system of the pelvic floor will greatly improve the natural tonus of the muscles. It is very helpful if you advise your student to continue with pelvic floor muscle and tendon strengthening exercises. Please refer to Master Chia's Healing Love books for these exercises.

A. Between the Anus and Coccyx

With your left thumb, press into the left side of the anococcygeal ligament, in the area between the coccyx and anus. Stabilize the right crest of the pelvis with your right hand so that the pressure you exert with your left thumb will not shift the position of the pelvis. Next, move your thumb directly under the coccyx and above the anus, and press into the anococcygeal ligament. Notice if there is any twisting or stagnation in the ligament. Now move your right thumb just to the right of the ligament and press in. Press these points until you feel a return of chi flow. (Fig. 5.19)

Fig. 5.19 Releasing between the Anus and Coccyx

B. Anus

Fig. 5.20 Releasing the Anus

C. Ischial Tuberosity

Working both sides together, press your thumbs below and a little to the medial surface of the ischial tuberosities. Feel for any congestion, knots or tangles in the veins and nerves. Making small circle movements into the restriction will help the area release. (Fig. 5.21)

Fig. 5.21 Releasing the Tuberosities

Technique 10
Releasing the Sciatic Nerve

Press your thumbs into the pathway of the sciatic nerve. Feel for any knots and tangles and make small circular movements to release the restrictions. (Fig. 5.23)

Fig. 5.23 Releasing the Sciatic Nerve

The following technique is performed with the student prone and the practitioner kneeling on the table facing the student's pelvis.

Technique 11
Forearm Press – Anus to Sacrum

Lean over the student's buttocks and place your forearm, ulna side down, along the midline from the anus to the sacrum. Rest your bodyweight down for two to three minutes and feel the energy flow up the spine. (Fig. 5.24)

Fig. 5.24 Releasing the Anus to the Sacrum

The following techniques are performed with the student crouching on all fours and the practitioner standing to the side.

Technique 12
Energizing the Prostate through the Perineum on all Fours

Fig. 5.25 Be familiar with the position of the prostate.

Stabilize the sacrum with your left hand and press your middle right finger directly into the million dollar point. The million dollar point is just in front of the anus and behind the perineum. Press in firmly until you feel you are in contact with the prostate. You can also press in with your thumb if this is easier for you. Press in and feel for any congestion. Release your pressure when you feel the prostate release and flow with energy. (Fig. 5.26)

Fig. 5.26 Energizing the Prostate

Technique 13
Releasing the Circulation of the Pelvic Floor

Fig. 5.27 Be familiar with the pathways of blood flow.

By working from the posterior direction it is possible to release the circulatory system of the pelvic floor. This technique affects the perineal vein, pudendal vein, hemorrhoidal vein, urethral vein and the vein of the penis. (Fig. 5.28)

Fig. 5.28 Improving the Blood Flow

Stabilize the sacrum with your left hand and bring the fingers of your right hand underneath the anus to the left side of the scrotal sac. Slide your fingers down the left side of the scrotal sac and forward along the crease of the leg and testicles. Repeat this motion a few times and repeat on the opposite side.

Repeat Technique 8 - Repeat technique 8 to smooth out and integrate the releases. Feel the energy move upwards along the spinal column.

Technique 14
Massaging the Lateral Edges of the Abdomen from Underneath

Stand to the right side of your student with your right side touching the massage table. Place your right hand over the lumbar vertebra while the finger pads of your left hand scoop under the lower ribs and massage down the ascending colon and down to the pubic bone. Repeat this sweeping motion a few times and then move over to the opposite side and repeat for the descending colon, across to sigmoid colon. (Fig. 5.29)

Fig. 5.29 Massaging the Abdomen from Below

Technique 15
Massaging the Inguinal Ligament from Underneath

Stand to the right of your student and face their right leg. Place your left hand around the outside of the thigh and with the finger pads of your right hand massage down the length of the inguinal ligament. Repeat this movement a few times and then treat the other side.

Fig. 5.30 Massaging the Inguinal Ligament

Herbal Packs – The herbal packs are important for soothing and cleansing the tissues after the massage. They will stimulate the blood and lymphatic flow to speed up the detoxification process after the genital massage.

These herbal packs are made from a special blend of Thai herbs. They are applied at a fairly warm temperature, to the tolerance of the student. They are shaped like a ball with extra material at one end so it is easy to hold them when they are hot.

Technique 16
Herbal Packs over the Abdomen

Press the herbal ball into the upper abdomen and make a fairly rapid circular motion over the skin. Use the whole ball, the bottom and all the sides to rotate the herbal ball over the skin. Work your way down to the pubic bone being careful to reach to the sides of the abdomen. Spend extra time with the herbal ball in the lower abdomen where so much of the massage took place.

Fig. 5.31 Roll the herbal ball over the abdomen.

Herbal Packs over the Genitals

Move the penis away from the testicles and then press the herbal ball on the top side of the testicles. Ask your student if the herbal ball is too hot before you press directly on the testicles. Hold for 15 seconds or so and then move the herbal ball to each side of the testicles. Press and hold. Finish the massage by moving the herbal ball to the base of the testicles and feel the energy move up through the central channel to the pineal gland. (Fig. 5.32)

Interviews

By Dennis Huntington

New Life: Rebecca (Retired Business Woman, 55)
Rebecca had suffered chronic vaginal pain as well as psychological confusion and emotional anguish towards her doctors, gynecologists and psychologists for twenty years since her operation after giving birth to her child. Those 'professionals' offered her superficial remedies and considered her continued complaints as being psychosomatic—without ever diagnosing the problem or giving her any relief for her painful physical condition. Yet after four sessions of Karsai Nei Tsang the results seemed like a miracle cure: the pain was gone! She feels that she has been given a new life. The following is her story.

Rebecca: Twenty years ago a few days after the birth of my son I had a very hard operation and they did something wrong. Nobody knows exactly, and later my doctor, my gynecologist, tried to find out what happened on that night in the hospital, but we never—we never—got the papers! Ever since then there has been something very wrong.

"I worked on this problem for many years with gynecologists, psychologists and with special gymnastics, called 'Hanken Gymnastic' in Germany. This gymnastics is especially good for exercises after birth, and for the vagina while breathe in and relaxing, and breathe out and relax. After the operation I felt weak for months. I could sit only in a special round cushion with a hole in the middle. One sits over the hole, so as to not have contact with the vagina. For months I couldn't sit on any normal chair. They hurt me in a way I really don't know and nothing seemed to help me.

I tried to tell my story to Khun Ni, (Khun Ni is the Karsai Nei Tsang therapist at the Universal Tao center, Tao Garden, in Thailand). She put her hands on me and said, "Oo-oo-h-h-h, pain, pain." And I said, "Yes, a lot of pain." Then I allowed her to go deeper. She did not go into my vagina but she did work around the area, where the blood circulation is and all the points that connect. I think that she found a lot of blockages. She worked there for some time. It hurt, and it brought up all those pictures from the operation and all that stuff from twenty years before. It was good for me that it was a woman because all the doctors for the operation and all the people in the hospital were men, except the midwife—but she was not really a nice person, I must say. She upset me in many ways. I felt like I could trust Khun Ni, so after this one session I agreed that I would have three more sessions of this special massage.

"The second massage was really hard. For the first session I had all my clothes on and for the second session I was naked. Really, I was surprised how painful the massage was. It was really painful; she really went into the pain and released the blockages. In the beginning when she was touching around my vagina, she explained to me that something was crossed. I think it was little veins or little muscles; I don't know. She showed me like this: fingers crossing. Then she worked on that area, and it was painful, of course. After the third massage, she said, 'OK now.'"

Rebecca: "Yes and the miracle was that when I had sex with my boyfriend afterwards there was no pain. Before the Karsai massage I always had a lot of pain with love making. It was always a little bit strange for me, and now I have this feeling that something is released. I will see in the future what will happen. I am very, very impressed, and I think, 'Thank heaven that she does this work and she knows it so well.' When I looked at her, she was always sitting with closed eyes, and she was really so in her work! I really have a lot of respect for it. I trust her totally, and this is a most important point. I was breathing, she was pressing. It was like giving birth, but in a good way. I felt safe; I felt really protected by her. "For me, it was what I was waiting for, for twenty years, to release pain that had become part of me for such a long time. This session was very special for me.

"The third session was easier; she didn't go back to those points. But then the last one was painful again because she went up to the joints on the hip and the muscles higher in the tummy. I still felt a little pain, until yesterday. Today I'm completely free after all this treatment. I feel very good with it. She said that I might have to come back in six months, a year or two to do it again. But, between now and then, I will see how it goes and how I feel—especially, if I am together with a man and have sex because that was always something painful for me. I'll really think about coming back for this reason, and to continue to feel good."

Interviewer: "That's a really meaningful story."

Rebecca: "Yeah, it has a lot of meaning for me, and I'm happy that I had the courage to do it—because I was really afraid to go back again after the first session. But, I knew how I always felt very sad and that in the recent years if I just talked to somebody about it, I was crying. All the tears were coming out because it touched me so deeply, and it was so painful. I think it's important because I'm very happy with the result. This was the main point for me in deciding to give you this interview—to help some other people who might go through the same hell I went in. Yeah, it's great. It's great to be back in life again."

Geoffrey (Retired Business Consultant, Body Worker,60)
I was surprised to notice that Karsai Nei Tsang is much broader than massage of the testes. It's a massage of the entire sexual area, the lower belly and the anal region. It works on the sedimentation deposits in the blood vessels there which inhibit good circulation. I have never found anybody who worked on that. I must say, it's a reasonably painful massage that she gives, but it is absolutely unique. I find her very sensitive and completely in tune with the body, and very effective for what she does. I feel that she really addresses the essential points.

This massage is a natural way of addressing any problems in the genital area. So far, I am quite happy with these treatments. It helps with the strength of erection and I feel more alive in that area.

Nerve Compression: Alexis (Nurse, 39)
Alexis is a Universal Tao instructor, and she also has considerable experience as a yoga instructor. She had a beautiful nine-month old daughter at the time of the massage. She sent the following interview response by email after returning home.

Alexis: "During my pregnancy, I developed Meralgia Paraesthetica in my left thigh. This condition is a symptom complex that includes numbness, paresthesia and pain in the antero-lateral thigh. The cause can be an entrapment neuropathy or a neuron of the lateral femoral cutaneous nerve.

"In my case it was the weight of my pregnancy that was causing the compression of the nerve. My condition continued even after delivery. I saw a neurosurgeon, and the treatment plan was wait and see, rather than surgery.

"Nine months later I was still experiencing numbness, reduced sensation and occasional pain over the entire left lateral aspect of the thigh, right down to the knee. At this time I was fortunate to be in Tao Garden. I booked to see Ms. Ni. During my first treatment, I felt my sensations returning to my thigh, and by the end of the treatment I had 80% normal sensations to my thigh.

"Needless to say I was extremely impressed and incredibly grateful to Ms. Ni. She is very capable and knew exactly where to work to release the nerve compression. I find her to be a highly competent practitioner."

Painful Intercourse: Marsha
(Massage Therapist, 35)

Marsha is a Universal Tao instructor and an experienced Chi Nei Tsang Massage practitioner with a classical massage background.

Marsha: "One of the things that I learned from receiving this massage is that there is more than one way to lift the uterus. Women have been studying how to do this; there are a couple of techniques out there. When a woman's uterus drops down, it puts pressure on her cervix which can cause painful intercourse. For example, women continue to collect negative energy by having sex and there is a build-up of negativity if you continue to have sex when it hurts. So, the most effective remedy is to lift the uterus so that the cervix is not so close to the vaginal canal. When the woman's cervix is low the man's penis will bump against the cervix during sex. This is very painful at the time, and afterwards you are sore for twenty-four hours. The resulting inflammation is just not good for you.

I find this massage different than the other uterus lifting techniques because rather than just lifting the uterus by digging under the pubic bone and lifting up, the practitioner may find where a tendon is knotted and too short so it is pulling the uterus down. There may be tendons connected to the pelvic bones that are constricted and pulling the uterus and the bladder down. So instead of just pulling up from the pubic bone, now we can untie the knots, tangles and twists in the ligaments that connect the hips and free the uterus itself. So, instead of just pulling the uterus up, the tendons and ligaments were released that were responsible for pulling the uterus down. This is huge, really huge!

"The other thing is that for women who have negative energy collected in their sexual organ region, we now have a respectful, gentle massage that works. We have a massage that works to free up this stuck chi that may have accumulated from any kind of negative sexual activity or any negative sexual thought. So, when you release a tendon, you release the negativity inside the tendon, we know this from Chi Nei Tsang I and II. Master Chia says that this is the missing piece and I agree! This is where sediment, both energetic and physical, settles. So for woman the release is both physical and emotional.

Interviewer: "Did you have new experiences in the massage?"

Marsha: "Yes. For me, I have many years of doing personal body-work—bodywork on myself—and also studying the Tao. So I knew what to expect, and a lot of the work had been done. But not all of it, and I could not seem to free up the area between the upper thigh and the top of the pubic bone. I could have worked it on my own—what I was lacking was an education. For example, and this is so important, in classic massage school they teach a technique called 'cross fiber.' So, instead of going along the length of the tendon, you find a knot and you go across the knot. Instead of going parallel to the fibers of the tendon you go perpendicular. In Karsai Nei Tsang, you massage along the line of the tendon very gently, repeatedly, and using intention. That's how you untie this very delicate tissue. This is very different from deep tissue massage.

"So, in my first appointment, I did feel some emotions, because someone was touching around my genital area. There's a certain amount of trust that a person must have, and if you don't have it, well, you could have some issues come up just from that. Then as things released over the course of the next twenty-four hours after my first session I experienced a lot physical toxins releasing, and I had pain physically. This was OK with me.

"When I came back two days later, Khun Ni said, "You are not ready yet. You are still swollen, and have inflammation and it looks like we broke up adhesions." And, I am sure I did because my tangled-up tendons had been there since I rode horses when I was eleven/twelve years old. I know that this kind of massage can bring about much emotional release but I didn't get the tears that some of my other woman friends experienced. I know that some women had very big releases. I think this was only because I had known for eight years that this was the worst area of icky stuff in my body. For me, it was very joyful because I finally found somebody sensitive enough and knowledgeable enough. These are two very important things in order to work the area effectively and efficiently.

"I think I had three treatments, and I now know what to do for myself—because I have to leave Khun Ni. So, I feel that she was repetitive enough so that I got it. Maybe not everything, but I have enough to get in there and start—with my new information—to start straightening my tendons. As a matter of fact, before she worked on me, I didn't understand that I needed to straighten my tendons. My groin had been just a rock—and I didn't know what to do with it. Now I have techniques to stretch and lengthen and pull and untie the knots. For me, the experience was life changing because, maybe in the next few months, I can no longer say that my groin is the most congested part of my body.

"One of the important points for me is the combination of sensitivity and knowledge. What this massage brings to us is new knowledge. We already have lots of techniques for lymphatic, for tendon and for muscle massage. This is a very clear, concise massage technique that does not veer off of its formula."

Interviewer: "it is important when you are moving sediment or other energetic blockages from the area that it has to have a place to go. So, as a component of the massage, she prepares the other areas so that when she activates the movement, then it has a place to go."

Marsha: "Yes. When I went for my last massage, she knew she needed to move a lot of stuff out. She took almost thirty minutes and opened up the lymphatics around the belly. You're right, she prepared my body. That's where the knowledge comes in. It is important to know about the body. You have to know there's a cluster of lymph nodes in the belly. Otherwise, you move stuff out and maybe the knees get stuck or something. Ha-ha-ha.

"Oh, yes, after my third massage, over the course of about five days, I went back to my room and lay down on my belly. I felt energy in the form of a tingle rise up from my groin and start to move up toward my head. The energy made it to my shoulders and there it dissipated a bit. Another experience I had after the massage was how much sexual energy it gave me! I had so much heat, and that heat lasted probably half a day. I had a build-up of energy that must have been stuck in the tendons, ligaments and skin. I had stored this heat, inappropriate heat, and I was sweating. This was one of the first things I experienced. Then, as I got healthier and the energy released, it felt light and bubbly and tingly."

Marsha: "It was nice. I think that for a woman to release this beautiful energy is so important. It feels like things start to flow. I would think this would benefit our skin, our hair, our mind, and our organs. This is what makes a woman really powerful, to be able to tap into this energy."

Mary (Mother, 33)

Mary was participating in Dr. Roy Martina's "Inner Power Zone" retreat in the summer at Tao Garden when she heard about the genital health massage.

Mary: "I thought it was done in a very skillful and sensitive way, which made it possible for me to really breathe into the areas and loosen up. For example, the pelvic floor—I really felt that she was able to loosen up the whole pelvic floor area. She works from all angles, and it's quite intimate, but she does it in a very professional way so it doesn't feel that she's intruding. I also liked very much that she worked all around. She works the front. She works the bottom. She works the back. She integrates this with working on the abdomen on the intestines, on the organs, on the inguinal area—on the ovaries, uterus, rectum. She works on the anus—around the anus almost, on the outside on the left and right and the side of the anus also—which was a new experience for me, but it felt really very good afterwards. Yeah, I really felt that there was an increase in circulation. I felt really that the breath and chi was filling-up the base, all the circuits or something. It was really a very good feeling after the sessions.

"It really felt like she released quite a few blockages: both in the abdomen and on the sacrum, and definitely on the pelvic floor—on the sides of the genitals, that group of muscles that constitutes the whole bottom of the torso and prevents the organs from falling down. It released tension for sure, also very good work in the inguinal area. I felt energy released. For sure, I felt the chi flow really much better into this area after the massage.

"I think a very important point is that it's called a genital massage, and it sounds very intimate, but it's really not very intimate. It's really very professional—it releases a very important area that you normally don't get worked on if you go to a massage therapist. I think this is very important. There is nothing sexual about it. It's really professional bodywork."

Anya (Scientist, 41)

Anya was a participant in the Universal Tao summer retreat. She had suffered from tension and pain in her legs, hips, lower back, shoulders and neck for many years. She had been wearing a platform shoe for twenty years to compensate for one leg being shorter than the other.

Anya: "I went to Khun Ni to have the genital massage, and then during the very first session she told me that my leg should be treated first before she would be able to do the genital massage because there was just so much tension in the leg, and it was affecting the genital area. There wasn't really a problem in the genital area; it was just affected by the leg."

Interviewer: "Many people have discovered through their experience with this massage that other areas are affected, and other areas affect the genital area. … This seems to be the case with you.

Anya: This was something I already knew: One leg was shorter than the other. So, she treated me for the difference in the length of the two legs. That was quite amazing because she put a lot of force into this—because it involved big muscles and big joints. I already had pain in my right hip for eight years. When I was jogging or doing sports I often got injured in my knee or ankle, and it had to do with the difference in the length of the legs. In two sessions, with her experience she adjusted the length in my legs. I don't know how she did it, but she did it. She made the legs the same length. In one or two sessions I was standing evenly on both legs. It was amazing. I threw away two pairs of shoes because one shoe had higher soles to make up for the difference in length. I bought myself new shoes in Chiang Mai. It was nice."

Interviewer: "And now you feel very comfortable with both legs equal?"

Anya: "Yes. Yes, it's really like a miracle. I always had these very tight muscles on the inside of the thigh. There was so much tension; you could feel them like little knots in different places along the muscle tissue. It's great to have the feeling that there is less tension in the muscles."

Interviewer: "So the whole leg has had a readjustment, a realignment or something, so that the muscles now are flexible."

Anya: "Yes, it was the tension of the muscles that made the hips rest at a different level. Now she has released the tension, It's not like the two legs are the same at this moment, but I'm making progress, and she gave me some exercises to take home. So, I have to take care not to get too much tension again."

Interviewer: "Are you finished with your sessions now?"

Anya: "Tomorrow is the last one because I am leaving to go home after that. She's treating my shoulder now—the same problems, the same tension, and same uh-h …"

Interviewer: "Well, if you are out of balance in the lower body that would affect something in the upper body maybe, too."

Anya: "Sure."

Interviewer: "So, did that seem to have any effect in genital the area that you started with?

Anya: "I did not experience that there was less tension in the genital area, but I asked her if this would be the point, and she said it would be. It would just go away as a result of removing the cause of it. Yes, she said there would be less tension in the genital area—but I have to experience that." It is not that I feel tension in this area but at this time I do not feel the difference. I think I need to take time and become more sensitive. It is a big gift for me to feel more balanced in my hips and then I will see what happens.

Michael (Businessman, 55)
Michael was visiting Tao Garden with the group for the Inner Power Zone retreat.

Michael: "I had the first Genital Health Massage of my life yesterday. I was a little afraid of it because my scrotum is a little bit tense. But she did it very nicely, though I felt a little bit of pain up through my kidneys. But after awhile, after massaging it three times, it was gone. So afterwards, I feel pretty good. But during the dancing at night, I couldn't do that because I felt a pain again in my sensitive area. Then after one hour, it was gone. Well, now, it's relaxed and feels open. I did like the treatment from the woman, especially. She's very easy to read: She's open, she's friendly, and she's kind. So it was a beautiful experience."

Interviewer: "I get from what you said that she relieved some tension from your scrotum and testicles. Also, from the effect that you had later on, it sounds like she removed some blockage. Do you think so?"

Michael: "I don't know. I'm not an expert, but it feels like so. It feels like it's open. Yeah, it's accessible also. Something flows, and now that pain is completely gone. "

Interviewer: "So, are you looking forward to your second session?"

Michael: "Ha-ha-ha. Well, I am still a little bit afraid. Especially when she touches the way, the channel, which leads from the scrotum to the kidneys—you feel the pain. Yeah, that's a little bit frightening, but, well, you get used to it."

Interviewer: "I think it's a good sign, actually, because it opens up the energy flow of the connection to my kidneys. Maybe the pain is a little discomforting if there is a little pain involved, but it's helping—in my experience, if it is not there, I've got a problem. So probably that's a good sign, more than not."

Michael: "It was a wonderful experiment for myself. I wanted to experience that, and it went well."

Interviewer: "Do you feel that you would feel more comfortable in performing self-massage?"

Michael: "I did it this morning, a little bit, but that area is always so tense that I don't dare to touch it. So, I did it a little bit in the morning, and it went well. And if it is going to happen in my home country, I will certainly come. If she comes, I will certainly make an appointment."

Pieter (Dance Teacher, 42)
Pieter is a forty-four year old dance teacher in a dance academy. He teaches improvisation, choreography and dance analysis. He came to Tao Garden for Dr. Martina's two-week "Inner Power Zone" retreat.

Interviewer: "You have had three Karsai Nei Tsang massages already, are there any particular results that you find to be of value?"

Pieter: "I think one of the main results is that the energy in the abdominal area is much better. It's much lighter, and it's much better connected so that I feel the chi more easily. I also feel a difference in my thinking and I feel more playful than before. These are things that I can tell now are already changed.

"Also, I feel that a lot of weight from heavy emotions that were stored in the abdomen have released. I had a lot of gas there, and there is hardly any left. Also the volume of the belly area has diminished by more than one-third.

Interviewer: "Due to the excess, trapped gas, do you think?"

Pieter: "Yes, gas and a lot of emotions were stuck there. Khun Ni said that I should express my emotions quickly: say what I have to say instead of keeping them inside. She is so right about this. She can feel so much through her hands; it's really amazing that she can pinpoint this. That's very nice. I also had a problem with my testicles; one of my testicles had a line of tension to one of my kidneys. One testicle was a little bit smaller and lower than the other that's what my girlfriend told me, because she was there when Khun Ni worked on it. After working on the testicles, they became the same size and adjusted to the same level, instead of the one hanging lower. She put the alignment back together. She could feel very clearly that there was a knot in the groin area that blocked the connection between the testicle and the kidney. So she worked there, and she opened it. That was very nice because I had a lot of problems a year ago with my groin. And I feel now that it's more flexible."

Interviewer: "So, she massaged that area to release the tension that was blocking the energy flow to the kidneys."

Pieter: "Yes.

Interviewer: "Can you feel the open flow between the testicles and the kidney area now?"

Pieter: "Yes, I do. I think it would be much better if I had more massages. It's a pity that there is not enough time. I think she could do more good work. I have had all of my three sessions now, but she is so overbooked that I can't get in anymore."

Interviewer: "Yes, she's been really busy."

Interviewer: "Well, so, she balanced the height of the testicles. Were there any other things that you noticed? Was there any accumulation of sedimentation that she helped to breakdown and move?

Pieter: "Yes. She did a strange thing yesterday with my leg and with the knots in the groin. Now it's more flexible. It was stiff and frozen. She just felt it and with one little massage manipulation and it was done! So amazing. She also worked on my legs yesterday, and she opened my legs and my ankles much more. It's very good and my neck is better also. She did several things to open it up again. So it has all been very good.

Interviewer: "So she released the blockages to the sexual energy flow in your body so that it goes up to your brain. And by opening these areas in your wrists and ankles, it has helped the circulation of energy through the whole body."

Pieter: "This is where I feel a difference in how she's working with other massages. They do their job, and it's very good. Other massages open up surface things, but Krasai Nei Tsang goes amazingly deep into the body and in the organs. It's more of a mind-body connection, instead of only the body. So, on this level it's amazing what she's doing. And what she feels and what she sees in the body! So I think she's a gift from the Center!"

Interviewer: "Is there anything else you would like to say that I haven't asked you about?"

Pieter: "I think it would be good for everybody to receive this type of massage Yes, it may be a little bit strange when you see the title, Genital Massage, you think, 'Whoa, what's happening there?' But I think, there's a taboo in the world that the lower part shouldn't be touched by somebody else in the form of massage. If Tao Garden had not suggested it to me, I probably would not have received this massage. It's amazing! Again, thank you."

Anke (Teacher, 55)
Anke came to Tao Garden for Dr. Martina's Inner Power Zone summer retreat. She heard about the massage after previous treatments had failed to work.

Anke: "I have had three sessions, and tomorrow I will have the fourth one. There are three big releases that I have received from this massage. I have had a blockage for five years in the area of my stomach. The acupuncturist didn't help; my physician was not able to help either. Then Khun Ni began to massage it, and she said there were three knots very close to each other from the stomach down. She began to work on them and after the third session it's much better, so much relief. This is the biggest change. I feel very comfortable now in my lower belly. Before I had constant pain, a kind of nagging pain that was always there and now this is gone. So, after five years, it's really like Wow-w-w, my complete body—this part is again mine. This is such a gift.

The other two little things were that I had little knots on the side of my belly. She detected them by just holding her hands on them. She said, 'Hum, what's this here?, and then she started massaging the knots. I had massaged them many times already, but they always jumped away. After two minutes they were gone. It was like, 'OK, this is nothing; it's just how you touch it and how you massage it, and they were gone.' Then I started getting a breast pain. I thought this might be from the exercises we had been doing and I thought I might have over stretched a muscle. When I told her, she said, 'Oh it's related to the part in your stomach, in a line down to your lower belly.' There were two little knots. She massaged them, and let me feel how I could massage them, and now after three days they are gone.

"Tomorrow I have one more session because I have a lot of gas packed in my stomach and down through my intestines. I am really pleased about the results up to now, especially because of those five years that I was in so much pain."

Interviewer: "And was that pain something that she discovered in connection with its effect in the genital area?"

Anke: "Yes. I had an irritation on my vagina and it was swollen a little. I had had it for three months, and she said, 'Uh-uh-uh, I know, what it is.' She massaged it, and it also went away. During that week it became better and better. It was related to the channels not being open, and the pressure being stuck so that all the other organs had less space.

Interviewer: "So, from there, she cleared the line from the lower abdomen up towards the navel area?"

Anke: "Yes, or downwards, because she started from the navel area and she worked downwards. I could feel it as a heat being released. I was really embarrassed because I had a lot of burping. She was massaging, and I was constantly doing this. That gave me a lot of release. And that's basically it."

Interviewer: "And you feel a lot better as a result of it, obviously."

Anke: "Yes, absolutely. I feel much more now that everything in my belly is again for me! So, I think, 'Hey, this is the way it's supposed to feel."

Interviewer: "Wow, I'm really happy to hear that."

Anke: "Yes, I'm really glad that you gave us the talk on Monday and said, 'You you might want to try this.' Otherwise, we never would have done this. So, thank you for that."

Elizabeth (Bodyworker and Universal Tao Instructor, late 40's)

Interviewer: "Can you please share with us any particular experiences you had with the Karsai Nei Tsang massage"

Elizabeth: "Yes, I have been experiencing some pain in my right ovary and the right side of my sacrum. I was able to manage the pain with Chi Kung and Tao Yoga but I was not able to rid myself from the pain completely. After two or three sessions of Karsai Nei Tsang the pain went away and has not come back. Another wonderful benefit I have received from this work is a deeper sense of stillness. A few years ago I was involved in a frightening auto accident. Ever since then I have felt more alert and not able to go as deep into my meditations.

During my first session, Khun Ni immediately felt this deep spiral twist in my left psoas muscle. With her sensitive hands she released the spiral twist and very quickly I started to rest deeper. And so, as you know, the psoas, the kidneys, the fear, and the sexual organs are all so connected. She really helped me and I feel very grateful. Next she worked down the inside of my legs. Afterwards, when I got off the table I could feel my whole relationship to the earth dramatically changed. I've gone through so many different trainings, and I always think, 'Wow, this is what it feels like to be grounded.' But there is always more. And now with Khun Ni's work I feel like, 'Ah-h-h, now I feel the earth, even more!' Very nice!"

Interviewer: "This relationship between the genitals and other parts of the body is something that is obvious once we have the experience, and everyone I have interviewed seems to have recognized it in one way or another. Generally, they say: 'Yes, we have some manifestation of some symptom that we experience in the genital area, but it is connected to other parts of the body—either going down into the legs or up into the organs. So, she works on the surrounding area and clears something there so that the energy that's blocked in the sexual area will have a place to go and can be moved out through healthy channels.'

Elizabeth: Yes, I feel this also. When we stop to think about it, it makes no sense whatsoever that bodywork focuses on all parts of the body except on the genital area. If we really believe that the whole body is connected then we need to address the whole body. My awareness in my sexual organs has heightened because of this massage, now I feel much more integrated, from my head down to my toes. This is really so exciting.

Interviewer: "How do you feel this massage has affected your Tao practices?

Elizabeth: Well, in addition to the rooting to the earth I have felt an increase in my sexual energy. Lovemaking has always been enjoyable for me but now I feel really so alive. My Healing Love practice has become even more pleasurable and beneficial, now the sexual energies are more easily channeled because the congestion is released. I plan to continue with Karsai Nei Tsang self massage and always make this a part of my self care. I look forward to training in Karsai so I can help others like I have been so generously helped.

Louis (Production Manager and Universal Tao Instructor, early 50's)

Louis is a Universal Tao senior instructor and has been teaching chi weight lifting (for genital organs) for fifteen years. He has been especially diligent in maintaining regular practice, including thorough testicle massage, for the past two years to ensure his longevity. He is also a certified teacher for Chi Nei Tsang organs massage. He had no problems or concerns regarding the condition of his sexual anatomy. In fact, he felt that this part of his body was in the best condition ever. However, he took three sessions of testicle and prostate gland massage for the sake of the experience. Not only did the results take his personal practice to another level, but the massage also opened up other chronic problem areas, such as the sacral and lower back, where he had sustained earlier injuries.

Louis: "This whole experience has been a boost to my personal practice, and it has helped me to focus even deeper in the area that I've been concentrating on, especially in the last two years. She's been able to massage me in a way that is different from the way that I have been doing. It has helped to open up the whole flow of the creative life force, sexual energy, a lot deeper than it was before. Now it is even more dramatic. I can imagine that people who have never worked on this area, and all of a sudden get this exposure will get even more of a dramatic response than I had!

"I think the Genital Health Massage is a little bit more unique and specialized than the other kinds of massage. You really have to be trained and have certain sensitivity because that's the most sensitive part of your body. It's a very important ingredient for the higher level practices because you need these blockages and sediments released in order to do the full internal alchemy transformation. So it is actually a very key component for the whole process of the immortal practices—which takes it to another level of understanding that is very beneficial for those people who are seeking that type of self-realization. So, for my own personal practices and my own personal journey, this is a very key component to my own evolution.

"Overall it's an unusual experience, and you touch a lot of areas that you don't normally get involved with on that certain level. You're dealing with root problems, balancing and correcting them at the root level, and literally your genitals are the roots of your whole energetic body. I think it's a very critical and very important part of our internal practices."

Kees (elected city official and bodyworker, early 50's)
Kees is a Universal Tao instructor and spends a few months every year at the Tao Garden in Thailand. He has been able to profit from many Karsai Nei Tsang sessions and so his story comes from much experience.

Interviewer: "How many sessions have you had of the genital massage?"

Kees: "Yes, I believe approximately forty."

Interviewer: "Wow!"

Kees: "Yes. I'm quite experienced now."

Interviewer: "Could you please tell us what has been meaningful about your experience. Did you have any problems that were resolved by the massage?

Kees: "Well, what happened is that I realized a time ago that I had many blockages in my genital area that were covered up and very old. Khun Ni was able to touch these areas where there was hidden pain and open them up.

Interviewer: "So, she would open up these areas that had been hiding from you."

Kees: "Yes, working on them and letting me feel the old pain. One of the most special things that she did was just this; I was able to let the pain come, and go one step further and go into the pain. This is something we can decide for ourselves. 'OK, let the pain come.' Then, it's not so much the pain that is coming, but it's a whole new area that is coming. I realized it was very old for me. So, she's opening up very old things. I don't know if she knows, but that's what she did."

Interviewer: "What was the result of these areas opening up?

Kees: "I walk differently. I feel differently. I feel more connected."

Interviewer: "So by 'opening up,' you mean that there are things that you have been blocking either emotionally or physically."

Kees: "I mean emotionally."

Interviewer: "Was there a physical pain associated afterwards? One of the purposes of this technique is to clear up physical sedimentation that accumulates in the area.

Kees: "Yes, I'm quite sure that has happened as well. After about session twenty-five I became really quite sick. It felt very much like my body detoxifying with diarrhea and fever.

Interviewer: "So you were clearing out some toxins and blockages from your body. The sickness was a manifestation of a cleansing process, a clearing out …"

Kees: "Of course, for sure. I'm sure about that.

Interviewer: "Has there been any specific difference? It is common for older men to have blockages that affect the prostate gland and other areas of the sexual organs so that they lose some of their urine flow or erection.

Kees: "I have the impression that my urine flow is stronger. My prostate area used to be very bound up—covered, like an iron shield around it—and it's much more open now. It can move more freely." Another important part for me has been the work she has been doing on my veins. I have certain problems with my veins in my genital area, and she's correcting them, quite well. She is also working on the blockages in my blood flow.

Interviewer: "You say that feel emotionally more open. That's an interesting thing because it's something you don't see or feel physically so much. How do you feel as a result of having cleared away your emotional blockages?

Kees: "I have had many massages and bodywork sessions in my life but never have I had my genital area worked on. It is especially in this area that we cover up with many experiences from the past. Now it feels as if my genitals and the surrounding area are much more a part of my whole body now. This is a wonderful feeling."

Interviewer: "In regards to the whole body energetically, did you have a feeling that this massage opened up chi flow in other parts of the body?

Kees: "Yes, I feel a lot stronger. People tell me that I look much, much different; so, it's not only me that notices this.

Interviewer: "So you have an overall tonic or toning effect because of the opening up of what was blocked in your genitals. Do you feel generally more open all over your body?"

Kees: "Yes, and for me, the most important part is that I have the feeling that my body is now integrated. I no longer feel like separate parts with other parts missing. I feel all of a whole and this is a very good feeling.

Interviewer: "OK. Well, any concluding comments you'd like to make?"

Kees: "She's great—she's been great!"

Karsai Nei Tsang

Genital Therapeutic Cleansing Massage

New Development in Chi Nei Tsang

Universal Tao System is pleased to announce a new development in the organ massage practice of Chi Nei Tsang. Karsai Nei Tsang, also known as Genital Health Massage, has been developed specifically for improving the health of the genitals and the genital area. This special massage is now available for individual appointments at the Tao Garden Spa.

Genital Health and Cleansing

Our sexual organs play a major role in our physical and emotional health. Because every part of the body is connected, tensions in one area have an affect on the rest of the body. This is also true for the genitals. When the genitals suffer from blockages, the Jing Chi (Sexual Chi) is not free to circulate through the body. The body is then deprived of this powerful healing energy.

Benefits of Karsai Nei Tsang

We have neglected our sexual organs for far too long, our genitals need attention and expert care just like the rest of our organs. Karsai Nei Tsang provides this care. The Karsai Nei Tsang practitioner uses deep, direct pressure with small circular massage movements to break up and dissolve the sedimentation in the circulatory system, release the toxicity and remove the physical and emotional blockages in the pelvic area. Genital Health Massage addresses the common problems associated with our sexual organs; impotency, frequent and difficult urination, painful menstruation, painful intercourse and low sexual libido. It is also effective in alleviating back pain, improving the body's alignment, strengthening the pelvic floor muscles and increasing general vitality.

Universal Tao System ..... Overview 1-35

About the Author

Mantak Chia

Master Mantak Chia

Master Mantak Chia is the creator of the Universal Tao System and is the director of the Universal Tao Center and Tao Garden Health Resort and Training Center in the beautiful northern countryside of Thailand. Since childhood he has been studying the Taoist approach to life. His mastery of this ancient knowledge, enhanced by his study of other disciplines, has resulted in the development of the Universal Tao System which is now being taught throughout the world.

Mantak Chia was born in Thailand to Chinese parents in 1944. When he was six years old, Buddhist monks taught him how to sit and "still the mind." While still a grammar school student, he learned traditional Thai boxing. He was then taught Tai Chi Chuan by Master Lu, who soon introduced him to Aikido, Yoga and broader levels of Tai Chi.

Years later, when he was a student in Hong Kong excelling in track and field events, a senior classmate named Cheng Sue-Sue introduced him to his first esoteric teacher and Taoist Master, Master Yi Eng (I Yun). At this point, Master Chia began his studies of the Taoist way of life in earnest. He learned how to circulate energy through the Microcosmic Orbit and, through the practice of Fusion of the Five Elements, how to open the other Six Special Channels. As he studied Inner Alchemy further, he learned the Enlightenment of the Kan and Li, Sealing of the Five Senses, Congress of Heaven and Earth and Reunion of Heaven and Man. It was Master Yi Eng who authorized Master Chia to teach and heal.

When Mantak Chia was in his early twenties he studied with Master Meugi in Singapore, who taught him Kundalini, Taoist Yoga and the Buddha Palm. He was soon able to clear blockages to the flow of energy within his own body. He learned to pass the life force energy through his hands also, so that he could heal Master Meugi's patients. He then learned Chi Nei Tsang from Dr. Mui Yimwattana in Thailand.

A while later, he studied with Master Cheng Yao-Lun who taught him the Shao-Lin Method of Internal Power. He learned the closely guarded secret of the organs, glands and bone marrow exercise known as Bone Marrow Nei Kung and the exercise known as Strengthening and Renewal of the Tendons. Master Cheng Yao-Lun's system combined Thai boxing and Kung Fu. Master Chia also studied at this time with Master Pan Yu, whose system combined Taoist, Buddhist and Zen teachings. Master Pan Yu also taught him about the exchange of Yin and Yang power between men and women, and how to develop the Steel Body.

To understand the mechanisms behind healing energy better, Master Chia studied Western anatomy and medical science for two years. While pursuing his studies, he managed the Gestetner Company, a manufacturer of office equipment and became well acquainted with the technology of offset printing and copying machines.

Using his knowledge of Taoism, combined with the other disciplines, Master Chia began teaching the Universal Tao System. He eventually trained other Instructors to communicate this knowledge and he established the Natural Healing Center in Thailand. Five years later, he decided to move to New York, where in 1979, he opened the Universal Tao Center. During his years in America, Master Chia continued his studies in the Wu system of Tai Chi with Edward Yee in New York.

Since then, Master Chia has taught tens of thousands of students throughout the world. He has trained and certified over 1,500 instructors and practitioners from all over the world. Living Tao Centers, Chi Nei Tsang Institutes, Cosmic Healing Forums and Immortal Tao Mountain Sanctuaries have opened in many locations in North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia.

In 1994, Master Chia moved back to Thailand, where he had begun construction of Tao Garden and the Universal Tao Training Center fifteen miles outside of Chiang Mai.

Master Chia is a warm, friendly and helpful man who views himself primarily as a teacher. He presents the Universal Tao System in a straightforward and practical manner, while always expanding his knowledge and approach to teaching. He uses a word processor for writing and is totally at ease with the latest computer technology.

Master Chia estimates that it will take thirty-five books to convey the full Universal Tao System. In June, 1990, at a dinner in San Francisco, Master Chia was honored by the International Congress of Chinese Medicine and Qi Gong (Chi Kung), who named him the Qi gong Master of the Year. He is the first recipient of this annual award.

In December, 2000, the Tao Garden Health Resort and Universal Tao Training Center was completed with two Meditation Halls, two open air Simple Chi Kung Pavilions, indoor Tai Chi, Tao Tao Yin and Chi Nei Tsang Hall, Tai Chi Natural Swimming Pool, Pakua Communications Center with a complete Taoist Library, Internal World Class Weight Lifting Hall and complete 8 Court Recreational Facilities.

In February, 2002, the Immortal Tao practices were held at Tao Garden for the first time using the Dark Room technology creating a complete environment for the higher level Taoist practices.

He has previously written and published these twenty-one Universal Tao books:

Acknowledgments

The Universal Tao Publications staff involved in the preparation and production of Tan Tien Chi Kung: Empty Force, Perineum Power, and the Second Brain extend our gratitude to the many generations of Taoist Masters who have passed on their special lineage, in the form of an unbroken oral transmission, over thousands of years. We thank Taoist Master I Yun (Yi Eng) for his openness in transmitting the formulas of Taoist Inner Alchemy.

Thanks to Juan Li for the use of his beautiful and visionary paintings, illustrating Taoist esoteric practices.

We offer our eternal gratitude to our parents and teachers for their many gifts to us. Remembering them brings joy and satisfaction to our continued efforts in presenting the Universal Tao System. For their gifts, we offer our eternal gratitude and love. As always, their contribution has been crucial in presenting the concepts and techniques of the Universal Tao.

We wish to thank the thousands of unknown men and women of the Chinese healing arts who developed many of the methods and ideas presented in this book. We offer our graditute to Master Lao Kang Wen for sharing his healing techniques.

We wish to thank Colin Campbell for his editorial work and writing contributions, as well as his ideas for the covers. We appreciate his research and great labor. We wish to thank Jean Chilton for her editorial contributions on the revised edition of this book, as well as thanking our Senior Instructors, Felix Senn and Annette Derksen, for their insightful contributions to the revised version. We thank Spafford Ackerly and Joost Kuitenbrouwer for their technical editing and clear writing throughout the book.

A special thanks goes to our Thai Production Team for their cover illustration and book design and layout: Raruen Keawapadung, Computer Graphics; Saysunee Yongyod, Photographer; Udon Jandee, Illustrator; and Saniem Chaisarn, Siriporn Chaimongkol, Production Designer.

Words of Caution

The practices described in this book have been used successfully for thousands of years by Taoists trained by personal instruction. Readers should not undertake these practices without receiving personal transmission and training from a certified instructor of the Universal Tao, since some of these practices, if done improperly, may cause injury or result in health problems. This book is intended to supplement individual training by the Universal Tao and to serve as a reference guide for these practices. Anyone who undertakes these practices on the basis of this book alone, does so entirely at his or her own risk.

The meditations, practices and techniques described herein are not intended to be used as an alternative or substitute for professional medical treatment and care. If any readers are suffering from illnesses based on mental or emotional disorders, an appropriate professional health care practitioner or therapist should be consulted. Such problems should be corrected before training begins.

Neither the Universal Tao nor its staff and instructors can be responsible for the consequences of any practice or misuse of the information contained in this book. If the reader undertakes any exercise without strictly following the instructions, notes and warnings, the responsibility must lie solely with the reader.

This book does not attempt to give any medical diagnosis, treatment, prescription, or remedial recommendation in relation to any human disease, ailment, suffering or physical condition whatsoever.

Introduction

In the Universal Tao Practice, Second Brain Chi Kung (also called Tan Tien Chi Kung) is the art of cultivating and condensing Chi in the Lower Tan Tien and thereby raising the pressure in this area.

The Lower Tan Tien is, in the Taoist energy paradigm, the center of the body. It is both the major generator and storage place for Chi energy in the body and the center of awareness. Taoists train this lower abdominal area as the second brain. In all Taoist practices the student is required first to lower the upper brain down to the lower brain. The student trains to consciously become aware of the second brain, so the upper brain which consumes a lot more energy than the lower brain can rest when it is not really in use.

The Lower Tan Tien is also called the “Medicine Field” as well as “the Elixir Field”, as it gathers and contains the healing power of the Original Chi or Prenatal Energy. Other names for it are the Ocean of Chi, the Sea of Energy, the cauldron and the navel center. The use of the expressions “Ocean” and “Sea” refer to the wavelike quality of Chi. The cauldron and the navel belong to the lower Tan Tien. The expression “cauldron” refers to the function of the lower Tan Tien as the chief laboratory and center of internal alchemy which transforms energy frequencies.

The Lower Tan Tien serves as the source of the life force or vital force which then as Chi becomes the source of Shen Chi or spirit power/energy.

Thus, throughout all Universal Tao practices including the highest ones, the Lower Tan Tien remains the key to opening the body and the mind for a free uninterrupted energy flow.

To keep the practitioners in this process firmly on the ground and rooted so that they do not lose the connection with the earth, Tan Tien Chi Kung provides a safe and effective method of bringing us “down to earth” and receiving the energy of the earth. To the extent that we ground ourselves, Tan Tien Chi Kung is the basis of our stability, physical and mental/spiritual balance. It helps us to live from our own center and be proactive instead of reactive, giving space to others as we are in touch with ourselves and value our own space. Tan Tien Chi Kung proposes that the source of true happiness and joy lies within our very selves and not anywhere else. The negative energies within and around us, which we may experience as obstacles to our happiness, are the “raw material” for energy transformation. Through them we may learn to accept and appreciate ourselves, others and the world around us. It helps us to see our own negative energies as garbage we can recycle into compost which can then serve to compound our positive energies.

In the recycling process, our inner power will grow and the pressures from outside and within ourselves will come into balance. As a result, we will feel at ease and our Lower Tan Tien will be relaxed, which is the most essential technical requirement for keeping up the Chi pressure.

Tan Tien Chi Kung is above all a practice by which the unity of what is above and below is acknowledged and honored. Through its service as reservoir and focus of condensation of Chi, the Lower Tan Tien confirms the unity between earth and heaven in the body.

Tan Tien Chi Kung is a Chi Kung form that Master Mantak Chia has developed to build up the Tan Tien Chi. It is an important basic form for all the basic training, especially Iron Shirt Chi Kung, Tai Chi Chi Kung and Microcosmic Orbit.

The Lower Tan Tien is the place where our original force is stored; it is in the center of the belly just under the navel. This is at the same time the storage place for all the energy which we are absorbing and collecting during the Chi Kung exercises and Taoist Inner Alchemy meditation practice. In Tan Tien Chi Kung we make use of Tan Tien breathing, by which we will train the Tan Tien Chi in eight directions. You also learn to control and move the Chi through the power of the mind and to increase the Chi pressure in the Tan Tien with the Tiger and Dragon breaths. In this way you can send and circulate the Chi in Tai Chi Chi Kung, Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Microcosmic Orbit; you are also able to strengthen your connective tissue. The old Taoists first learned Tan Tien Chi Kung so that subsequently they could move the Chi into Tai Chi Chi Kung and Iron Shirt Chi Kung forms.

Chapter I
Power of the Inner Smile

Second Brain Chi Kung (Tan Tien Chi Kung) and the Power of the Inner Smile

The process of internal transformation in the Universal Tao practice starts with the Inner Smile down to the lower brain located in the lower abdominal area. It is the key practice for keeping Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien and the whole body, and it is the most effective practice for keeping all energy path routes in the body open.

Although the Inner Smile at first sight would appear to be an easy practice, it actually represents a great challenge. It holds in all its apparent simplicity a highly concentrated way to change our whole attitude towards life and towards ourselves. Yet, at the same time, it is the key to shifting and transforming our inner disposition and attitude so that we open ourselves to the ability of flowing with the stream of life. Also, it helps us not to "push against the river" and use force on ourselves and others. It trains us to accept ourselves and thereby others so that transformation can come from within and not from above or outside, as we raise our awareness and mindfulness.

The practice of the Inner Smile is not a shrewd trick or an easy device to forget our pain and to repress and do away with it. We need to recognize that pain will always be there, as existential pain, which is there as we live and exist. We will invariably accumulate pain in the ups and downs of life. It is the very practice of the Inner Smile which trains us to look deeply into ourselves and transform the pain into a source of self-transformation and empowerment. We become truly invulnerable, not by ignoring the pain, but by becoming more vulnerable and getting in touch with ourselves. By so doing we can be more sensitive to others and to the world. It is good to shed tears as we detoxify ourselves. In a patriarchal culture like ours, men are not supposed to show their tears, because it shows their weakness. If we learn the Inner Smile, we open ourselves to our deeper self and we learn to process our pain. In this way we restore the energy flow so that we can laugh again and then smile, as we learn to embrace ourselves, others and the world.

Yet, when we cry we lose energy. However the Inner Smile is a training to sense, feel, see and hear deeply, and learn to accept and embrace what is there so that life is opened up again.

By smiling into the heart of our own being and into our whole body, we affirm the basic intrinsic goodness of existence and our gratitude for being alive. By smiling inwardly we create the ground for self-esteem which in turn is the root of our own sense of dignity, and is essential for self-empowerment.

This may be called the first process of alchemical transformation on which all the others depend; it is the beginning of a new way of being, free from self-destruction.

It is not based on self-confrontation and fighting ourselves, but on learning to accept ourselves as we are, with a unique blend and combination of good and negative energies. We need both of them in order to grow. Without the negative energies there would be no impulse for the transformation process and we could not even raise our energy supply. The energy potential hidden in the negative energies would remain repressed and untapped.

Fig. 1.1 Smile down to the Lower Brain.

Smiling and lowering the upper mind down to the lower mind, the LowerTan Tien, is of particular importance as a way to tune in to our life source and raise our life force. By so doing, we make it possible for the diaphragm to relax and freely move up and down. This also makes the lungs and heart happy.

Laughing and smiling are perhaps the best ways to connect with the Lower Tan Tien, generate Chi pressure and inner power, restore the free flow of energy and increases immunity.

It is good to experiment with and experience different forms of smiling and find out for yourself the results of moving from outward laughing towards inner laughing. It is a process like hitting a drum on its ouside and causing vibrations inside; we go from outer laughing towards inner smiling. The more subtle will be the vibrations in the Lower Tan Tien and the more powerful the Chi pressure generated.

Fig. 1.2 Outward Laughing

The more inward the smile is, the less the lungs are used and the more energy is economized and natural (embryonic) breathing is approached.

Smiling and laughing Chi Kung are such a natural form of relaxation that we hardly think of them as a Chi Kung practice. Yet they are one of the most effective ways to restore the Water/Fire balance in the body. By making the sound “Ha”, heat is released and excess fire energy is expelled,and the body is cooled and thereby rebalanced.

The Inner Smile is not only essential to get in touch with ourselves. It is also the key which makes it possible for us to get in touch with, receive and absorb all energies from the Universe, the Earth and the Cosmic particle energy around us, and to open ourselves to the Universe.

Fig. 1.5 Group Laughing

Tan Tien Chi Kung and the Alchemical Process

The sound “Ha” together with the sounds “Ho” and “Hum” constitute a triad of sounds which serve as seed mantras in the hundred syllable mantra in Tibetan Buddhist practice, by which the highest wisdom energies are invoked. Specific sounds raise particular energy frequencies in each organ. Obviously the sound “ha” is the sound which makes the whole body feel good, as it generates Chi and make energies move, so that a state of well being is experienced. Laughing and smiling are natural ways the body uses to rebalance itself and release stress and tension and restore the Chi flow.

The very low sounds which Tibetan monks make, when chanting their mantras, are very similar to those we heard on the sound track of the Nasa recording of the sound of the Earth, Saturn and other planets. Normal people cannot hear, but the adept can hear them. These sounds originate from deep in the belly and thereby create powerful vibrations in the Lower Tan Tien. Such a practice may well be called Tiger and Dragon sounds in the Tan Tien Chi Kung practice, as it raises internal pressure and power to move Chi.

In the Healing Sounds practice, we have learned that the Inner Smile heightens the activity of the thymus gland, the gland of the heart and the seat of loving and love Chi. The heart is capable of producing 37 layers of magnetic fields. The thymus gland produces the T-cells and killer cells which ward off and destroy cancer and other dangerous cells.

Fig. 1.6 Inner Smile spiraling out to the Universe as the heart radiates out power to the Universal magnetic fields.

Smiling down into the body has multiple beneficial effects releasing toxins and restoring the energy flow and the capacity of the body to heal itself.

Simple Practice

1. Sit, stand or lay down in a comfortable position.
2. Use the fingers of both hands especially the middle, index and ring fingers. Touch the navel with the palm.
3. Smile into the mideyebrow and feel it relax. Smile and relax the upper mind down to the neck, down to the chest and gradually down to the Lower Tan Tien.
4. Feel the navel area starting to get warm. Start to spiral the energy in the navel area like the Tai Chi spiral. Feel the Chi getting warmer and warmer starting to raise through the spine to the brain.
5. Keep your mind on the lower abdominal spiral, and lightly feel the brain spiral and the Chi pressure on the crown and the mideyebrow. Gradually feel the Chi pressure push down into the nose and open the sinuses and feel the nose open and your breathing improved.

6. Moving Chi down into the sinuses will help prevent colds and flu.
7. Slowly let the Chi go down by itself to the navel. Smile down into the navel a while and feel the energy stored.

Second Brain, the Lower Tan Tien Consciousness

Taoist practice is entirely based on the art of sensing and feeling as the primary form of cognition which precedes all other forms. It is the nervous system which enables us to feel and sense our body.

It is our mind which directs and guides the Chi but if we cannot feel and sense our body, the mind cannot give direction and guidance. To be able to feel and sense, our nervous system needs to be in a relaxed state. The moment we are stressed and tense, our ability to feel and sense the processes in our body declines.

When we are pressured or feel ready for action, we are not prepared to turn inwardly, smile to our mind, our nerves and our Chi. We reinforce the disconnective process, and as a result, are confused and upset. We feel the internal fracturing and fragmentation taking place but do not understand (or wish to understand) what is going on.

These are valuable starting points: letting our mind come down and sink in our body to our Lower Tan Tien; giving attention to our breathing and posture becoming aware. They create a way out of disconnection and back into getting in touch with our body. This means that we have to entirely relearn to value and listen to our body and become sensitive to what it wants to tell us. The choice is ours.

In this process of relearning to be open to ourselves and to connect with our own body, Tan Tien Chi Kung is basic. Especially because it brings us back to what in our culture is as a rule treated as the least honourable part of ourselves and thereby elevates us as human beings.

As a result of the orientation of hegemonic culture, human potential, which is intrinsically multidimensional, is increasingly steered in one direction. Dominant forms of disembodied abstract cognition have ascendance over all other embodied forms of knowledge.

Widespread 'dis-ease' is a result of this sharp decline of a basic sense of cause and effect and a generalized lowering of Chi pressure and feeling of being threatened. This feeling of 'dis-ease' generates negative emotions which are then projected onto people who do not share our views of the world. Such tendencies towards racism and fundamentalism can only be overcome if we are all the same human being, sharing the same body and spirit and learning to truly value ourselves in our whole being.

Precisely because of the desperate conditions this situation engenders and the resistance it creates, there is an awakening to the need for a new, more embodied way of understanding the universe and ourselves.

Lower Tan Tien as the Second Brain

Recent advanced research confirms the ancient Taoist insight, gained over a long period of inner observation, that the lower Tan Tien is a key source of intelligence. It actually supplies the brain with the basic orientations, data and information which it can then process. It turns out to be full of neurotransmitters. This is why I like to compare the brain to the hardware of the computer and the organs to the software. The organs feed the brain with information and it depends on the quality of the organs and what is transmitted to the brain what is processed. So the quality of the organs and the way they are activated by the brain affects the outcome.

For this reason, the Lower Tan Tien is also called the second brain by Taoists. It may well be called the first brain, by the way it processes and balances the emotions which in turn determine the nature and quality of the intellectual process. Growing imbalance and disconnection between body and mind, thinking and feeling and the various forms of cognition and intelligence, appear to be a central feature of the prevailing global culture. It is not surprising that, violence and conflict in all domains of life have become chronic and widespread.

Tan Tien Chi Kung and Natural Breathing

The natural form of breathing is Iron Shirt abdominal breathing. This is the principal measure by which to evaluate the body's state of health and capacity for self-healing. To the extent that we practice abdominal breathing, we have retained the ways we used to breathe as a baby and child.

When in the course of life, natural low, deep, long and quiet abdominal breathing is replaced by high short and shallow breathing in the chest, we lose our inner stability. We have lost a major source of vitality and self-healing, as our breathing requires more energy than it generates. Through the loss of internal pressure, we also lose our inner power, as the balance between our inward pressure outwardly and the outward pressure inwardly has been lost.

We can only regain our vitality by recreating this internal power so that the two powers are once again in a dynamic and reciprocal state of interplay. This is the inner meaning of Chi Kung: to restore the inner power by learning to breath naturally again.

The cultivation of this natural form of breathing, which reproduces the process of prenatal embryonic breathing, is essential to Tan Tien Chi Kung. It is through this form of breathing that we recover our original Chi and thereby our internal pressure.

Through this form of breathing, the amount of energy needed for external breathing and the intake of oxygen are reduced. Precisely because of this, the lungs can then take in more oxygen. At the same time, the capacity of the whole body and all its cells as well as the capacity of the lungs to store oxygen is enhanced. Thus with less energy, breathing has improved both qualitatively and quantitatively.

Tan Tien Chi Kung breathing relies less on breathing in Chi from outside, as it basically draws on Original Chi. As a result of this, the abdomen starts to breath by itself and the process of breathing becomes economical, effortless and unintentional. Inner original breath and outer breath have a relationship as the external breath can move the inner breath and vice versa, as Chi pressure from the Lower Tan Tien helps the lungs to breathe. The way the lungs are used also affects the original internal breath in its unfolding. Yet the two forms of breathing are to be clearly distinguished. Genuine inner breathing can only evolve if external breathing gives it space.

At the same time, Chi pressure is kept up and remains high. The more unintentional and natural this process is, the more it enhances the free and full flow of Original Chi throughout the whole body, its reservoirs, pathways, organs, glands, fasciae and all cells.

This kind of breathing may be compared to that in a deep and calm sleep. It is not without reason that when we see children asleep, we are at once struck by the beauty and serenity of their expression and the peaceful energy they radiate. We feel at once the fine and good energies as if the inner quality of the Chi in the child's body becomes transparent. We like to caress and embrace it, not realizing that it mirrors our own potential Chi Kung state which we long for.

In prenatal breathing, a great change takes place in the manner of breathing. It is no more through the nose. The whole body starts to breathe. This is at times called skin breathing, although the whole body is involved. In this natural state of breathing, on the out breath we send the Chi to the tendons, muscles and the skin, while when we breathe in, the Chi flows to the bone marrow and the internal organs.

Skin breathing may be called a high energy form of breathing. It does by itself what we most need to generate and rejuvenate ourselves.

On the in breath, it dislodges the fat accumulated in the bone marrow and it creates and renews in the bone marrow the red and white blood cells; these cells are needed to transport the supply of nutrition, to remove waste and to neutralize germs. Then it replenishes the organs with fresh energy.

On the out breath, it presses out the fat from the fasciae in between the tendons, muscles and the skin and pushes out the waste through the pores of the skin and hair and opens it for fresh Chi to enter.

Thus skin breathing regulates the continuous exchange process between inner and outer energies. Crucial for regulating this exchange is the coordination of the perineum and the anus. It is not surprising, therefore, that this training is at the core of Tan Tien Chi Kung.

In the state of skin breathing, the borders between the inside and outside of the body tend to dissolve and a sense of unity with the universe may arise by itself. One feels at the same time at home within the body and in the universe, which is then experienced as one's own extended body. Skin brushing enhances this natural exchange process.

Natural breathing becomes possible when emotional fixations and entanglements are overcome so that you feel at peace with yourself, relaxed, calm and happy. To induce this process, the practice of the Inner Smile, the Healing Sounds and Fusion are of crucial significance. They help to clear the energy reservoirs and pathways and also enhance the state of receptivity of the organs, glands and cells as well as of the bones, so that the flow of Chi can enter and do its work.

In terms of energy use, Chi Kung as a practice is superior to the external practice of sports and athletics. In a Chi Kung state the body can largely rely on the natural flow of original Chi. This is also more healthy, not only because energy is saved, but also because the body is often tortured or exposed to different forms of rude treatment in sports and athletics and in activities like aerobics and jogging. In a Chi Kung state, the body can do with little oxygen.

This explains why advanced Chi Kung practitioners who have learned to rely on embryonic breathing have acquired a high regenerative and rejuvenating capacity. They are known for their longevity, as they chemically and spiritually reproduce the exchange mechanisms which make the child grow.

Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Tai Chi Chi Kung

Tan Tien Chi Kung has a particularly close connection with the three basic Iron Shirt Practices which focus on the strengthening of the internal organs and firm rooting, the change and strengthening of the tendons and the cleansing and renewal of the bone marrow. As to the Iron Shirt practices, compression as mentioned above, creates space for new Chi in the muscles, tendons and the bones, as the fat which has been accumulated there is expelled. With the process of aging, fat tends to accumulate, and as a result the bones lose their regenerative function, as fat takes the place of blood cells.

Through bone breathing, the regenerative capacity of the bone marrow is restored, as new red and white blood cells start to regrow after the fat has been expelled.

Maintaining a firm but gentle Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien is also at the heart of creating Chi pressure, needed in Tai Chi Chi Kung.

Chapter II
Squatting Chi Kung

One of the most wonderful Tan Tien Chi Kung exercises undoubtedly is squatting. It is so common and well understood in certain regions of the world relatively less affected by modernization. It is hardly noticed; yet now it is considered worthy of elevation to human “exercise”. This position of squatting has been the position for humans to move the bowels throughout the evolution of human beings.

Fig. 2.1 Squatting Position

Since the beginnings of civilization, people have known the highly beneficial effects of squatting. Their bodies told them to do so and in this way they recreated a deep state of relaxation, in which the sacrum and spine open and the warm life current in the body regained its optimal free flow.

It is not incidental that this yoga position (in the original meaning of this Sanskrit word which means unity, connection, relation) is, of all postures, the one that comes closest to that of the child in its embryonic high energy state. Its capacity for energy storage and consumption is optimal while the metabolic rate is low and energy consumption most economical.

It is not by chance that the common people, to rest from their labors in the service of the powerful, squatted and the chairs and stools were reserved for the rulers and aristocrats who then could, at least while sitting, keep their feet on the ground.

Fig. 2.2 Squatting to connect with Mother Earth and Galaxy below.

More than any other posture, squatting opens the lower lumbars and thereby prevents hernia. Also it activates the latent motor force of the pelvis, opens the kua, flexes the hip joints, induces downward pressure and release of waste, gases and toxins for recycling in the ground and reactivates the colon. By the gravity pull it provokes, it stirs the earth Chi current to move and bounce upward to the perineum, to awaken the spinal fluids in the sacrum, open and elongate the spine, rebalance vertebrae and ease the Chi current upward to the crown and the crystal room.

Also the lungs and the heart get a massage, as external breathing changes into internal breathing while the Tan Tien helps the heart by taking over its pumping function for the Lower Tan Tien, facilitating and activating the Chi and blood flow.

It also significantly contributes to lengthening the psoas which shortens with age, through anxiety and as a result of too much susceptibility to cold temperatures. It is the shortening of the psoas which pulls the body over and out of alignment with gravity so that the up and downward pull is lost and hence the flow of energy upward and downward is slowed.

Fig. 2.3 Psoas is a supporting shelf below.

Hence the Tao Yin practice which focuses on restoring the original suppleness of the psoas muscle which is also called the “soul muscle” in Chinese is of vital importance. Obviously the soul, to grow, needs a well aligned body so that when the time for the transference of the soul, upward through the crown comes, it can count on a straight body, in line with the earth and with heaven.

By relaxing the psoas, unity between lower and the upper part of the body is promoted. A relaxed psoas makes it possible for the Chi to freely flow upward, connecting the lower lumbar with the lower part of the kua (groin). When the psoas muscles are relaxed, the earth Chi can freely flow from the legs into the upper body, in particular the spine (via the perineum and sacrum).

When the psoas muscles are relaxed, Chi can freely flow between the kidneys via the veins to the heart and vice versa. The free exchange between fire Chi from the heart to the kidneys (by which the kidneys are warmed up and the heart is cooled) and from the kidneys to the heart (by which the kidneys are warmed and the heart is cooled) is the basis of the balance between Water and Fire energy in the whole body and thereby the balance between Yin and Yang.

Squatting is also closely connected with togetherness. When people in communities not yet affected by modernization relax, they often squat together in a circle. It is also the ideal position in the field when at work, and work is alternated with moments of rest. It is also part of the realm of play and playfulness among children.

There are advantages in turning for a while into a frog or into other animals such as a tiger, lion, crane, turtle, rabbit, swallow, elephant, cobra, locust and so on.Through observation of how animals use their energy, the great masters, in their wisdom, invented these postures.

As the squatting position generates a state of relaxation and stillness, it is also a natural posture for meditative practice. One sees that in many indigenous cultures people assume the squatting position precisely for that reason.

Also, the sleeping posture which curves the body, while lying on the side and pulls the legs in, is close to this position. Obviously the subconscious counsels this position for its regenerating quality.

In many cultures, when people die they are laid in the squatting position as it resembles most closely that of the child before it was born and thereby is an unconscious expression of reconnecting the body with its original immortal state of being.

Squatting may perhaps be called Tan Tien Chi Kung exercise number one but let's guard against elevating it to the highest rank of exercise in any system. Let's protect its entirely natural character for those who are spontaneous Chi Kung practitioners without knowing it. Their body knows and the wisdom of their bodies, as they inherited it from the ancestral culture, understands the secret. Yet as the deep sense of Taoist practice is to facilitate and accommodate nature, it would still be just to see it as an exercise.

Practice Squatting

A good exercise for developing the squatting position is to stand with your feet shoulder width (when you improve your squatting ability, place both feet together) close to a wall, facing the wall and then to squat straight down from the kua (like you are sitting down, not bending the knees too much). The wall will prevent you from leaning forward when you squat. Some people tend to bend the head forward first, and also to bend the back and lean forward. Using a wall will make you see whether you are bending too much. Breathe in the Lower Tan Tien. Keep the chest relaxed and feel a force pulling you down and a force pulling you up, when you squat down to the Earth.

To squat down you can also use the help of a partner or the edge of a table. Be sure that you go straight down and bend from the kua. When you work with a partner, stand shoulder width facing each other, arms stretched, and firmly grasp each other's wrists. From this position, squat straight down together from the kua while supporting one another. Sink as deep as you both can without leaning forward (See Fig. 2.4).

Fig. 2.4 Squatting with a Partner.

2. Start standing in front of the wall 18 cm or more away. Eventually you can move closer to the wall. Place both hands on the sides, the tips of the fingers touch the thigh bones.

Fig. 2.5 Squatting using a wall.

3. Slowly drop down from the groin, like you are sitting down; drop till you can‘t go any further, and lightly bend the knees. If you bend too much your knees will hit the wall.

Chapter III
Tan Tien Chi Kung

Our Body and the Body of the Universe

In Chi Kung there may be called a “Yin” state or a state in which receptivity is a principal virtue. In a later period the character representing Chi is composed of two parts those for “rice” and “air”, implying that energy was seen as the combined product of the intake of oxygen and food. Is this shift indicative of a change in perception which coincides with the rise of patriarchy and a shift from inner to outer?

Chi

As the inner movements of body and mind become more natural, also the Chi flow, generated by the Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien, becomes more natural and will ultimately move by itself. The more the Chi Kung state is approached, the easier will be the transition from an external to an internal movement so that ultimately the body moves by itself, carried forward by the invisible powers of the universe. In the state of Wu Wei, it would seem as if nothing is done while in actual fact everything happens. It means that emptiness has generated fullness and nothing has produced everything.

The Lower Tan Tien is also the place where the Chi which we indirectly receive through the intake of air, water and food as well as the energies which we directly receive from the Three Forces (the Universe, the Earth and the Cosmic Particle) can best be stored and where the Original energy can be replenished. Yet for the inner practice, the major focus is relying on the original or prenatal Chi.

The vision and theory which inspires Tan Tien Chi Kung lies at the very root of Chinese medicine, in which health is seen as the natural outcome of self-reliance; the assumption of responsibility for one’s own life, attitudes and conduct.

As an inner energy practice, Tan Tien Chi Kung provides a focal point which underlies and serves the whole range of practices of the Universal Tao: to help structure and sustain processes of transformation at different levels and stages.

Chi Kung may be viewed as the practice by which separation and fragmentation, to which we are subject in our daily life, as we become stressed and alienated from our true being, is overcome. We become inwardly united by the Chi flow, as we are structurally properly aligned. In and through the practice, we learn to heal ourselves and become whole/undivided/holy again, regaining our original state of being. All three words convey processes towards reconnection and unity and have the same etymological root.

In the Taoist perspective, the recreation of unity within ourselves and the process of overcoming inner dispersion and fragmentation are crucial. This process is dependent on reestablishing within ourselves, through the practice, a sense of inner unity in which polarities are harmonized and one begins to feel at peace with oneself and the universe.

It is essential to this process that stagnations in the free flow of energy are overcome and the natural spontaneity of the movement of energy within the body and the mind are restored. The practice serves to facilitate, enhance and accommodate natural processes. The use of force ("pushing the river") has a contrary effect, as it tends to block the energy flow by creating tension in the body.

Tan Tien Chi Kung has a key role in setting in motion and sustaining these processes, not only in terms of physical health and self-healing, but also for the purpose of mental balance and spiritual growth.

In the Taoist vision, there are three kinds of bodies, the physical body, the energy body and the spiritual or light body. The immaterial spiritual (high) body has its genesis in the transformation of the material physical (low) body. These two bodies are mutually dependent on each other and are connected with each other through the energy (soul) body.

In Taoist tradition and in Chinese medicine, the physical body and its activities are viewed as Yang while the energy body or Chi body is considered Yin, and the spiritual body is the unity and marriage of the two. This also explains the unique emphasis in Chi Kung on Chi and the subtle inner structure of the energetic process in human development.

It is the Chi which provides the link and serves as the bridge between the physical and the spiritual bodies and activates and moves them in their processes of mutual support and transformation.

For this reason, Chi has been likened to the fuel which feeds the engines of a boat. If there is little fuel and it is of poor quality, the ship is not likely to carry the passengers very far and the journey will end before they reach the other shore.

The process of transformation of the physical body into an energy body is generated by the mind, which guides and leads the Chi. The Chi will go where the mind leads it. As a consequence, the process of transformation is decisively dependent on the quality of mindfulness and awareness.

The process of awakening the body and its potential for self-transformation depends on the commitment to self-transformation. This takes form in the discipline one develops and the resulting focus and attention to the process. This discipline is not primarily an outer discipline and does not depend on any outer authority; it is an inner discipline, nourished by the effectiveness and truthfulness of experience from within as the basis of practice. These then serve to awaken and remind one of one's inner commitment.

The physical body cannot be seen as independent from the body of the universe, as if one could breathe and live without it or in spite of it. Intrinsic in the Taoist vision is the perception of one's own individual body as an expression of the loving body of the universe by which it was given birth, as is stated in the Tao Te Ching. By transcending the separation between oneself and the universe and honoring one's intrinsic unity with it, the universe becomes one's own body.

With the growth of the awareness of this relationship, a sense of responsibility for it and qualities such as love and compassion with the universe and the world can grow. The universe and the earth will then no more be experienced as objects to be conquered and manipulated but as one's own father (heaven) and mother (earth).

This experience of an inclusive and compassionate sense of life, rooted in the cultivation of love and compassion, is summarized in the ancient saying, "Embrace the universe as a mother her newborn child". It is in the very practice of Chi Kung and Tan Tien Chi Kung, as we become grounded and connected and begin to feel at ease and relaxed in our body, that this sense of unity is cultivated and reinforced.

It is in the practice of Cosmic Chi Kung and its integration in all Chi Kung practices that we enhance our receptivity and sensitivity to our intrinsic relational nature of being. Our body is nourished and replenished by the Chi from the Universe (Heaven), Earth and by the Cosmic particles of which nature (including ourselves) is composed.

Getting in touch with the Universe

The Chi of the Universe can only be absorbed to the extent that we open our heart to the Universe and extend our consciousness and Chi to it as a token of our love. Only then will it respond. To be effective, mind and Chi need each other, as in the rise of internal pressure. We will only receive the love energy of the Universe to the extent that we acknowledge and honour our love relationship to the Universe.

This first of all implies that we acknowledge that the Universe is alive and that we are its children. Unless we awaken to this and bring it into our lives, it will be difficult to realize that we are part of it and we will tend to feel superior to it and see ourselves the center of the world which we will wish to use as a tool for our own interest. The Universe may then become a profitable fetish which we use, because we believe we can get something out of it like a bank account.

This attitude of seeing ourselves as a small cosmos which is only there because it is nourished in every breath by the great cosmos, so typical of the Taoist tradition, is shared by many ancient cultures. It was thus, part of a common human pattern beneath all the diversity and multiple originalities, before the process of homogenization was enforced with the advent of modern times.

When we relate to the Universe, it will respond and we will begin to feel it in the changes in energy in our body. This is the law of reciprocity underlying our relationship with the Universe. It requires an attitude which is radically different from the one in which the Universe has been reduced to a useful object which needs proper management.

In the course of Chi Kung of which Tan Tien Chi Kung is a particular form, a sudden sense of wonder may arise in a flash of awareness: although one is responsible for one's own life and for one's own breath and Chi, one realizes that one's breathing is only there, because one breathes. This awareness then grows with the realization that one is part of the great whole and its rhythms; our awareness processes the life giving energy.

Such a sense of wonder may arise in between the out and in breath and the in and out breath in that moment of emptiness when life is for a fraction in suspense. Then one is filled again with new life force and the Lower Tan Tien, enjoying the bio-electromagnetic current, in which the essence of food and air is converted, enters into waves of fine vibrations which ripple in all directions. It is like a drum whose skin has the right tension and internal pressure to produce a powerful sound. The same is true with string instruments. If the strings are too tight, they snap. If they are too loose, you cannot play. Only when they have the right tension does music become possible.

The Universe cannot resonate with us, if our musical instrument is out of order and we cannot tune it.

Yet, in order to truly get in touch with the Universe and with the world, there is a clear insistence in the Taoist view, that we need to be first in touch and connected with ourselves. It is difficult to be in touch with the Universe, if we are not first in touch with and love ourselves. As the Chi Kung Master Jesus, the son of a Palestinian carpenter, said, "Love your neighbor as you love yourself." In order to receive love, we need to give it so that a balance of reciprocity is maintained and enhanced on the basis of mutual exchange. To be able to give, one must first gather abundant good energies to share.

Sensitivity and a loving attitude towards oneself is thus a condition for getting in touch with others and of the energies of the Universe. As I have more than once suggested, the relationship with the Universe may be compared with that between two lovers. In order to attract the attention of the person whom one has fallen in love with, one needs to first share one's good intentions and qualities, to stir openness and love on the other side. A true relationship is only possible, if there is dialogue and partnership and a process of mutual exchange in an interplay of give and take.

At the heart of Taoist practice stands the process of the alchemical conversion of energy: matter turns into energy and energy into matter of another kind and in another form. I have often observed that what is material immaterializes and what has immaterialized once again materializes into another form and state. Thus, the potential of the physical body to become a spiritual body is actualized.

As a rule, because of the materialist perspective in present day dominant culture and the immediate utility of Chi Kung for enhancing health, some may tend to use it as another outer fitness practice. Those who make use of it its original intention, develop inner power.

There is a growing group of people who long for a new perspective on health and self-healing which has its roots not in any dictates and truths from outside, imposed by any institutions, but in one which can be verified through one's own life experience.

Chi Kung: Unconsciousness-Wonderment

The view which limits Chi Kung practice to strictly personal affairs tends to ignore the role of Chi Kung as a way of life and a state of being, nourished by an inner practice to cultivate virtues and attitudes towards the Universe and the community at large. The cultivation of these attitudes brings about in oneself a particular quality of being which may be called a Chi Kung state of being.

It is this Chi Kung state of being which nourishes and sustains harmonious forms of conduct in relations with the universe, nature, oneself, partners, family, neighbors and people at large. In a higher Chi Kung state, the healing process goes by itself, as the emission and transmission of vibration frequencies naturally takes place, just as a baby generates tenderness and openness in those who see it.

It is not surprising that great Chi Kung Masters like Jesus of Nazareth and Taoist and Buddhist Masters love to have children around. They remind them of the playful, joyous, spontaneous loving nature of the Universe and of their own true nature. They realize also that children help them to activate their own native energies, especially their heart energy. What actually happens is that children awaken the higher energy centers.

As a functional practice, the focus in Chi Kung is on its immediate effects like in the Healing Love practice in which life energy is saved, health is enhanced and the organs are regenerated. Chi Kung is at the same time, however, a practice by which Chi is transformed into spirit and low energy substance is transformed into high energy substance. At every stage the energies take on a more refined and subtle form, as the process towards unity with the Tao comes closer.

It is not true that in Healing Love practice a sacred body is created out of a profane body. The body was always sacred. Through the practice, awareness is cultivated through which experience undergoes a revolution: the indivisibility of the material and the material as one and the same indivisible energy is realized and thereby experienced in a new way.

Then energy may reach forms which are wholly beyond the imagination of the conventional mind, as it is moulded in cultural conditioning which severely restricts the human potential, both in terms of the transformation of the body and of the mind. Reading the stories of the Immortals gives us an inkling of these processes of self-transformation and the powers they generate.

In the Tao Te Ching Lao Tzu speaks of the wonders the higher cultivation of spirit energy may generate: from subtle wonders to mysterious wonders to incredible wonders. These are not to be understood as romantic metaphors but actual processes of Chi transformation by Chi Kung Masters. In the real world they are moved by and move high energy frequencies, inexplicable in the canons of orthodox materialist science.

One can still sense this potential (for such a state) in and around oneself as, underneath conventional awareness, there is another wholly different form of awareness. In this state what is conceived as impossible is precisely that which inspires us in our Chi Kung practice.

It is this state of generating wonder which throughout history has been the key characteristic of all Taoist Immortals as well as of great Buddhist, Indian and other Masters. They defied the rules as well as the perceptions of the society in which they lived (by their inner sense of freedom). This state was sometimes called one of “crazy fellowship” as it was so uncommon and often broke with the standards of submission and docility to authority. It was often characterized by a high degree of spontaneity, humour and joyfulness.

We may see our "old state of being" as the outcome of a process of self-domestication which we often use to excuse ourselves for not daring to perceive our own virtues as potentialities. It's as if these were only the privilege of highly endowed people unlike ourselves or merely belong to the past of "Once upon a time....."

Yet at the same time, it is these virtual states of being which move our innermost being, the "unconscious" state deep down within ourselves. These states may well, like our ancestral Chi, be nourished by our prenatal memory. We get in touch with the hidden liberative potential within ourselves, beneath the crust of our active functional consciousness and come to sense the energy of the invisible and virtual creative energy which awaits our invitation to be actualized.

In modern Western culture, as a result of a long historical process of disconnection, the unconscious or subconscious was seen interfering with the need for rationality, control and management of and over life. This expressed itself in a progressive disconnection between body and mind and the inferiorization, subordination and repression of body, feeling, emotions, instinct and nature.

Women were seen as the carriers of all these negative properties. Consciousness was reduced to what was in accordance with the demands for rationality, self control, outer discipline and other requirements of modern industrial society.

The unconscious and subconsciousness were relegated to the position of states which interfered with these values. Chi Nei Tsang, the practice of Internal Organ Massage, plays an important role in helping people to rebalance their emotions; CNT helps to connect with the subconsciousness in the belly as a source of self-esteem, power and peace.

In Taoist practice, relaxation, inner peace or stillness is seen as a condition through which form of consciousness is suspended. We can then get in touch and feel what deep down in our "unconscious" or subconscious state our body tells us; what signals it expresses and wants to transmit. We may call this sensitivity to the consciousness in our organs, glands, energy path routes and flows, blood, lymph, bones, joints, heart and all the other organs and parts of our body, the Chi Kung state. We cannot always live in it but once we have access to it and know how it feels to be connected with the source of our primordial life experience, we can easily return to it.

It is this state in which we get in touch with the reservoirs in ourselves of latent inner power and energies which can help us to transform our Ching Chi into Chi and life force Chi into Shen (Spirit) Chi. New states cannot arrive without old states departing; the new grows out of the old. The old one is a condition for the transition to the new one. Relaxation in this context does not necessarily require outer forms of peace and tranquillity. Surely with the high levels of interference in present day society, the body also needs outer stillness to get in touch with its original consciousness and high energy frequencies.

Historically, withdrawal has always been associated with meditative practice, as a mean of getting in touch. Yet meditation can also serve to make one better able to live in the world, in a state of Chi Kung. One is in touch with one's true self, from one's Lower Tan Tien and center and grounded, so that one is not too much affected by the storms of life; one is able to move into one's center where stillness reigns. Tan Tien Chi Kung is a precious practice to create a state of energetic self-reliance and to get in touch with one's hidden reservoir of high frequencies and energies.

In this context Dr. Van Xin, a present high Taoist Master, points out that Lao Tzu speaks of the Chi Kung state as a state which is neither conscious nor "unconscious" but a state which one experiences as "fuzzy and distant or distant and fuzzy". It is in such a state that genuine Chi runs in the body which then improves its physiological functions by itself as a variety of spontaneous adjustments take place.

Such a state is essentially one of relaxation which Dr. Xin says that should even be in our bones and joints. We know that our joints become flexible again, once they have learned to relax, after we have brought Chi into the them.

Dancing and Bone Chi Kung

The Chi acts as a softening cushion in between the bones so that they can smoothly turn and do not grind against each other, as happens when they have dried out and lost their softness. As they regenerate with the bone marrow practice, Chi fluids are brought into them and between them. Chi may be viewed as oil which greases a lock or a motor to make it work smoothly again.

It should be remembered that the sockets of the hipbones carry the whole body and its weight and that it is often due to overweight (too much fat accumulated in the Lower Tan Tien and in and between the fasciae of the whole body) that problems start. Another cause of the absence of Chi fluids between the bones is emotional imbalance and the predominance of negative emotions like depression and anger. These play a critical role. The smooth rotation of the hips as a process over time is directly connected to our emotional state, especially as we grow older.

The smooth functioning of the hip joints is crucial in the whole Chi transmission process. The Chi which comes from below has to travel upward. Breathing into the hip joints and the sockets and sending love into the bones and bringing the inward smile into them helps this process. The hip joints play a critical role as conveyors of the upward Chi flow from the earth, and if our body is well aligned, it can then further travel upwards.

That is why dancing and shaking, (apart from being a blessing for the lymph system), like in many ancient forms of dance, is so good for our joints. As we experience joy and firmly touch the earth she then responds by sending her Chi upward into our bodies. We let the bones dance. The more “inward” we dance, as a form of energy meditation, the deeper will be the effect. There is evidence that Chi Kung in its earliest stages was a slow dance which was done as its healing qualities were realized.

Therefore, dancing is a way to rebalance ourselves and regenerate our joyfulness and good humor as filling the joints and the spaces in between with Chi is an excellent Chi Kung practice. The Taoist dance form, as it evolves with its slow rhythmic gentle and graceful movements, would seem to integrate these advantages. The dance becomes the expression of the inner movement of the life force, like Tai Chi Chi Kung. Such a form of dancing has great healing powers.

The highest form of dancing would be one in which we inwardly balance out the dynamic relations between the elements and phases in our body with our surroundings and fire, water, metal, earth and wood. We then enter into a state of equilibrium and so merge with the Tao.

The joints can again produce abundant saliva, the elixir of life, which is replete with hormones and which contains a variety of precious substances essential for our vitality. Afflictions like arthritis and rheumatism may be overcome by the loving use of consciousness and Chi breathing instead of by any medicine or worse, surgical operations to replace the brittle joints with steel ones.

It is not without reason that in many indigenous cultures, bones are especially sacred and are, even long after a person has died, preserved with great care as they contain the spirits of the ancestors and the person. It would seem as if people intuitively knew that the bones are the generators of the substance of life and need therefore a special attitude of reverence.

Bone Marrow Nei Kung ("Nei Kung" means awareness or meditative practice), until quite recently a highly guarded secret practice, has always been seen as a vital key to grounding and embodying the life of the spirit in the body. To create and enhance the body's receptivity for the electromagnetic forces of the sun, moon, planets, stars and the earth, the bones are first washed and cleansed. After this, pressure is brought on them so that the fat inside, which accumulates through stress, a degenerative life style and age, is burnt. The Chi in and around the bones can be significantly raised or even doubled. To do this the presence of the original Chi pressure is needed first in the Lower Tan Tien. Without prior Chi, no Chi can be moved.

It has been discovered that the bones in the body which form its central axis have a crystal structure which facilitates the body's receptivity to the electromagnetic power entering from the electromagnetic fields of the Universe. The body generates and enhances itself as an electromagnetic field. In the body, the brain, the heart and the nervous system are such electromagnetic fields which resonate with the crystalline bone structures that draw the powers of the Universe and the Earth pulling us in opposite directions.

The more our bones and joints are alive and filled with the bioelectromagnetic Chi flow and the more its vibrations increase, the more we feel alive and naturally bounce between heaven and earth. Like our organs and glands, our bones are centers of consciousness, connecting us with Earth and Heaven.

This is at once visible in the way Tai Chi Masters move like tigers. This may have an "electrifying" effect on the surroundings and those who see and feel with them, as Chi is emitted and the Chi in the empathetic onlooker starts to resonate. Although the tiger is fully grounded at each step and movement, they move very lightly. They are totally relaxed and calm, yet highly awake and alert. One feels highly concentrated power, which can be mobilized at any moment into every direction. One feels stillness in the movement and movement in the stillness. One senses and sees the power of the mind and Chi combine in the power of the movement.

That is also the reason why dance, as a practice to "unite heaven and earth within yourself" has a transformational effect on the dancer as well as on those who see them and join in the dance.

True dancing only arises if and when the movement starts from the center, the Lower Tan Tien. For this reason Tan Tien Chi Kung is an essential practice for all dancers or all those who wish to experience and practice life as a dance.

The Nei Kung practice of the Bone Marrow Nei Kung, by gentle Chi pressure and infusing the bones with Chi, serves to regenerate them by renewing the blood. It requires a form of deep sensing meditation which can only be realized in a state of deep relaxation. Then even the hardest elements in our body yield to the force of the gentle, and what was dying comes to life again, as the stone yields to the water.

To move the bones from within and from without is very good. The reason why Taoist meditation always seeks a balance between stillness and motion in which the movement is the Yang element and the stillness Yin, with awareness, like in Tai Chi Chi Kung is because they are a unity of opposites. Yang can only come about because of Yin, and Yin can only arise thanks to Yang. Actually Yin is contained in Yang and Yang in Yin.

Is this not the secret of the power and elegance of natural movement in animals and in that part within ourselves where we have retained natural inner connection? The more bones dance from within and in unison with the Universe, the more it becomes a healing practice. Chi from all directions flows in and out and harmonizes, each time creating the inner power and pressure needed to infuse Chi power and gentleness in the next movement.

In many indigenous cultures the emphasis lies on the community as a whole and its relation with the Universe. This is why the dance is the most sacred form of expression. It opens a space to experience the divine directly within the vibrations it generates and in the unity of Yin and Yang it enhances. In such a form of dance, people are not only involved as individuals separate from each other, but they also experience their unity and connections with others as a community and with the Universe. In this way a regenerative process is set in motion and the unity of the community with the Universe is reaffirmed.

It is the dance which can generate that state of dynamic balance in which we feel connected with ourselves and with the whole.

In the dance we bring the center of gravity down in the Lower Tan Tien so that we enhance the ability to move from the center and let the pressure which builds up there move the body, filled with Chi moving in natural waves.

Dances have an intrinsic erotic and ecstatic quality, as they serve to transform the Ching Chi or sexual energy/life force energy into Chi, and stimulate the hormone flow. They may therefore be considered a particular form of Healing Love practice.

It is not by coincidence that dances of many ancient cultures continue until today. Dancing is connected with marriage celebrations, and is also common to great mystical traditions, in which it becomes the ecstatic expression of unity with the divine, like in the Sufi tradition. Also in the Christian tradition, there have been mystics (like the great Spanish woman mystic Santa Teresa in the 17th century) who danced to express their longing to experience unity with the divine.

A particular form of Healing Love practice (single cultivation) is belly dancing, of ancient origin in cultures of the Middle East. This dance had been closely connected with rituals of fertility and invoking the powers of the Universe and the Goddess. Belly dancing enhanced life giving powers before it was incorporated into patriarchal cultures in which women were subordinated and it came to serve as a means for men to raise their desire and passion.

By pressing the ground and swinging the hips, the kua opens and as the Chi from the earth runs up, the sexual organ and the whole pelvic floor are stimulated and the life force starts to fill the belly. It then begins to tremble and vibrate and the Chi moves to the sacrum, up the spine and around and through the whole body, filling the reservoirs, path routes, organs and glands.

This form of sacred dance was originally done by women among themselves, as men were not allowed into the life giving circle. Such a dance regenerates the life current and thereby grants a heightened sense of inner power, joyful vitality and self-esteem. It is therefore not surprising that this dance has come back in circles of women who seek to raise their autonomy and self-esteem as well as their joyfulness in life.

Thus, dancing in which the mind, Chi and the body are properly aligned with heaven and earth may be seen as a particular form of Chi Kung. People do Chi Kung as it helps them to generate, regain and balance out their life force and thereby enter into a “Chi Kung state". They get more in touch with the energies of the Universe and their own energy and inner power.

If we lead the flow of the Chi with our Yi, the dance may turn into a kind of single cultivation practice, as we unite Yin and Yang within ourselves. Or, as men and women dance together they let mind, body and breath mutually adjust in the dance. For these reasons more recently these dances have been called "sacred dances". The transformational process regarding the life force is little understood, but quite well intuited.

As we have emphasized, the growth of pornographic culture in our time is closely related to the continued repression of the life force in present day hegemonic culture. There is intense pressure disrespecting the needs of the body and what is associated with it. Universal Tao practices in which the Lower Tan Tien is radically reappraised, as in the practices of the Microcosmic Orbit and that of Healing Love can play a major role in creating a new, more balanced culture.

These Chi Kung states are, in Taoism, intimately related to the birth and growth of the immortal child; the process by which we reconnect with our origins and in which our true being is born. The birth of the immortal child is intimately connected to this ability to access, see, feel, hear, taste and sense subtle wonders. Our higher energies open up and we can sense what we did not sense before in our body and around us.

In a Chi Kung state, there is a high quality of natural energy pressure both in the body and in the mind, through the practice of love, compassion and other qualities of being, and alignment with the forces of the Universe. A whole new range of physical and spiritual transformations in our mind and body become possible.

Chapter IV
Empty Force

Tan Tien Chi Kung is one of the Taoist Chi Kung practices used to develop the Tan Tien (Second Brain) and Perineum Power. We need Chi and Chi pressure in the Tan Tien as a foundation for most of the Universal Tao practices, especially for Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Tai Chi Chi Kung and meditation. The Tan Tien is the energy reservoir in the body. It is the place where we store the energy we generate, gather and absorb in Chi Kung and meditation. If the energy is stored in the Tan Tien it can be accessed later, if not, the Chi dissipates and cannot be used. The Tan Tien is therefore also called the Ocean of Chi. According to the Chinese medical theory, once the ocean is full, it will overflow into the eight extraordinary meridians. Once these are full, the Chi flows into the twelve ordinary meridians, each of which is associated with a particular organ. The Tan Tien is therefore the foundation of the entire energetic system of the body.

We usually refer to the lower abdominal area as the Tan Tien, but we actually have three Tan Tiens: the Lower Tan Tien (Second Brain), the Middle Tan Tien (Heart, seat of the consciousness) and Upper Tan Tien (behind the mideyebrow point, the seat of the Shen, the spirit). You can read more about the Tan Tien in the booklet on the Chi Kung meditation called "Opening the Three Tan Tiens in Six Directions". All three Tan Tiens are used in Taoist inner alchemy. Because of their capacity to deal with a large amount of Chi, the Tan Tiens are used as a "laboratory" for Inner Alchemical work. Translated from the Chinese, the word "Tan" means elixir (literally cinnabar, a mineral used in the Outer Alchemy as a basis for the elixir of immortality, since it was considered to have the perfect balance of Yin and Yang). Tien means field or place. It is the place where all the energies of our body, the earth, the Universe and nature come together to form the pearl, the elixir of immortality, the nourishment for our soul and spirit. The Lower Tan Tien (from now on called "the Tan Tien") is located in the abdomen approximately three finger-widths below the navel near the center of the body. The precise location varies from person to person and depends on the body type. In the Tan Tien we store our Original Chi. Original Chi is the Chi derived from the egg and sperm of our parents, from which our entire organism arises.

In Iron Shirt Chi Kung practice we learn to stand effortlessly and relaxed in the “Embrace the Tree” position using our internal body structure and alignment or rooting. We develop a powerful pelvic floor and the centering in the Tan Tien. In Tai Chi Chi Kung we learn to move this “tree”, circulate the energy and strengthen our internal power. All movements in Tai Chi originate from the Tan Tien. This important region is responsible for control and balance, two key ingredients in proper Tai Chi execution. Additionally, the Chi generated through the Iron Shirt and Tai Chi practice is stored in the Tan Tien. Practicing Tan Tien Chi Kung is for the development of the internal and rooting power and the centering of the body and the mind. It is necessary that enough energy is stored in the Tan Tien so that the Tan Tien is filled with Chi pressure and that our mind is strong and focused in the Tan Tien. This will also make us more focused, stable and balanced in daily life. It enhances our personal power. While the Tan Tien is both the source and container of Chi power, the mind acts like a general that issues orders to the Tan Tien for directing power. Through this we can draw energy quickly and effectively from this area and direct it to another area. This is especially important in Tai Chi and Healing Love practices.

We have a constant air pressure in our body. We call this Chi pressure. In Tan Tien Chi Kung we learn to develop this Chi pressure in the Tan Tien and to strengthen our organs and fasciae. Our system relies entirely upon Chi pressure to move the body fluid. We can actually increase our vital energy, strengthen our organs, and promote self-healing by increasing the Chi pressure in our organs and body cavity. The circulatory system, the lymphatic system, the nervous system and the endocrine glands will all be activated and blood, spinal fluid and hormones will flow more easily so that the heart will not have to work as hard. Increasing pressure in the abdominal cavity will help increase the Chi pressure used to move the Chi, blood and lymph fluid.

One of our goals is to increase the Chi pressure in order to increase the organ and the abdominal pressure so that the Chi presses outward on the fasciae layers from the inside. We pack the Chi in the Tan Tien and after it is released, the fasciae expand as do the organs. When people are sick, the Chi pressure inside decreases and falls below the Chi pressure from outside, which is about 14.7 PSI (pounds per square inch). Sick people cannot take so much pressure from outside any more; they will become irritated very quickly and tired by people around them, etc. Life becomes a burden. A lack of Chi pressure also slows down all circulation (Chi, blood, lymph and spinal fluid). It is a downward spiraling movement of the whole life force.

Developing the Chi pressure is one of the best practices we can use to reverse the downward spiraling movements into an upward spiraling movement in the quantity and quality of our life force. In other words, the increase of the Chi pressure in our Tan Tien through Tan Tien Chi Kung will enhance our healing, martial arts (Iron Shirt and Tai Chi), meditation abilities and the art of daily living. It will also nourish our original force.

It is the Chi pressure in the Tan Tien that roots our body and mind. It is our electric wire in the earth. When the Chi pressure is low, we will have no rooting. The energy and the mind will be unfocused and will quickly rise upward and dissipate, and cause overheating, headache, pain in the heart and a distracted mind.

When you want to become a big tree, you need deep roots, which also means a high Chi pressure in the Tan Tien. This is one of the reasons why Tan Tien Chi Kung is the foundation for Iron Shirt and Tai Chi Chi Kung and it is also important for our meditation practice.

In the long run we will regain our inner peace and stillness through this inner power in the Tan Tien. This will restore our connection with our Origin, the mind of the Tao.

Dragon and Tiger Breath

1. Dragon Breath

a. Inhale with a high pitched (Hunnnn) sound and feel the suction in the Upper Tan Tien. Raise the arms up above the head and feel the throat center like a vacuum. Feel the Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien and the throat.

Fig.4.1 Dragon Breath

2. Tiger Breath

b. Exhale with the Tiger Sound (Hummmm) like a tiger growling. Press the arms down and feel the Chi pressure down to the lower abdominal area. Lightly pull up the anus.

c. Do this 6 to 9 times. Then do 3 more sets.

d. These breathing practices will be used in all the exercises.

Exhale with Hummmmmm Tiger Sound and press the pressure down to the Lower Tan Tien.

Feel pressure push the sacrum and separate the hips with a twist of the leg bones.

Perineum Power

A critical role in Tan Tien Chi Kung breathing and the creation of the right pressure in the Lower Tan Tien lies in the tightening and sealing of the sexual organ, the perineum and the anus. The ability to contract the pelvic floor and the coordination of holding up and tightening the sexual organ, perineum and the anus is essential. This ability prevents leakage of essence energy and preserves it so that it may be transformed into vital life force energy and spirit energy.

This practice is called the closing of the Three Gates. The perineum, not without reason, is called the Gate of Life and Death, as it plays such a crucial role both in preventing degeneration and in activating all the organs and glands and other body functions.

Massaging the perineum is an excellent practice to vitalize the sexual organs and strengthen the pelvic floor. It also contributes to activating the pineal gland to which it has a direct connection through the Thrusting Channel. This is one of the finest meditations to do, as it helps one to become aware of the unity of high and low in one's body. It acknowledges the most honourable function of what are often called "the lower organs".

Fig. 4.3 Perineum and pineal gland are connected.

Tightening the perineum and the anus strengthens the pelvic and urogenital diaphragm and holds up and reactivates the organs in the Lower Tan Tien, thereby revitalizing them. If coordinated with the downward pressure of the diaphragm, it helps to provide the space in which the process of Chi compression can be realized.

Fig. 4.4 Urogenital Area in Women

The exercises to activate the front, back and sides of the abdomen are one of the keys of Tan Tien Chi Kung. This is achieved by the anus exercises.The walls of the abdomen are strengthened, tightened and sealed to prevent leakage of energy. Smiling into the anus is a very important practice as, through the contraction of the anus, all organs in the body are vitalized. So the spiritual energy hidden in the smile helps the organs and glands to raise the quality of their energy and our consciousness which is condensed in them.

Fig. 4.5 Pelvic and urogenital diaphragms are the major lower seals which prevent vital energy from leaking out the lower openings.

As the Chi is pressed inward from all sides, Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien rises. The more the Chi is concentrated, the higher its expansive potential becomes. This practice has been called the creation of a “Chi Ball”. The creation of the Chi Ball is a wonderful metaphor which at once evokes the playful and relaxed attitude needed to create it as well as the nature of the compression and condensation process needed. Scattered Chi is concentrated and the Lower Tan Tien raises the inner power needed to activate the whole body and all its flows and networks.

Fig. 4.6 A closer view of the urogenital diaphragm in the male.

The ability to do so depends on what is called Perineum Power, the ability to achieve control over the three gates.

This ability of closing the gates and leading the energy backward and upward, rather than allowing it to go outward and downward, is the basis for the practice of the Microcosmic Orbit and Healing Love. The dense form of Chi (Ching Chi) produced in the sexual organ is brought into the loop of the Governor and the Conception Channels and thence upward into the brain.

On its upward journey, the Chi has undergone several transformations (at the Sacrum, the Ming Men Point and the Jade Pillow Pumps) and has nourished and activated all the organs through the spine, the mother channel of all energies, before it finally brings fresh energy and hormones to the brain.

The quality of the brain cells and their functioning is critically dependent on the supply of hormones and the pressure which can be exerted to bring circulation of the blood and the Chi upward.

Development of Chi Pressure in the Tan Tien through Laughing Chi Kung

To feel Chi within you is not easy and training it is difficult. When people laugh in the Lower Tan Tien, the Tan Tien Chi Kung starts to develop.

a. First Laughter: Start either standing or sitting with both palms covering the navel. Start to laugh loud and feel the abdominal vibration. Laugh for 5 minutes. Rest, cover the navel with the palms and feel it become warm. Spiral in both directions (Clockwise and counterclockwise).

b. Second Laughter: Start with inner laughing like tickling in the throat, feel navel and spiral to keep the Chi in this area.

c. Third Laughter: Silent inner vibration, like hitting a drum and feeling a vibration inside. Keep the vibration inside for 5 minutes. Rest and cover the navel then spiral to keep the energy there.

Laughing helps create the second heart and second lungs, activating and improving the lymphatic system.

Fig. 4.7 Laughing Chi Kung

Anus and Perineum

Practice for the Chi Pressure to the Tan Tien

The Taoists divide the anus into five parts: 1. Middle 2. Front 3. Back 4. Left 5. Right

Fig. 4.8 Anus is divided into five regions.

Fig. 4.9 Anus and Perineum

a. The middle part connects to the organs in front part of the abdominal area. For women the vagina-uterus, for men the prostate gland. It also connects to the aorta and vena cava, stomach, heart, thyroid and parathyroid, pituitary gland, pineal gland and the top of the head, the center channel.

Fig. 4.10 Connections of the Middle Anus

b. The front of the anus, which is connected to the Hui Yin in women, the lower part of the vagina (the perineum point and the sexual organs) and the front part of the abdomen, front Tan Tien.

Fig. 4.11 Connections of the Front Anus

c. The back of the anus, which is connected to the back of the lower lumbars, the coccyx, the sacrum, the spine and the small brain (cerebellum).

Fig. 4.12 Connections of the Back Anus

d. The right side, which is connected with the right side of the abdomen. The right ovary or right testicle, ascending colon, right kidney, adrenal gland, liver, gall bladder, right lung and right hemisphere of the brain.

Fig. 4.13 Connections of the Right and Left Anus

e. The left side of the anus, which is connected with the left side of the abdominal (Left Tan Tien). The left ovary or left testicle, descending colon, left kidney, adrenal gland, spleen, stomach, left lung and left hemisphere of the brain.

In Tan Tien Chi Kung we strengthen all these parts (perineum power) by contracting them (by pulling up). When your pelvic area is strong, no energy will leak out of this gate, and you can enhance the Chi pressure in your Tan Tien. With a weak perineum and anus, this is not possible.

There are good Taoist exercises to strengthen the anus and the different parts of the anus (perineum/pelvic floor) and to learn to contract them (by pulling up) without tightening the muscles too much. To make them really very strong, which means giving the muscles a strong tonicity, you must do these exercises many times a day. The pleasant thing about them is that you can do these exercises everywhere; good times and places to practice are while waiting at the post office, the bus station, the shop, or when you watch a movie or TV, or work on the computer. When you are creative, you will find many occasions during the day to practice these exercises.

The best way to do these exercises is in the Standing position. However, you also can practice them sitting or laying on the ground, in bed or even in the bathtub.

We give you the exercises in the standing position.

Practice of Anus and Perineum Power

Breathing exercises to develop the Chi pressure in all the following seven areas and in the whole Tan Tien.

We distinguish seven important areas in the Lower Tan Tien where we would like to develop the Chi pressure:

A. Below the navel: Chi Hai (Ocean of Chi).
B. Lowest Abdominal: Bladder area.
C. Above the navel: Area of the Solar Plexus.
D. Both left and right sides of the front part of the Tan Tien.
E. Both left and right sides of the body.
F. Both kidneys.
G. Door of Life.

Fig. 4.15 Areas for the development of Chi Pressure

Press in and down all along the edge of the rib cage.

Fig.4.16 Releasing Tension in the Diaphragm

Diaphragm, abdominal wall and perineum press into the abdomen.

Fig. 4.17 Perineum Power

Areas A -D belong to the front part of the Tan Tien, and E and F to the back part of the Tan Tien. Just as with a balloon you can press some areas, to increase the pressure in other parts of the balloon,so you can increase pressure in the Tan Tien.

There are two main areas you always use. Pull up the perineum and press down the diaphragm. This will reduce the space in the Tan Tien and condense the Chi in the Tan Tien. When you pull to the right, the left, the back or the front, the Chi ball (pressure) will move from one side to the other.

There are two major breaths, one is the short breath to expand the abdominal, and the second is: exhale, hold the breath and do the inhale with out inhaling, meaning hold the breath and expand.

A. Lower Tan Tien: Ocean of Chi or Chi Hai

The Anus and the Front part of the Anus, and below the Navel Area. In this part we inhale and expand, dividing the breath into two small breaths.

Fig. 4.18 Front of Anus

a. Stand with the feet parallel and shoulder width apart. All the nine points should be firmly rooted in the earth.

b. Just be aware of the anus, the front part of the anus and the sexual organs; especially the testicles, vagina and uterus.

c. Put your hands on the Chi Hai below the navel on the lower abdomen very gently and very softly. Smile and do a few abdominal breaths.

d. Exhale and flatten down the abdominal area. Use the fingers of both hands.

e. Inhale with a half breath, using the dragon sound. The dragon sound is a high pitched Hunnnnnn. Feel the abdominal area and the throat like a vacuum cleaner sucking in Chi pressure. Lightly pull up the anus, the front part of the anus and the sexual organs. At the same time, push against your lower abdomen and, pushing your fingers out, hold the breath and Chi pressure in the Chi Hai. Always keep the diaphragm down and the chest relaxed.

Fig. 4.23 Inhale, pull up and hold the pressure in the Chi Hai.

f. Exhale with the tiger sound Hummmmm and push the energy pressure down to the lower abdominal area. The tiger sound is a low pitched, growling Hummmmm sound. Hold the breath and laugh softly inside. Feel the vibration in the Chi Hai. Hold until you feel comfortable then inhale and slowly regulate the breath.

Fig. 4.24 Exhale with Tiger Sound.

g. Repeat 3 to 6 times. Feel the pressure becoming stronger with every breath. When you exhale consciously, you hold the Chi. When you inhale and exhale unconsciously, you lose the Chi.

B. Pelvic Area — Bladder - Uterus Area

Anus: Front and Back part of the Anus, and the lower part of the Navel, the Bladder and the Uterus.

Fig. 4.25 Anus, Bladder, Uterus

In this part we inhale and expand and divide the breath into three small breaths.

a. Stand in the same position, be aware of the middle part of the anus, the front part, back part and for men the prostate gland; women the uterus.

b. Use the fingers to press in on the lower abdomen near the pelvic bones. Exhale, flatten down the stomach, and hold the breath for a short while. Lightly suck up the abdomen and feel the suction inside.

c. Inhale one third of the breath with the high pitched sound, the dragon sound. Feel the abdomen and the throat like a vacuum, sucking in Chi pressure. At the same time contract and pull up the anus.

d. Inhale the second third of the breath, contract, pulling up the front part of the anus and the sexual organs toward the bladder/ uterus, lowest part of the abdomen and expand.

Fig. 4.26 Anus and Perineum Power

Fig. 4.27 Front Anus and Perineum Power

e. Inhale the last third of the breath; at the same time contract and pull up more of the front part of the anus toward the bladder and uterus. At the same time push the lowest abdominal area out against the fingers.

f. Keep your tongue against the palate. Hold as long as you feel comfortable.

Tongue against the Palate

Tiger Sound

Expand and push out with Chi Pressure.

Fig. 4.29 Tiger Sound

g. Exhale with the kidney sound Chooooo. When you do this well the coccyx will lightly turn in and the sacrum will push out, rounding the lower back, because the sacrum and the sexual organs are connected. Do 3 to 6 times. Relax and let go and smile to this area; feel Chi and blood flow into the area.

C. Solar Plexus — Above the Navel

Anus and Front Part of the Anus, and above the Navel (Solar Plexus)

In this part we inhale and expand and divide the breath into three small breaths.

1. Stand in the same position, be aware of the middle part of the anus, and the front part and for men also the bladder and prostate gland; women the uterus.

Fig. 4.30 Solar Plexus Perineum Power

2. Use the fingers to press in on the solar plexus above the navel. Exhale, flatten down the stomach, and hold the breath for a short while. Lightly suck up the abdomen and feel the suction inside.

Fig. 4.31 Push out Chi for Anus and Perineum Power.

h. Inhale with one third of the breath, contract and pull up of the anus (the middle).

i. Inhale with small sip another one third of the breath, contract, pull up the front part of the anus and the sexual organs toward the navel. At the same time push the lower part of the navel area out.

j. Inhale the last third of the breath and at the same time contract and pull up more of the front part of the anus toward the solar plexus. At the same time push the solar plexus area out to press against the fingers.

k. Keep your tongue against the palate. Hold as long as you feel comfortable.

l. Exhale, with the kidney sound Chooooo. When you do this well the coccyx will lightly turn in and the sacrum will push out, rounding the lower back, because the sacrum and the sexual organs are connected.

m. Do 3 to 6 times. Relax, let go and smile to these areas. Feel Chi and blood flow into the area.

Fig. 4.33 Exhale with Anus and Perineum Power

Fig. 4.34 Front Part of Anus and Perineum Power

In this part we inhale and expand doing all the above practice in one breath.

1. Stand in the same position, be aware of the anus, the front part , back part; and for men the prostate gland; women the uterus.
2. Use the fingers to press in below the navel (Chi Hai). Exhale, flatten down the stomach, and hold the breath for a short while. Lightly suck up the abdomen and feel the suction inside.
3. Inhale with one slow breath at the same time contract the anus, front part of the anus and expand below the navel and pelvic area (bladder-uterus area) above the navel. Hold the breath for a while, exhale and rest.
4. Do 3 to 6 breaths.

Fig. 4.35 Push out the Middle Tan Tien with Chi Pressure.

D. Both Sides of the Front Part of the Tan Tien

a. Put your fingers on both left and right sides of the front part of the Tan Tien. Smile and do a few abdominal breaths.

b. Exhale flattening the abdomen. Press your fingers in on both sides of the front abdominal.

Fig. 4.36 Exhale and use the Fingers to press in.

c. Inhale with the high pitched sound, the Dragon Sound. Feel the abdomen and the throat like a vacuum sucking in Chi pressure with half the breath. Lightly pull up the anus.

Fig. 4.37 Make Dragon Sound and pull up right and left sides of anus.

Fig. 4.38 Push Chi to both sides of Tan Tien while laughing softly.

d. Inhale the other half, suck in more and contract the left and right sides of the anus and push the points of the left and right Tan Tien outward against your fingers; hold the breath and Chi pressure. Always keep the diaphragm down and the chest relaxed.

e. Exhale with the Tiger Sound Hummmmm and push the energy pressure to both sides. Laugh softly inside and feel a vibration in the Chi Hai. Hold as long as you feel comfortable.

f. Inhale slowly and regulate the breath. Do this several times until you feel a strong Chi pressure. Laugh softly inside and feel a vibration in both sides of the Tan Tien.

g. Do 3 to 6 sets of the practice.

Fig. 4.39 Make the Tiger Sound and make pressure on both sides of the Tan Tien.

E. Left and Right Sides of the Body

Repeat the same precedure as above.

a. Place your hands gently on both left and right sides of your body.

b. Smile and inhale half the breath with the dragon breath, contract and pull up the anus; hold the breath for a while.

Fig. 4.40 Do the Dragon Breath and pull up anus.

Fig. 4.41 Do the Dragon Sound while inhaling with half of the Breath.

b. Inhale the other half breath and contract; pull the left and right sides of the anus toward both left and right sides of the body out against your hands. Feel both sides expanding.

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound, slowly and consciously and push the Chi down to the left and right side. Maintain equal force. Feel both sides of the Tan Tien expanding.

Fig. 4.42 Complete the Dragon Breath by inhaling and exhaling out both sides of the body.

Fig. 4.43 Exhale with the Tiger Sound and continue expanding to the right and left.

d. Repeat several times until you feel a strong Chi pressure in both sides. Hold the breath and laugh inside and feel both sides of the Tan Tien vibrating.

F. Left and Right Sides of Kidneys

a. Place your hands gently on your left and right kidneys. Your spine lightly arches back.

b. Smile in the kidneys and inhale with the Dragon Breath with half of the breath and pull up the anus; hold the breath for a while.

c. Inhale the other half of the breath and contract and pull up the left and right sides of the anus to the kidneys and lightly round the back and press out against your hands.

d. Feel the kidneys expanding, and the whole lumbar area opening. Inhale more, expand, hold the breath for a while.

Exhale and feel it flatten down and lighty bend the back.

Fig. 4.44 Use the Hands to cover the Kidneys.

e. Exhale with Tiger Sound and slowly presss Chi pressure down to both sides of the kidneys and the lower abdomen. Feel the whole kidney area expanding when you exhale and push the energy down.

Fig. 4.45 Inhale-Exhale the Chi to the Back.

Fig. 4.46 Use Dragon Breath to inhale with Chi expanding the Kidney area growing Chi Belt.

f. Repeat 3 to 6 times until you feel a strong Chi pressure in both kidneys and a Chi belt around your waist. This exercise will also strengthen the kidneys and increase your Original Force. Smile in the kidneys and feel them vibrating.

G. Door of Life

a. Place both hands gently with the fingers touching the Door of Life (between lumbars 3, and 4), palms cover the kidneys; the back is lightly arched to the front.

b. Smile and inhale half the breath. Hold the breath and pull up the back part of the anus and push the Door of Life and the lumbar region out against your hands.

c. Feel the Door of Life expanding and becoming more open. Inhale more, hold the breath, pull up more and expand, inhale more, hold and expand.

Fig. 4.47 Opening the Door of Life

d. Exhale slowly and consciously press the Chi down to the Door of Life. Maintain equal force. Repeat several times until you feel a strong pressure in the Door of Life and you feel it open and breathing.

Fig. 4.48 Dragon Sound Breath expanding the Door of Life.

e. Be aware of the soles of your feet, the coccyx and the sacrum. Inhale and pull up the back part of the anus, feel the pulsation in the Door of Life sucking up the energy of the Earth and moving it upward through the spine to the brain.

f. Exhale, put both feet together, scoop up the energy and bring it down. Touch the navel and focus on the Door of Life. Repeat several times. Rest, cover the navel, smile and feel your whole abdomen full of Chi, open and breathing and feel it pulsating.

H. Chest

a. Place both hands gently on both side of the chest under the armpit.

b. Exhale flattening the chest down.

c. Smile, inhale with the Dragon Sound and with half the breath. At the same time pull up the front part of the anus and expand the whole Front Tan Tien.

d. Inhale the other half of the breath and contract and pull up the left and right sides of the anus toward the left and right rib cage; let the Chi expand and round the upper back.

Fig. 4.50 Exhale and flatten the chest.

e. Exhale with the Tiger Sound; slowly press Chi pressure down to the lower abdomen and let the pressure from the lower abdomen expand up to the upper chest. Feel the whole kidney area expanding when you exhale and push the energy down.

f. Repeat 3 to 6 times; rest, regulating the breath.

Fig. 4.51 Inhale with the Dragon Sound, pull up the anus and expand the Tan Tien.

Fig. 4.52 Exhale with Tiger Sound, expand Chi down to abdomen.

I. Total Tan Tien Breathing with Inhale

a. Breathe slowly and smoothly in the Tan Tien until you feel nice and calm. Then combine all the seven breathing exercises together.

b. Smile and gently place both hands on the Lower Tan Tien.

c. Inhale part of the breath and at the same time pull up the anus, the front part, left and right side of the anus toward the front and left and right side of the abdomen. Expand and push out the lower part of the navel and the upper left and right sides of the abdomen. You can move your fingers along the part that you expand.

d. Inhale another part of the breath and at the same time pull up the left and right sides and the back part of the anus toward the left and right sides of the kidneys, and the Door of Life.

e. Exhale, relax ,and regulate the breath.

Fig. 4.53 Expand the Tan Tien with smooth inhalation.

J. Total Tan Tien Breathing with Exhale

a. Inhale fully and exhale; press the Chi pressure down and hold the breath.

b. Inhale without inhaling. Hold the breath and suck in; feel the suction and at the same time contract the anus, front, left, right and back.

c. Continue holding the breath and inhale without inhaling and expand the front, left and right, and the whole back. Continue to expand to the chest.

Fig. 4.54 Expand the Tan Tien with an exhale.

Exercises to Bring More Chi Pressure and Energy Vibration in the Tan Tien

1. You can just repeat the exercises. The only difference is that this time you use your fingers to give counter pressure against the pressure of the Chi from inside.

a. Put your fingers on the Chi Hai in the lower abdomen. Smile and do a few abdominal breaths.

b. Inhale half of the breath, hold the breath, inhale more and pull up the front part of the anus and push at the same time against the lower part of the Tan Tien, against the pressure from your fingers and feel a suction. Slowly exhale (hold the Chi pressure in this point), increase the pressure of your fingers and push the Chi down in the lower abdomen against your fingers.

c. You will notice that with the counteracting force of the fingers the Chi pressure becomes stronger. Do this a few times. The last time you hold the breath after the exhalation and tap both fists on the Chi Hai until you feel a vibration in this area.

d. Do this for all the other six areas of the Tan Tien (tapping on the uterus and bladder is especially good for women). You then combine them as part of enhancing the Chi pressure and vibration in the whole Tan Tien.

e. Repeat this until you feel a very deep vibration of the Chi inside the Tan Tien and in your original force. Have a partner gently push you with his fist in your Tan Tien, so that you have to hold and apply counter pressure. This will help you to develop a stronger Chi pressure and vibration in the Tan Tien (See Fig. 4.60).

f. Repeat each exercise again and continue to use the fingers as a counteracting force. At the end of each exercise, inhale and expand the lower abdomen and exhale quickly with the deep Tiger Sound "Hummmm", pushing the energy down and out against your fingers. The sound is made through a quick expansion from the lower abdomen. The exhalation, the expansion and the sound should be completely synchronized. Repeat with the whole Tan Tien .

Fig. 4.57 Exhale quickly with "Hummmmmm" Sound.

g. Rest with the palms facing downward. Feel the Tan Tien Chi breathing and pulsating. Inhale and pull up the front, back, left and right parts of the anus together with a light contraction of the eyes and mouth and feel the suction in the Tan Tien, the palms, the soles of the feet, the perineum, the sacrum, the mideyebrow point, and the crown. Exhale and condense the energy in the Tan Tien. Repeat several times.

Releasing the Tension in the Diaphragm

Many people have a stiff diaphragm which sticks to the rib cage. In order to be able to develop the Chi pressure, we should have a diaphragm that is loose and that can easily move up and down. To release the tension in the diaphragm, you can massage the diaphragm.

a. You can massage under and along the rib cage from top to bottom.

b. You put the middle fingers from the left hand with the palm facing upward, under the rib cage. Place your right hand on the lower part of the right rib cage and push the rib cage downward with the mouth of your right hand. Repeat for the left side.

c. This massage will loosen and stretch the diaphragm and will facilitate and deepen the breath. You will be able to keep and push the diaphragm down on the exhalation, which is necessary for the development of the Chi pressure in the Tan Tien.

You can picture the Tan Tien as a balloon that you can fill with air creating pressure in the balloon. The main thing you have to do is to fill this balloon and blow air in it little by little. Blow and hold, blow and hold. With the Tan Tien it is the same. You inhale, blow in the air, hold the breath (air) and exhale very slowly. In this way you can maintain the pressure.

Fig. 4.58 Another way of releasing tension in the diaphragm.

a. Take a partner and gently put your fist on their Tan Tien (belly).

b. Let him inhale in the abdomen and feel the pressure of the breath (Chi) pushing his abdomen against your fist. Let him then exhale quickly and you will feel that the air (Chi) pressure is gone and that you are pushing in an empty Tan Tien.

c. Let him inhale in the same way and exhale through the mouth but still push the pressure down and out. You will feel that the pressure is still there. Just as with the balloon, when you pull up the perineum and push down the diaphragm, the Chi pressure in the Tan Tan will be more condensed and stronger.

d. As you continue to push, you will feel that the energy remains in the Lower Tan Tien and can be moved around.

e. Let your partner now laugh in the Tan Tien while you are still pushing, and you will feel the Chi pressure becoming stronger and the Chi moving and vibrating.

You can change places and let your partner work on you.

Fig. 4.60 Using your partner's fist to build more Chi pressure.

Chapter V
Tan Tien Chi Kung Postures

Practice

The practice is divided into two parts. In part one, we will learn to increase the Chi pressure in the Tan Tien, in the organs, especially the kidneys, in the fasciae, in the lumbar area and the Door of Life through a combination of breathing, contraction (pulling upward) of certain parts of the perineum (anus) toward specific areas of the abdomen and pressing down the diaphragm. The exercises also nourish our original force.

The introductory exercises open the sacrum/kua and the hip joints and strengthen the anus and perineum.

In part two, we will learn eleven animal postures. In fact, they have the same results as the exercises from part one. They are, however more powerful and will significantly enhance the Chi pressure/inner power of the Tan Tien, the strength of the perineum and the rooting power. They are actually a very good preparation for Tai Chi.

Opening of Sacrum/Kua

We start the practice of the Tan Tien Chi Kung with some introductory exercises: the opening of the sacrum/kua and the strengthening of the anus (in fact the whole perineum, including the sexual organs).

An open sacrum and a strong anus are the necessary conditions for the development of the Chi pressure in the Tan Tien (Tan Tien power). These are the requirements for the correct execution of the exercises of the Tan Tien Chi Kung.

Tan Tien Chi Kung Warm Up

The sacrum, the groin area, the hip joints and the iliopsoas all form the kua. When the kua is closed, the flow of Chi, blood, lymph fluid down and up the legs is blocked as are the nerves to the legs. In order to enable the sacrum to move freely, the sacrum should be separate from the hip bones.

When the sacrum and the pelvis are open there is space for the energy and we can push this energy far down in the Lower Tan Tien.

Opening the Sacrum

1. Rub the sacrum warm. Stand with the legs shoulder width apart, feet parallel, both big toes lightly turned inward. Place the nine points of the feet firmly on the ground.

2. Start with lightly twisting and spiraling the ankles and knees counterclockwise. This will make the feet, the leg and the thigh bones become one piece. Press the feet with force and twist the heel inward, and the big toes outward. The feet are still firmly placed on the ground creating a balance and find the feeling of “in but not in- out but not out”. In this position the sacrum is closed.

3. Exhale, press the heels firm and turn the heels outward, with the big toes inward, press the whole legs down and press them firmly to the earth.

4. This will create a tension in the tendons and so the feet and legs become one piece which attach to the hip bones. This will help pull open the hips lightly separate from the sacrum. When you open the sacrum in this way, it feels like you are pulling the hips to the sides. Actually, you are also pushing the sacrum to the back, tucking the coccyx in and opening the pelvis. This will make the base bigger. Some people might feel pain in the sacrum.

5. Keep the knees and ankles aligned all the time and connected with the earth.

Fig. 5.1 Opening the Sacrum

6. Activate the Pumps to connect the Hips to the Spine
    a. Activating the hips and the sacrum (pump) by pushing back and align with the spine.
    b. Activate the T-11 pump by pressing the point lightly back and align with the spine.
    c. Activate the cranial pump by pushing the chin back and raising the back of the crown high. This will help stimulate the flow of the spinal cerebral fluid through the spine to the brain. This will nourish the brain and enhance the clarity of our thinking and the activities of the central nervous system.

7. Squatting will also help to open the kua especially the sacrum and the hip joints. Squatting is a powerful and effective way to open the kua and the sacrum. For many people in the world it is still common to sit, talk, eat, empty their bowels, giving birth, meditate relax and restore the energy flow in this squatting position.

Fig. 5.2 Squatting while gathering the Earth Force.

8. The squatting position also provides a deep massage and enhances the Chi and blood flow to all organs in the Lower Tan Tien, including the small and large intestines and the fasciae. It releases gases and is very helpful in relieving constipation. (See the book, Elixir Chi Kung by Mantak Chia).

9. Other exercises for loosening the sacrum like we do in the Chi Kung warm ups;

- Put your hands on your sacrum and pubic bone and rotate the sacrum in both directions not moving the hips.

- Hold your hands again on the sacrum and move the sacrum back and forth.

Fig. 5.3 Spiral the Sacrum.

Ending Exercise for All Eleven Animal Postures

After each animal exercise:

a. Inhale, put the feet together, scoop up the energy from the universe, palms facing up.

b. Turn the palms downward and pour the energy down over the body, back into the navel, back into the Tan Tien.

Fig. 5.4 Palms Opened Upwards

Fig. 5.5 Pour the Chi Down

c. Focus on the Door of Life. Gently, move the hands from the navel (Lower Tan Tien) to the thighs. Feel the fingers and Chi penetrate the thighbones as Chi is absorbed into the bone marrow.

Fig. 5.6 Touch the Thighbones.

d. Move the hands down the thighbones. Feel the fingers penetrate the bones, glide past the knees, and across the shinbones. As you glide the hands down, sink the hips and bring the tailbone down to the heels in a squatting position.

Fig. 5.7 Feel the fingers move down the legs.

Fig. 5.8 Squat Down.

e. Feel yourself sinking down through the Earth and into the infinite space beyond the Earth. Picture the galaxy and feel the spiraling of the force.

f. With your hands touching your feet, lift the tailbone until the legs are straight. Feel the Chi drawn from outer space and the earth spiraling into your body.

Fig. 5.9 Lift the Tailbone.

g. Squat down again and gather more Earth energy and more Universal energy. Do this 3 to 9 times.

h. Move your fingers to the back of the legs. Feel the fingers touch the heel bones and the bone marrow and glide the fingers up the leg bones to the coccyx and hold them there for a while. Feel the Chi rising to the spine and the brain.

i. Move the fingers to the sacrum. Feel the Chi pour into the sacrum and the sexual center.

Fig. 5.10 Squat down again.

Fig. 5.11 Move fingers to hips.

j. Bring the hands up to the Door of Life and concentrate on the navel. Feel the Chi energizes the kidneys and the Door of Life. Slowly bring the hands to the navel. Smile and collect the energy in the Tan Tien.

Fig. 5.12 Move up and touch the Coccyx and Sacrum.

Tan Tien Chi Kung Postures

All eleven postures start from the normal standing posture.

Fig. 5.16 Standing Normal.

Note*:* In all the exercises keep the diaphragm down, the chest relaxed and the anus pulled up. Repeat all the animal exercises several times.

Rabbit (Front Tan Tien)

This exercise develops the Chi pressure in the front part of the Tan Tien, navel and pelvic area.

a. Stand shoulder width, with the feet parallel.

b. Inhale; pull up the anus and the front part of the anus, and simutaneously make the Dragon Sound (with a high pitched sound Hunnnnn). At the same time feel the lower abdomen and the throat like a vacuum sucking Chi to expand the lower abdomen and the throat, while raising the arms slightly above the head.

Fig. 5.17 Begin the Rabbit Posture with the Dragon Sound.

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound (hummmm sound) quickly and pull up the anus and front part of the anus even more and widen your nostrils. At the same time, sink down a little in the kua, press the palms down and push the Chi pressure down in the front part of the Tan Tien and the pelvic area with the sound.

Fig. 5.18 Rabbit exhaling with Tiger Sound.

d. It is very important that you synchronize these three movements. When you do this you will feel the Chi pressure increasing and generated in the lower abdomen, in this part of the Tan Tien and in the palms of your hands. The kua and the hip joints will open more due to this Chi pressure.

e. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

Crane (Both Sides of the Tan Tien)

This exercise develops the Chi pressure in both sides of the Tan Tien.

a. Stand shoulder width, with the feet parallel. Inhale with the Dragon Sound; pull up the anus and the left and right sides of the anus.

b. While raising the arms slightly above the head the fingers form the breaks.

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound (hummmm sound) and at the same time, press your palms down to hip level and press the Chi to the left and right sides; pull up the anus and the left and right side of the anus and expand the left and right side of the Tan Tien. Feel them expanding and feel the Chi pressure growing in these parts and in the palms of your hands.

d. Sink down a little in the kua, press the palms down and push the Chi pressure down to both sides of the Tan Tien and the pelvic area.

e. It is very important that you synchronize these three movements. The kua and the hip joints will open more due to this Chi pressure.

Fig. 5.21 Crane expanding Chi to both sides.

f. Repeat 3 to 6 times.
g. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

Fig. 5.22 Cranesinking into the Kua.

Bear (Back Part of the Tan Tien and whole Back/Spine)

This animal position corresponds to the back part of the Tan Tien, especially to the sacrum and the whole back: a bear back! We already did part of these exercises in the beginning to open the sacrum and the kua.

a. Stand shoulder width, feet parallel with the palms facing up.

b. Inhale, with the Dragon Sound and raise up your palms to face the heavens and scoop up the Chi and pour it down.

c. “In but not in; out but not out”. Now exhale with the Tiger Sound and push down to the Lower Tan Tien. Lower the hands near the hips. Lock the wrists by screwing and twisting. Screw and twist ulna and radius but lock the elbows. Feel the two bones are crossing each other. Feel the whole arm and the scapula become one piece. The whole arm turns so the fingers point together; this will pull the scapulae out and make the upper back round.

Fig. 5.23 Bear Posuture begins.

Fig. 5.24 Bear Posture: Inhale and Exhale.

Strengthen the Arms

Fig. 5.25 Bear presses the hands down.

Fig. 5.26 Bear turns arms so fingers point at each other.

d. At the same time twist the ankles and the knees so the two bones cross each other. This will the make whole leg to be one piece.

e. Twist the heels lightly out and the toes lightly in. (The formula of “In but not in; out but not out” will create a force of balance; no force will overcome this.) Feel the hips and sacrum open and the chest sink and the scapulae round and the Chi will fill the whole back. While rounding the shoulders you will feel the whole back expanding like a bear.

Fig. 5.27 Bear screws and twists.

f. Inhale without inhaling. Inhale and exhale with the Dragon and Tiger Breath till the Chi fills up. Inhale once more with the dragon breath and hold the breath. Lock the neck and the anus so it feels like a vacuum pack without leaking. Suck in and suck out without breathing the air in and feel the pressure increase in the whole torso. This will increase blood circulation, the Chi, the lymphatic system and massage all the organs. Exhale and relax for a while.

g. Inhale; turn the palms out and up and raise up your palms facing the heavens and scoop up the Chi and pour it down. Lower the hands down to the navel, cover the navel for a while, feel warm and nice.

h. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

Fig.5.29 Bear Posture: Legs screwed in; kua open; arms one piece with scapulae and spine; back expanded.

a. Stand in the Embrace the Tree position; arms rounded; chest sunk.

b. Inhale, with the Dragon Sound; lightly pull up the anus and the left and right sides of the anus; feel the suction in the Tan Tien.

c. Left side: Let the Lower Tan Tien Chi move you to the left from the lower lumbar. Do the inhale without inhaling; feel the Chi pressure; hold this position for a while.

Fig. 5.32 Swallow moves to left side.

Exhale with the Tiger Sound, push the Chi down to the left side and keep the anus lightly contracted. Sink from the groin and feel your left leg pushing down into the earth. Feel a force coming up from the earth and a force pushing you down. Keep on doing the Dragon and Tiger Sounds and expand the pressure in the Tan Tien. Do the inhale without inhaling, feel the Chi pressure; hold this position for a while.

d. Middle: Turn the Embracing the Tree arms to the middle. Do the same as the left side. Inhale and lightly pull up the middle part of anus with the Dragon Sound and feel suction in the throat and the lower abdomen.

e. Exhale with the Tiger Sound, push the Chi down the middle and keep the anus lightly contracted. Sink from the groin and feel your legs pushing you down into the earth. Feel a force coming up from the earth and a force pushing you down. Keep on doing the Dragon and Tiger Sound 6 to 9 times and feel the pressure in the Tan Tien expand and contract. Do the inhale without inhaling, feel the Chi pressure; hold this position for a while.

f. Right Side: Turn the Embracing the Tree with the arms to the right. Your right foot turns 90 degrees and your left foot 45 degrees to the right.

Fig. 5.34 Swallow pushes Right Leg into earth and Tan Tien expands.

g. Inhale, with the Dragon Sound, lightly pull up the anus and the right side of the anus; feel the suction in the Tan Tien.

h. Exhale quickly, pull up the anus and the right side of the anus and press the Chi down in the right Tan Tien; the right leg pushing in the earth. Feel again a force coming up from the earth and a force pushing you down.

Keep on doing the Dragon and Tiger Sounds 6 to 9 times and feel the pressure in the Tan Tien expand and contract. Do the inhale without inhaling, feel the Chi pressure; hold this position for a while.

This exercise is very important for your Tai Chi. especially for the Tan Tien form.

i. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

a. Stand shoulder width, with the feet parallel and the fists at hip level.

Fig. 5.35 Dragon inhales.

b. Left Side: Inhale with the Dragon Sound and feel suction in the lower abdominal and the throat. Move yourself to the left side from the lower lumbar. Hold this position for a while.

Fig. 5.36 Dragon moves to the left.

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound quickly, lightly pulling up the left side of the anus. At the same time thrust the right fist down along the left leg toward the ground.

d. Feel the left side of the Tan Tien expanding.

e. Repeat this for the right side and the Middle Tan Tien.

Fig. 5.37 Dragon exhales with the Tiger Sound and thrusting the fist down to the earth.

f. For the Middle Tan Tien, you push both fists down and pull up the middle part of the anus.

g. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

Eagle (Lower Tan Tien)

a. Stand shoulder width, feet parallel, lightly pull up the anus with the elbows bent and the fingers spread out above the head.

Fig. 5.39 Eagle flies.

b. Inhale with the Dragon Sound and lightly pull up the anus and feel the suction. Roll your eyes up and fix them on the crown.

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound and press down to the Lower Tan Tien.

d. Just stand in this position and do the Dragon and Tiger Sounds and feel the forces moving you, Do 3 to 6 times. This exercise will enhance the power in the Tan Tien and in your fingers.

e. Do the ending practice (See page 93).

Fig. 5.40 Eagle rolls the eyes to the crown.

Monkey (Lower and Upper Tan Tien)

a. Stand shoulder width, with your feet parallel and your palms in front of the kua.

b. Inhale with the Dragon Sound and lightly pull up the anus and the middle part of the anus and expand the Lower Tan Tien. Raise the arms up above the head palms open.

Fig. 5.41 Monkey makes the Dragon Sound.

c. Squat down from the kua and exhale with the Tiger Sound, press the Chi pressure down in to the Lower Tan Tien and swing both arms down to the ground.

d. Continue swinging both arms back and forth while in the squatting position like a Monkey and feel the kua (groin) open more. While swinging gather the earth Chi into the palms and the bones.

f. Open your palms to absorb the heavenly force.
g. Repeat the same exercise 3 to 6 times.
h. Do the ending exercise (See page 93).

In this exercise, the upper part of your body is light while the lower part is heavy.

a. Stand with your feet parallel and shoulder width.

b. Inhale with the Tiger Sound and feel the suction. Hook the thumbs together and raise them up above the crown. Turn the hip to the left side

c. Exhale with the Tiger Sound and press the Chi down to the Tan Tien. Pull up the anus and the left tide of the anus. Turn your hips to center and swing your arms, like the trunk of an elephant down to the ground. Swing the arms like a trunk back and forth to gather the earth Chi.

Fig. 5.48 Elephant swings his trunk, gathering Earth Energy.

d. Inhale with Dragon Sound as you gradually raise up from the knees to the hips and with palms. The palms scoop up the earth energy. Come back up to the starting position: Arms raised above the crown. Turn the hips to the right side.

Fig. 5.49 Elephant raises his trunk up from the Earth to the Heavens.

e. Exhale with the Tiger Sound and press the Chi down to the Tan Tien. Pull up the anus and the left side of the anus. Turn your hips to the center and swing your arms, like the trunk of an elephant down to the ground. Swing the arms like the trunk back and forth to gather the earth Chi. Do three sets.

f. Rest and do the ending exercise (See page 93).

a. Stand shoulder width, with your left foot in front and your right foot at a 45 degree angle behind you.

b. Stretch your left arm straight in front of you, the palm facing downward. Hold the back of your right hand in front of your forehead.

Fig. 5.51 Rhinoceros moves to the left side.

c. Inhale with the Dragon Sound. Pull up the anus and the left side of the anus, sink a little bit in the kua and move the waist with the Tan Tien to the left. Your hips and navel should stay pointed straight in front of you. The arms and the upper body move with the Tan Tien to the left.

d. Exhale with the Tiger Sound, pull up the left side of the anus more and, at the same time, press the Chi down in the Left Tan Tien, pressing the left leg into the ground.

e. Hold this position and do the Tiger and the Dragon Sounds with the “inhale without inhaling” to build up the inner abdominal pressure. When out of breath, exhale and inhale. Regulate the breath; rest.

f. Repeat to the right side, the right leg in front and the left leg at a 45 degree angle aimed outward behind you. Stretch the right arm straight in front of you and hold the back of the left hand in front of your forehead.

Fig. 5.52 Rhinoceros moves to the right.

g. Inhale with the Dragon Sound. Pull up the anus and the right side of the anus. Sink a little bit in the kua and turn the waist with the Tan Tien to the right. The navel and hips should not move.

h. Exhale with the Dragon Sound. Pull up the right side of the anus more and, at the same time, press the Chi down in the Right Tan Tien, pressing your right leg in the ground.

i. Hold this position and do the Tiger and the Dragon Sounds with the “inhale without inhaling”. Build up the inner abdominal pressure. When out of breath, exhale and inhale. Regulate the breath; rest.

j. Do the ending exercise (See page 93).

Horse (Upper Tan Tien and the Solar Plexus)

An expanding sound from the Upper Tan Tien/Solar Plexus.

a. Stand shoulder width, with the feet parallel. Raise the arms above the head.

b. Inhale with the Dragon Sound and suck in the upper abdomen toward the back (Upper Tan Tien). Flatten the navel area so that the navel touches the spine.

Fig. 5.53 Horse Posture begins.

c. Sink a little in the kua and at the same time exhale quickly with force and press the arms down with force especially the wrists. Push the abdomen out with the horse sound (Hoooooo) from the Lower Tan Tien. It is an echo sound coming from the Upper Tan Tien and solar plexus.

d. Do the horse sound three to six times. Rest.

e. Do the ending exercise (See page 93).

Fig. 5.54 Horse exhales 'Hoooooo" sound pressing down with the arms and wrists.

Bull (Back Tan Tien)

a. Stand shoulder width, with the feet parallel. Put your right leg to the front and turn your left foot 45 degrees outward.

b. Your arms are in front of you, palms facing outward.

c. Inhale with the Dragon Sound and feel the suction expand the upper abdomen. Pull up the anus and both sides of the anus; sink to the back and at the same time turn the palms and scoop up the Chi on the left and right sides. The Tan Tien Chi is pushing you to the back and down into the right leg.

Fig. 5.55 Bull Posture begins.

d. Spiral the hands with the tendons under the armpits until the palms are facing you. “In the curve find the straight” means that when you twist the wrist and the elbow, hold the twist and try to straighten the arms and creating a force in the arms.

Fig. 5.56 Bull scoops up the Chi.

e. Then exhale with the Tiger Sound and press the Chi down to the lower abdomen. At the same time very lightly pull up the front side of the anus; spiral the hands more until the palms are facing outward and, at the same time, let the Tan Tien Chi push you to the front and down into the right leg.

f. Feel the energy rising from the earth. Pull up the front and back side of the anus, round the sacrum/lower back (with your chest in, scapulae round and chin pushed back). Feel the energy rising in the spine and push the energy out to the fingertips.

g. Do this exercise 3 to 6 times, rest.

h. Repeat with the left leg in front and the right leg back.

This is a very important introduction exercise for the Tai Chi. From this exercise you will learn to sink back in the kua, move from the Tan Tien with the Tan Tien force and direct the force through the spine to the fingertips and from the fingertips back into the earth.

i. Do the ending exercise (See page 93).

Fig. 5.58 Bull makes the Tiger Sound pushing out to the front.

Finishing Tan Tien Chi Kung

After you have finished the Tan Tien Chi Kung, sit down and relax. Put both palms on your Tan Tien. Smile and feel the Chi vibrating in the Tan Tien and in all the organs, glands and fasciae.

Chapter VI
Chi and the Tao

Tan Tien Chi Kung and the Universal Tao Practices

It is in the Lower Tan Tien that the condensation process started from which our life began. This is where all the energies of heaven and earth in the lovemaking of our parents and ancestors and their essences came together and created the embryo and our Original Chi.

In the Cosmic Healing Sounds practice, sound combined with movement serves to soften and cool down overheated organs which have tended to contract and harden as a result of stress. The body temperature is rebalanced and the free energy flow is regenerated.

Fig. 6.1 Cosmic Healing Sounds

It is here that the birth of the very Universe from Nothingness towards Fullness is reflected in the unity of Yin and Yang at the beginning of our life Journey. By smiling and relaxing into the belly, we ease the metabolism in the whole body, facilitating the digestion of food and creating favorable conditions for the greater digestive happening: the processing and blending of Universal, Earth and Cosmic Particle energies to support the growth of the embryo.

It is by focusing our loving attention on the Lower Tan Tien that we create the primary conditions for regeneration and rejuvenation. When we grow older, we also can grow younger, as we remember our original prenatal state, cultivate our inner power and keep Chi pressure.

It is in the Cosmic Inner Smile that the heart of Tan Tien Chi Kung as an active energy meditation practice lies. It prepares the ground for all other Universal Tao exercises. The presence of inner peace determines to what extent exercises will be effective.

Fig. 6.2 Cosmic Inner Smile

Also, it is relaxation which determines to what extent the body will be able to absorb the high energy substances. These substances are the focus of Chi Kung and determine its effectiveness in the process of transformation.

In the Fusion Practices we learn to balance our negative energies with our positive energies and condense our positive energies into a jewel of compassion. And then it is circulated through the Microcosmic Orbit to heal and transform our whole body and all its organs, glands, networks and channels. The pakuas are energy webs into which the emotional energies are brought together, blended and purified; they are located just behind the navel.

Fig. 6.3 Cosmic Fusion

The Belt Channel also starts at the navel. It is the psychic channel for self-defense of the body against negative energies from outside. It moves in a circle in and around the body from the center to the crown and down to the ankles and up again, to protect all the vital energy centers. The Chi which moves it comes from the power generator of the body.

Fig. 6.4 Belt Channels

The Lower Tan Tien processes and balances the emotional energies which have their seat in the organs and then returns the virtuous energy to them. Subsequently it nourishes the whole body with the blended and refined energies; it is concentrated in the pearl which is then circulated through the Microcosmic Orbit and from there into all the other energy pathways.

While the Cosmic Inner Smile, the Healing Sounds and the Fusion practices generate new fresh energy, they also need to be nurtured by fresh energy which can only come from good Chi pressure.

In the higher alchemical Kan and Li practices, it is once again the Lower Tan Tien which serves as the first station for alchemical transformation. Here the Water energy is steamed by the Fire energy so that the whole body is cleansed and detoxified and the transformation processes at the higher centers of the heart and the brain are prepared.

For all these alchemical transformations, a high accumulation of concentrated Chi is needed. To supply this Chi, Tan Tien Chi Kung plays a key role. This explains why Taoist Masters and practitioners in their meditations always center on the Lower Tan Tien. It is here that the whole bio-electromagnetic process is set in motion which nourishes and sustaines successive waves of electromagnetic activation.

Fig. 6.5 Lesser Kan and Li

Self Healing and Wholeness

In the Taoist tradition, the lower body and its organs and functions are associated with earth, the higher body and its organs with heaven. Yet the spiritual body cannot be born and grow without being nourished by an unceasing supply of fresh Chi, generated in the lower body by the practice of Tan Tien Chi Kung.

Tan Tien Chi Kung, as one of the basic practices of the Taoist approach to health and self-healing, has its roots in a particular world view at the very heart and root of Chinese civilizations and science. In this view, human beings, like all other creatures, are seen as part of nature.

Fig. 6.6 Tan Tien Chi Kung

They are not above and on top of nature but need to serve and honor it. Nature is not to be conquered and subjected but to be treated with reverence and respect. People have to live in harmony with the universe and with nature as its manifestation. If not, the universe will turn against them and destroy the very foundations of their life.

In this ancient Taoist vision, at the heart of Chi Kung and Tan Tien Chi Kung, the universe and the earth are seen and experienced as sacred. Also, the human body is seen as a sacred vessel and a microcosmos in which the macrocosmos is mirrored and reproduced.

In the same vein, all that exists is holy and life is seen as a process of return to the original state of holiness/wholeness in which the primordial unity with the universe is regained. Healing, wholeness and holiness have the same etymological root.

Heaven and Earth, dark and light, the sacred and the profane, the material and the spiritual, body and mind, the physical and the metaphysical, thinking and feeling, what is above and what is below, are not seen as irreconcilable or inimical opposites but as natural polarities and partners between Yin and Yang. This manifests the relations between Heaven/Fire and Earth/Water, at the root of the energetic processes of imbalance and balance within the body.

The Tan Tien is not a physical phenomenon but an energy field of the subtle body. It has therefore not a precise physical location but varies with each person, depending on sex, age and life history. It functions in the area just between the navel, the Door of Life and the sexual center, just above the pelvic area.

In view of the above, Tan Tien Chi Kung may be defined as an energy meditation or inner fitness practice, designed to enhance a Chi Kung state of being in ourselves by awakening, activating and sustaining processes, rhythms, flows and transformations of energy in the body.

The Tan Tien is the center of activation and balancing of the primal life force energies (Chi) of the body by which the practices (Kung) of Chi Kung are generated. Tan Tien Chi Kung may also be called a strategy for self-empowerment and self-healing.

Tan Tien Chi Kung, like other forms of Chi Kung, is not only a source of self-healing but may also serve as a source of healing others. However, its effectiveness depends on the energy of the healer. To practice healing others by way of Chi Kung, the healer needs first to raise their own energy, so that they can share their abundance.

Fig. 6.7 Cosmic Healing

A high energy field is created which may then serve to activate enrgy fields of those who seek to be healed. If the person who seeks healing were to have a higher energy field, it may well be that the healer would drain that person. Thus for any healer the first responsibility lies in healing themselves so that their work will be a blessing.

For this reason, energy meditations are the first responsibility of the Taoist practitioner who intends to be a healer. To raise energies, Chi pressure is indispensable. While an abundant Chi supply is essential for health, inversely, good health is also a condition for an abundant Chi supply.

Thus, to ensure both physical health and spiritual growth, an abundant supply of Chi (bio-electromagnetic energy) is needed. This accumulation of Chi is indispensable for creating the right kind of pressure to sustain and enhance the free and optimal flow of energy throughout the whole body. Chi is needed to activate the blood and lymph flows, the flow of the cerebrospinal fluids, the nerves, the endocrine glands and hormones, the fasciae and the tendons, bones, muscles and all the cells of the body.

As an electromagnetic force, Chi is the source of all movement and power in the Universe. It is also the source of life and empowerment of the whole body and all its functions. It can only be properly used and serve body and spirit if it is activated, guided and directed by the mind.

Chi Kung and the Balance of Water and Fire

Tan Tien Chi Kung involves the simultaneous training of body and mind by way of activating mind power. The combined and integrated activity of the mind, the heart and the eye power are the major sources of activation of the subtle energy and the transformations it requires and enhances.

The more the mind is awakened, the more the heart is opened and the more the eye is trained to look inward, the easier it becomes for the mind to lead and guide the movement of Chi through the body.

Thus the process of transformation is determined by the progressive refinement and combination of mind, heart and eye into one undivided subtle power. The emphasis in Taoist practice on the inner structure of this transformational power is suggested by the expression used for it. It is called " Yi" which means Water or Wisdom Mind.

This Yin mind is receptive, inward oriented, serene, steady and cool and represents the moon energy. It is the opposite of the Yang or Fire mind. The Fire Mind is so called as it represents the heat of the Sun, the emotional, active, outward going and volatile mind. These two minds, representing the unity of opposite Yin and Yang energies in the Universe, need to always return to balance, so as to create harmony and the right temperature in body and mind.

While the Lower Tan Tien serves as the source and the vessel or container of Chi, it is the Wisdom mind which leads its movement, distribution and circulation. The more the mind is cultivated and transformed into a Wisdom mind, the more skilful it will be in sensing where Chi is needed and guide it.

Fig. 6.8 Wisdom Chi Kung

In traditional Chinese terms Chi is considered the soldiers and Yi the Commander in chief. These martial terms make clear that Chi was of vital importance in the martial arts and in warfare, as it represented the major source of internal power before gun powder was introduced.

In Iron Shirt Chi Kung there was always, at least at the surface, a strong emphasis on its Yang dimension, although the real power was hidden in the Yin energy.

It is not surprising that the ways of access to these powers were kept secret to guard the monopoly and also to avoid abuse. The emphasis on energy as a meditative practice, so characteristic of the Taoist approach, becomes understandable if we know that monks played a crucial role in its creation.

With the decline of Chi Kung and especially of Iron Shirt Chi Kung as a principal weapon in warfare, its Yin dimension, not directly discernible to an uninitiated outsider, could be more fully appreciated. Chi Kung and Iron Shirt Chi Kung came to play a vital role in using Chi for health, self-healing and spiritual growth. The meaning of Yi as Wisdom or Water mind suggests that Taoist practice relied on the enhancement of the power of intuition and the art of sensing; these powers were considered as belonging to the essence of feminine power. Throughout history and the evolution of culture women have been closer to the earth and to their hearts than men. It is not surprising that the Taoist tradition has been called the female undercurrent of Chinese (patriarchal) culture.

With its emphasis on the integration of action with contemplation Taoist practice has had a pervasive influence on the flowering of Chinese civilization in all fields, in particular in those of science, medicine and the arts.

With the growth of subtle energy through Taoist meditative practice, there is less need to rely on the conduction through Chi on external practice and power. The movements increasingly originate from within as both the mind and the body become more sensitive to each other; the body becomes the seat of finer and more powerful subtle energies.

The overall energy balance in the body always remains the direct outcome of the level of Chi pressure. When Chi pressure declines, all fluids in the body are deactivated and health is in decline. When the natural energy balance between Fire and Water in the body is lost both body and mind suffer, but especially the brain and the heart.

As the Water element in the body weakens with the decline of the Earth connection, the Fire energy is more out of balance and runs wild.

Given the prevailing trends, there is an implicit contempt for wisdom at the expense of knowledge; wisdom relies on listening to and feeling into the consciousness of the mind and the whole body and its organs. Knowledge is seen as a mere instrument of utility and as a product of the brain. The body and its emotions are seen as a source of disturbance rather than the “Temple of the Spirit”. This situation may be inverted when there is more space for Water energy and a better connection with the Earth energy. It is the Lower Tan Tien which is the seat of both Water and Earth elements.

Tan Tien Chi Kung, Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Tai Chi Chi Kung, as well as all other Universal Tao practices are helping practitioners around the world to become rooted and centered.

Fig. 6.9 Iron Shirt Chi Kung

Fig. 6.10 Tai Chi Chi Kung

Consciousness and Relaxation

In recent fundamental brain research, it has been found that the average person uses only four to five percent of their brain cells. This small portion of active brain cells lies at the surface of the cerebrum. It means that the vast numbers of brain cells in the deeper layers of the cerebrum are asleep.

There is evidence that it is difficult for these cells to be activated if one is too active and over conscious. Our target-oriented, linear-rationalist culture makes stress and tension an essential condition for “keeping up”. Such stress makes it difficult to nourish and keep up Chi pressure.

Chi Kung serves to create a state of relaxation which enables the practitioner to return to their “natural state”. Then the deeper layers of the brain can be opened up and the creative powers of the unconsciousness mind, where all originality and creativity lie hidden, become available.

Relaxation is not static. Rather, it is an expression of the dynamic balance which comes about when one is aligned with the force of gravity. We experience the pulls of the opposite forces within oneself: the force which pulls up and the force which pulls down and the forces from the different directions of the Universe that are electrical and magnetic fields. Chi Kung is the art of being and entering in balance though the process of mutual adjustment of body, mind and breathing. Our posture is an expression of this balance and so internal pressure and power are generated.

Chi Kung practice can serve to significantly activate dormant electromagnetic currents in the deep brain and thereby bring about a major change in the nature of awareness. There is likely to be a close relationship between the high under-utilization of the brain’s potential and the prevailing economic patterns of production, distribution and consumption. They impose the patterns of socialization and education that seem to be aggravated by the new forms of mass information and communication.

Another important finding is that adult and old people’s encephalograms dramatically changed after they had practiced Chi Kung and showed characteristics of childrens’ encephalograms.

As a result of the high pressures of modern life and the build up of tension and stress, the heart is overheated and “cooked”. Its pumping function is severely jeopardized and the blood stream is deactivated.

The balance between Water and Fire energies is seriously disturbed and heart weakness becomes epidemic. Pressure on the heart can significantly be lowered by the Iron Shirt practice of activating the Lower Tan Tien. Such exercises as the Tree, the Turtle, the Golden Urn and the Phoenix Washing Its Feathers make the work of the heart lighter. The Lower Tan Tien requires two thirds of the body’s total blood supply for its four magor organs: liver, kidneys, spleen and stomach. This is why Taoists have also called the Lower Tan Tien “the second heart”.

The heart is also assisted by the Cosmic Healing Sounds for the heart and triple warmer. The Tao Yin practice of leading excess heat from the heart to the kidneys and the meditation technique of pulsing, through which the pulse can be amplified at the crown and the perineum help relieve the heart.

The ability of the Lower Tan Tien to activate Chi significantly depends on the degree to which the diaphragm regains its flexibility and becomes relaxed so that it can freely move up and down. The diaphragm has a pumping function that can exert pressure on the Lower Tan Tien by way of the Iron Shirt breathing practice of packing and releasing. Chi pressure is raised and is condensed through the packing process.

Through the practice of packing and releasing, the whole Lower Tan Tien receives a massage. This activates the four organs and expels toxins and sediments from the organs in the abdomen, so that blood and Chi flow are restored.

Also the small and large intestines share in the benefits of this packing process, as they are massaged and the natural peristaltic movement is reactivated. It is well known that many chronic diseases originate in the bowels. The Tan Tien Chi Kung exercises designed to open the kua work on pressing the bowel into movement.

Chi Kung as Self-Actualization

The ordinary, functioning mind and consciousness cannot maintain a high concentration of Chi. It behooves us to learn and practice so as to align our true nature with energies of the Universe (Te).

Fig. 6.11 Chinese Character "Te"

This is the original meaning of the Chinese character "Te": human alignment with the Whole, the Universe. Thus it may also be translated as "actualization of the Universe or Cosmos within oneself" or self-realization.

It has also been translated as “integrity” (in its original sense of being whole/undivided) which is expressed in “power”, “quality” and “strength”. The more one grows towards realizing within oneself this unity with the Universe, the higher is one’s quality of selfhood, as a microcosmic manifestation of the Macrocosmos.

In its original meaning “Te” is defined as a process of alignment “from within” and it presupposes independence and self-reliance; one’s own mind and body is a field of energy and consciousness and the source of entering into alignment with the Tao. This explains the great sense of independence by Taoist practitioners and communities over the centuries and their reliance on inner rather than outer authority, knowledge and power. This is obvious from the striking tales and legends about the lives of the Immortals.

Fig. 6.12 Chaun Chung-Li, One of the Eight Immortals

Reactivation and Regeneration

The activation of the abdomen plays a major role in the creation of a state of ease to prevent “dis-ease”. If the abdomen is at ease, the whole body comes to rest. If not, the whole body suffers, as the basic metabolism is affected. In the process of aging and as a result of an agitated externalized life style the abdominal organs tend to sag and thereby lose their vitality. These organs, thanks to the rise in Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien, are uplifted and brought back in their original position, so that once again the Chi flows.

After giving birth, the uterus may sag and cause the prolapsus of the transverse colon, and constipation. If undue pressure is exercised on the fallopian tubes and the ovaries, it may become a cause of sterility, as proper blood and Chi flow is prevented and toxins cannot be moved out. This in turn may lead to serious diseases. Thus, women can receive particular benefit from Tan Tien Chi Kung.

The diaphragm can move down if the Lower Tan Tien is freed from mental and emotional stress and tension. This is a principal cause of constipation and degeneration of the digestive and eliminative system. Constipation can also be relieved by the Tao Yin practice of lengthening the psoas muscle, combined with the conversion of fear into gentleness by the Cosmic Healing Sounds and the Fusion practices.

By “bringing peace” and generating Chi in the Lower Tan Tien, the Wisdon mind, Yi, dissolves tensions in the body, as it brings down the Fire energy, which always rises up and tends to overheat the brain, the heart and the lungs. This cools the body, reestablishing the natural balance between Fire and Water energies.

By concentrating attention on the Lower Tan Tien, Yi also brings down the point of gravity in the body so that stability increases and the earth connection is enhanced. As we become more rooted, a sense of coming home may arise. This has a further cooling and refreshing effect on the body.

With the downward movement of the diaphragm, the lungs also get new space. They have suffered from the stress and tension which has caused breathing to become short and shallow. When the Lower Tan Tien enters a state of rest and the diaphragm is able to relax and returns to its natural rhythmic up and down movement, the lungs can ease into their natural function.

Then one can start again to breath deeply and slowly and gently. This regenerates the whole body, as its cells, organs, glands and bones become tonified and energized as a consequence of the fresh Chi pressure. Nose breathing becomes less necessary and can gradually give way to breathing from within.

As a result of this process towards inner relaxation and balance, the body can start to function in a qualitatively new way; it needs to rely less on external air intake and more on the Chi from within, the original or prenatal Chi. Breathing becomes again a natural rhythmic process which goes by itself and which creates the right pressure needed for the body to function optimally.

New consciousness does not come about by itself; it requires continuous exercise and practice that is light and playful, as if it were a child’s game.

Iron Shirt Chi Kung plays a critical role in this training process by which the Tan Tien releases tensions and relaxes mind and body, so that Chi can be generated from and towards the Tan Tien. One learns to let mind and body, and the glands and organs have a dialogue with each other with the Tan Tien leading the way.

The Microcosmic Orbit meditation is the best way to maintain the original Chi, as it fills our energy reservoirs and keeps our meridians open. We also enhance our ability to take in, process and store the Chi we receive from the Three Forces: the Universal, Earth and Cosmic Particle energies. Our Chi reservoir is raised and enriched. The preservation and enhancement of Original Chi is essential for the acquisition of external energies; in the Universal Tao System called, “acquired Chi”.

The Cosmic Orbit meditation is also essential for Sexual Kung Fu which is the practice of transforming sexual energy into life force energy and life force energy into spiritual energy. The higher the spiritual energy or Wisdom energy we create, the easier will be the process of successive transformations.

The ability to move Chi and hormones upward and renew our central body functions is ultimately determined by the quantity and quality of Chi in the Lower Tan Tien. The availability of Chi depends in turn on the quality of the breathing.

Iron Shirt Chi Kung and Tai Chi Chi Kung

Tan Tien Chi Kung has a particularly close connection with the three basic Iron Shirt Practices which focus on the strengthening of the internal organs and firm rooting, the changing and strengthening of the tendons and the cleansing and renewal of the bone marrow. In the Iron Shirt practices, compression creates space for new Chi in the muscles, tendons and the bones, as the fat which has been accumulated there is expelled. With the process of aging, fat tends to accumulate, so that the bones in particular lose their regenerative function, as fat takes the place of the blood cells.

Through bone breathing the regenerative capacity of the bone marrow is restored. New red and white blood cells start to regrow after the fat has been expelled.

Maintaining a firm but gentle Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien is also at the heart of creating Chi pressure needed in Tai Chi Chi Kung.

In no other Taoist practice are consciousness, posture and energy circulation so intimately interwoven as in Tai Chi Chi Kung. This is beautifully illustrated by the book on the Inner Structure of Tai Chi by Mantak Chia and Juan Li.

It is not accidental that Tai Chi has become widely popular as a way to preserve and enhance health and self-healing, although most practitioners may not be very aware of its inner structure. They may see it as a pleasant form of higher gymnastics and not have an inkling of its inner energy structure. Somehow, in the initial stage, it may be the intuition of their body which leads them to Tai Chi. Tai Chi Chi Kung provides a synthesis of all learning processes on the use of Chi from other Universal Tao practices.

In Tai Chi Chi Kung, the Lower Tan Tien, as the locus of the center of gravity in the body, plays a key role. The whole training in Tai Chi Chi Kung is directed towards bringing and keeping the center of gravity downward in the Lower Tan Tien. One may call it the practice of learning to come “down to earth”.

Tai Chi’s movement is exactly counter to that of today’s global culture with its upward movement which disconnects people from the earth, so they lose their structural alignment with gravity and their Chi pressure. As a result they lose their inner power, physically, mentally and spiritually. When the center of gravity comes down, also the sense of weight of the body goes down. One starts to feel lighter; it is as if one is less affected by the law of gravity and feels more free and spacious as well as more grounded. This opens the way for the transfer of consciousness into higher bodies which are free of gravity. This is only safe and wise, in the Taoist view, if and when the body remains grounded and centered. The higher you want to go, the more you have to ground. Precisely for this grounding, Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien needs to grow. One can exercise Chi pressure downward into the ground, so that the Earth force will resonate and bounce up. If one is not grounded and centered and there is no good Chi pressure in the Lower Tan Tien, it is unavoidable that fear accumulates, and it is even more difficult to center and touch ground; it blocks Chi by creating tension in the body especially in the kidneys.

The connection with the earth declines and a sense of being at ease and at home in one’s own body is weakened. Life is increasingly experienced in terms of outside pressure. This leads to an inner state in which the body feels compelled to experience life as a threat coming from outside against which the body has to defend itself and organize itself.

In this process the body’s energies, rather than serving the growth of inner balance, are turned against “the others” and the world as the actual or potential enemy. The very basis of existence becomes one which is marked by and legitimizes aggression. Competition and the creation of a win/lose situation becomes a compulsion.

In this situation, Tan Tien Chi Kung, Tai Chi Chi Kung and other

Taoist practices are a blessing, as they help the student to rediscover and regain the inner way of reconnecting with their own center and ground. They also create awareness of the inner structure of the body and of the glorious unity between high and low, heaven and earth and the mutual relationships between the sexual organs, the perineum, the anus , the belly, the mind and the spirit.

When grounded and rooted, one can come to feel at home and at ease and peace with oneself. Then one becomes less vulnerable and swayed by the external circumstances, no matter what happens around one.

The Tan Tien Chi Kung training of smiling to one's pelvic floor and embracing one's body in all its functions enables one, both physically and psychologically to remain centered and rooted. The more you are centered and rooted, the less others can push you.

Training in centering, grounding and rooting and moving from your center, coordinating the contraction of anus and perineum so as to gather internal pressure, has major implications for one's relationship to the world. If one feels safe and at ease with oneself, there is no need to project one's own negative energies on others. As a result, others are less likely to see you as their opponent or enemy. Also, as one exudes inner power, there is reason for others to be respectful.

If they still want to attack you, they cannot push you over, as you have learned to lead the energy of the opponent into the ground. So in actual fact they do not push you but the air with which you are connected, in view of your alignment. Who can push over the Earth and the Universe?

The more intimate you become with the energies of the universe in your inner structure, the less vulnerable you become until you have become invulnerable. That means that you are one with the Tao and all imbalances in the pressure from inside and outside have been dissolved.

Tai Chi Chi Kung is also a powerful antidote against aging, which is greatly accelerated by a movement upward of the center of gravity, with the consequent loss of power and stability. This movement can be reversed by bringing the focus of attention down to the Lower Tan Tien which is the purpose of Tan Tien Chi Kung.

For this, the mind has to undo itself from that which prevents it from inner relaxation, as true attention and mindfulness can only grow if the mind is freed from negative emotions and mental states and learns to practice emptiness. Then it can create the conditions for new fullness and one can see that life consists of cycles: fullness and emptiness, living and dying, beginnings and ends, old and new, seasons and phases, days and nights, mornings and evenings, and dark and light.

This is precisely what Tai Chi Chi Kung practice focuses on: the continuous flow between Yin and Yang positions whereby each move towards fullness becomes a condition for emptiness, and fullness can only arise out of emptiness.

With the center in the Lower Tan Tien, the body can move in perfect alignment with gravity. It can only do so if the breath is kept low and the diaphragm finds itself in a relaxed state, as it responds to the relaxation in the Lower Tan Tien.

Such a process towards relaxation is the very aim and art as a play of movements; to become a child again, finding joy and delight in the practice for its own sake.

In the process of rhythmic movement, breathing may gradually become rhythmic, deep, smooth and slow. The Wind Force can then quiet the Fire Force, as the Chi of the overheated heart is led to the lungs so that heartburn can be prevented.

Thus deep breathing has a cooling and calming effect and balances the Fire when it gets too excited. The Water element is activated when excess heat of the heart is brought down through the spine to warm up the kidneys. The Water energy of the kidneys can be guided upward to cool the heart.

It is the process of rhythmic movement and relaxation from the Lower Tan Tien and in line with gravity, which makes the Earth energy bounce up. Water and Fire can gradually enter into balance. In this connection, it is interesting to know that the original Chinese character for Chi was written as “no fire” and the Chi Kung practitioner in those times was aiming at achieving a state of “no fire”.

Chapter VII
Awakening to Subtle Wonders

Essential to the creation and preservation of internal pressure and inner power in the Lower Tan Tien is that we turn inward and begin to listen to our body and natural wisdom and what it wishes to tell us. We need to learn to understand and interpret its signs and processes.

As a rule, these have accumulated in our bodies and their organs and glands as the sediment of early traumas which we have not been able or willing to give up. We may even have cherished them, as they give us reason to continue living in a state of separation and depression, so that we can justify our state of "dis-ease" and negative emotions.

Subtle wonders may arise at any time under any circumstance as moments of awakening to our virtual powers and potentials. Disease may be a more forceful sign calling upon us to awaken. Dis- ease can be an invitation to turn inward.

Subtle wonders lie in the small spaces of awareness every new day. In these we may be awakened to our virtual Chi Kung state. What makes us truly feel at ease and what are the situations, places, postures and patterns in ourselves? Which make us sensitive to subtle wonders in ourselves and others? Subtle wonders arise from the deep down longing for infinity from which a sense of curiosity arises. This then cultivates awareness and mindfulness from which open-mindedness arises in which we suddenly begin to see reality from a new angle. Our energy is changing and we begin to feel and see ourselves and the world in a new way.

Chi Kung and especially Tan Tien Chi Kung can help in reconnecting with ourselves and reconnect us with the earth and the Universe through all the exercises of grounding and centering. From these, a sense of belonging arises in our body.

The great Chi Kung Master the Buddha said: "You are me and me is you". This goes back to the ancient Hindu view on the identity of "this" and "that", to the root of the epistemology of the unity and interconnectedness of all phenomena which we also find in the Taoist view of the Universe. Recent insights in quantum physics and relativity theory also support this view.

Humility is a state of being truthful and sensitive to this insight and is a condition for healers to set in motion a process of self-healing and to transmit healing Chi. The person who seeks healing is willing to entrust themself to the healer who acknowledges a common humanity.

To the extent that we will be able to forgive and accept ourselves, others and the world, we create an ability in ourselves to return to our pre-natal breathing pattern and not only create peace within ourselves but also around us.

Such an attitude will also help us to view problems around us, not as obstacles outside ourselves, but as opportunities for learning and solving them “from within”. It is significant in this context that the Chinese word for “crisis” has at the same time a negative as well as a positive connotation. What is “a problem”, a “negative” occurrence, is at the same time an “opportunity” to learn.

This is precisely the deep sense of the Yin and Yang symbol in which there is a light spot in the dark and a dark spot in the light. How truthful and wise is this insight which honors the inherent reality of a unity of opposites in everything in the universe, including ourselves. How liberating is this Taoist view of the unity of positive and negative energies, used in the first Fusion practice.

Prenatal breathing and the natural pressure which goes with it are indispensable for the growth and recuperation of inner power. They can only be regained and sustained by an abundant supply of Chi. For the higher body we need a solid foundation and Chi supply in the body in which we now live.Therein lies the relevance of Tan Tien Chi Kung.

Fig. 7.1 Yin and Yang Symbol

Originality of Chi Kung as Active Energy Meditation

It is precisely for this reason that, at a very early stage, Chinese Taoist practice took distance from the "spiritualist" path. Meditation by the mind at the expense of the body and in disconnection from the body is seen as the only legitimate form of meditation in some schools.

The Taoist position emerged, as it was observed that this kind of "passive meditation" was inspired by and led to a serious contempt for the body, thereby undermining balance, ease and well being.

It is this focus on the integration of mind with Chi and of the cultivation and transformation of Chi as an internal active meditation practice which constitutes the originality of the Chi Kung practice. In this it is different from all other approaches to meditation in all religious traditions. Undoubtedly this Chinese originality is deeply connected with a pragmatic sense of life which is so characteristic of Chinese culture.

At the same time the originality of the Chinese Taoist active meditation tradition has its roots in a positive approach to the entire body and in particular to sexuality. Sexuality is, in most religious traditions and "high" cultures (in contradistinction to indigenous and folk cultures), treated with contempt and fear as it is associated with the "lower" part of the body. It is seen as the locus of (animal) instincts and therefore an obstacle to "higher" pursuits and the spiritual path.

The Universal Tao practices of Healing Love instead acknowledge and respect the creative force. Healing Love truly emphasizes health, love and sex as the essential ingredients for spiritual growth.

Unlike in the Western approach to health and medicine, Chi Kung does not focus on particular parts of the body when sickness or pain is experienced. It looks at the totality of the processes taking place in the relations between the Five Elements and Phases, so that imbalances are treated and mutual adjustment enhanced.

Chi Kung is based on premises which are qualitatively different from those inspiring modern Western conceptions of medicine. It is a process and method of practicing breathing to increase Chi pressure to enhance health, self-healing and energy transformation.

Fig. 7.2 Creation Cycle in Nature

Chi Kung and the Rise of a New Perspective

The rise in interest in Chi Kung as a practice which enables people to take care of themselves and make use of their own innate potential to cultivate their health and heal themselves is not surprising. In the process of Chi Kung practice, new forms of consciousness/spirit may arise which are able to direct, steer and guide the Chi in new directions.

All genuine transformations have invariably started as small awakenings, subtle wonders that were hardly perceptible.

One of the subtle wonders which may happen is that you decide to start with the practice of Tan Tien Chi Kung and train in learning to differentiate the activation of different points of the anus. You coordinate the contraction of the anus and the perineum so as to seal the pelvic floor. This creates the internal pressure through the creation of the Chi ball needed for our health to open the way for self-reliance, self-healing and self-realization.

Another subtle wonder could be that we decide to do some squatting every day to open our kua and enjoy numerous benefits from it, as it heightens the quality of our practice of the Microcosmic Orbit, Healing Love and makes us more grounded and lighter at the same time.

Another subtle wonder might be that we discover that when we have opened our kua, we can walk again in a new way and see the world with new eyes. We walk straight and tall, and one day realize that there is so much to learn and to appreciate in this world full of mysteries and beauty.

TAO YOGA der Liebe

Der geheime Weg zur unvergänglichen Liebeskraft

Ansata

Viele bewußt suchende Menschen wissen um die Wichtigkeit der Sexualenergie auf ihrem geistigen Weg und haben deshalb oft große Probleme im Umgang mit ihr. Obwohl es zur Zeit viele Bücher über die geheimen Liebeslehren des Ostens gibt, ist bisher keines einer interessierten Leserschaft zugänglich gemacht worden, das auch ein Wissen um das Wie preisgegeben hätte, also exakte Anleitungen, Übungen und Techniken zum legend enumwobenen „Tao der Liebe“. Alle mußten bis heute auf. das Buch warten, das ohne Verschlüsselung und nachvollziehbar zeigt, wie man seine sexuellen Energien bewahren, transformieren und als Brücke zu höheren Bewußtseinsstufen nutzen kann.
Mantak ‘Chia, der als erster die geheime Praxis des inneren Energiekreislaufs und einen klaren und übersichtlichen Schulungsweg zur Aktivierung der Lebenskraft Chi in seinem Buch „Tao Yoga“ veröffentlicht hat, bringt in diesem neuen, umfangreichen Buch die bisher überall geheimgehaltenen Methoden zur Aktivierung und Umwandlung des Sexualelixiers Ching, und zeigt anhand eines reich illustrierten Schulungsweges, daß die Sexualenergie als unerschöpfliche Quelle von körperlicher Kraft, Gesundheit und spiritueller Entwicklung nicht nur von einigen wenigen Auserwählten, sondern von jedermann genutzt werden kann.
In minutiös geschilderten Einzelschritten und mit einem bisher nie gezeigten Detailreichtum offenbart der Autor körperliche, seelische und geistige Praktiken des Tao Yoga der Liebe. Er lehrt natürliche Wege, die Sexualenergie zu steigern, stärken und zu erhalten, und gibt Übungen. zur Heilung von Störungen der Sexualfunktionen. Er zeigt die zentralen Techniken zur Verfeinerung dieser Energie und zu neuen, ungeahnten Möglichkeiten mit ihr im Liebesakt.

Der Tao Meister lehrt Mann und Frau anhand dieses Buches neue und subtile Formen des Energieaustausches, faszinierende Körper- und Geisteswahrnehmungen, und führt Liebende über deren persönliche Begrenzungen hinaus zu völlig neuen Seibszuständen und zu einem, totalen Orgasmus von Körper, Seele und Geist in dem beide wirklich eins werden, „Tao Yoga der Liebe“: ein außergewöhnliches Buch, das sich nicht nur an den Mann richtet, ‘sondern auch, jede Frau brennend interesieren wird.

Mantak Chia studierte bereits im Alter von sieben Jahren bei buddhistischen. Mönchen im Tailand. Später unterwies ihn in Hong Kong Meister Lu in Aikido, Yoga und Tai Chi, und in Singapore Meister Meugi in Kundalini Yoga und buddhistischer Boxtechnik. Ende zwanzig, begegnete er Meister Pan Yu, der ihn in eine Synthese aus taoistischen, buddhistischen und Chan-Lehren einweihte, und Meister Cheng Yao-Lung.der ihn Thai- Boxen, Kung Fu und geheime Shaolin-Methoden des Umgangs mit der inneren Kraft sowie die „Eisenhand Technik“ lehrte. Meister Pan Yu unterwies ihn später nochmals Und brachte ihm unbekanntere Varianten der Kundalini-Praxis sowie die Technik des „Stählernen Körpers“ bei. Um die Wirkungsweisen der Heilungsenergie nochbesser zu verstehen und . westliche-Menschen zu lehren, studierte Mantak Chia noch zwei Jahre westliche Medizin und Anatomie. Meister Mantak Chia lebt und lehrt heute in New York.

Dankeswort

Bis zur Fertigstellung dieses Buches mußten mehr als zehn Jahre vergehen. An erster Stelle möchte ich jenen taoistischen Meistern danken, die so gütig waren, ihr Wissen mit mir zu teilen. Nie hätten sie wohl damit gerechnet, daß es eines Tages an Abendländer weitergegeben werden würde. Das ist Tao.

H. Reid Shaw fühle ich mich besonders zu Dank verpflichtet für die Ermutigung, die er mir nach meiner Ankunft in Amerika zuteil werden ließ, und für seine viele Arbeit an einer ersten Fassung des Manuskripts.

Ich danke auch den vielen Mitarbeitern, die diesem Werk seine endgültige Form gegeben haben: der Künstlerin Susan MacKay, Günther Weil, Rylin Malone und allen meinen Schülern für ihr Feedback. Ferner danke ich Meister T. K. Shih, Kim Wang und Jüan Li für ihre ausgezeichneten künstlerischen Beiträge; Jeffrey Antin und Marcia Kerwit für ihre Ergänzungen; meiner Assistentin Jo Ann Cutreria für die Eingabe des Textes in den Computer und für ihre sonstige unermüdliche Hilfe, Daniel Bobek für die vielen Stunden am Computer und Barbara Somerfield für ihre Geduld beim Verlegen meines Buchs.

Ein besonders herzlicher Dank gebührt Michael Winn für seine selbstlose Mühe und dafür, daß er derart sprachgewandt und zutreffend auf Englisch ausdrückt, was mein Chinesisch mir nicht gestattet.

Ohne meine Frau Maneewan wäre dieses Buch ein akademisches Werk geworden.
Meine Dankbarkeit und Liebe gilt ihren Fähigkeiten.

Über den Autor: Mantak Chia

Mantak Chia wurde am 4. April 1944 in Thailand geboren. Im Älter von sechs oder sieben Jahren lernte er in den Sommerferien von buddhistischen Mönchen die Technik des «Sitzens und der Geistesstille». Freilich war er alles andere als ein passives und stilles Kind. Auf der Mittelschule in Hongkong trat er mit sportlichen Leistungen hervor. In dieser Zeit erlernte er auch das traditionelle Thai Boxen und begegnete Meister Lu, der ihn in Tai Chi Chuan unterwies. Etwas später machte Meister Lu ihn mit Aikido, Yoga und fortgeschrittenem Tai Chi vertraut. Mit der esoterischen Praxis kam er jedoch erst im Alter von achtzehn Jahren nach seiner Rückkehr nach Thailand in Berührung. Dort unterrichtete ihn ein älterer Klassenkamerad, Cheng Sue Sue, ein Schüler des Yi-Eng, in der esoterischen Praxis des Tao bis zur Stufe der Vereinigung von Mensch und Himmel.

In seinen Zwanzigern studierte Meister Chia unter Meister Meugi in Singapur, wo er Kundalini Yoga und Buddhistische Boxtechnik lernte. Mit dieser Methode konnte er schon bald Energieblockaden in seinen inneren Organen beseitigen und bei Patienten, die seinen Meister aufsuchten, kalte, feuchte oder kranke Energie entfernen, wodurch sie gesund wurden. Der junge Mantak Chia spürte dagegen beim Kundalini Yoga, daß eine allzu große Hitze entsteht, die gefährlich werden kann. Später verband er diesen Yoga deshalb mit kühlenden Techniken aus der taoistischen Praxis.

Ende Zwanzig begegnete er Meister Pan Yu, der eine Synthese aus taoistischen, buddhistischen und Chan-Lehren entwik-kelt hatte, und Meister Cheng Yao-Lung, der Thai Boxen und Kung Fu miteinander zu einem neuen System verschmolzen hatte. Von Meister Cheng Yao-Lung lernte er auch die geheime Shaolin-Methode des Umgangs mit der inneren Kraft wie auch die Eisenhemd-Technik, die man als «Reinigen des Marks und Erneuerung der Sehne» bezeichnet. Meister Pan Yu unterwies ihn in einer Variante der Kundalini-Praxis und in der Technik des «Stählernen Körpers», die den Körper vor Verfall schützt. Meister Pan Yu praktiziert noch heute in Hong Kong. Er überträgt bei der Behandlung seinen Patienten seine eigene Lebensenergie. Um die Wirkungsmechanismen der Heilungsenergie besser zu verstehen, studierte Chia außerdem zwei Jahre lang westliche Medizin und Anatomie.

Bei all diesen Beschäftigungen arbeitete Meister Chia noch als Manager der thailändischen Niederlassung der Firma Ge-stetner; er war Verkaufsleiter für Offsetmaschinen und kannte sich genauestens in der Funktionsweise der Kopier- und Druckmaschinen seiner Firma aus. Er ist wohl der einzige taoistische Meister auf der Welt, der in seinem Wohnzimmer einen Computer stehen hat. Meister Chia ist verheiratet und hat einen Sohn. Seine Frau Maneewan ist als Medizinaltechnikerin tätig. Kurzum: Er selbst ist der lebende Beweis dafür, daß die Praktiken, die er lehrt, sehr erdverbunden sind, das Alltagsleben zu bereichern vermögen und keineswegs verlangen, daß man sich als Einsiedler aus der Gesellschaft zurückzieht.

Chias Hauptanliegen ist es, die Lehren von jedem Mystizismus zu entkleiden, wie den vermeintlich nur Gurus zueigenen «Kräften» oder der Abhängigkeit von jenseitigen und magischen Einflüssen. Statt dessen strebt er danach, ein berechenbares und zuverlässiges Arbeitsmodell vorzustellen, das man als wissenschaftlichen Umgang mit Energiesystemen bezeichnen könnte. Er hofft, daß dies mit der Zeit technologische Entwicklungen in Gang setzt, die den Fortschritt auf diesem Gebiet erleichtern oder beschleunigen können. Aus diesem Grunde fordert er auch die medizinische Fachwelt auf, zu untersuchen, was er anzubieten hat. Schon jetzt gibt es eine Reihe von Medizinern, Rechtsanwälten und Computerfachleuten, die an sich selbst die Vorzüge von Meister Chias Methoden erproben konnten. Ihnen und anderen Mitgliedern der wissenschaftlichen Welt obliegt es nun, sich Meister Chia anzuschließen, um die Kluft zwischen Verstand und Seele, zwischen Geist und Körper, zwischen Wissenschaft und Religion überbrücken zu helfen. Dieser Aufgabe hat er sein Leben verschrieben.

EINLEITUNG

Die taoistische «Zweifache Höherentwicklung» und die Suche nach sexueller Liebe

von

Michael Winn

«Welch ein Jammer! Ein Berggipfel, kaum größer als ein Zoll im Quadrat, stellt seit Jahrhunderten die Quelle größter Inspiration und größten Leidens dar.»

Anonymer chinesischer Dichter über die Besessenheit des Mannes von der Sexualität der Frau Tausende von Büchern sind schon geschrieben worden, um Männern und Frauen dabei zu helfen, die Probleme zu lösen, die auf der endlosen Suche nach der sexuell erfüllenden Liebe entstehen. Was könnte man da noch Neues schreiben?

Dieses Buch ist keine weitere blumige philosophische Abhandlung über die Ekstase orientalischer Liebestechniken. Vielmehr ist es ein pragmatisches Handbuch, das die geheimen Liebeslehren von vier verschiedenen lebenden Tao Meistern zu einem neuen Ganzen verschmilzt; diese Meister suchte Mantak Chia im Verlauf von fünfzehnjährigen Reisen und Studien im Fernen Osten auf. Wie er selbst sagt: «Ich habe ungefähr eine Tonne Bücher gelesen, in denen zwar steht, wie großartig die esoterische Liebeskunst ist, aber in keinem wird präzise erklärt, wie man so etwas macht. Also entschloß ich mich, selbst darüber zu schreiben.»

In den meisten Büchern über taoistische Sexualpraktiken fehlen Hinweise darüber, wie die Samenenergie transformiert wird, nachdem man sie erst einmal einbehalten hat, wo man sie im Körper speichern soll und wie man sie am besten mit einer Frau austauschen kann. Auch das Zurückhalten des Samens wird nur beiläufig behandelt. Chia hat die alten taoistischen Praktiken zu einfachen, aber wirkungsvollen Methoden verbunden, die auch für Menschen des Westens leicht zu erlernen sind. Dieses Buch richtet sich vornehmlich an männliche Leser aus einem ganz einfachen Grund: Die meisten Männer sind sexuell schwächer als Frauen und verlieren durch die Sexualität mehr Energie als diese. Ein späterer Band wird die Sexualpraktiken des Esoterischen Tao Yoga für Frauen beschreiben, zu denen auch das willentliche Anhalten des Menstruationsflusses gehört.

Das sexuelle Ungleichgewicht zwischen Mann und Frau ist offensichtlich: Die Frau kann ihren Mann sexuell so lange in sich aufnehmen, wie sie will, weshalb die Taoisten auch sagen, daß ihre Yin-Essenz schier unerschöpflich ist. Die körperliche Liebeskraft des Mannes dagegen wird durch die Energiemenge begrenzt, die ihm für seine Erektion zur Verfügung steht. Seine Yang-Essenz ermüdet also leichter. Die Frau ist sexuell stärker als der Mann, weil sie dies schon aus biologischen Gründen sein muß: Ihre Fortpflanzungsorgane müssen die Belastung der physischen Erzeugung, des Austragens, Gebarens und Ernährens von Kindern verkraften können. Die Auswirkungen, die dieses biologische Ur-Ungleichgewicht auf den Mann hat, sind sehr weitreichend. Es löst eine ganze Kettenreaktion aus, die männliches Denken und Fühlen auf allen Ebenen durchdringen kann, von der Ehe über das Verhältnis zur Arbeit bis zu den kulturell bedingten Rollen, die wir uns zulegen; auch die geistig-spirituellen Modelle, an denen wir unsere Selbstentfaltung und unser inneres Wachstum orientieren, werden davon berührt.

In der Tiefe ihres Herzens begegnen Männer der unendlichen Sexualfähigkeit der Frau mit ebensoviel Furcht und Entsetzen wie mit Faszination. Im allgemeinen fühlen sie sich dadurch sexuell verunsichert und versuchen diese Unsicherheit wiederum durch andere Stärken zu kompensieren. Vielleicht ist die sexuelle Verunsicherung der Hauptgrund dafür, daß Männer stets danach getrachtet haben, die Frau körperlich, politisch, finanziell, intellektuell und religiös zu unterdrücken. Wird dieses sexuelle Ungleichgewicht berichtigt, könnte uns das gleichzeitig auf dem Weg zur Errichtung einer harmonischeren Gesellschaft helfen. Allerdings waren die taoistischen Sexuallehren vor allem auf die Gesundheit und die spirituelle Erfüllung des Individuums ausgerichtet.

Die Suche nach der sexuell erfüllenden Liebe hat unter Menschen, die zu vorurteilslos oder wissenschaftlich eingestellt sind, um an eine der traditionellen Versionen eines Gottes zu glauben, eine geradezu religiöse Dimension angenommen. Die Triebkraft hinter diesem Glauben an die romantische Liebe, an die äußerste Hingabe an eine einzige Person, ist die Kraft der sexuellen Erfahrung. Sie ist es, die etwas Greifbares anbietet, was man mit einem anderen teilen kann, ein Sakrament, das persönlich und gegenwärtig ist.

Möglicherweise begann der Niedergang der Religion im Abendland zu dem Zeitpunkt, als das Erlebnis der Sexualität stärker und wichtiger wurde als die geistige Erfahrung, die eine Religion ihren Gläubigen durch Gebet oder Brüderlichkeit vermitteln konnte. Die gegenwärtige religiöse Wiederbelebung in den Kulturen des Westens könnte ironischerweise zum Teil auf eine sexuelle Ermüdung zurückzufuhren sein, die der sexuellen Revolution nachfolgte. Sex wurde zu einer Droge, zum Opium für Unzufriedene. Doch auch die totale sexuelle Freiheit vermochte dem Menschen nicht jene innere Stabilität zu geben, deren er am meisten bedurfte. Heute wenden sich die Menschen wieder der Ehe oder der Religion zu, um zu einer Erfahrung des Absoluten zu finden.

Die Taoisten bieten weder Religion noch Ehe als Mittel zum Gleichgewicht an, es sei denn die innige Verbindung der subtilen Energien, die sie als Yin und Yang bezeichnen. Sie ermutigen nur jeden Menschen, seine natürliche innere Lebenskraft, das Chi, zu entwickeln. Aus diesem Zusammenhang heraus wurden die sehr verfeinerten Methoden zur Stärkung der sexuellen Vitalität für alleinstehende und verheiratete Männer entwickelt. Von diesen Methoden kann auf verschiedene Art Gebrauch gemacht werden, aber hauptsächlich wird dieses Buch zwei Gruppen von Lesern anziehen.

Die einen suchen weltliches Glück in der Form von körperlicher, emotionaler und geistiger Befriedigung. Dazu gehören alle, die ihre persönlichen Liebesbeziehungen stärken, sexuelle Frustrationen mildern, sexuelle Langeweile vertreiben, Impotenz heilen, feuchte Träume und vorzeitige Ejakulationen verhindern wollen und ganz allgemein ein langes Leben und stabile Gesundheit sich wünschen. Wer diszipliniert ist und die Übungen dieses Buches durchführt, kann all das erreichen.

Die anderen sehen sich auf einem spirituellen Weg und möchten ihre sexuellen Wünsche mit ihrer Meditationspraxis oder ihren geistigen Glaubenssätzen in Einklang bringen können. Die Schüler, die bereits bei Meister Chia lernen, ihre sexuelle Energie zu entwickeln, entstammen einem erstaunlich breiten Spektrum spiritueller Disziplinen. Es enthält fast jede Form des Yoga, wie Kundalini, Hatha, Kriya, Tantra und Siddha Yoga; aber auch die Kampfkünste, die Transzendentale Meditation, Zen, Buddhismus, Sufismus, Hinduismus und Christentum zählen dazu. Die Vermutung liegt nahe, daß doch viele, so zufrieden sie sonst mit ihren spirituellen Grundanschauungen sind, das Bedürfnis verspüren, ihre Sexualität besser in ihre geistige Entwicklung zu integrieren.

Die taoistische Praktik der Entwicklung und Verfeinerung des Chi will die göttlichen oder feinstofflichen Energien in den menschlichen Körper integrieren, um ein dynamisches Gleichgewicht der gegensätzlichen Energien Yin und Yang zu erreichen. Das Tao ist die unbeschreibliche Summe und absolute Urquelle dieser Energien, die sich in immer wandelnder Gestalt manifestieren. Die praktisch gesinnten Taoisten gingen davon aus, daß der Mensch mit der ihm am leichtesten zugänglichen Energie beginnen sollte, nämlich mit der sexuellen Anziehung zwischen Mann und Frau, um diese als Sprungbrett in feinstofflichere Bereiche zu benutzen.

Der Esoterische Tao Yoga ist weder eine Religion noch ein Erlösungsweg. Seine Vision ist sehr weitreichend und lehrt, daß Erleuchtung und physische Unsterblichkeit nur Stufen in einem Prozeß der menschlichen Ganzwerdung darstellen. Trotzdem bleibt er bodennah und praktisch orientiert. Die Grundsubstanz für diese Entwicklung kann jederzeit im gewöhnlichen Leben eines jeden Menschen gefunden werden.

Die taoistische Lehre von der physischen Unsterblichkeit behauptet nicht, daß der Mensch nicht mehr sterben wird. Vielmehr ist damit gemeint, daß er vor dem Tod die Möglichkeit hat, einen «festen» oder substantiellen spirituellen Körper zu entwickeln, den man auch als den «Unsterblichen Körper», als «Sonnenkörper», als «Kristallkörper» und unter anderen Bezeichnungen kennt. Die nächstmögliche westliche Entsprechung zu einem taoistischen Unsterblichen ist vielleicht ein Engel. Anders als jene Schulen, die lehren, daß man das individuelle Ego in der Glückseligkeit der kosmischen Einheit auflösen muß, um zu einem Heiligen zu werden, bestehen die Taoisten darauf, daß jeder Adept seine individuelle Natur in einem Körper bewahren soll, physischer oder geistiger Art. Nur so kann er die Entwicklung seiner Seele verfolgen bis zur endgültigen Vereinigung mit «Wu Chi», dem Nichts, aus dem die Einheit des Tao entspringt. Dieses «Im-eigenen-Körper-Blei-ben» bewahrt den Adepten davor, sich einem Guru, einem göttlichen Wesen oder einer sonstigen religiösen Autorität völlig zu unterwerfen. Niemand kann Ihnen Ihre spirituelle Arbeit abnehmen.

Chia sieht seine Rolle lediglich als die des Lehrers, der seinen Schülern hilft, durch die Entwicklung ihrer Chi-Energie selbständig zu werden. Er überträgt nur deshalb Chi (oder sakti) auf seine Schüler, um ihnen ein besseres Gespür dafür zu geben, was es zu entwickeln gilt; dagegen weigert er sich, sich auf emotionale Abhängigkeiten einzulassen. Er beschreibt sich selbst als Führer eines Lastwagenkonvois: «Ich kann jedem Schüler eine Landkarte in die Hand geben, einen Satz Werkzeuge und eine Reparaturanleitung für sein Fahrzeug. Wir brechen gemeinsam auf und helfen und lieben einander so weit wie möglich auf dem Weg. Doch letztlich muß jeder allein vorankommen. Manche werden unterwegs zusammenbrechen, andere werden sich verirren oder eine ganz andere Strecke wählen. Manche werden vielleicht auch einen besseren Weg finden als den vorgezeichneten. Als Lehrer kann ich meinen Schülern nicht mehr anbieten als Karte und Werkzeug mit den präzisen Anweisungen für eine sichere Fahrt.»

Die Taoisten setzen voraus, daß nur wenige Menschen je in das Geheimnis der völligen Erschließung der sexuellen Kraft, die tief im Inneren ihres Körpers schlummert, eindringen werden. Für den Durchschnittsmenschen ist es ein revolutionärer Gedanke, eine tiefe, strahlende Freude am Sex zu haben, die beständig den inneren Kern seines Wesens durchdringt, eine Erfahrung, die weit über der des gewöhnlichen Genitalorgasmus liegt. Der von den Taoisten kultivierte verlängerte «totale Orgasmus von Körper und Seele» gilt meistens als außergewöhnliche Gabe besonders leidenschaftlicher und sensitiver Frauen. Er ist sogar zum größten Mythos der westlichen Kultur geworden: die Frau als leidenschaftliches Objekt romantischer Liebe, als Wesen, das die Liebe zu ihrer wahren Zärtlichkeit hinfuhrt. Nach taoistischer Auffassung kann der Mann auf gleiche Weise an der Liebe teilhaben durch ein äußerst feines und vollkommenes Ausgleichen der sexuellen Energien, das so fühlbar ist wie jede körperliche Empfindung des Genitalorgasmus.

Wie wird es nun für einen Mann möglich, sein sexuelles Erleben und damit zugleich seine gesamte Lebenserfahrung derart radikal umzuwandeln? Paradoxerweise läßt sich dieser «höhere Orgasmus» nur dann entdecken, wenn der «normale» oder genitale Orgasmus, der die westlichen Sexologen so beschäftigt, an Betonung verliert. Die drei Grundstufen der taoistischen «Zweifachen Höherentwicklung» der Sexualenergie für Paare sind folgende:

1) Der Mann lernt, seinen Penis so lange erigiert zu halten, wie er wünscht, und dabei kein Sperma zu ejakulieren.

2) Mann und Frau lenken ihre Sexualenergie durch bestimmte Körperkanäle in höhere Regionen des Herzens, des Hirns und der Drüsen um.

3) Der Mann tauscht seine hochgeladene Energie mit der Komplementärenergie der Frau aus.

Für den Mann hegt der Schlüssel darin, seine Gefühle und feinstofflichen Energiekanäle für die Essenz der Frau zu öffnen und sie während des Geschlechtsakts in sich aufzunehmen.

Für Männer ohne Liebespartnerin bieten die Taoisten eine Abänderung dieser Praktik an, die man als «Einfache Höherentwicklung» bezeichnet. Sie zeigt dem alleinstehenden Mann, wie er seine Sexualenergie auf kreative Weise im Alltag umsetzen oder einfach zu guter Gesundheit und Lebensfreude ohne sexuelle Frustration finden kann, Ziel der taoistischen Meister war es nicht, eine Art neuen Mythos vom Super-Macho-Orgasmus zu kreieren, nach dem jeder krampfhaft streben sollte, und damit nur einen neuen Konkurrenzkampf zu erzeugen. Sie wollten vielmehr Männern wie Frauen praktische Methoden in die Hand geben, um sie mit Hilfe ihrer natürlichen Energien tiefer in das größte Geschenk des Lebens eindringen zu lassen, in die Freiheit, zu lieben.

Was hat die Entwicklung und Vervollkommnung sexueller Energie nun mit Liebe zu tun, sei es die persönliche romantische Liebe oder die mitfühlende religiöse? Nach der taoistischen Lehre obliegt es der Verantwortung von Mann und Frau, die Mächte des Himmels und der Erde in sich selbst zu einem harmonischen Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Dies fuhrt wiederum zu Harmonie in anderen Lebensbereichen. Auf der esoterischen Stufe sind alle Akte menschlicher Liebe eine spontane Umwandlung unserer Samen-Essenz. Unsere Samen-Essenz, die Essenz unserer Seele, wird im Körper physisch als Sperma- oder Ovar-Energie gespeichert. Durch unsere Liebe helfen wir nicht nur den geliebten Personen, sondern transformieren etwas von unserer eigenen Essenz auf eine höhere Energieebene. Deshalb betrachten die Taoisten die Sexualität als Primärquelle der Kraft,. welche die Liebe auf menschlicher Ebene bewirkt. Wer dem «Pfad des Herzens» folgt - dem. spontanen und beständigen Lieben all dessen, was ihm begegnet —, wird feststellen, daß er wesentlich kraftvoller vorankommt, wenn er die taoistischen Erkenntnisse des Gebrauchs der Sexualkraft zu diesem Ziel beherzigt.

Zur gleichen Zeit ist es die größere, unsichtbare, kosmische allgegenwärtige Harmonie des Tao, welche die Erfahrung persönlicher Liebe überhaupt geschehen läßt. Der taoistische Begriff «Harmonie» entspricht wohl am ehesten dem westlichen Konzept der «Liebe» oder des Mitgefühls sowohl auf der persönlichen als auch auf der universalen Ebene. Ziel des Taoisten ist es nicht, das menschliche Ego mit seinen unersättlichen Begierden zu befriedigen. Ego und Verstand sollen besänftigt und beruhigt werden, damit die subtilen Energien im Körper zunächst beobachtet und dann zu einer höheren Bewußtseinsebene weiterentwickelt werden können. So erkennt der Verstand seine wahre Rolle innerhalb einer übergeordneten Ordnung der Dinge und kann auf harmonische Weise daran mitarbeiten, die Kräfte im Gleichgewicht zu halten. Die persönlichen Liebesbeziehungen können in diesem Prozeß eine wertvolle Stufe darstellen, einen Mikrokosmos innerhalb der größeren, feinstofflichen Energiefelder des Universums.

Westliche Sexologen werden diese Methoden zweifellos damit abtun, daß ihnen die statistische oder verifizierbare Grundlage fehlt und von einem solch ungenauen Begriff wie «Energie» ausgegangen wird. Auch die westlichen Religionen werden diese Lehren und Praktiken ablehnen, weil sie selbst gegen sexuelle Freude sind, ebenso die asketischen Schulen des Ostens, die glauben, daß spirituelle Erleuchtung nur durch Entsagung, einschließlich sexueller Enthaltsamkeit, erreicht werden kann. Tatsächlich waren die frühen Taoisten Wissenschaftler, die ihre Praktiken auf der präzisen Beobachtung menschlicher Biologie und Psychologie gründeten. Sie waren weder Hedonisten noch Asketen, sondern suchten nach einem Mittelweg, um die größtmögliche geistige Harmonie zwischen Mann und Frau im Einklang mit den Naturgesetzen des Universums zu schaffen. Die tiefgründigen philosophischen Dichtungen der Taoisten vom I Ging bis zu Lao-Tses Tao Te King und zum Geheimnis der Goldenen Blüte geben Zeugnis von dieser erhabenen Vision.

Daß die taoistischen Sexualpraktiken mehrere tausend Jahre lang in der geheimen, mündlichen Überlieferung überlebt haben, ist der beste Beweis für ihre Wirksamkeit. In Gesprächen mit Dutzenden von modernen westlichen Paaren, die diese Praktiken anwenden, bestätigte sich, wie wirkungsvoll diese Methoden noch heute für ganz normale Großstadtmenschen sind: für Junge, Alte, Weiße, Schwarze, Chinesen, Verheiratete und Unverheiratete. Schülern mit Erfahrung in Yoga, den Kampfkünsten oder der Meditation fiel es besonders leicht, die Technik der Sameneinbehaltung zu meistern. Viele wußten bereits um die Wichtigkeit der Sexualenergie auf ihrem spirituellen Weg, kannten aber keine Methode, mit der sie ihr beim Liebesakt Ausdruck verleihen konnten.

Die taoistischen Methoden mögen in manchem den tantrischen Sexualtechniken ähneln, die inzwischen im Westen populär geworden sind. Das Prinzip des Ausgleichs von Männlichem und Weiblichem und der Gebrauch des Körpers als Schmelztiegel der Transformation sind im wesentlichen gleich. Wie Nik Douglas und Penny Slinger in ihrem Standardwerk Sexual Secrets (Inner Traditions, New York 1980) vermuten, könnte das indische Tantra dem alten Taoismus Chinas entstammen und nach Hunderten von Jahren nach China zurückgekommen sein, um die taoistischen Sexualpraktiken wiederzubeleben.

Der Unterschied zwischen beiden Systemen liegt darin, daß der esoterische Taoismus sich nie in einen Schleier geheimer Rituale und Anrufungen religiöser Gottheiten gehüllt hat, was Indisches Tantra oft so fremdartig und unpassend für unsere Kultur macht. In China wurde die Sexualität weitaus offenherziger betrachtet als eine medizinische Form des Heilens und als natürlicher Pfad zum geistigen Gleichgewicht ohne religiöse Obertöne. Englischsprachigen Lesern kann ich Sexual Secrets als Begleitwerk zu diesem Buch sehr empfehlen. Es enthält neue Übersetzungen der klassischen taoistischen Abhandlungen über Sexualität und viele ausgezeichnete Abbildungen taoistischer Liebesstellungen, die in unserem Buch nicht behandelt werden.

Es muß an dieser Stelle betont werden, daß Meister Chia die Methoden der Transformation sexueller Energie nicht getrennt von seiner Meditationspraxis und den anderen taoistischen Künsten wie Tai Chi Chuan und Eisenhemd Chi Kung unterrichtet. Sexuelles Gleichgewicht ist eine sehr wichtige Grundlage für ein gesundes Körper- und Gefühlsleben, aber das taoistische Ziel geht darüber hinaus. Die Primärenergien, die sonst als Antrieb für unsere Begierden, Gefühle und Gedanken dienen, werden gesammelt und verfeinert, um sie in ihren ursprünglichen Zustand reiner Geistigkeit zurückzuführen.

Die alten chinesischen Meister waren keine Narren. Sie wußten, die Liebe zwischen Mann und Frau ist ein Mysterium, das sich nicht unterrichten läßt. Die Sexualität mag zwar nur die Handlangerin der höheren Liebe sein, doch gerade unsere sexuellen Begrenzungen konfrontieren uns oft mit dem Gefühl, daß unsere Partnerbeziehungen oder unser Leben in seiner Gesamtheit unvollständig sind. Die in diesem Buch gelehrten Techniken sind kein mechanistischer Ersatz für die Liebe. Die geheimen taoistischen Liebespraktiken sollten zunächst gemeistert werden, um dann beiseite gelegt zu werden, wenn die Transformation der Sexualenergie als natürliche, schöpferische Kraft des Menschen erfahren wird und ihm so leicht fällt wie Gehen, Sprechen oder Denken. Dann kann die Freude der Sexualität ekstatischer werden als der Orgasmus, kann die Liebe eine Zärtlichkeit erlangen, wie man sie sich nicht vorzustellen vermag.

Michael Winn ist Gesamtherausgeber der Esoterischen Tao Yoga Enzyklopädie und Lehrer am Healing Tao Center in New York. Er wurde 1951 in San Francisco geboren und besuchte das Dartmouth College. Als Journalist, Photograph, Expeditionsleiter und kultureller Beobachter machte er Reisen durch über sechzig Länder. Seit fünfzehn Jahren befaßt er sich mit verschiedenen Formen der Meditation, mit Kundalini Yoga, Chi Kung und Tai Chi. Die Methoden dieses Buches hat er über einen längeren Zeitraum selbst ausprobiert, zunächst im Zölibat und später mit einer Partnerin. Erst nachdem er von ihrer Wirksamkeit in beiden Situationen überzeugt war, erklärte er sich zu einer Zusammenarbeit bereit. Die Hauptgedanken dieses Werks sind die von Mantak Chia, wie sie ihm von seinen taoistischen Lehrern übermittelt wurden.

Chinesisches Sexual-Kung Fu: Seine praktische Eignung für den Westen

von Günther Weil, Ph.D.

Das Amerika der 80er Jahre ist von der Sexualität in gleichem Ausmaß fasziniert wie verwirrt. Wir brauchen die Freuden des Sex, aber wir wissen nicht, wie wir mit den emotionalen Schmerzen und Verwicklungen, die oft daraus entstehen, umgehen sollen. Alle haben wir irgendwann die Erfahrung gemacht, daß unsere sexuellen Aktivitäten und Verpflichtungen zu Konflikten und Schuldgefühlen geführt haben. Woher kommt es, daß die Sexualität eine solche Macht über unser Leben ausübt?

Es steht ohne Zweifel eine biologische Forderung dahinter, der Selbsterhaltungs- und Fortpflanzungstrieb der menschlichen Art. Weniger klar, aber nicht minder entscheidend ist die Art, wie sexuelle Gefühle in das komplizierte Gewebe unserer Kultur eingefügt sind. Allmählich werden kulturbestimmte Sexualgewohnheiten zu Faktoren, die uns unbewußt stark beeinflussen. Die meisten von uns tragen bereits derart lange an dem Ballast der Sexualgebräuche unserer Epoche, daß sie ganz vergessen haben, wie schwer diese Last ist.

Die sexuellen Experimente der 60er Jahre entstanden aus dem kulturellen und sittengeschichtlichen Erbe der judäo-christlichen Ethik. Der durch diese Ethik bedingte neurotische und unfruchtbare Lebensstil vergangener Generationen war einer der Hauptauslöser der sexuellen Revolution. Von der sexuellen Heuchelei abgestoßen und den offensichtlich zerstörerischen Auswirkungen sexueller Unterdrückung alarmiert, suchten immer mehr Menschen nach neuen, aufrichtigeren Möglichkeiten, ihren Bedürfnissen Ausdruck zu verleihen. In den vergangenen zwanzig Jahren konnten wir beobachten, wie die sexuelle Revolution einen vollen Entwicklungskreis durchlief: Was vorher illegal oder verboten war, wurde mit der Zeit zu etwas Alltäglichem, Banalem. Manche versuchen dieses Dilemma zu lösen, indem sie sich zurück zur alten Moral wenden, andere sehen ihr Heil im Zölibat, wieder andere suchen weiter.

Heute, da Konflikte und Unglücklichsein zwischen Mann und Frau nach wie vor verbreitet sind, werden die Auswirkungen der sexuellen Revolution und die sie begleitenden Befreiungsbewegungen kritischer betrachtet. Die Suche nach einer «neuen Grenze» der Sexualität, die sich in den Massenmedien nun abzuzeichnen beginnt, stellt im Prinzip eine Reaktion auf diese mißglückten Moralexperimente dar, Die Menschen hatten geglaubt zu wissen, was sie wollten. Als sie es dann erhielten, mußten sie erkennen, daß ihnen immer noch etwas fehlte. So fragen wir als Einzelne und als Gesamtkultur von neuem nach der Bedeutung unserer Sexualität und nach dem tieferen Sinn unserer Liebes beziehungen.

Aus der New Age Bewegung kommen viele neue Ideen und Vorstellungen zu diesem Thema, z.B. das Konzept von der «Hohen Monogamie», bei der die Herausforderung und das Aufregende bewußter, über die Zeit und den romantischen Egoismus hinausgehender Beziehungen betont wird. Auch das neuerwachte Interesse am indischen und tibetischen Sexualtantra ist ein Beispiel dafür. Andere Richtungen befassen sich mit den Vorzügen des Zölibats. Wieder einmal verändert sich das sexuelle Paradigma. Währenddessen müssen wir staunend mitansehen, wie die «moralische Mehrheit» die alten Repressionen und neurotischen Muster wiederbeleben will, die uns dazu getrieben haben, nach Befreiung zu streben.

Viele möchten die Bedeutung des Konflikts zwischen der alten und der neuen Sexualmoral verstehen. Sie fragen sich, wie man die Stolperstricke sowohl der repressiven als auch der «befreiten» Sexualmoral vermeidet, mit denen man inzwischen nur zu vertraut ist, und wo man Führung finden kann, um zu eigenen, wirklich individuellen Antworten zu kommen.

Leider werden unsere Ansichten zur menschlichen Sexualität ständig von Moden und Vorlieben der Wissenschaft und der gängigen Volksmeinung geprägt und geformt. Diese Trends, die von Dr. Spock bis zur Angst vor Herpes und AIDS reichen, beeinflussen uns ebensosehr wie die tatsächlichen biochemischen Vorgänge in unserem Körper und Geist. Das «Wissen» darum, wer und was wir sind, beziehen wir eher aus unserer Lektüre oder aus dem Fernsehen als aus der wirklich tieferlebten Erfahrung unserer selbst. Wir sind nicht einmal in der Lage, unsere eigene gesellschaftliche Konditionierung klar und unparteiisch zu sehen. Unsere Selbstkenntnis stammt aus der Welt der bekannten Experten, aus Büchern, Filmen, Fernsehsendungen und aus Illustrierten statt aus dem geduldigen Verständnis unserer tiefsten Körpergeruhle oder unserer Intuition.

Die Macht dieser kulturellen Einflüsse wird deutlich, wenn wir die in den Massenmedien zyklisch auftauchenden und sich oft widersprechenden wissenschaftlichen und psychologischen Sexualtheorien genauer betrachten. Daraus läßt sich leicht schließen, daß wertbeständige, dauerhafte und praktische Richtlinien für das körperliche, seelische und geistige Wohlergehen des Menschen kaum zu finden sind. Dies gilt zwar für die meisten unserer gesellschaftlichen und persönlichen Probleme und Schwierigkeiten, besonders aber für das Gebiet der Sexualität. Wir erfahren aus den wissenschaftlichen und den populären Medienquellen nur sehr wenig über die Wirkungsweise der Sexualität, was über die üblichen Fortpflanzungs- und «Lust-prinzip»-Argumente hinausgeht, die das Denken von Freud bis hin zu den heutigen Soziobiologen geprägt haben.

Leider wird unser Leben durch diesen Verlust persönlicher sexueller Selbsterkenntnis erheblich beeinträchtigt. Als Gesamtgesellschaft haben wir beschlossen zu ignorieren, was die großen spirituellen Traditionen über die Sexualenergie und ihre Rolle bei der Transformation des Individuums und seiner spirituellen Entwicklung wußten. Das einstige Wissen wurde durch die institutionalisierten judäo-christlichen Religionen zersplittert und verfälscht, damit es in neuer Gestalt dazu dienen konnte, uns zum Götzendienst an der gesellschaftlichen, politischen und persönlichen Kontrolle und Lenkung des Menschen zu verpflichten. Die institutionalisierte Religionstradition hat bei uns westlichen Menschen den Sexualinstinkt unterdrückt und verzerrt. Daraus sind viele persönliche und soziale Pathologien entstanden. Das Endergebnis dieses Vorgehens ist eine völlige Loslösung der Sexualität von ihren spirituellen Grundlagen.

In dieser Hinsicht hat die westliche Psychoanalyse die große Rolle der unterdrückten Sexualität bei individuellen Neurosen richtig erkannt. So beschränkt das psychoanalytische Menschenbild auch sonst sein mag, dieses Zugeständnis muß man Freud und seinen Erkenntnissen machen, Wilhelm Reich und C,G. Jung kannten die gewaltige Kraft befreiter Sexualenergie und verstanden auch ihre Verbindung zum größeren spirituellen Universum. Jung protestierte zu Recht dagegen, daß Freud Krankheit als Modell für Gesundheit ansah, und seine Kritik an Freuds engem Verständnis des Spektrums und der Wirkung des Unbewußten war ebenfalls berechtigt. Er betonte statt dessen richtigerweise die schöpferische und transzendentale Wirkungsweise der Sexualenergie für das spirituell aufgeschlossene und sich entwickelnde Individuum, Alle diese Psychologen und ihre Nachfolger haben jedoch auf die eine oder andere Weise das eigentliche Ziel verfehlt. Es stimmt zwar, daß der Sexualinstinkt den Menschen sowohl befreien als auch versklaven kann, aber um wirklich befreiend zu wirken, muß er in eine völlig andere Richtung kanalisiert werden. Nur in Verbindung mit dem Bedürfnis nach geistiger Transformation kann die Sexualität wahrhaft befreienden Charakter bekommen.

Weil er nichts über die großen spirituellen Überlieferungen wußte, war Freud unfähig, diesen Punkt zu erkennen. Wilhelm Reich, dessen Arbeit die körperzentrierten Therapien des Human Potential Movement so nachhaltig beeinflußt hat, führte Freuds Erkenntnisse zu einem logischen, kühnen Schluß. Er erkannte deutlich, daß aus der Unterdrückung individuelles Unbehagen und schließlich politischer Faschismus folgen, Doch in seinem Eifer, die destruktiven Wirkungen sexueller Repression zu beleuchten, entging ihm die geistige Transformationsfähigkeit der Sexualenergie. C. G. Jung wiederum stand vor dem entgegengesetzten Problem: Er legte den Schwerpunkt auf die spirituelle und transzendentale Perspektive des Sexualinstinkts und übersah ganz die zentrale Rolle des Körpers bei dieser Entwicklung. Das machte es fast unmöglich, Jungs ausgefeilte Denkmodelle auf die alltäglichen Probleme der Sexualität anzuwenden.

Innerhalb der westlichen Psychologie suchen wir vergebens nach praktischen Disziplinen und Prinzipien, die uns helfen konnten, uns den Konflikten im sexuellen Bereich zu stellen. Dieses Dilemma ist normal und einfach. Schwieriger wird die Situation, wenn wir unsere sexuellen und Liebesbeziehungen mit unseren spirituellen Zielen in Einklang bringen wollen. Immer und immer wieder erweist sich die Sexualität als störender, ablenkender Einfluß, der Konflikt und Gespaltenheit in unser Leben bringt. Es ist nicht verwunderlich, daß so viele weltliche Menschen, die einen spirituellen Weg gehen wollen, im Zölibat mittlerweise eine bestechende Alternative zur Sexualität erblicken.

Auch das Verhalten der Gurus, Swamis und anderer Lehrer innerhalb spiritueller Kreise der New Age Bewegung gibt uns keine Orientierung. Die zahllosen, scheinbar im Zölibat lebenden spirituellen Lehrer, die in den puritanischen, traditionellen Kulturen des Ostens aufgewachsen sind, um dann in die «neue Moralitat» des heutigen Amerika ausgesetzt zu werden, bieten ein gleichzeitig trauriges und komisches Schauspiel. Wie oft hören wir von dem einen oder anderen Guru oder Meister, der der Versuchung, mit seinen Anhängern sexuelle Beziehungen einzugehen, erlegen ist. Skandale in Ashrams und Dojos gehören fast zur Tagesordnung. Man braucht kein Zyniker zu sein, um zu erkennen, daß der Sexualtrieb sich ‘zwangsläufig auf ziemlich prosaische und vorhersehbare Weise Luft verschaffen wird, unabhängig davon, was das offizielle spirituelle Dogma gebietet oder verdammt. Dies galt in der einen oder anderen Form schon immer, ob wir nun die institutionalisierten judäo-christlichen Kirchen betrachten oder die spirituelle Szene der New Age Bewegung, die sich in ihrem Lebensstil stark am Buddhismus und am Hinduismus orientiert. Im Hinblick auf die Sexualität haben uns also die institutionalisierten Religionen, ob neu oder alt, nur wenig anzubieten.

Am Beispiel des Sexualtantra wird die Kluft zwischen Theorie und praktischem Wissen vollends deutlich. Man hört und liest viel von den wunderbaren und ekstatischen Vorzügen tantrischer Beziehungen. Doch was ist das wirkliche Ziel esoterischer Sexualität, und wo findet man in den vielen Publikationen zu diesem Thema echtes Wissen und praktische Hinweise zu seiner Umsetzung? Wie können diese Rituale in eine Form gebracht werden, die auch für unser Alltagsleben und seine Beziehungen realistisch und brauchbar ist? Und wieviel verstehen wir denn wirklich von den esoterischen Lehren, wenn wir sie losgelöst von dem religiösen und rituellen Kontext ihrer hinduistischen und buddhistischen Tradition sehen?

Unter esoterischer Sexualität verstehen wir das Studium und die Beherrschung der sexuellen Energie im eigenen Körper ohne die Notwendigkeit äußerlicher Rituale einer bestimmten Kultur. Dazu bedürfen wir praktischer Methoden, die vom westlichen Verstand begriffen werden und die anwendbar sind.

Man kann sie in den kulturellen und spirituellen Überlieferungen der Menschheit finden, die viele essentielle, lebensbejahende Aspekte der Sexualität enthalten. Dabei ist sorgfältig darauf zu achten, nur das zu nehmen, was wir tatsächlich brauchen, um uns im Reich der Sexualität zurechtzufinden und uns nicht wieder in veralteten Denk- und Lebensmustern zu verlieren.

Die Tradition des Taoismus, die den Kern der chinesischen Kultur darstellt, zeigt uns einen praktischen Zugang, wie wir ihn nur wünschen können. Die alten chinesischen Meister stellten fest, daß die Sexualität des Menschen in enger Verbindung zu seiner körperlichen und geistigen Gesundheit steht und gleichzeitig die Basis für die Entwicklung höherer geistiger Fähigkeiten bildet. Die wirkungsvolle Bewahrung der Lebenskraft und ihre stufenweise Transformation in eine Art geistigmaterielle Substanz ist Geburtsrecht und Verpflichtung der Menschheit zugleich.

Innerhalb der Klostertradition des religiösen Taoismus war die Bewahrung und Pflege der Sexualenergie zum überwiegenden Teil eine Sache des Zölibats. Doch in ihrer Weisheit sorgte die taoistische Tradition auch noch für eine andere praktikable Möglichkeit. Dies ist der Pfad des Sexual-Kung Fu, den man auch als «Samen- und Ovar-Kung Fu» bezeichnet. Diese Praktik bot dem verheirateten Mönch und den Laien männlichen wie weiblichen Geschlechts die Möglichkeit, das Tao (den «Weg») auch im Rahmen eines weltlichen Lebens zu verwirklichen. Weil die taoistische Tradition sich allen Fragen der Gesundheit und des Lebens auf äußerst praktische Weise näherte, behandelte sie auch die Geschlechtsbeziehungen zwischen den Menschen auf direkte und realistische Weise.

Das taoistische Sexual-Kung Fu war und ist nach wie vor eine Methode der Lebensverlängerung und Gesundheitspflege, bei der die Beziehung zwischen den Geschlechtern harmonisiert und als Mittel zur spirituellen Transformation eingesetzt wird.

Abgesehen von einigen historisch bedingten Verzerrungen, bei denen diese eigentlich auf Gleichberechtigung beruhende Praktik durch Kaiser und Aristokratie zu einer Methode der männlichen Ausbeutung der Frau herabgewürdigt wurde, Hegt die Grundbedingung des Sexual-Kung Fu in der spirituellen Entwicklung und dem Gleichgewicht der männlichen und weiblichen Energien.

Durch unsere Gewohnheit, den Bereich der Sexualwissenschaft durch die Brille unserer religiösen, wissenschaftlichen und kulturellen Beschränkungen zu sehen, fällt es uns schwer, die wirkliche Bedeutung des «Sexual-Kung Fu» zu begreifen. Zwar ahnen wir einen vagen Zusammenhang mit asiatischen Kampfkünsten, doch erscheint uns die Vorstellung von einem sexuellen Kung Fu komisch, wenn nicht sogar lächerlich.

Wörtlich heißt «Kung Fu» soviel wie «Methode», «Praktik» oder «Disziplin». Sexual-Kung Fu ist demnach eine bestimmte Methode oder praktische Disziplin, Sexualität ohne Ejakulation zu erleben. Gleichzeitig erkennt die taoistische Tradition das Vorhandensein eines gewissen Konflikts zwischen den Geschlechtern an. Er wird allgemein als natürliche Gegensätzlichkeit und als dynamisches Spiel zwischen Yin und Yang dargestellt. Diese naturgegebene Gegensätzlichkeit spielt sich auf dem «Schlachtfeld» sexueller Beziehungen ab und wird im spielerischen Kampf zwischen den geschlechtlichen Gegenspielern ausgedrückt. Übrigens handelt es sich dabei um einen Konflikt, in dem der Mann schwächer ist als sein «starker Feind». Das Kung Fu der Ejakulationsbeherrschung wurde entwickelt, um dieses Ungleichgewicht sexueller Kraft ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen.

Auch im Westen kennen wir die Vorstellung vom Geschlechterkampf. Doch ist es ein großer Irrtum, zu glauben, daß dies dasselbe bedeutet wie der taoistische Begriff. Dies ist nur ganz oberflächlich der Fall. Unser westliches Konzept vom Krieg zwischen den Geschlechtern spiegelt die Morbidität und die Frustration der vielen sexuellen Tragödien wider, die unsere heutige Vorstellung von Partnerbeziehungen so stark beeinflussen. Das hat nur wenig mit den spielerischen und transformati-ven Aspekten der Sexualität zu tun, wie sie in der taoistischen Tradition verstanden wird.

Erst wenn wir auf der Ebene der «sexuellen Energie» zu denken beginnen, können wir lernen, Sexualität richtig zu verstehen und sie in den Dienst geschlechtlicher Harmonie und Gesundheit zu stellen. Nach taoistischer Auffassung ist der Mann von seiner Konstitution her der Frau unterlegen, was seine sexuelle Leistungsfähigkeit betrifft. Er verausgabt seine Energien sehr leicht, und mit zunehmendem Alter vermindert sich seine Energiekapazität erheblich. Dieser Faktor ist gleichzeitig einer der Hauptgründe für die Konflikte zwischen Mann und Frau, und er ist es auch, der einem Großteil heutiger Sexualberatung und -therapie zugrunde hegt.

Aus unserer heutigen Sicht erscheint die Vorstellung von einem sexuellen Kung Fu vielleicht merkwürdig und ein bißchen revolutionär. Doch der wachsende Austausch zwischen östlicher und westlicher Kultur und Medizin, der auch die Sexualwissenschaft nicht unbeeinflußt läßt, wird es erleichtern, die Prinzipien und Methoden des Samen- und Ovar-Kung Fu allmählich bei uns zu akzeptieren.

Die westliche Sexualforschung ist eine noch junge Disziplin. Man kann sie vergleichen mit der Verwirrung eines Heranwachsenden, der seine Sexualität zu erleben und zu erforschen beginnt. Die taoistische Tradition ist dagegen über achttausend Jahre alt und hat sowohl theoretisch als auch praktisch ein vollkommen ausgereiftes System anzubieten. Beide Traditionen befassen sich mit der Beherrschung desselben mächtigen Urtriebs. Ob taoistisches Sexual-Kung Fu in die westliche Gesellschaft Eingang findet, wird nicht zuletzt davon abhängen, wie es westlichem wissenschaftlichem Denken und westlicher Psychologie nahegebracht wird. Gleichzeitig wird seine Annahme von der Bereitschaft des westlichen Menschen abhängen, sich nach der Weisheit der taoistischen Meister zu richten.

Die alten Tao Meister würden dieses Spiel gegensätzlicher Kräfte als unausweichliche Manifestation des Tao begrüßen. Ein junger taoistischer Meister hat den kühnen Schritt gewagt, dieses geheime System dem Westen zu enthüllen. Nun hegt es beim Leser, seinen Wahrheitsgehalt zu prüfen.

Überblick über die taoistischen Grundlehren zur Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie

1. Das Universum besteht aus verschiedenen Arten dynamischer Energie oder «Chi». Das Tao, oder «der Weg», eines jeden Menschen besteht darin, seine eigene Energie auf schöpferische Weise im Laufe seines Lebens zurück zu ihrem Urzustand harmonischen Gleichgewichts zu transformieren. Die Sexual-Essenz, das sogenannte «Ching», ist eine kraftvolle, vitale Energie, die unaufhörlich im menschlichen Körper erzeugt wird. Der Geschlechtstrieb aktiviert die Evolution des Menschen auf biologische Weise, indem er dafür sorgt, daß die genetische Erblinie erhalten bleibt. Emotional gesehen harmonisiert er die Liebe zwischen Mann und Frau, während er spirituell gesehen ein greifbares Verbindungsglied zwischen den «gewöhnlichen» schöpferischen Fähigkeiten des Menschen und dem ewigen Schöpfungsprozeß des Kosmos darstellt. Indem der Mensch -zusammen mit einem Partner oder allein - sein eigenes Gewahrwerden der Sexualenergie verfeinert, gelangt er auf einfachste Weise zurück zum Reinen Bewußtsein und zur Erfahrung der verborgensten Lebensrhythmen. (Kapitel l und 2)

2. Der Samen ist der Speicher männlicher Sexualenergie. Jede Ejakulation enthält zwischen 200 und 500 Millionen Samenzellen, von denen jede ein potentielles menschliches Wesen darstellt. Bei einem einzigen Orgasmus werden genügend Spermatozoen vergeudet, um die gesamten Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika damit zu bevölkern, vorausgesetzt, daß jede dieser Zellen eine Eizelle befruchtet. Die Erzeugung einer solch kraftvollen Samenflüssigkeit erfordert bis zu einem Drittel des täglichen Energieverbrauchs des Mannes, was vor allem das Drüsen-und Immunsystem belastet. (Kapitel 3 und 4)

3. Die Bewahrung der Sexualenergie ist das erste Grundprinzip der taoistischen Sexuallehre. Vergeudung des männlichen Samens zu anderen Zwecken außer dem Zeugen von Kindern bedeutet einen empfindlichen Verlust kostbarster Energie. Auf lange Sicht fuhrt dieser Energieverlust zu einer gesundheitlichen Schwächung des Mannes und kann bei ihm einen unbewußten Zorn gegenüber Frauen auslösen; darüber hinaus raubt er dem höheren geistigen Ich des Mannes die Kraft, sich selbst zu erneuern. Aus diesem Grund verlangen viele traditionelle geistliche Orden auf der ganzen Welt vom Mann das Zölibat. Die Taoisten betrachten die geschlechtliche Liebe als etwas Natürliches und Gesundes, wissen aber, daß die kurze, vorübergehende Freude des Genitalorgasmus mit Ejakulation völlig oberflächlicher Art ist, wenn man sie mit der tiefen, intensiven Ekstase vergleicht, die sich bei Vermeidung des Samenverlusts erreichen läßt. Es ist das Geburtsrecht eines jeden Mannes, volle Beherrschung über seine Körperfunktionen zu erlangen und diesen Samenverlust verhindern zu lernen. Die taoistischen Geheimmethoden der Versiegelung des männlichen Glieds zur Bewahrung des «Ching» werden in den Kapiteln 5 bis 8 beschrieben.

4. Die Transformation der Sexualenergie ist das zweite Grundprinzip der taoistischen Liebespraktiken. Während der sexuellen Erregung dehnt sich die in den Hoden gestaute Sexual-Essenz, das «Ching», schnell aus, und ein gewisses Quantum an Energie strömt zu den höheren Zentren im Herzen., im Gehirn, in den Drüsen und im Nervensystem. Dieser Aufwärtsstrom wird durch das Ejakulieren des Samens (nach außen) unterbrochen, so daß die meisten Männer sich nie der vollen Kraft ihrer Sexualität bewußt werden. Die taoistische Methode vervollkommnet diese nach oben gerichtete Transformation der Sexualenergie, indem sie subtile, feinstoffliche Kanäle öffnet, die von den Geschlechtsorganen die Wirbelsäule entlang zum Kopf und auf der Vorderseite hinunter zum Nabel fuhren. Die sich ausdehnende Sexualenergie wird in diesen «Kleinen Energiekreislauf» hineingelenkt, so daß sie an allen lebenswichtigen Organen vorbeiströmt und die ätherischen Energiezentren des Körpers harmonisiert, die von den Taoisten «Tan Tiens» und von den Hindus «Chakras» genannt werden. (Kapitel 7 und 8)

5. Die Harmonisierung der Polarität der weiblich-männlichen (Yin-Yang) Kräfte ist das dritte Grundprinzip der taoistischen Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie. Ist die Sexualenergie erst einmal bewahrt und emporgeleitet worden, so kann der partnerlose Mann mit Hilfe der Meditation die männlichen und weiblichen Pole, die in jedem männlichen Körper existieren, in ein Gleichgewicht bringen. Bei der Praktik der «Zweifachen Höherentwicklung» gleicht das Paar dieses Energiefeld aus, indem beide ihre feinstofflichen Energien miteinander teilen und kreisen lassen. Dadurch wird die Liebesbeziehung zum Ausgangspunkt der Transformation sexueller Anziehung in persönliche Liebe und schließlich in spirituelles Bewußtsein und Dienen. Nach und nach verschwindet dann der Machtkampf zwischen den Geschlechtern, und es verringern sich die unterschiedlichen Auffassungen über Arbeit, Familie, Liebe und den Sinn des Lebens, um schließlich zu Gleichgewicht und tiefer Harmonie zu fuhren. Das Ausgleichen dieser innersten sexuellen Polarität eines Paares ist die wahre «Tiefen »psychologie, da es Mann und Frau zutiefst stärkt. Im Kapitel 9 wird die Methode des «Tal-Orgasmus» beschrieben, bei der die Yin- und die Yang-Ener-gien während des Geschlechtsakts miteinander ausgetauscht werden. Auf einer weiteren, höheren Stufe wird die Energie ohne sexuellen Kontakt ausgetauscht. Der Orgasmus findet im eigenen Inneren statt; dies muß jedoch bei einem Meister erlernt werden. (Kapitel 18)

6. Sie sollten die physische Sexualität in Ihrer täglichen Übung nicht überbetonen. Es kann leicht geschehen, daß man sich nur in der Freude verliert, ohne die höheren, feinstofflichen Energien zu erfahren. Die'Verfeinerung der sexuellen Kraft stellt nur einen Bruchteil des reichen, alles umfassenden Tao dar. Befinden sich Ihr Chi (die allgemeine Vitalenergie), Ihr Ching (die Sexual-Essenz) und Ihr Shien (der Geist) nicht in einem ausgewogenen Verhältnis zueinander, so wird es Ihnen schwerfallen, Ihr Einssein zu erreichen und sich ganz und von Frieden erfüllt zu erfahren. Die Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie ist wichtig, um ihren Geist zu stärken, doch ohne richtige Diät, Körperübungen, Meditation, tugendhaftes moralisches Verhalten und Liebe ist sie unmöglich. Andererseits sollten Sie die Sexualität aber auch nicht ignorieren und sich zu intensiv auf die höheren geistigen Zentren konzentrieren; denn wenn das Fundament nicht stark ist, stürzt das Dach leicht ein. Tao ist die Ganzheit von Himmel und Erde. Die wahre Harmonie des Menschen ist der Mittelweg dazwischen, in der ausgewogenen Integration ihrer feinstofflichen Energien.

7. Vermeiden Sie Sexualität ohne Liebe. Sie fuhrt zum Ungleichgewicht Ihrer physischen, mentalen und spirituellen Energien und behindert Ihre wahre Entwicklung. Die taoistischen Techniken sollen praktisch angewandt werden, aber nicht mechanisch. Frauen suchen bei ihren Liebhabern nach Zärtlichkeit und fühlen sich abgestoßen von Männern, die sie übermäßig bedrängen oder sich ausschließlich auf die rein mechanische Meisterung esoterischer Liebespraktiken konzentrieren. Die «Zweifache Höherentwicklung» ist unmöglich, wenn die Frau sich nicht voll und ganz beteiligt, da sie die in ihren Eierstöcken gespeicherte Yin-Essenz dabei transformieren muß. Sehen Sie in der Frau, die Sie lieben, mehr als nur einen starken Generator von Yin-Energie: Zunächst und vor allem ist sie ein Mensch, der Ihre ganze Liebe und Ihre Achtung verdient.

8. Sie benötigen nicht unbedingt eine Ehefrau oder eine Freundin, um Ihre Sexualenergie höherzuentwickeln. Am Anfang ist es sogar leichter, das Beherrschen der Ejakulation allein zu üben, ohne von der Erregung und der Hitze einer Frau abgelenkt zu werden. Es ist auch von größter Wichtigkeit, daß Sie Ihrer Liebes partnerin stets erklären, was Sie tun und sich ihres Einverständnisses versichern. Für Frauen gelten dieselben Grundprinzipien taoistischer Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie, wobei sie ihre Sexual-Essenz aus den Eierstöcken (Ovarien) ziehen und dieses «Ching» nach oben lenken, um es dort in ein höheres Bewußtsein und in Herzensempfindung zu transformieren. Viele Frauen wissen bereits intuitiv um diesen Vorgang, sie haben ein Gespür dafür. Das empfängliche Wesen der Frau gestattet es ihr, das Tao der Liebe sehr schnell zu lernen, vor allem dann, wenn der Mann diesen Prozeß in seinem eigenen Körper bereits gemeistert hat.

9. Jeder Mann, der sich durchschnittlicher Gesundheit erfreut, kann die taoistischen Methoden der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie, wie sie in diesem Buch gelehrt werden, meistern. Wenn Sie sich impotent fühlen oder vorzeitig ejakulieren, sollten Sie zuerst die Verjüngungsübungen in Kapitel 15 lernen, bevor Sie die Technik des Großen Emporziehens versuchen, die in Kapitel 7 geschildert wird. Die Grundprinzipien der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie sind zwar einfach, verlangen aber nach beständiger Aufmerksamkeit. Es ist wie bei der Gartenpflege - wenn Sie jeden Tag ein bißchen hacken und jäten, sorgt die Natur für den Rest. Eines Tages erhalten Sie dann üppige Blüten und Früchte. Ungeduld tötet jeden Fortschritt. Fühlen Sie sich nicht schuldig oder ärgerlich, wenn Sie Ihren Samen doch einmal verlieren - es kann Jahre dauern, bis Sie das Tao der Liebe wirklich gemeistert haben. Der Schlüssel zum Erfolg ist Entspannung, Freude und beständiges Üben.

I. TEIL

Die Grundvoraussetzung: Sexualenergie lässt sich in geistige Energie umwandeln

I. KAPITEL

Männliche Sexualenergie wird im Samen gespeichert

«Es gibt keine Medizin, kein Nahrungsmittel und keine geistige Erlösung, die das Leben eines Mannes verlängern können, solange es ihm nicht gelingt, die Harmonie geschlechtlicher Energie zu verstehen oder zu praktizieren.»

P'eng Tsu, Leibarzt des Kaisers

Über achttausend Jahre lang blieb die chinesische Praktik des «Sexual-Kung Fu», des Zurückbehaltens der Samenflüssigkeit während des Liebesakts, ein strenggehütetes Geheimnis. Ausschließlich der Kaiser und sein engster Kreis praktizierten diese Methode, die sie von den Weisen an ihrem Hof gelernt hatten. Diese weisen Männer behaupteten, daß die von ihnen vermittelte Fähigkeit früher allen Menschen von Natur aus zur Verfügung gestanden habe. Der Kaiser bedurfte dieser Methode, um Impotenz und Krankheit abzuwehren. Unzulänglich erzogene Monarchen verausgabten sich schon im frühen Alter durch die sexuellen Anforderungen ihrer Frauen und Konkubinen. In den Adelsfamilien wurde dieses Wissen stets nur vom Vater an den Sohn weitergegeben, während Ehefrauen, Töchter und andere Familienmitglieder von der Überlieferung ausgeschlossen blieben.

Sexual-Kung Fu ist eine innerliche Praktik, mit der Männer ihre Körpersekrete einbehalten können. Diese sind eine Quelle unvergleichlicher Energie, wenn sie richtig gespeichert und in die höheren Lebenszentren zurückgeführt werden. Man vermeidet den Verlust dieser biochemischen Energie, indem man den Samenerguß verhindert. Doch darf man die Vermeidung der Ejakulation nicht mit dem Verhindern des Orgasmus verwechseln! Tatsächlich bietet die Methode des Sexual-Kung Fu eine einzigartige und allem anderen überlegene Form des Orgasmus, der sich über lang ausgedehnte Perioden des Liebesaktes wiederholt. Das Geheimnis ist einfach: Während des Orgasmus gibt es keinen Verlust der Samenflüssigkeit.

Der Samen wird dadurch einbehalten, daß man bestimmte Muskehi, Sehnen und Faszien des Unterleibs beherrschen lernt und dem Druck in den Genitalien gestattet, sich auf den gesamten Körper auszudehnen. Zur gleichen Zeit erbebt man vor Seligkeit und erlebt Freuden von unendlicher Vielfalt, die mit dem gewöhnlichen körperlichen Vergnügen kaum noch etwas gemein haben. Die Intensität einer solchen Erfahrung ist so stark, daß sie manchmal zu einem spirituellen Erwachen fuhrt.

Ein Mann, der diese Methode gemeistert hat, wird feststellen, daß sein Sexualempfmden sich so steigert und damit eine gewaltige Veränderung in seinem Leben stattfindet. Das Liebespaar wird zu einem «Dynamo», der große Mengen elektromagnetischer Energie erzeugt. Man kann mit dieser Methode wesentlich häufiger den Liebesakt ausführen als zuvor, und zugleich ist sie sehr gesundheitsfördernd. Sexual-Kung Fu stimuliert die Erzeugung kostbarer hormonaler Sekrete, anstatt sie zu erschöpfen, wie dies meistens bei der Ejakulation der Fall ist.

Alle Lebens funktionen werden gestärkt und belebt, weil sich keine Lebensenergie mehr durch die Geschlechtsorgane entlädt. Wirkliche sexuelle Erfüllung besteht nicht darin, das Leben aus dem Körper entweichen zu lassen, sondern im gesteigerten Gewahrsein des Lebensstromes, der durch die Lenden fließt. Darüber hinaus wird der Körper durch eine Methode der «Verdampfung», bei der die Lebensenergie von den Sexualzentren zum Gehirn und den höheren Zentren wie Herz und Scheitel emporgeleitet wird, mit subtilerer Energie erfüllt. Dieser lebensstärkende Energieprozeß wird dadurch vervollkommnet, daß man nach der Erzeugung dieser hochgeladenen Sexualenergie mit dem Liebespartner während einer Phase entspannter Meditation Energie austauscht.

Diese gewaltige Freisetzung und das gegenseitige Schenken der Vital- oder Lebenskraft ist es, was Menschen in Liebe miteinander verbindet. Erweckt man diese dynamische Energie, so erfährt man dadurch auch die eigentliche Triebkraft der biologischen und spirituellen Evolution des Menschen, bekannt unter der Bezeichnung «die aufsteigende Kundalini».

Die unvergleichliche Kraft des Sexual-Elixiers

Die Weisen des Ostens haben schon seit Urzeiten Methoden gesucht, um den Verlust der Samenflüssigkeit zu verhindern. Sie haben ausnahmslos die ungeheure Bedeutung des Geschlechtsakts erkannt; Wird er diszipliniert und von Liebe erfüllt durchgeführt, so kann er ruhende, noch schlafende Kräfte in Körper und Geist erwecken. Das gilt besonders für das Nerven- und das endokrine Drüsensystem. Den heilenden Wert des Liebesaktes hatte man schon lange entdeckt, doch die taoisti-schen Meister wollten darüber hinausgehen und die Grundlagen physischer Unsterblichkeit in ihm entdecken. So entstanden viele Schulen, die unterschiedliche Wege gingen, um das geheime Elixier der Sexualität zu erlangen.

Jeder, der den üblichen Ejakulationsgeschlechtsakt genau begreift, weiß, daß jede Drüse und jedes Organ rücksichtslos ausgebeutet wird. Durch die Ejakulation wird der innere Lebenstrieb aus dem Körper ausgestoßen, was bei manchen sexbesessenen Männern dazu fuhrt, hinterher gerade noch genügend Lebenskraft übrig zu haben, um die Zeitung zusammenzufalten, das Essen durch die Därme herauszupressen - und sich zum Psychiater zu begeben.

Für die alten Weisen enthielt jeder Tropfen Samen soviel Lebenskraft wie hundert Tropfen Blut. Die Heiligen des Hinduismus beziehen sich immer wieder auf «Amrita», das Lebenseli-xier; dies soll eine verjüngende Substanz sein, die beim verlängerten Liebesakt ohne Ejakulation entstehen kann. Die Erzeugung dieses Elixiers, das man im Westen vielleicht als «gesteigerte Hormonalsekretion» bezeichnen würde, verlangt nach einer sexuellen Technik, bei welcher die Ejakulation verhindert wird, damit der Körper zu immer höheren Energiestufen vordringen kann.

Wird der Samen zurückgehalten und seine Kraft im Körper emporgelenkt, können sich außergewöhnliche Kräfte entwik-keln, wie die Gabe des Heilens oder des Hellsehens. Viele dafür begabte Leute glaubten, daß, sofern man nur diese Säfte sein ganzes Leben lang bewahrte, der Körper nach dem Tod nicht verfallen würde. Die Heiligen - ob christliche, buddhistische, islamische oder taoistische -, alle verwendeten die lebenspendende Kraft aus dem Samen, um «Wunder» zu vollbringen.

DAS GEHEIMNIS ALLER GEHEIMNISSE

Viele esoterische Sekten haben ihre Mitglieder dazu ermahnt, die Samenflüssigkeit durch Verspeisen wieder zu sich zu nehmen, um dadurch die sexuelle und körperliche Leistungskraft zu steigern. Diese Praktik ist zumindest ebenso Vernünftig wie der Kauf von Vitamintabletten. Wissenschaftliche Analysen haben ergeben, daß im männlichen Samen eine wahre Schatzkammer aus Vitaminen, Mineralstoffen, Spurenelementen, Hormonen, Eiweiß, Ionen, Enzymen und anderen lebenswichtigen Nährsubstanzen enthalten ist.

Eine weitere Eigenschaft im Samen, die wichtiger als jedes Vitamin ist, entzieht sich allerdings den Analysen der heutigen Wissenschaft.

Es ist die sogenannte «Lebenskraft». Sie läßt sich mit keinem wissenschaftlichen Instrument messen und ist doch alles andere als imaginärer Natur, immerhin ist sie es, die den Lebenden vom Toten unterscheidet. Auch die Ginsengwurzel weist in der chemischen Analyse keine besonderen Eigenschaften auf, und doch sind ihre lebenserneuernden Kräfte inzwischen allgemein anerkannt. Der Liebesakt ist ein kraftvolles, heilsames Toni-kum, weil man dabei die menschliche Lebenskraft miteinander austauscht, und dies ist wirksamer als jedes Kraut oder jede Medizin, Chinesische Adlige und Adepten, die nach den höchsten Stufen der Erfüllung strebten, wußten schon vor langer Zeit, wie man die Samenenergie in das Gehirn und die Vitalzentren des Körpers zurückleitet. Der Durchschnittsmensch unserer Gesellschaft kennt bis heute keine Technik, um diese gewaltige Lebenskraft wieder in den Körper zu integrieren. Die meisten Männer empfinden die Verlockungen der Sexualität als unwiderstehlich und verlieren dabei freudig ihren Samen, ohne um die gesundheitlichen Konsequenzen dieses Tuns zu wissen. In der Regel ahnen sie nicht einmal, daß ihnen Alternativen zur Verfugung stehen.

Häufiges Ejakulieren führt schließlich zu einem Vitalitätsverlust. Der große Verschwender verliert seine Lebenskraft, seine Sehfähigkeit läßt nach, die Haare fallen aus, er altert vorzeitig. Am Anfang wird er sich noch nicht erschöpft fühlen, doch nach Jahren des Mißbrauchs werden seine Fähigkeiten in bedrohlichem Ausmaß nachlassen. Werden die hormonalen Sekrete aus den Geschlechtsdrüsen regelmäßig verbraucht, wird der Körper an seiner Wurzel angegriffen. Je nach Konstitution des einzelnen kann es binnen weniger Monate oder erst nach Jahrzehnten zu einer Verminderung der schöpferischen und sexuellen Fähigkeiten kommen, und die Widerstandskraft gegenüber Erkrankungen und den Gebrechen des Alters wird deutlich herabgesetzt.

Um seine versiegenden Kräfte neu zu beleben, wird der große Verschwender der vitalen Samenenergie dann verzweifelt versuchen, sich woanders Wohlergehen auszuborgen: durch Hormonspritzen, Aufputsch- oder Beruhigungsmittel, Alkohol, Megavitamine, Halluzinogene oder Aphrodisiaka. Wird der Körper mit diesen Substanzen vollgestopft, kann es sogar den Anschein haben, daß sie eine Zeitlang helfen. Mancher versucht auch, seine schwindende Sexualkraft durch persönliche Macht zu überdecken, die er sich mit Geld oder politischem Einfluß erkauft. Befindet er sich auf einem spirituellen Weg oder in einer hebevollen Gemeinschaft von Freunden und Familie, wird die Empfindung des Verlusts der Lebenskraft vielleicht gemildert. Doch solange die großzügige Energieverschwendung anhält, bleibt der Niedergang unvermeidlich. Die Verdauungsorgane können nicht mehr ausreichend Nährstoffe verarbeiten, um die durch die Ejakulation unwiderbringlich verlorengegangenen Lebensenergien zu ersetzen.

Die taoistische Methode der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie fuhrt die Hormone, Eiweiße, Vitamine, Enzyme, Mine-ralstoffe und die elektrisierenden Energien des Samens wieder zurück in den Körper. Wer sie bewahrt und transformiert, kann sich eines wundervollen Liebeslebens erfreuen, besserer Gesundheit, tiefen inneren Gleichgewichts und wachsenden spirituellen Bewußtseins.

Die taoistische Liebesmethode stimuliert regelrecht die Erzeugung ungewöhnlich hochwertiger hormonaler Substanzen. Man lernt, während des Liebesaktes die Energie auf die endokrinen Drüsen zu konzentrieren. Werden sie in dieser Energie gebadet, kommt es zu gesteigerter Hormonausschüttung. Was aber noch wichtiger ist: Die Qualität der Sekrete selbst wird ebenfalls erhöht. Auf den höheren Stufen dieser Praktik entwickeln die Hormone dann höchst außergewöhnliche Eigenschaften.

Die Methode des Sexual-Kung Fu erzeugt und bewahrt mehr Nerven und Hormonenergie, als für das normale Funktionieren des Organismus nötig ist. Diese überschüssige Vitalität kann kanalisiert werden, um den Körper zu starken und die geistigen und spirituellen Fähigkeiten zu steigern. Wenn sich die Liebenden umarmen, entstehen Wirbel von subtilen Yin- und Yang-Energien vom Sexualbereich bis hinauf zum Kopf, wo sie schließlich die ganze Zeit verbleiben.

Warum die spirituelle Kraft der Sexualität bisher geheimgehalten wurde?

Der Menschheit ist endlich die Notwendigkeit bewußt geworden, sorgfaltig und sparsam mit den Reserven der Natur umzugehen, wenn sie sich nicht dem völligen Ruin ausliefern will. Wasser, Boden, Wald, Kohle und Erdöl müssen geschont, Nahrungsmittel auf wirtschaftlichere Weise produziert werden, Baumaßnahmen und Transportmethoden dürfen nicht mehr so zerstörerisch und verschwenderisch sein. Schon jetzt haben wir zum großen Teil die uns unmittelbar zugänglichen Reichtümer des Planeten Erde ausgebeutet.

Man ist also eifrig bedacht, die natürlichen Ressourcen pfleglich zu behandeln, doch nur wenige denken daran, die wertvollste Kraftquelle von allen zu schonen: die eigene Lebensenergie. Das sorgfaltige Hegen und Speichern der im männlichen Samen enthaltenen Energie wäre ein wahrhaft vernünftiges Energiesparprogramm! Doch dieser Aspekt des Umweltschutzes wird völlig übersehen.

Ein Grund hegt wohl in der allgemeinen Unwissenheit über die uralten und streng geheimen Methoden, die in der Vergangenheit Anwendung gefunden haben. Die taoistischen Meister haben ihr Wissen in Jahrtausenden des Forschens nach dem Geheimnis der Belebung der Materie entdeckt. Die hier vorgestellten Methoden sind die Frucht der inspirierten Suche von vielen Generationen weiser Männer, ergänzt durch meine Beobachtung des modernen Lebens. Dieses Buch stellt das Ergebnis meiner eigenen Erfahrungen mit diesen Lehren dar.

Die Tao Meister pflegten ihre machtvollen Geheimnisse nur auserwählten Jüngern zu enthüllen, solchen, die ihre Hingabe an die Ideale des Meisters durch jahrelange selbstlose Aufopferung und durch Dienen unter Beweis gestellt hatten. Warum fühlten sich die Meister verpflichtet, ihr ungeheures Wissen vor der Öffentlichkeit zu verbergen?

Für den westlichen Menschen ist das nicht ohne weiteres verständlich. Die Massenmedien haben zu einem Denken gefuhrt, bei dem alles jeden etwas angeht: Die intimsten Einzel-heiten des privaten Sexlebens werden am gierigsten verschlungen. Werbefachleute versichern ihren Kunden, daß sich «nichts verkaufen läßt, wenn es nicht sexuell anziehend wirkt». Diese Mentalität hat den Sex zu einer bequemen Ware werden lassen. Das macht es uns schwer, in unserem eigenen Privatleben die Sexualität als eine intime Freude zu erleben, die zu immer intensiveren Stufen entwickelt werden kann. Häufig wird Sex einfach konsumiert und danach fortgeworfen, sobald der Liebespartner alt oder lästig wird. Selbst den Frauen in den Harems der chinesischen Kaiser und Aristokraten ging es besser, denn ihnen wurde für ihre sexuelle Gunst immerhin eine lebenslange materielle Absicherung zuteil. Zwar bevorzugte die höfische Gesellschaft die Stellung des Mannes, doch achtete und ehrte man wenigstens die weibliche Sexualenergie für ihre heilenden Fähigkeiten, und weil sie für die spirituelle Entwicklung des Mannes notwendig war.

Eine klassische taoistische Erzählung berichtet von einer Frau, die den Prozeß der sexuellen Transformation kannte und ihre Yin-Energie mit der Yang-Energie ihres Geliebten austauschte, wodurch sie die Unsterblichkeit erreichte. So wurde sie zur kaiserlichen Beraterin in allen Liebesdingen. Es gibt dazu ein historisch belegtes Ereignis: Im Jahre 690 n.Chr. wurde eine Palastzofe nach dem Tod des Kaisers zur Kaiserin gekrönt. Die Kaiserin Wu, die wegen ihrer Meisterung der Kunst des Liebens hochgeachtet war, regierte das Land weise mehrere Jahrzehnte bis zu ihrem Tod.

Die alten taoistischen Meister waren alles andere als abergläubisch. Sie waren Natur-Wissenschaftler, welche die Weichen für die erstaunlichen technischen Fortschritte in der Medizin, der Chemie, der Biologie, der Navigationskunde und in vielen anderen Bereichen stellten, die im Westen erst zweitausend Jahre später entdeckt wurden. Ihr Wissen betrachteten sie auch nicht als ihr Eigentum. Sie hatten Gründe für ihre Geheimhaltung, und diese Gründe waren zu ihrer Zeit durchaus berechtigt. Die Meister waren die Hüter von Lehren, die ihnen von ihren eigenen Meistern weitergegeben wurden, und sie befürchteten einen möglichen Mißbrauch der gewaltigen Kraft, die in diesen Geheimlehren eingeschlossen war. Vielleicht wollten sie auch die Menschheit vor der Neigung bewahren, die reinsten und hehrsten Lehren zu verzerren und zu verfälschen, damit sie ihren niederen Instinkten dienen konnten. Im ländlichen China, das damals weitaus weniger menschenreich war als heute, hätte jemand mit einem solchen esoterischen Wissen mühelos zum Anfuhrer oder König aufsteigen können, und jeder Krieger hätte mit dieser Kraft seine Gegner zu vernichten vermocht.

Die Tao Meister hielten es für gefährlich, ihre Lehren allzuweit zu verbreiten, so daß sie sie meist erst vor ihrem eigenen Tod an ihre engsten Schüler weitergaben. Um ganz sicherzugehen, daß diese Geheimnisse nicht zu selbstsüchtigen Zwecken mißbraucht wurden, gaben sie jedem ihrer Schüler oft nur einen Teil des Wissens weiter. Erst wenn sich die Schüler zu einer Gruppe zusammenschlössen und ihr Wissen miteinander teilten, konnten die höchsten Kräfte in ihnen befreit werden. Behielt jemand auf selbstsüchtige Weise sein Wissen für sich, konnten sie nie die ganze Wahrheit erfahren. Im Laufe von vielen Generationen verwechselte man immer öfter kleine Bruchstücke der geheimsten Lehren mit dem ganzen Lehrgebäude. Mein Anliegen ist es, diese vielen Einzelteile und Bruchstücke zu einem organischen Ganzen zusammenzufügen, von dem ich glaube, daß es den ältesten, vollständigen Lehren am meisten entspricht.

Weshalb wird das Geheimnis heute enthüllt?

Warum verwerfen wir heute die traditionelle chinesische Lehrmethode und vertrauen der Allgemeinheit diese so wirkungsvollen Prinzipien an? Die Antwort ist einfach: Es ist an der Zeit! Der Zustand der Menschheit ist schon zu katastrophal, als daß sie noch länger darauf verzichten könnte, Zugang zu der gewaltigen Lebensenergie zu erhalten. Wird die Menschheit nicht möglichst bald mit frischer Energie versorgt, die ihr hilft, auf harmonischere Weise zu leben als in den letzten zweitausend Jahren, dann droht uns allen, den irdischen Meistern und den gewöhnlichen Sterblichen, ein unerträglich hartes Leben, wenn nicht völlige Vernichtung.

Es gibt viele versierte Experten auf dem Gebiet der Computerforschung, der Aktienmärkte, der Chemie und des Massensports, doch nur wenige Meister der Lebenskunst. Die Menschheit benutzt ihre kurze Lebensspanne, um sich mit Statistiken, stinkenden Chemikalien und, vor allem, leeren Worten zu beschäftigen. Die Mehrzahl der Amerikaner verbringt täglich über sechs Stunden in einer hypnotischen Trance vor einem Glaskasten, in dem farbige Schatten umherhuschen. Diese Maschinen sind, ohne daß wir es gewollt hätten, zu Instrumenten unserer eigenen Vernichtung geworden: Ein vom Fernsehen programmierter Geist ist kein freier Geist. Viel zu wenig Menschen verwenden auch nur eine einzige Sekunde darauf, tief in den großen Lebensstrom einzutauchen, der sich in ihrem eigenen Inneren verbirgt. Und doch ist all die technologische Energie, der wir hinterherlaufen, nicht mehr als eine äffische Nachahmung der elektrisierenden Ekstasen, die innerhalb des Körpers und des Geists strömen.

Doch es gibt auch positive Zeichen; nach taoistischem Denken fuhrt jeder Exzeß schließlich sein Gegenteil herbei. Trotz der Mittelmäßigkeit unserer Massenkultur gibt es gewaltige Kräfte, die die Rasse einem erweiterten Bewußtsein entgegentreiben. Es ist offensichtlich, daß die Ursache für den chaotischen Zustand auf diesem Planeten im revolutionären Fortschritt des menschlichen Bewußtseins hegt. Um es einfach auszudrücken: Die Wasserstoffbomben schweben nur deswegen so bedrohlich über unseren Köpfen, weil wir intelligent genug waren, sie heraufzubeschwören. Im Haß steckt der Keim der Liebe. Wir haben die Krise geschaffen, damit wir eine Lösung entwickeln, um das harmonische Gleichgewicht miteinander und mit der Natur wiederherzustellen.

Zu den wichtigsten Auswirkungen dieser Anhebung des Bewußtseins gehört die Tatsache, daß der Durchschnittsmensch zu Geheimnissen des Lebens und des Denkens zugelassen wird, die früher wenigen Auserwählten vorbehalten blieben. Der französische Wissenschaftler Schwaller de Lubicz fuhrt dazu aus: «Es ist eine Gewißheit, daß eine solche Revolution im Denken ... nicht das Ergebnis einer bloßen Laune ist. Es ist vielmehr eine Frage der kosmischen Einflüsse, denen die Erde, wie alles, was sie enthält, unterliegt. Eine Phase der Schwangerschaft des planetaren Partikels Erde in unserem Sonnensystem ist beendet worden ... Nun muß eine neue Periode beginnen, und diese wird angekündigt durch erdbebenartige Bewegungen, klimatische Veränderungen und, vor allem, durch den Geist, der den Menschen belebt.» Nicht nur Schwierigkeiten zwingen das Bewußtsein dazu, sich weiterzuentwickeln; ein verändertes Bewußtsein sprengt die Fesseln der bestehenden Ordnung.

Ich hoffe, daß die hier vorgestellten taoistischen Praktiken der Höherentwicklung männlicher Energie zu noch größerer Vervollkommnung gelangen, wenn sie erst einmal dem Schock konträrer Vorstellungen, wissenschaftlicher Untersuchungen und persönlicher Experimente ausgesetzt worden sind. Im heutigen China ist es gesetzlich verboten, nützliche und heilsame Praktiken geheimzuhalten: Alles Wissen, das dem Gemeinwohl dient, muß offengelegt werden. In Zukunft werden vormals eifersüchtig gehütete Rezepturen für Heilkräuter, Wurzeln, mineralhaltige Wässer, Rinden, Schlamm, Blüten, Edelsteine und Gifte ebenso wie Yoga- und Meditationspraktiken schneller vervollkommnet werden, indem sie der Allgemeinheit dienstbar gemacht werden.

Die Enthüllung der taoistischen Sexualgeheimnisse stellt folglich einen Beitrag zur Menschheitskultur dar. Ihr tatsächlicher Einfluß wird sich vielleicht erst nach geraumer Zeit offenbaren. Wo früher nur wenige große Geister tätig wurden, ist heute der kollektive Genius der menschlichen Rasse gefordert, um die Welt vor den Gefahren ihrer eigenen Auswüchse zu retten.

2. KAPITEL

Was ist Chi-Energie?

«Essenz, Chi und Geist sind die drei Kleinodien des Lebens.»

Buch der Wandlungen und der Unwandelbaren Wahrheit
Meister Ni Hua Ching

Die taoistische Kultivierung der Sexualenergie läßt sich nur verstehen, wenn man sich über das chinesische Konzept vom Chi im klaren ist. Chi ist auch bekannt als «Prana», als «warmer Strom», als «Kundalini» oder elektromagnetische Lebenskraft. Diese Lebensenergie läßt sich sehr schwer beschreiben, weil sie unsichtbar ist. Dennoch kann man sie empfinden. «Chi» ist das chinesische Wort für «Atem». Auf der physischen Ebene ist es die Luft, die wir ein- und ausatmen, die uns vitalisiert und am Leben hält. Jede Sekunde unseres Lebens hängt an einem seidenen «Atem-Faden», und dieser besteht aus scheinbar «leerer» Luft.

Wir transformieren diese Roh-Luft, indem wir sie mit verschiedenen Nährstoffen vermengen und sie zu einer anderen Art von Energie weiterentwickeln, die feste Gestalt annimmt. Sie wird zu unserem Blut, zu Fleisch und Knochen, verliert jedoch nie ihren inneren Rhythmus, der jede Zelle pulsierend durchströmt. Unsere lebenswichtigen Organe, wie Herz, Leber, Nieren und Drüsen, verfeinern diese Energie ihrerseits und senden Chi-Kraft in die höheren Funktionsbereiche des Gehirns, wo unsere Gedanken, Träume und Emotionen entstehen. Auch der menschliche Wille, zu leben und zu sterben, die Kraft, zu lieben und über diesen atmenden Planeten, der im Vakuum des Alls schwebt, nachzudenken, wird dort hervorgebracht. Da das Chi einem immerwährenden Kreislauf folgt, ist sein Rhythmus der-art natürlich, daß wir ihn kaum wahrnehmen. Fragen Sie sich einmal, wann Sie zum letzten Mal innegehalten und über die bloße Tatsache gestaunt haben, daß Sie atmen und Ihr Herz schlägt.

Die alten Tao Meister verwendeten viel Zeit darauf, den Strom dieses Chi zu beobachten, den sie als Atem des Universums erkannten, der alles durchdringt. Chi ist die Verbindung, der «Leim», zwischen Körper, Geist und Seele, das Bindeglied zwischen unserer Wahrnehmung der inneren und der äußeren Welt. Da die Taoisten in engem Kontakt mit der Natur lebten ohne die Ablenkungen der modernen Zivilisation, gelang es ihnen, die Wirkungsweise der Chi-Energie in allen Einzelheiten darzustellen, wie es sowohl im menschlichen Körper strömt, als auch die ganze Welt durchdringt. In späteren Zeiten machten die Taoisten unzählige Unterscheidungen zwischen den verschiedenen Arten von Chi und ihrer Wirkungsweise, so daß die heutigen Erben dieses Wissens in China - nämlich die Akupunkteure und Kräuterheilkundigen - bis zu 32 verschiedene Chi-Funktio-nen im menschlichen Körper kennen.

Die Chinesen machten sich nie die Mühe, genau zu analysieren, was dieses Chi eigentlich ist. Ob es sich dabei um Materie oder Energie oder um einen Veränderungsprozeß zwischen beiden handelt, ist irrelevant. Wichtig ist nur, was es bewirkt. Will man Licht in seinem Zimmer, drückt man auf den Lichtschalter, die Elektrizität beginnt zu fließen, und das Licht scheint. Man analysiert nicht den Vorgang, sondern betätigt einfach den Schalter. Wenn ein Akupunkteur die Nadel auf einen Punkt des Leber-Meridians setzt, schaltet er ganz ähnlich das Leber-Chi ein, damit es kräftiger strömen kann.

Chi: Die Elektrizität des menschlichen Körpers

Die moderne Wissenschaft beginnt die Welt auf ähnliche Weise zu beschreiben, wie es schon die alten Taoisten taten - als Interaktion zwischen positiv (Yang) und negativ (Yin) geladenen Chi-Energien. Lesen wir, wie das Wissens chaftsmagazin von Time-Life vor kurzem die Elektrizität beschrieben hat:

> «Die Elektrizität ist mit Sicherheit das wohl am schwersten erfaßbare aller Alltags phänomene: Sie lebt in den Wänden unserer Wohnungen und regelt das Leben unserer Zellen. Als Blitz jagt sie vom Himmel herab und sprüht von unseren Fingern, wenn wir eine metallene Türklinke berühren, nachdem wir über den Türvorleger gegangen sind. Sie strukturiert die Materie, macht Plastik formbar, öl zähflüssig und Leim klebrig. Sie treibt elektrische Eisenbahnen an, aber auch das menschliche Gehirn ... Licht ist elektro magnetische Strahlung -und dazu zählt alles, vom sichtbaren Licht bis zu Röntgenstrah len, Mikro- und Radiowellen. Der Magnetismus eines Eisenmagneten entsteht, weil zahllose Elektronen sich wirbelnd in derselben Richtung drehen. Ebenso wird das Magnetfeld der Erde höchstwahrscheinlich von Strudeln elektrischer Ströme im ge schmolzenen Metallkern des Planeten hervorgerufen.
> Der ganze menschliche Körper ist eine riesige elektrische Maschine: Die Körper chemie beruht, wie alle Chemie, auf elektrischen Verbindungen. Der Körper funktioniert durch Elektrizität. Die Energie, die Sie benötigen, um diese Zeilen zu lesen, beziehen Sie aus Ihrem Frühstücksei; das Ei wiederum hat seine Energie aus dem Getreide bekommen, das an die Henne verfuttert wurde; und das Getreide hat diese Energie durch Photosynthese direkt aus dem elektromagnetischen Licht der Sonne bezogen.

Denkt man darüber nach, erkennt man, daß das Universum positiv und negativ elektrisch geladen ist. Doch weil die' positiven und negativen Kräfte sich normalerweise in vollkommenem Gleichgewicht befinden, wird der größte Teil elektrischer Kräfte und Ströme um uns herum neutralisiert - und damit auf enervierende Weise unsichtbar, zumindest im herkömmlichen Sinne ... Im Prinzip ist alles um uns herum elektrisch aufgeladener leerer Raum.»

Discover Magazine, Feb. 1984

Es ist auffallig, daß im heutigen China selbst einfache Menschen das Universum so betrachten, als bestünde es aus diesen beiden Energien. Fragt man sie, sagen sie einem etwa, daß Knoblauch eine sehr heiße Energie besitzt; es wärmt den Körper: Folglich ist die Essenz des Knoblauch-Chi heiß oder yang. In den frühen Jahrhunderten schrieb man «Chi» im Chinesischen als Leerstelle im unteren Teil und als Feuer im oberen Teil des Piktogramms. Das sollte ausdrücken, daß kein «Feuer», keine einzige schöpferische Energie ausreicht, um Chi zu definieren. Chi existierte bereits vor dem Entstehen der physischen Welt als Ur-Chi, als reine Energie. Damit vermied man Streitigkeiten über die metaphysische Qualität des Ur-Chi (z.B. «Ist Gott gut oder böse?») und konzentrierte sich auf seine Erscheinungsformen in der normalen Welt, z.B. als heißes Yang-Chi in frischem Knoblauch oder schwaches Yin-Chi in einer erkrankten Leber. Das hat dazu geführt, daß die taoistische Philosophie sehr pragmatisch ausgerichtet ist und in der Beobachtung der natürlichen, organischen Welt gründet.

Die taoistische Höherentwicklung der Chi-Energie mag zwar in geistige Bereiche eindringen, die auf den ersten Blick äußerst subtil erscheinen, doch beginnt sie stets erdverbunden und mit auf den Körper konzentrierten Praktiken.

Wie wirkt «Ching» oder die «Sexualessenz» im Menschen?

Der Taoist nennt die Sexualenergie «Ching» oder «Essenz». Man könnte sie auch als eine Art «menschlicher Elektrizität» bezeichnen, weil Ching wie Chi eine unsichtbare Energie ist, die den Körper durchströmt. In ihrer ursprünglichen physischen Form wird sie beim Mann im Sperma, bei der Frau in den Eierstöcken gespeichert. Sie ist eine Art Chi-Energie, die durch Körperprozesse in eine stärkere Energieform umgewandelt worden ist. Ching ist eine aus Rohsubstanz destillierte kraftvolle Essenz, welche die Fähigkeit besitzt, den gesamten menschlichen Organismus von Grund auf zu erneuern. Bei Männern liegt die Essenz ihrer männlichen oder Yang-Energie in der Samenkraft.

Wenn Sie sexuell erregt sind, so ist dies Ihre Ching-Essenz, die sich in phänomenalem Tempo ausdehnt. Plötzlich wird Ihr ganzes Wesen mit neuer Energie geladen, Ihr Körper wird von Leidenschaft angetrieben, und Ihr Herz ist von Begierde durchdrungen. Wie der Druck auf den Lichtschalter Nacht zu Tag macht, verwandelt sich, von einer Sekunde zur anderen, Ihre ganze Tast- und Gefühlswelt grundlegend. Wenn sich ein Mann von einer Frau sexuell angezogen fühlt, geschieht dies, weil Millionen von Samenzellen in ihm zu vibrieren beginnen und ein vergrößertes Feld sexueller elektromagnetischer Energie erzeugen. Im Frühling kommt dies oft ganz spontan vor: Wenn die Bäume vor Saft fast bersten, paßt sich das Ching des Menschen dem Zyklus der Natur an und dehnt sich ebenfalls aus. In welcher Beziehung steht nun die sexuelle «Ching»-Essenz zu den anderen Formen der Chi-Energie, die Ihre Lebenskraft prägen?

Die hauptsächlichsten Formen der Chi-Energie

Im folgenden werden in vereinfachter Form die hauptsächlichsten Formen des Chi im Menschen dargestellt und die Beziehungen zur Ching-Essenz und zu Shien, dem Geist, der höchsten Stufe der Läuterung. Diese drei: Chi, Ching und Shien, heißen auch die «drei Schätze», weil ihre richtige Höherentwicklung uns zur Erleuchtung führt.

1. Pränatale Energie: Diese verbindet das von Mutter und Vater geerbte Chi und Ching; sie drückt sich im genetischen Kode aus und ist sichtbar zu erkennen als angeborene Vitalität eines Menschen.

2. Atem-Energie: Der Körper nimmt durch Ein- und Ausatmen von Luft kosmische Energie auf. Wer richtig atmet - entspannte, tiefe Bauchatmung -, empfangt mehr Energie.

3. Nahrungs-Energie: Die Reinheit des durch Nahrung aufgenommenen Chi ist von der Qualität der Nahrung abhängig und von der Fähigkeit des Körpers, Nährstoffe zu verdauen und aufzunehmen.

4. Meridian-Energie: Sie wird in den verschiedenen Arten von Körperzellen erzeugt und fließt von dort durch die Akupunkturbahnen, wobei sie alle lebenswichtigen Organe und Drüsen miteinander verbindet.

5. Puls-Energie: Der tiefe Rhythmus des Körpers, den man besonders in Venen und Arterien spüren kann, aber auch im Wechsel der biorhythmischen Energien, die den emotionalen, den mentalen und den physischen Körper harmonisieren.

6. Samen- (Ovar-)Energie: Ching, die sexuelle Essenz, ist von Geburt an vorhanden. Durch das Zufuhren anderer Formen von Chi (Nahrung, Atemluft usw.) gewinnt sie jedoch an Kraft. Die Sexualessenz ist die Quelle aller Energie, die für kreative und Denkprozesse zur Verfügung steht.

7. Geist-Energie: «Shien» ist das Licht hinter unserer Persönlichkeit, die Fähigkeit der Unterscheidung, die menschliche Selbst-Bewußtheit. Auf seiner reinsten Stufe ist es unser eigentliches Sein.

8. Wu Chi: Die Leere oder das Nichts, aus dem alle Chi-Energien entspringen und in welche sie wieder zurückkehren müssen (Ur-Chi).

Aufgabe des Taoisten ist es, seine Lebensenergie bis zur höchstmöglichen Stufe zu läutern. Gute Gesundheit und die tiefe Erfüllung des menschlichen Strebens nach Ganzheit ergeben sich daraus. Die alten Weisen beobachteten den natürlichen Prozeß der Umwandlung des rohen Chi der universalen Elemente Sonne und Erde, Nahrung und Luft in Ching oder Sexualenergie, die im männlichen Samen gespeichert wird. Die nächste Stufe ist noch viel subtiler und schwierig zu erkennen: Die Samenenergie wird mit dem Chi der Vitalorgane des Menschen vermischt und zu Shien oder Geist veredelt. Die Sexualenergie bietet sich nun als Bindeglied zwischen unserer biologischen und metaphysischen Identität an, zwischen dem Tierischen und dem Göttlichen. Die Fähigkeit zur Sexualität verleiht dem Menschen die göttliche Kraft, sich selbst zu erneuern, doch bindet sie ihn auch an seinen tierischen Körper und an den des Liebespartners.*

Abbildung 4

DER KREISLAUF DER SUBTILEN ENERGIE

* Möchten Sie mehr über das Wirken der Chi-Energie in den geistigen Bereichen wissen, sollten Sie die Bücher des taoistischen Meisters Ni Hua Chin lesen: Tao: The Subtle Universal Law und The Taoist Inner View ofthe Univene and the Immortal Realm (College of Tao, 117 Stonehaven Way, Los Die Taoisten glauben, daß man jede Substanz und Kraft im Universum benutzen kann, um den Prozeß der geistigen Entwicklung zu fördern und auf diese Weise die Begrenztheit des tierischen Körpers zu überwinden. Alles enthält Energie, und das menschliche Bewußtsein kann, wenn es will, diese Energie aufnehmen. Doch kann der menschliche Körper manche Substanzen und Stoffe leichter in eine verwertbare Form bringen als andere. Er kann z.B. die Energie einer guten, warmen Mahlzeit leichter aufnehmen als die Energie der Sonne am Strand. Die Sonnenenergie ist zu «roh» und mächtig, um vom Körper ohne weiteres «verdaut» zu werden. Nimmt man zuviel Sonnenlicht auf, kommt es zu schweren Verbrennungen. Eine Mahlzeit kann der Körper dagegen leicht verarbeiten und für lange Zeit seine Antriebskraft aus den verdauten Kalorien und Nährstoffen gewinnen.

Der Unterschied zwischen Hunger und sexueller Begierde

Worin liegt der energetische Unterschied zwischen Nahrung und Sex, nach denen es unseren Körper so sehr verlangt? Viele Menschen halten Hunger und sexuelles Verlangen irrigerweise für gleichartige biologische Bedürfnisse, weil beide zur Selbst-und Arterhaltung nötig sind. Selbstverständlich besteht ein Zusammenhang: Menschen, die sexuell frustriert sind, werden sich oft auf das Essen stürzen, um dort Befriedigung zu finden. Unausgeglichenes Ching (Sexualenergie) ist einer der Hauptgründe für Übergewicht.

Angeles, CA 90049). Im Chinesischen gibt es eine ganze Reihe von Werken zu diesem Thema, aber ich halte die beiden hier angeführten Bücher für die besten Übersetzungen und Kommentare zum taoistischen Kanon in englischer Sprache. Nis Übersetzung des I Ging ist der westlicher Gelehrter vorzuziehen, die die esoterischen Aspekte dieser klassischen Texte nur unvollständig erfaßt haben. Seine Übersetzung trägt den Titel: The Book of Changes and The Unchanging Truth.

Bei sexueller Frustration ist Nahrung eben der naheliegendste Ersatz.

Nahrung (Chi-Energie) und Sex (Ching-Essenz) unterscheiden sich hauptsächlich dadurch, daß Sexualenergie sich viel leichter «verdauen» und «aufnehmen» laßt als unverarbeitete Stoffe wie Nahrungsmittel, weil Nahrung zuerst in ihre Bestandteile aufgespalten und mit dem Körper verbunden werden muß, bevor sie uns mit brauchbarer Energie versorgen kann, während die Sexualessenz Ching im Körper erzeugt und dort bereits verfeinert wurde. Sie befindet sich in einem Zustand der Bereitschaft und kann sich innerhalb von Millisekunden mit unserem Drüsen- und Nervensystem verbinden. Die Vorstellung von Sex oder auch nur der bloße Gedanke daran können sofort in unser Gehirn strömen und unseren gesamten psychologischen Zustand wie auch unsere Körperempfindung verändern.

Sexualenergie ist ein potentiell hochwertiges «Nahrungsmittel» für die emotionale Reife und die geistige Entwicklung des Menschen. Aus diesem Grund wurde die Sexualität früher als Teilgebiet der chinesischen Medizin betrachtet und als eine Tatsache behandelt. So konnte es vorkommen, daß ein taoisti-scher Arzt seinem Patienten zweiwöchigen Geschlechtsverkehr in bestimmten Stellungen verordnete, um seine Krankheit zu heilen. Die menschliche Liebe, die in der Sexualität ausgedrückt wird, galt als wirkungsvollste Medizin überhaupt. Sie war eine Art «menschliches Heilkraut», mit dem sich die meisten Erkrankungen heilen ließen, da sie den Chi-Fluß wiederherstellte, der über die Lebensfähigkeit unserer Organe und unseres gesamten körpereigenen Abwehrsystems bestimmt.

Die Menschen hängen deshalb so an ihren Partnerbeziehungen, weil der Austausch sexueller Energie die wichtigste Nahrungsquelle nach dem Essen selbst darstellt. Und das macht Partnerschaften auch so kompliziert, denn Liebhaber und Freundinnen sind durchaus greifbare Wesen aus Fleisch und Blut, die Sexualenergie jedoch, die man mit ihnen zusammen beständig in Gefühls- und Geistregungen umwandelt, bleibt unsichtbar. Sie ist nur durch Empfindung und Intuition erfahrbar.

Eine Beziehung scheitert, wenn ihr Geist nicht höherentwikkelt wird und man sich dazu zwingt, negative oder vergiftete Sexualenergien zu «verspeisen», ohne sie in positive oder neutrale Energien zu transformieren. Ist das Energie-Ungleichgewicht groß genug geworden, kommt es zur Trennung, es sei denn, das Paar rindet andere Mittel und Wege, dies zu beheben. Das Lesen oder Betrachten von Pornoheften und die Masturba-tion sind weitere Beispiele für eine negative Entwicklung des eigenen Ching, da man nur die Yang-Essenz im Samen stimuliert, ohne sie mit der sexuellen Yin-Energie einer richtigen, lebendigen Frau ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen.

Ching Chi, die Sexualessenz, wird im Unterschied zur Nah-rungs- und Sonnenenergie im eigenen Körper erzeugt und gespeichert. Diese kostbare Substanz - der Samen mit seiner außergewöhnlichen Fähigkeit, sich mit einem weiblichen Ei zu verbinden und neues Leben zu erzeugen - wird in den Hoden produziert und aufbewahrt. Man kann deshalb jederzeit seinen eigenen Vorrat an Sexualenergie anzapfen, indem man die Samenkrart aus den Hoden zieht.

Abbildung 5

Das moderne Schriftzeichen für «Feuer» hat folgende Bedeutung: das UrElement Feuer,, als physisches Feuer oder seelische Hitze, das unter dem taoistischen Tiegel brennt.

Ist der Samenvorrat erschöpft, wird Ihr Körper automatisch neuen produzieren. Das läßt Sie körperlich jederzeit für Ihre Liebespartnerin bereit sein. Selbst wenn Sie allein sind, auch nicht vorhaben, Kinder zu zeugen, wird Ihr Körper Samen herstellen und ihn in schöpferische Sexualenergie umwandeln. Folglich können Sie auch diese gespeicherte Sexualenergie jederzeit in Geist umwandeln, in reines Bewußtsein und ihm durch Ihre schöpferische Persönlichkeit Ausdruck verleihen. Tatsächlich ist Ching innere Energie, die uns Tag und Nacht ohne Unterlaß nährt. Der Prozeß der Umwandlung verläuft teils automatisch, teils bewußt gesteuert. Wir können die Transformation der Sexualenergie in Kreativität entweder fordern oder behindern, je nachdem, wie bewußt wir uns unserer inneren Prozesse sind. Doch wie beim Atmen auch, nehmen wir diese Energiequelle unentwegt in Anspruch, ohne uns ihrer bewußt zu sein.

Sigmund Freud stolperte über diese Wahrheit, viele Jahrtausende nachdem die taoistischen Meister die Rolle der Sexualität in unserem Schicksal bereits untersucht und beschrieben hatten. Er erkannte nicht, daß die von ihm entdeckten Neurosen geheilt werden können durch richtigen Umgang mit der eigenen sexuellen Energie und den anderen Körperenergien. Werden diese Energien durch den richtigen Liebesakt und durch Meditation wieder ins Gleichgewicht gebracht, wird die Psyche umstrukturiert und von alten Traumata und Gewohnheiten befreit. Die taoistische Höherentwicklung der eigenen Sexualenergie ist ein äußerst wirksames Werkzeug fiir die Eigentherapie, sogar derart mächtig, daß sie nur von Menschen angewandt werden sollte, die bereits einen gewissen Grad der Integration von Körper, Geist und Seele erlangt haben. Sehr unausgeglichene und labile Menschen könnten sonst mehr Energie freisetzen, als sie verkraften können, weshalb sie zuerst einen Psychiater konsultieren sollten, bevor sie mit der taoistischen Praktik beginnen.

Diese einzigartige Freiheit des Menschen, mit der eigenen Sexualenergie nach Belieben umgehen zu können, hat allerdings ihren Preis. Dieser besteht darin, daß wir schätzungsweise zwischen 25 und 40% unserer durch Nahrung, Luft und Sonnenlicht aufgenommen Chi-Energie ausschließlich darauf verwenden, Samenenergie zu erzeugen und unsere sexuelle Bereitschaft zu gewährleisten. Warum benutzt der Organismus einen solch großen Teil seiner kostbaren Ressourcen, um Billionen von Samenzellen zu produzieren und sie durch ein entsprechendes Hormonsystem zu regulieren? Nur, um im Laufe eines Lebens ein paar Kinder zu zeugen? So verschwenderisch ist die Natur nicht. Unser Körper investiert derart viel in die Erzeugung der Samenenergie, um unsere Gesamtevolution zu beschleunigen. Je erfolgreicher ein Mann seine gespeicherte Energie in höhere schöpferische und geistige Energie umwandeln kann, um so schneller entwickelt er sich weiter. Der taoistische Weg der Höherentwicklung der Chi-Energie zeigt, wie die natürlichen, jedem Menschen angeborenen Gaben wirksam eingesetzt werden können, damit er sich in einem einzigen Leben so weit wie möglich entwickeln kann.

Abbildung 6

Der Mann verwendet im Durchschnitt etwa ein Drittel seines Lebens für die Samenproduktion. Die Samenenergie läßt sich weiterentwickeln und verhilft zu Gesundheit und geistigem Fortschritt.

3. KAPITEL

Die Biologie der esoterischen Sexualität

In der Regel beendet der Samenerguß den Liebesakt. Sobald die Samenflüssigkeit ausgetreten ist, unternimmt der Körper alle Anstrengungen, sie wieder zu ersetzen. Je schneller Samen verbraucht wird, um so schneller muß der Körper neuen produzieren. Die Erzeugung dieser nährkräftigen und auch psychisch sehr machtvollen Substanz erfordert einen hohen Einsatz an Rohsubstanzen. Die Keimdrüsen beziehen diese Rohsubstanzen aus dem Blutkreislauf. Das Blut wiederum entnimmt diese kostbaren Stoffe aus allen Teilen des Körpers, der Leber, den Nieren, der Milz und dem Gehirn.

Jedes Organ zahlt einen hohen Tribut an die samenproduzierenden Drüsen. Da jeder Tropfen Samen ungeheure Lebensenergien enthält, wird der Organismus bei häufigem Samenverlust seiner wertvollsten Nährstoffe beraubt, was körperlichen Verfall und Altern beschleunigt. Das Zurückhalten des Samens stellt den ersten Schritt zur Umkehrung dieses Kreislaufs dar, bei dem der Mann sonst einen unverhältnismäßig hohen Preis für seine sexuelle Befriedigung zahlen muß.

Der Samenverlust im Laufe eines Lebens

Bei vorsichtiger Schätzung kann man davon ausgehen, daß der heutige Durchschnittsamerikaner etwa SOOOmal in seinem Leben ejakuliert und insgesamt an die 15 Liter Samenflüssigkeit verliert. Dem Kinsey Report zufolge ejakuliert der Durchschnittsamerikaner mit folgender Häufigkeit:

Alter	Durchschnitt der Ejakulationen pro Woche
Pubertät-15	3,17
16-20	3,3
21-25	4,14
26-30	3,51
31-35	2,9
36-40	2,42
41-45	1,95
46-50	1,8
51-55	1,54
56-60	1,09

Jüngere Studien nehmen an, daß der lebenspendende Samen inzwischen noch häufiger verlorengeht als zur Zeit des Kinsey Reports, weil der allgemeine Grad sexueller Stimulierung und Aktivität heute hoher Hegt. Die Folgen der sexuellen Revolution, der leichtere Zugang zu Verhütungsmitteln, eine veränderte Einstellung zur Sexualität in Fernsehen, Film und Magazinen haben die sexuelle Betätigung besonders bei unverheirateten Jugendlichen ansteigen lassen.

Bleiben wir bei den ca. 5000 Ejakulationen im Laufe eines Durchschnittslebens, die Kinsey in den 50er Jahren festgestellt hat, beträgt der Samenverlust dann im Normalfall: 5000 (Ejakulationen) x 3 cc (Samenflüssigkeit} = 15000 cc. Das entspricht 15 Litern. Der Samenverlust pro Ejakulation beträgt zwischen 2 und 5 Kubikzentimetern zu je 200 bis 500 Millionen individuellen Samenzellen.

Der menschliche Körper verfugt über eigene Atomenergie

Diese Zahlen sind erstaunlich: Mit einer einzigen Ejakulation gibt ein Mann zwischen zweihundert und fünfhundert Millionen Samenzellen von sich. Würde man damit etwa zweihundertfünf-zig Millionen weibliche Eier befruchten, könnte man mit nur einer Ejakulation die ganzen Vereinigten Staaten bevölkern. Multipliziert man dies mit den 5000 Ejakulationen pro durchschnittlicher Lebenslänge, so erhält man eine geradezu astronomische Zahl, welche die Kraft des männlichen Samens gut veranschaulicht.

In den Lenden eines einzigen Mannes ruht die Zeugungskraft, die gegenwärtige Weltbevölkerung von etwa vier Milliarden um das Zweihundertfunfzigfache zu übersteigen! In diesem Sinn kann jeder Mann einen Meiler an Sexualenergie in seinem Inneren erschaffen, der gewaltiger ist als die Atombombe. Würde man dieses kaum vorstellbare Reservoir psychischer Energie auf die Erzeugung von Liebe und spiritueller Harmonie umlenken, würden die Möglichkeiten für eine friedvolle, erfüllte Existenz unbegrenzt sein.

Manch westlicher Wissenschaftler mag die Vorstellung belächeln, daß der Samen eine solch kraftvolle, mächtige Substanz sein soll. Aber auch er kann nicht leugnen, daß es sich um eine lebenserzeugende und -erhaltende Kraft im eigenen Körperinneren handelt.

Das Bewahren der Energie wird sich bei jedem Mann anders auswirken. Kein Mann und keine Rasse erzeugt dieselbe Art von Energie. In jedem Menschen entsteht die Energie, die seinem eigenen Wesen entspricht. So entwickelt beispielsweise eine Gruppe von Menschen große körperliche Kraft, eine andere starke Widerstandsfähigkeit gegen Krankheiten, bei anderen zeigen sich hellseherische Fähigkeiten, wiederum andere erhalten erstaunliche Langlebigkeit. Doch allen Menschen gemeinsam ist die Fähigkeit, ihr aktives Leben durch schöpferische Anpassung an ihre Umwelt erheblich zu verlängern und zu intensivieren.

Wissenschaftler haben versucht, Darwins Thesen noch auszuweiten, indem sie spezifische genetische Impulse untersuchten, die das Verhalten beeinflussen und dazu führen, daß der Gen-Pool eines Individuums seine Überlebenschancen erheblich verbessern kann. Die große evolutionäre Kraft unseres Geschlechtstriebs wird hier richtig erkannt, doch die Möglichkeit der Umwandlung der Sexualenergiein höhere schöpferische Impulse des Geistes und der Seele völlig übersehen. Der höherentwickelte Mensch bestimmt mit Geist und Seele über seinen tierischen Körper und seine Instinkte. Die Wissenschaft behauptet jedoch das Gegenteil. Sie hat nicht unrecht, aber nur, weil die menschliche Evolution, zurück zum eigenen Selbst, noch unvollständig ist.

Der Mensch wird noch von seinen biologischen Trieben beherrscht. Hat er einmal zu seiner Ganzheit gefunden und seinen noch groben Körper mit seinem Geist und seiner Seele integriert, steht sein spirituelles Sein weit über dem Beherrschtwerden von biologischen Instinkten. Das verstößt nicht gegen die Naturgesetze des Universums, sondern besagt, daß wir Lebewesen sind mit der angeborenen Fähigkeit, unsere Energie höherzuentwickeln bis zu einer Stufe, wo es möglich wird, den Körper nach Belieben einzusetzen. Nicht daß der Geist über die Materie herrschen soll, das würde wieder Kampf bedeuten. Es geht vielmehr um das Wirken des Geistes innerhalb der Materie. Die Offenbarungen des Geistes haben uns befähigt, Atombomben zu bauen und Menschen auf den Mond zu befördern -warum sollten wir ihn nicht dazu nutzen, seinen eigenen Körper zu lenken, der ihm am nächsten steht?

Wissenschaftlich denkende Leser stimmen vielleicht dieser Auffassung nicht zu. Sie läßt sich nur durch die Erfahrung selbst beweisen, die wir durch den täglichen Umgang mit unserem Chi gewinnen. Viele Wissenschaftler halten einen Orgasmus ohne Ejakulation für unmöglich, und doch weiß ich und Hunderte meiner Schüler mit mir, daß es nur eine Sache der Übung ist, des Trainings des Geistes, Kontrolle über das Chi im Bereich des Körpers zu erlangen.

Die Wissenschaft kann die chemische Zusammensetzung der Samenflüssigkeit analysieren, jedoch nicht erklären, worauf das lebensschafTende Prinzip, der innere «Genius» des menschlichen Sperma, beruht. Wie sollte man auch menschliches Leben messen können? Nur ein naturwissenschaftlicher Philister kann versuchen, den Menschen auf seine reine Mechanik zu reduzieren.

Angesichts der Fähigkeit des Samens, vier Billionen intelligenter, schöpferischer Einzelmenschen zeugen zu können, ver-blassen alle Erklärungen. Mittlerweile erkennt die theoretische Physik die Unmöglichkeit, das ekstatische Phänomen der Schöpfung wissens chaftlich zu analysieren. Die Quantenphysiker haben sich mit der Wahrscheinlichkeit abgefunden, daß es kein allerkleinstes Partikel gibt, keinen physischen Baustein, auf dem der Kosmos aufgebaut ist. Es gibt nur die Multi-Universen von Raum und Zeit, die durch unendliche Energiefelder miteinander verbunden sind. Sie werden als Gravitationskraft, als starke und schwache Wechselwirkung und als elektromagnetische Kraft beschrieben. Die Taoisten halten jeden Versuch, die Natur in ihrer Gesamtheit beschreiben zu wollen, für fruchtlos. Sie halten es dagegen für wesentlich nutzbringender, zu versuchen, eine tiefere Harmonie mit ihr zu erreichen.

Die Sexualenergie ist ein elektromagnetisches Feld, das innerhalb des Körpers erzeugt wird und an größere kosmische Energiefelder angeschlossen ist. Wie die Verbindung aussieht, ist für die Wissenschaft der Gegenwart nicht erkennbar. Doch besteht kein Grund, noch fünfhundert Jahre zu warten, bis sie uns endlich eine Erklärung der Sexualität liefert. Jeder Mensch kann hier und jetzt sein eigenes Sexualenergiefeld erfahren und seine eigenen Schlüsse ziehen. Die Tao Meister waren die Naturwissenschaftler der Frühzeit, die eine besondere Begabung für Selbstbeobachtung hatten und es sich zum Anliegen machten, die menschliche Evolution zu fördern. Jede Generation überprüfte die von ihren Meistern gelehrten Praktiken und versuchte sie noch weiter zu vervollkommnen. Die Methoden zur Kultivierung des Chi sind zwar über mehrere Jahrtausende hin entwickelt worden, aber die Grundprämisse blieb stets die gleiche: Das Ching, die Samenkraft, ist eine ungeheuer wirkungsvolle Kraft, die jeder besitzt und nutzen kann. Sie ist der Grundstein für die Erweiterung unseres persönlichen Universums, das Fundament für menschliche Liebe und Entwicklung.

Die biologische Bedeutung der Sexualhormone für die körperliche Gesundheit

Durch die moderne Wissenschaft kennen wir die chemische Zusammensetzung und die Funktionsweise des Sperma im menschlichen Körper bis in erstaunliche Einzelheiten. Jede Samenzelle enthält 23 Chromosomen, Prostaglandine, Ionen, Enzyme, Spurenelemente und andere wesentliche Bausteine des menschlichen Lebens. Zur Zeugung eines menschlichen Lebewesens von unerschöpflichem Potential braucht es außer dem Samen nur noch die Bestandteile des mütterlichen Eis und die nährenden Lebensbedingungen in der Mutter.

Die Samenbläschen, zwei kleine Säckchen, die am Blasengrund Sperma ansammeln, sind mit dem Harnleiter verbunden. Sie erzeugen eine gelbliche Flüssigkeit, die sich mit den Sper-mien vermischt und die Samenflüssigkeit (das Sperma) eindickt.

Dieses Sekret enthält Fruktose (Fruchtzucker) zur Ernährung der Samenzellen.

Die Prostata oder Vorsteherdrüse steuert ebenfalls ihren Teil zu diesem Fortpflanzungssekret bei. Sie umgibt den Anfang der Ure-thra (die männliche Harnröhre, die den ganzen Penis durchzieht) unterhalb der Harnblase. Bei der Ejakulation verspritzt die Prostata eine dünne, klare Flüssigkeit, die die Spermien nach außen treibt. Die Cowper' Drüsen entlang des Harnleiters mischen einige wenige Tropfen eines alkalischen Sekrets bei, das die vom Urinieren in der Harnröhre verbliebenen Säurereste neutralisiert.

Dr. Beyoihn, ein bekannter Endokrinologe, hat einmal die Bedeutung der hormonalen Funktion der Samenproduktion hervorgehoben; «Sexualhormone sind wichtig für unsere harmonische Entwicklung. Wenn der Mann seine Fortpflanzungsfähigkeit mißbraucht, gehen die Sekrete der Geschlechtsdrüsen verloren ... was zu geistiger und körperlicher Schwächung, zu Konzentrationsmangel und Gedächtnisschwäche fuhrt.»*

Der Liebesakt ist eine innere Übung, die hilft, Unausgewo-genheiten in der Körperchemie auszugleichen. Maßvolle sexuelle Betätigung kann Hormonstörungen heilen, den Choleste-rinspiegel und den Blutdruck senken. Sexuelle Aktivität kann den Körper chemisch verändern, weil alle Drüsen sich gegenseitig beeinflussen. Werden verstärkt Sexualhormone produziert, stimuliert dies auch die hormonale Ausschüttung der anderen Hauptdrüsen, der Nebennierendrüsen, der Thymus-, Schild-, Hirnanhang- und Zirbeldrüse. Ist man noch jung, lebt man in der Illusion, man könnte die eigenen Drüsen endlos stimulieren, ohne dafür einen Preis zahlen zu müssen. Sex erscheint einem als unergründlicher Brunnen der Seligkeit. Das kann es auch tatsächlich sein, wenn man sich bemüht, die Sexualhormone wieder in den Kreislauf des Organismus zurückzufuhren, anstatt sie immer wieder auszuschütten.

Die Sexualhormone bewirken mehr als bloßes Wohlgefiihl: Sie durchdringen praktisch jeden Aktivitätsbereich und formen die Persönlichkeit. Jüngste wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen belegen, daß die Sexualhormone die Zellordnung des Gehirns beeinflussen. Sind Sie also männlichen Geschlechts, trägt jede einzelne Ihrer Zellen den Stempel «männlich». Diese Prägung ist auch für die unterschiedliche Veranlagung von Mann und Frau verantwortlich.

* E. Ratto, Warning: Sex May Be Hazardous To YourHealth (Arco Publishers 1973).

Dr. Günther Dorner, Direktor des Instituts für Experimentelle Endokrinologie an der Humboldt Universität in Ost-Berlin, bemerkt: «Die Sexualhormone ... erscheinen nicht einfach während der Pubertät aus dem Nirgendwo. Sie irren auch nicht ziellos im Körper umher. Sie wissen ganz genau, wo sie hinwollen! Ihre Zielzellen sind bereits im Mutterleib darauf vorbereitet worden, auf die Hormone zu reagieren, die nun produziert werden. Das gilt für den Körper, besonders für die Fortpflanzungsorgane, das Herz, die Lungen, die Leber und die Nieren. Aber es gilt ebenso für das Gehirn. Gewebe, Nervengeflecht und Chemie des Hirns haben schon im fötalen Stadium den Stempel der Sexualhormone aufgedrückt bekommen. Und die Weichen sind auch bereits gestellt für jene Verhaltensweisen, die den erwachsenen Organismus als männlich oder weiblich charakterisieren werden.»*

Diese hormonalen Unterschiede bestimmen offensichtlich viele der Eigenschaften in Mann und Frau, welche die Chinesen mit «Yin» und «Yang» bezeichnet haben. Das taoistische Ziel der völligen Integrierung des Sexualtriebs in den Geist wird auch dem westlichen Intellektuellen sinnvoller erscheinen, wenn er die Zusammenhänge zwischen sexueller Betätigung, hormonalem Gleichgewicht, körperlicher Gesundheit und der Gesamtpersönlichkeit kennenlernt. Es existieren hinreichend Beweise dafür, daß das hormonale Gleichgewicht die Gesundheit und das Wohlbefinden entscheidend beeinflußt. Moderne Krebsforscher untersuchen inzwischen diese Zusammenhänge, um genauer zu verstehen, wie Geist und Emotionen unser Immunsystem beherrschen. Die Taoisten würden sagen, es sei ein unnötig kompliziertes Vorgehen, zuerst jeden einzelnen mikrokopisch winzigen Hormonrezeptor und jedes Enzym im genetischen Kode aufzuspüren, um dann die Hunderte verschiedener Krebstypen und Erkrankungen zu bekämpfen, die durch das Versagen des menschlichen Immunsystems entstehen.

* Science Digest, September 1983, S. 87.

Der kritische Punkt, sagen sie, sei das innere Gleichgewicht. Bei einem ausgewogenen Verhältnis der männlichen und weiblichen Chi-Energien im Körper wird jede Zelle vollkommen funktionieren, und auch die Hormone können dann ihre Aufgabe erfüllen, den Körpermechanismus reibungslos laufen zu lassen. Das Gleichgewicht von männlichen und weiblichen Hormonen bewirkt eine glückliche Persönlichkeit, die in harmonischem Einklang mit der Welt lebt. Die Bewahrung und Transformation der Sexualenergie ist eine von vielen taoistischen Techniken, um das innere Gleichgewicht des menschlichen Energiesystems so zu stärken, daß keine äußere Kraft es mehr zerstören kann. Die Taoisten sehen alles, die Hormone ebenso wie die Sexualität, die Persönlichkeit wie die Gesundheit und darüber hinaus die spirituelle Bestimmung des Menschen, als untrennbar miteinander verbunden. Das ist das Wirken des Tao, das die vergängliche gewöhnliche Welt einer Samstagabendverabredung mit der Explosion einer viele Lichtjahre entfernten Supernova verbindet. Das Prinzip der Energiefusion ist bei beiden dasselbe.

Das Geheimnis aller Geheimnisse des Taoismus war der Prozeß des Wieder geboren werdens durch Gebären eines neuen Selbst. Als ich zum ersten Mal davon hörte, verstand ich es nicht, doch später, als ich das endokrine Drüsensystem studierte, konnte ich Analogien entdecken. Ich erkannte, daß sowohl Mann als Frau beide männliche und weibliche Hormone erzeugen und die Möglichkeit besitzen, einen Austausch in ihrem eigenen Inneren zu haben, um ein neues Selbst zu gebären.

Eine wichtige Verbindung im männlichen Hormonsystem besteht zwischen den Hoden und der Himanhangdrüse, die zwischen den Augenbrauen hinter der Stirn liegt. Beide Drüsen arbeiten bei der Transformation der Sexualenergie zusammen, was Sie selbst erfahren werden, wenn Sie damit beginnen, Ihre Sexualenergie emporzuleiten. Wird das Ching verfeinert, so beginnen Hoden und Hirnanhangdrüse zu pulsieren, was ein Zeichen dafür ist, daß das Drüsensystem harmonisch arbeitet, also nicht nur während des Liebesaktes. Die Hirnanhangdrüse wiederum regelt die Aktivität aller anderen Drüsen. Sind sie in vollkommener Harmonie, so scheiden sie einen ganz feinen Nektar aus, eine äußerst feinstoffliche Substanz, die der Wissenschaft noch nicht bekannt ist. Sie durchflutet die Nervenzentren des Gehirns und fuhrt das Gefühl der Glückseligkeit herbei, von dem so viele Mystiker berichten. Zwar ist dies nur eine Phase innerhalb der spirituellen Entwicklung, doch eine, die besonders stark vom Gleichgewicht der Sexualenergie im Körper abhängt.

Die sexuelle Aktivität wirkt sich ebenso stark auch in den herkömmlicheren Bereichen der Gesundheit aus. Sexualität hat alle gesundheitsfördernden Wirkungen zu bieten wie Sport oder Gymnastik auch. Durch sexuelle Betätigung wird der Essenszwang gebremst, werden Kalorien verbrannt, so daß Fettleibigkeit gemildert wird. Sexualität strengt das Herz weniger an als das Autofahren im Stadtverkehr oder das Zuschauen bei einem guten Fußballspiel. Darüber hinaus verlangsamt sich der Herzschlag nach dem Sexualakt sehr schnell. (Wer allerdings in Gefahr lebt, bald einen Herzanfall zu bekommen, sollte sich lieber auf passiven Sex beschränken, da die aktive Variante die Attacke sonst eventuell auslösen konnte.)

Die Liebe ist also ein großartiges natürliches Gegenmittel zum Streß. Emotionaler Streß kann erheblichen Schaden anrichten, da er jede einzelne Körperzelle beeinträchtigt. Der städtische Lebensstil beschert uns heute immer mehr von diesem starken Gift.

Streß führt unmittelbar zur Degeneration der Herzgefäße, etwa in Form von Arteriosklerose und Bluthochdruck. Liebe dagegen bringt die Körperchemie wieder in Ordnung, indem sie die Hormonzentren aktiviert und dazu anregt, den physischen Körper zu schützen; außerdem wird dadurch unser geistiges und seelisches Leben harmonisiert.

Bei häufiger Ejakulation verliert die Sexualität einen Großteil ihrer Vorzüge, und schließlich kommt es zu einem Verlust der Vitalität. Wer sexuell in großem Stil seine Energie vergeudet, verliert an Lebenskraft. Die physischen Schäden des Essenzver-lusts werden nur bei Paaren und Einzelpersonen weitgehend gemildert, die eine starke emotionale und geistige Liebe in sich erzeugen und aufrechterhalten.

Findet ein Paar in jahrelanger Ehe zu einer vertieften gemeinsamen Harmonie, so wird es einen Teil seiner Sexualessenz intuitiv bewahren. Das wird übrigens von Untersuchungen der Versicherungswirtschaft bestätigt: Verheiratete Paare leben länger als Alleinstehende. Gemeinsam können zwei Menschen den Streß des Lebens oft besser ertragen als allein, weil sie ein besseres Gleichgewicht von Yin und Yang erzielen. Schon der bloße Liebesakt selbst transformiert niederes Chi und Chine in feinere geistige Substanz. Die taoistischen Methoden der Höher-entwicklung geschlechtlicher Energie sind kraftvolle Hilfen für Menschen, die diesen «Pfad des Herzens» gehen wollen.

In Chicago gibt es eine Gruppe älterer Menschen, die rituelle Sexualität praktizieren, um ihre Vitalität zu bewahren. Diese Gruppe, die sich «Sexy Senior Citizens» nennt, ist unbewußt die Erbin einer Vielzahl vergleichbarer Gesellschaften des Ostens, die jahrtausendelang die taoistischen Methoden der Chi-Kultivienmg lehrten.

Im Alter verlieren alle körpereigenen Systeme an EfFizienz, darunter auch das Hormonsystem, das wichtige elektromagnetische Reaktionen regelt. Nimmt die Hormonausschüttung ab, wird auch der Körper schwächer. Die Zusammenhänge zwischen Hormonen, Sexualität und Altersverfall sind noch nicht völlig erforscht. Doch sind mittlerweile viele Forscher, die sich an vorderster Front mit diesem Thema befassen, zu der Überzeugung gelangt, daß die das Wachstum und die Geschlechtsreife steuernden Hormone auch beim Altern eine kritische Rolle spielen. Diese Hormone werden in der Hirnanhang- und in der Schilddrüse sowie in den Keimdrüsen erzeugt.

Die Hoden haben eine doppelte Funktion: Abgesehen davon, daß sie das Sperma produzieren, erzeugen sie auch männliche Hormone, darunter das Testosteron. Die Sertoli' Zellen in den Hoden produzieren ein weiteres Hormon, das sogenannte Inhi-bin oder X-Hormon. Vermeidet man die Ejakulation, so gelangen diese Hormone in den Blutkreislauf und werden in alle Teile des Körpers befördert.

Es gibt eine große Zahl von Hinweisen, daß harmonische sexuelle Aktivität und Verzögerung des Altersprozesses in direktem Zusammenhang miteinander stehen. Liebevolle Sexualität stimuliert eine hochqualitative Hormonausschüttung. Die dadurch ins Blut gelangenden Hormone scheinen den Alterungsprozeß merklich aufzuhalten. Bei der taoistischen Praktik erzeugt man ungewöhnlich hochwertige, wirkungsvolle Hormone, weil man die Energie direkt auf die endokrinen Drüsen konzentriert und sie wesentlich stärker stimuliert als sonst. Da die hormonale Energie dabei ständig im Körper zirkuliert, anstatt ejakuliert zu werden, stellt der erfolgreiche Schüler dieser Liebeslehre fest, daß er immer größere Energiemengen zur Verfugung hat, je älter er wird.

Durch das verstärkte Kreisenlassen der Sexualenergie wird auch das Chi im körpereigenen Speichersystem umverteilt. Mit zunehmendem Alter vergrößern sich unsere Körperhöhlen und füllen sich mit Fett oder verschiedenen AbfallstofFen, welche den Alterungsprozeß beschleunigen und die Qualität unserer letzten Lebensjahre senken. Mit der taoistischen Methode zieht man Sexualenergie aus den Hoden und füllt Schädel- und Rük-kenhöhlen mit Ching. Sind diese damit gefüllt, fließt es über und durchströmt Brust- und Bauchhöhlen mit lebensverjüngender Kraft.

Die körpereigenen Speicherbecken des Chi liefern das Rohmaterial, um den Körper immun für Krankheiten zu machen; eine Methode, die von den Taoisten als «Innere Alchemie» bezeichnet wurde. Dieser Prozeß der Entwicklung des «Elixiers der Unsterblichkeit» oder der «Unsterblichkeitspille» laßt sich biologisch so beschreiben, daß die Lebenskraft des Körpers zunächst gespeichert und schließlich zu ihrem Ursprung zurückgeführt wird. Das Chi wird aus diesen Speicherbecken innerhalb der Körperhöhlen zu den innersten Zentren des Hirns und der Knochen geleitet. Große Meister des Tai Chi Chuan und anderer verinnerlichter Kampfkünste sind mit der Methode der Verlagerung des Chi ins Knochenmark wohlvertraut. Sie wissen darum, daß die Muskelkraft dem Alterungsprozeß nicht standhalten kann, daß Knochen jedoch Tausende von Jahren überleben. Diese Praktik, die ich in einem späteren Werk über Eisen-hemd-Chi Kung behandeln werde, beruht ebenfalls auf der Bewahrung der Samenkraft.

Neuere wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zeigen die Bedeutung des Knochenmarks für die Krankheitsbekämpfung durch die Erzeugung weißer Blutkörperchen. Vielleicht wird die Wissenschaft eines Tages den Stand der alten Tao Meister erreichen und den ganzen Zusammenhang zwischen gesunder Sexualität, Hormonen und Knochenmark bei der Bekämpfung des Alterungsprozesses und verschiedenster Krankheiten erkennen.

Tod und Sexualität in der Natur

«... Hat der lebendige Organismus, ob er nun pflanzlicher oder tierischer Art sein mag, sein Ziel erreicht, nämlich den neuen Samen, dann fällt er selbst dem Verfall anheim.»

Schwaller de Lubicz, The Temple in Man

Die Natur erhält die Arten durch die Sexualität. Im männlichen Samen konzentriert sie die essentiellen Elemente des Vaters. Alle Lebensformen kennen das Prinzip der elterlichen Aufopferung für ihre Nachkommen, von der Amöbe bis zum Walroß, von der Gottesanbeterin bis zur Orchidee.

Die Verbindung von Tod und Fortpflanzung laßt sich besonders an der kurzen Lebensspanne des Kleinen Nachtpfauenauges aufzeigen. Dieser große Falter fliegt viele Kilometer über Land, um sich einen weiblichen Paarungspartner zu suchen: «Das berühmte Prinzip des Lebenskampfes wird hier zum Kampf des Leben-Gebens, des Kampfes, zu sterben. Obwohl diese Insekten drei Tage überleben können, wahrend sie ihr Weibchen suchen, finden sie sofort nach der Befruchtung den Tod. »*

Auch Pflanzen unterliegen diesem Gesetz. Hat eine Pflanze Samen oder Frucht hervorgebracht, stirbt sie entweder ab, oder sie tritt in eine Phase der Nichtaktivität ein. Gärtner wissen, daß eine Pflanze, die man daran hindert, Samen zu entwickeln, ihre gereiften Gefährten überdauert. Die meisten fruchttragenden Bäume bringen erst nach fünf oder zehn Jahren Frucht hervor. Während dieser Zeitspanne verwenden sie ihre gesamte biologische Kraft darauf, ihr Gewebe wachsen zu lassen und es zu stärken.

Später teilen Pflanzen ihre Lebenskraft zwischen Gewebeerhaltung und Fortpflanzung auf, und im Alter benötigen sie dann alle verbliebenen Energien für das Überleben. Sie entziehen dem Geschlechtlichen ihre* Kraft und tragen keine Frucht mehr.

Bestimmte männliche Insekten können ihre Lebensspanne um ein Mehrfaches verlängern, indem sie ihren Samen einfach nicht verlieren. Man könnte nun zwar einwenden, daß das Liebesleben der Insekten keine Bedeutung für das unsrige hat, und doch sind Insekten wahre Meister sexuellen Einfallsreichtums und geschlechtlicher Effizienz. Sie stellen über die Hälfte allen tierischen Lebens auf unserem Planeten, und was erotische Vielfalt angeht, so übertrumpfen sie jeden Menschen. Gegen das Liebesleben der Insekten wirken der Marquis de Sade, der Heilige Antonius und David Bowie wie eine Truppe Pfadfinder, die zum ersten Mal die Sexualität entdeckt haben.

Insekten arbeiten mit größter Intensität am Netz ihres Lebens. Ihre Kraft, ihren eigenen Lebensstil durchzusetzen, erkennt man an ihrer großen Zahl, ihrem gigantischen Alter und an der Vielfalt ihrer Lebensräume, Formen und Gewohnheiten. Die Vergöttlichung des Staates im marxistischen Sozialismus ist nur ein matter Abklatsch der Insekten-Fähigkeit zur Organisation von Kollektiven. Anstatt sie zu vernichten, würde ein Atomkrieg ihnen vielmehr eine ungewöhnliche, seltene Gelegenheit bieten, neue Organe zu entwickeln und eine reiche Vielfalt neuer Lebensformen entstehen zu lassen.

Der Fortpflanzungsakt wirkt auf alle Lebensformen erschöpfend und entzieht ihnen lebenswichtige Energien. Die Nachkommen werden aus körpereigenen Nahrungsspeichern ernährt, um ihr neues Leben zu stabilisieren. Dabei leiden die Vitalorgane am meisten, weil sie die dichteste Nährstoffkonzen-tration aufweisen. Beim Menschen ist das Opfern der weiblichen Körperenergie in der Phase bis zur Geburt unvermeidlich, und auch der Mann muß seine Samenkraft mindestens einmal preisgeben, um das weibliche Ei zu befruchten.

Das Wesen der Natur rechtfertigt dieses Opfer, denn ihr Ziel, das Leben zu vermehren, wird erreicht. Sie will, daß das Alte dem Neuen Platz macht. Nur der Mensch kann von allen stofflichen Wesen dem Willen der Natur trotzen. «Weder Entfernungen noch die Gefahren langer Reisen, noch die der Annäherung kann die Instinkte (im Tierreich) in die Irre fuhren. Beim Menschen, der manchmal die Kraft hat, sich dem Diktat seiner Sexualität zu widersetzen, kann dieser Ungehorsam positive Folgen haben.

Die Keuschheit kann auf den Menschen wie ein Transformator wirken, der unverbrauchte sexuelle Energie in intellektuelle oder soziale Energie umwandelt. Bei den Tieren ist diese Umpolung physiologischer Wertigkeiten unmöglich.»*

Gerade die Möglichkeit, unsere instinkthaften und im wesentlichen tierischen Sexualenergien in etwas Höheres umzuwandeln, macht uns zu Menschen und potentiell göttlich. Verfehlen wir, unsere Sexualenergie zu transformieren, verfehlen wir auch die Aufgabe, unser größtes menschliches Potential zu erschließen und zu verwirklichen. Aus diesem Grund stellt der unbewußte Geschlechtsakt mit der Ejakulation des männlichen Samens eine Art «kleinen Tod» dar, wie man ihn so oft im Tier-und Pflanzenreich beobachten kann. Bei jeder Ejakulation finden zwei- bis fünfhundert Millionen Spermien den Tod, und die gleichzeitige Vergeudung subtiler Energie ist noch viel größer, als diese gewaltigen Zahlen ahnen lassen.

Führt der vergossene Samen im Mann zu einer Art Wiedergeburt oder empfängt die Frau dadurch neues Leben, so steht dieser Verlust oder Tod im Einklang mit der Natur. Doch ohne eine Transformation dieser «Mini-Tode» in einen liebevollen Austausch, in Liebe, in ein Kind oder in höheres Bewußtsein, wird der Geschlechtsakt zu einem reinen Morden der im Samen enthaltenen potentiellen Lebensenergie. Vielleicht liegt hier auch die wahre Verbindung zwischen Sexualität und Gewalt. Menschen, die sich radikal gegen Abtreibung und Empfängnisverhütung stellen, könnten ihre Kampagnen ebensogut gegen Männer fuhren, die ihre potentielle Lebenskraft durch unnötige Ejakulation töten.

Obwohl die Taoisten das Konzept der Sünde nicht kennen, würden sie vielleicht doch sagen, daß die Menschheit deshalb in ihren gegenwärtigen geschwächten seelischen Zustand geraten ist, weil sie jahrtausendelang ihre Sexualenergien vergeudet hat. Die chinesische Mythologie erzählt von einem goldenen Zeitalter, in dem alle Menschen in Harmonie mit der Natur gelebt und ihre Samenenergie ebenso natürlich und mühelos transformiert haben, wie wir heute atmen. Es ist unwichtig, ob diese Legende objektiv «wahr» ist oder nicht - ihr wahrer Kern zeigt, daß der Mensch zu einer weitaus höheren Existenzstufe fähig ist, als er annimmt. Diese Geschichte weist verblüffende Parallelen zur biblischen Legende von Adam und Eva auf, die aus der Gnade fielen, nachdem sie von der verbotenen Frucht sexueller Liebe gekostet hatten. In diesem Sinne ist es das Ziel der taoistischen Liebespraktik, das verlorengegangene Paradies, das noch immer in jedem Menschen schlummert, wiederherzustellen, Mann und Frau zu ihrer ursprünglichen Natur zurückzuführen.

Die Hauptfunktion der Sexualität in der Natur besteht darin, neues Leben zu erschaffen und die Art zu erhalten. Doch ist die Menschheit unserer Tage so fruchtbar gewesen und hat sich derart vermehrt, daß wir vor einer Überbevölkerung stehen nebst den diese begleitenden Umweltkatastrophen. Der Mißbrauch sexueller Kraft durch wahllose Fortpflanzung hat die Menschheit an den Rand einer globalen Krise getrieben. Dadurch wurde die Kriegsgefahr erheblich verstärkt, was eines Tages möglicherweise zur gänzlichen Ausrottung unserer Art fuhren könnte.

Abgesehen von bestimmten Insektenarten und höheren Primaten, pflegen die meisten Tiere sexuellen Verkehr ausschließlich zum Zwecke der Fortpflanzung. Das Weibchen empfängt das Männchen nur wahrend bestimmter Paarungsperioden, die insgesamt einen recht kleinen Anteil an der ganzen Lebensspanne des jeweiligen Tiers haben. Es ist offensichtlich, daß die Sexualität für den Menschen eine andere Rolle spielt als für das Tier; deshalb ist es auch so wichtig, daß Männer wie Frauen darüber aufgeklärt werden, welche Möglichkeiten ihnen die Sexualität für ihre eigene Weiterentwicklung bietet und wie ihnen auf diese Weise geholfen werden kann, das Gleichgewicht der Natur wiederherzustellen.

4. KAPITEL

Die Ökonomie des Sexus

«Der Mann kann nicht ohne die Frau sein, und die Frau kann nicht ohne den Mann sein. Wenn du meinst, Geschlechtsverkehr sei ein isolierter oder von allem anderen abgetrennter Akt, so gefährdet dies die Langlebigkeit und läßt jede nur erdenkliche Krankheit aufkeimen.»

aus der Rezepturßr die Herstellung des Unschätzbaren Goldes
Sun S'su-Mo, ein Arzt, der 101 Jahre alt wurde

Jeder Mensch wird mit einer bestimmten Menge unschätzbarer, lebenswichtiger Chi-Energie geboren. Manche erhalten mehr als andere, doch gehen wir der Einfachheit halber davon aus, daß der Durchschnittsmensch mit einer Vitalitätssumme von etwa $ 1000000 zur Welt kommt. Im Laufe eines Lebens wird diese Million «Dollar» an Lebenskraft verbraucht. Manche Menschen gehen weise damit um, werden über 80 und 90 und bleiben dabei gesund. Ist man noch jung, verbraucht man diese Energie schneller, weil man sich nicht vorstellen kann, daß eine solch gewaltige Menge jemals zu Ende gehen könnte.

Die meisten Menschen geben in unserer Konsumgesellschaft mehr aus, als sie verdienen. Sie verschulden sich bis über beide Ohren, weil sie glauben, später alles wieder zurückzahlen zu können. Gelingt es nicht, gehen sie entweder bankrott oder müssen eine Zeitlang den Gürtel enger schnallen. Bei falscher Lebensweise geschieht das gleiche mit der Lebensenergie. Der Preis, den wir dafür zahlen, besteht aus mangelnder Lebensfreude, aus Krankheit und Tod.

Nehmen wir an, daß ein Mann täglich etwa 100 Einheiten zusätzliche Lebenskraft durch Atmen, Essen und Ruhen aufnimmt. Durch schlechte Ernährungsgewohnheiten, Rauchen, Vollerei, Überarbeitung, Angst und Sorge, konstitutionelle Schwäche, Drogenmißbrauch und häufigen Verlust lebenswichtiger Sexualsäfte gibt er 125 Einheiten am Tag wieder aus. Um die überzähligen 25 Einheiten überhaupt ausgeben zu können, muß er ständig sein «Kapital» angreifen, indem er sich Vitalität vom Gehirn und den Körperorganen borgt. Dieses räuberische Leben von der Substanz fuhrt mit der Zeit zu geistiger und körperlicher Erkrankung und zum vorzeitigen Altern.

Bewahrt man dagegen die Sexualenergie, so kann man 125 Einheiten aufnehmen und gleichzeitig nur 100 Einheiten oder noch weniger abgeben. Das bedeutet, in die eigene körperliche, geistige und seelische Entwicklung zu investieren. Das Ungleichgewicht des eigenen Energiehaushalts läßt sich beheben, wenn man die katastrophal verschwenderische Kraftvergeudung durch Ejakulation vermeidet. Durch Umwandlung der bewahrten Sexualsäfte in höhere geistige oder spirituelle Energie erhalt man einen «Zugewinn» von 25 Vitalitätseinheiten pro Tag. Man kann sich auch andere schädliche Dinge abgewöhnen und damit einerseits den Verlust mindern und andererseits den Gewinn steigern; doch kein Einzelfaktor ist so erfolgversprechend wie die Sexualenergie.

Durch Ihre tägliche Arbeit haben Sie bereits einen großen Teil Ihrer Energie aufgebraucht. Wenn Sie dann noch ein paar Drinks und ein schweres Abendessen zu sich nehmen und danach beim Liebesakt lebenswichtige Samenflüssigkeit ejaku-lieren, haben Sie über Ihre Verhältnisse gelebt und vorzeitig Ihre Energie vergeudet. Manche Menschen würden zwar behaupten, dies sei ein wohlverbrachter Tag, da sie sich nichts Besseres im Leben vorstellen können, auf das es sich lohnen würde, Energie zu verwenden. Doch wenn Sie fortwährend von der Substanz leben, werden Sie vielleicht eines Tages aufwachen und das Leben gründlich satt haben; oder Sie erkranken an Arthritis oder an Krebs; oder Sie wachen überhaupt nicht mehr auf! Dann haben Sie Ihr Lebenskapital vorzeitig verschwendet. Vielleicht müssen Sie in einem so frühen Alter sterben, daß es Ihnen

Ich bin ein Taoist, der mitten im zwanzigsten Jahrhundert in der Nähe von New York lebt und ein äußerst beschäftigtes Leben fuhrt. Ich habe eine Frau und ein enorm lebhaftes kleines Kind. Ich besitze einen Computer, fahre Auto im Stadtverkehr, unterrichte Hunderte von Schülern und nehme einen sehr gedrängten Terminplan wahr, der mich quer durch die Vereinigten Staaten führt. Ich weiß aus eigener Anschauung, daß man ein reiches, erfülltes Leben fuhren kann, ohne sich dabei zu verausgaben, und viele meiner Schüler können es auch. Je mehr man seine Chi-Energie durch tägliche Praxis pflegt und entwickelt, um so leichter fällt es einem, verbrauchte Energie durch neue zu ersetzen und sogar noch einen Überschuß zu erhalten.

Wenn Sie sich natürlich für einen einfacheren Lebensstil entscheiden, werden Sie viel schnellere Fortschritte machen. Aus diesem Grund ziehen es viele Taoisten vor, in den ruhigen Bergen zu leben. Doch kann man sein Leben überall auf der Welt nach denselben taoistischen Prinzipien fuhren. Das Universum ist äußerst reich und freigebig, wenn man gelernt hat, im Einklang mit ihm zu leben. Die Sexualenergie ist eine der üppigsten Gaben, welche die Natur uns beschert hat. Leider werfen die meisten Menschen sie achtlos fort, ohne den wirklichen Wert dieses kostbaren Schatzes zu erkennen.

Je bewußter die Menschen von heute mit ihrer eigenen Gesundheit umgehen, um so mehr streben sie auch danach, ihren Lebensstil zu ändern. Viele haben erkannt, daß sie bisher ein destruktives Leben geführt haben - glücklicherweise bevor es zu spät war. Ob sie nunjoggen oder Tanzunterricht nehmen-auf jeden Fall möchten sie sich ein Programm zur Lebenserhaltung erschaffen. Zunächst werden sie dabei noch die Zinsen für das Vitalitätskapital zahlen müssen, das sie ihrem Geist und Körper im Übermaß entzogen haben. Nach einer Weile können sie dann bereits Zins und Tilgung bezahlen, je mehr Energie sie erzeugen und bewahren. Von diesem Punkt an können sie den

Bleiben Sie realistisch in Ihren Erwartungen! Möglicherweise haben Sie schon mehr Vitalkraft verschwendet, als Sie entbehren konnten. Um diese zurückzugewinnen, bedarf es der Konzentration und Geduld. Man kann mühelos $ 100000 in einer Stunde ausgeben, braucht aber ein ganzes Jahr, um eine solche Summe wieder zu verdienen. Ein ernstes körperliches oder seelisches Trauma, ständiger Drogengebrauch und häufiges Eja-kulieren stellen alle eine Riesenverschwendung dar. Viele junge Leute glauben über unbegrenzte Energien zu verfügen. Sie spielen mit ihrer Lebensquelle, als ginge es ihnen um eine wahre Orgie des Ausgebens.

Viele ältere Menschen, die scheinbar völlig gesund sind, taumeln in Wirklichkeit am Rand eines ernsten Zusammen-bruchs entlang. Nur anerzogene Willenskraft und Selbstdisziplin läßt sie noch durchhalten. Gehen sie dann zum Arzt - vielleicht aus dem unbewußten Wissen um ihren wirklichen Zustand -, verbietet er ihnen plötzlich jede Anstrengung. Häufig brechen diese Menschen dann innerhalb der ersten paar Tage erzwungener Ruhe zusammen, weil der dünne Faden der Willenskraft, der sie bisher noch in Gang gehalten hatte, plötzlich durchtrennt wurde. Dann sagen ihre Freunde Dinge wie: «Ich kann's kaum glauben! Gestern wirkte er doch noch so kräftig wie ein Stier!» Wenn Sie lernen, Ihr Konto innerhalb der Ökonomie des Sexus auf einem ausgeglichenen Stand zu halten, stellt dies den vernünftigsten Schritt zur Vermeidung derartiger Szenen in Ihrem Leben dar!

Der jugendliche Zorn der sexuellen Frustration

Eines der Themen, die mich besonders berühren, ist die Frustration der Jugend in unserer Gesellschaft. Von der Qualität des Denkens und Tuns der Jugend hangt es ab, ob unsere Zivilisation überleben oder untergehen wird. Die meisten männlichen Jugendlichen interessieren sich mehr für Sex als für irgend etwas anderes im Leben. Das ist auch ganz natürlich, denn ihr Körper leistet anstrengende Überstunden, um Milliarden von Samenzellen zu produzieren. Frauen können sich nicht vorstellen, wie intensiv diese Erfahrung ist. Ihr Energierhythmus verteilt sich ausgewogener über den monatlichen Menstruationszyklus.

Diese starke Betonung männlicher Energie ist eine ganz natürliche Manifestation der universalen Yang-Energie. Es steht auch völlig im Einklang mit der Natur, daß sich in dieser Phase die traditionelle romantische Liebe entwickelt. Findet die expandierende Yang-Energie eine empfängliche Frau, die sie umhegt, so kann die Liebe zwischen beiden reifen und zu einem langsamen Erwachen der spirituellen Entwicklung fuhren. Das Problem der Sexbesessenheit entspringt einer materialistischen Gesellschaft, die den Wert der körperlichen Sexualität so sehr betont, daß die Menschen ihr ganzes Leben unreif bleiben und einem rein lustbetonten Bild der Sexualität hinterherjagen. Sie erschöpfen sich und behindern ihre Entwicklung, indem die Begierde sie so stimuliert, daß sie ihre Samenkraft beschleunigt verlieren.

Je heftiger ein Jugendlicher nach der Lust greift, um so sicherer entzieht sie sich ihm. Voller Frustration suchen viele Jugendliche mit wachsender Wut nach dem Vergnügen - eine Suche nach ihrer Identität, die in Masturbation und Promiskui-tät endet. Je öfter sie ihren Lebenssamen vergießen, um so leerer werden sie innerlich, trotz der vorübergehenden Befriedigung in dem Augenblick, in dem die Lebenskraft aus ihren Lenden strömt. Ungezügelte sexuelle Gier kann die zerbrechliche Identität eines jungen Menschen vernichten und ihn mit dem Mob-Bewußtsein verschmelzen, das von der kommerziellen Sex-Industrie kultiviert und in den sexualisierten Medien weidlich ausgebeutet wird. Die höhere Vitalenergie, die eigentlich seine wahre Mitte nähren sollte, dient dem Jugendlichen statt dessen dazu, das Lustbett seiner leeren Phantasie zu beflecken. Danach ist er ausgelaugt, und es bleibt ihm nichts mehr. Werden solche Exzesse nicht rechtzeitig korrigiert, wird dies zu seiner spirituellen Zerstörung fuhren. Dieser Typ von jungem Mann wird ständig Schwierigkeiten in seinen Beziehungen zu Frauen haben, weil in ihm nur innere Leere ist, ein Un-Verstehen seiner selbst und des weiblichen Pols seiner eigenen männlichen Energie.

Aus demselben Grund neigen Jugendliche auch zum Fanatismus, ob dieser nun politisch oder religiös geprägt sein mag. Maos Rote Garden stellten nur eine von vielen jugendlichen Gruppen dar, die den spezifischen Faschismus ihres jeweiligen Anführers propagierten. Das heutige Gedeihen einer Unzahl von Sekten und Kulten in den Vereinigten Staaten und anderen Ländern des Westens ist ein wichtiger Hinweis darauf, daß die Jugend unfähig ist, die Leere des eigenen Lebens mit Hilfe der materiellen Werte, die inzwischen zum kulturellen Standard eeworden sind, auszufüllen. Wird das zerbrechliche Band zu seiner sich gerade erst entwickelnden Erwachsenen-Identität durch Mangel an Liebe oder gesellschaftliche Fürsorge beschädigt oder zerrissen, so bleibt dem Jugendlichen nur noch die Gruppenpsyche, um seinem Leben Sinn zu geben. Dieser Gruppengeist bietet ihm die Erfüllung, nach der seine Hohlheit sich sehnt. Da die Natur jedes Vakuum verabscheut, verabscheut auch diese innere Leere sich selbst.

Diese Bemerkungen richten sich ebenso an die Erwachsenen in unserer sexbesessenen Gesellschaft. Viele von ihnen suchen verzweifelt nach der Identität, die ihr Geburtsrecht darstellt -wenn sie nur wüßten, wie sie dieses Erbe antreten können. Würden sie davon erfahren, welche Rolle die geschlechtliche Liebe in ihrer persönlichen Evolution spielt, wäre dies schon eine große Hilfe bei der Behebung dieser Exzesse. Die unmittelbarste Lösung dafür wäre die Aufklärung über die Weiterentwicklung aller Arten von Chi, insbesondere aber die der Sexualenergie. Jugendliche werden ihr sexuelles Verlangen ‘niemals aufgeben, aber es ist wohl keineswegs abwegig zu vermuten, daß viele von ihnen sich dafür interessieren würden, wie sie besser damit umgehen können, wenn man es ihnen beibrächte.

Sex und Hochleistungssport

Unter Profitrainern in der Welt des Sports gibt es den weitverbreiteten Glauben, daß ein Sportler, der in der Nacht vor einem großen Wettkampf sich sexuell betätigt, an Leistungskraft verliert. Dieses Thema gilt als äußerst kontrovers. Wenn man die derzeit gängigen Meinungen untersucht, kommt man zu keinem eindeutigen Ergebnis. Clive Davis, der Herausgeber des Journal of Sex Research, gelangte zu dem Schluß: «Man findet immer genug Anekdotenmaterial, um jede behebige Auffassung zu untermauern, aber weder die eine noch die andere Meinung läßt sich medizinisch wirklich beweisen.»

Spitzenboxer gehören zu den Sportlern, die oft am lautesten verkünden, daß man die Naturgesetze nicht übertreten könne, ohne dafür einen hohen Preis zu bezahlen. Ken Norton gab eine öffentliche Erklärung ab, daß er vor seinem ersten Kampf gegen Muhammed Ali acht Wochen lang enthaltsam gelebt habe, um auch bei späteren Kämpfen gegen Ali das gleiche zu tun. «Bei meinen ersten 10 oder 11 Kämpfen habe ich gemerkt, daß es mir geschadet hat, wenn ich vorher nicht enthaltsam gelebt hatte.» Norton sagte, daß seiner Meinung nach 9 von 10 Boxern während des Trainings für eine gewisse Zeit der Sexualität entsagen. Joe Frazier, der ebenfalls gegen Muhammed Ali kämpfte, äußerte sich sehr eindeutig über die negativen Wirkungen der ejakulatorischen Sexualität: «Wenn man vor einem Kampf herummacht, dann hat man hinterher keine Energiereserven mehr übrig.»

Gerüchten zufolge soll Muhammed Ah vor seinen Kämpfen manchmal bis zu einem Jahr strikteste sexuelle Enthaltsamkeit gepflegt haben. Doch hat er dies nicht selbst öffentlich erklärt, weil er seine Trainingsmethoden geheimzuhalten pflegt.

Der taoistische Zugang zur Sexualität kann das Dilemma des Hochleistungssportlers lösen, der sich zwischen seinem Wettbewerbsvorteil und seiner Frau entscheiden muß. Wenn er die Geheimnisse der Bewahrung und Transformation sexueller Energie erlernt hat, kann der Athlet sich an beidem erfreuen. Nach dem taoistischen Liebesakt kommt es zu einem erheblichen Anstieg der Energiereserve, weil der Mann nicht nur seine eigene Samenkraft bewahrt hat, sondern zusätzlich eine hohe Dosis ebenso kraftvoller Yin-/Erd-Energie seiner Liebespartnerin aufgenommen hat. Jeder Sportler, der den Drang zur Ejakulation seiner Lebenskraft bezwingen kann, tut damit einen großen Schritt auf dem Wege zur Selbstbemeisterung und zur Meisterschaft in seiner sportlichen Disziplin. Ihm ist es möglich, nach einer Nacht ekstatischer Liebe mit einem Gefühl der Leichtigkeit und Tatkraft aufzuwachen, geladen mit Energie. Das ist etwas ganz anderes als die angenehme Ermattung, die dem ejakulatorischen Sex so oft folgt.

Manche männlichen Athleten behaupten allerdings, daß Liebe mit Ejakulation in der Nacht vor einem Wettkampf ihre sportliche Leistung sogar steigert. Meist hat dies einen ganz einfachen Grund: Der Sportler hat vor dem Wettkampf zu viel nervöse Energie, und der Liebesakt entspannt ihn. Seine überschüssige Energie hemmt seine sportliche Leistungsfähigkeit. Die Ejakulation kann diese Spannung lösen. Dadurch werden seine Koordinationsfähigkeit und seine Aufmerksamkeit beim Wettkampf am nächsten Tag gesteigert, und er kann eher gewinnen. Das stimmt völlig mit der taoistischen Auffassung überein, daß der Liebesakt Körper, Geist und Seele in harmonischen Einklang bringen soll. Große Mengen unverarbeiteter Chi-Energie im physischen Körper sind völlig nutzlos, wenn sie nicht auf harmonische Weise mit Geist und Seele in Einklang gebracht werden.

Professor Mark Anshel von der University of New Mexico hat sich eingehend mit der Sexualität von Sportlern befaßt. Er stellte fest, daß viele Trainer ihre Sportler ganz bewußt sexuell frustrieren, in der Hoffnung, dadurch ihre Triebkraft gegen ihre Wettkampfgegner zu lenken. «Doch reagieren nicht alle Menschen auf dieselbe Weise auf Frustration», wirft Anshel ein. «Indem sie jede sexuelle Betätigung verbieten, können diese Trainer (oder auch die Sportler selbst; Guillermo Vilas, das argentinische Tennis-As, hat zugegeben, einmal ein ganzes Jahr enthaltsam gewesen zu sein, um seine Spieltechnik zu verbessern) auch durchaus negative Persönlichkeitsäußerungen erzwingen wie etwa Zorn oder das Gefühl der Isoliertheit.»

Die Taoisten haben die Sexualität seit Urzeiten dazu verwendet, körperliches, emotionales und geistiges Ungleichgewicht zu beheben, was gerade Sportlern dabei helfen kann, zu optimaler Leistungsfähigkeit zu gelangen. Die Taoisten waren selbst Kampfsportler und wußten, daß das Geheimnis des Sieges darin bestand, körperliche Disziplin zu halten und dem Gegner ein überlegenes Selbst-Bewußtsein entgegenzustellen. Aus diesem Grund haben sie auch ihre Chi-Energie kultiviert und sich davor gehütet, ihren Samen an die Frau zu verlieren. Die taoistische Praktik des «Sexual-Kung Fu» wird unter Kampfsportlern eifersüchtig geheimgehalten, damit ihre Gegner nicht davon erfahren und stärker werden als sie selbst. Der Sportler von heute kann nun auch die Vorteile dieser Praktik genießen, wie es taoistische Kampfsportler, Schwertkämpfer und Tai Chi Chuan Spieler seit Hunderten von Jahren tun - nämlich die volle Freiheit, zu lieben, ohne an Leistungskraft oder Wettbewerbsvorteil einzubüßen.

Sexualität, Bindung und Ehe

Das Thema der Ehe ist zu umfassend und kompliziert, um in starre Regeln gepreßt zu werden. Zu manchen Menschen mag die Ehe passen, zu anderen wiederum nicht. Während ein Mann vielleicht heiratet und sein Leben lang glücklich ist, kann sein Bruder die Ehe als einzige Tortur erleben. Im Tao wird nichts jemals erzwungen; statt dessen strebt man nach Einklang mit dem Natürlichen, woraus eine beständige Harmonie zwischen, Yin und Yang entspringt.
Die taoistischen Weisen hielten den Zölibatären Mann nie für höherstehend oder reiner als den verheirateten. Beide haben die gleiche Chance, ihre tägliche Praxis der Höherentwicklung der Chi-Energie an ihre jeweilige Lebenslage anzupassen und auf diese Weise zur Vereinigung mit dem Tao zu gelangen. Wenn alle spirituell gesinnten Menschen im Zölibat lebten, würde die Gesellschaft darunter leiden, daß den Kindern nur minderwertigere elterliche Führung zuteil würde; dies wiederum würde zu einem Ungleichgewicht in der Welt führen.

Vom praktischen Standpunkt betrachtet, muß man feststellen, daß eine Ehe, besonders eine mit Kindern, eine ungeheure Menge Zeit und Energie in Anspruch nimmt, weshalb man sie auch nie unbedacht oder aus den falschen Gründen eingehen sollte. Zu diesen falschen Gründen zählt die Eheschließung aus äußerem gesellschaftlichem Zwang oder um die Wünsche anderer zu befriedigen, z.B. die der Eltern.

Die Entscheidung sollte vielmehr aus freien Stücken gefällt werden, sonst hat man spater Schwierigkeiten mit ihren Folgen. Viele Männer heiraten, weil sie emotional unsicher sind und hoffen, bei einer Frau die ersehnte Sicherheit zu finden. Diese emotionale Unsicherheit hat oft mit einer Unsicherheit im Umgang mit der männlichen sexuellen Rollenerwartung zu tun. Sind Sie noch unverheiratet, empfehle ich Ihnen, die in diesem Buch beschriebenen Methoden des Umgangs mit Sexualenergie zu meistern, bevor Sie sich für eine Ehe entscheiden. Sie sollten auch möglichst die «Verschmelzung der Fünf Elemente» erlernen, um Ihre Gefuhlsenergien ausgleichen zu können. Diese Praktik wird im Kapitel 18 beschrieben.

Doch stellt auch dies kein Wundermittel dar, mit dem emotionale Unsicherheit über Nacht behoben werden kann. Wenn Sie ganze Jahrzehnte darauf verwendet haben, sich unsicher zu fühlen und sich ebenso zu verhalten, müssen Sie schon eine Weile warten, bis sich dies ändert. Pflegen und entwickeln Sie ständig Ihre innere Energie und bringen Sie sie ins Gleichgewicht, dann werden Sie erstaunt sein, wie Ihre Gefühle die Gewalt über Sie verlieren werden und einem beständigen Gefühl innerer Verbundenheit und Selbstsicherheit weichen. Sie brauchen emotionales Verständnis nicht mehr bei einer Frau zu suchen; das ist eine Falle der Abhängigkeit, in die sehr viele Männer stolpern. Haben Sie erst die Quelle Ihrer Gefühle in den Chi-Bewegungen innerhalb Ihres Körpers entdeckt, werden Sie auch in der Lage sein, Ihr inneres Gleichgewicht zu wahren und Ihrer Partnerin dabei zu helfen, dasselbe zu tun.

Haben Sie sich so von sexuellen und emotionalen Zwängen befreit, werden Sie feststellen, daß Sie sich in Ihren Beziehungen zu Frauen ganz anders verhalten, daß Sie ein völlig neuer Mensch geworden sind. Im Idealfall möchten Sie eine Frau über mehrere Jahre lang kennenlernen, bevor Sie mit ihr Kinder bekommen. Auf diese Weise erfahren Sie beide erst die subtilen Energierhythmen Ihrer Beziehung, bevor Sie Ihre Aufmerksamkeit auf das Großziehen von Kindern lenken. Konnten Sie bis dahin die Zweifache Höherentwicklung auf eine hohe Stufe fuhren, wird Ihnen dieses Band sehr dabei helfen, die Schwierigkeiten zu meistern, die Ihnen unweigerlich bevorstehen.

Viele Amerikaner und andere westliche Menschen verbleiben sexuell auf einer infantilen Stufe. Oft ist die Sexualität für sie kaum mehr als eine Art verlängerter Nahrungsaufnahme, ein Versuch, die Liebe im Außen zu finden, sie in sich aufzunehmen und auf kindische Weise die Sicherheit steter Befriedigung zu fordern. Das fuhrt unweigerlich zur Eifersucht und ihren Abhängigkeiten, die so viele Beziehungen ins Chaos stürzt. Manche Menschen verwenden Jahre darauf, um festzustellen, ob sie gehebt werden; auf diese Weise zerstören sie sogar die bloße Möglichkeit, zu erhalten, wonach sie suchen. Dieser Typ destruktiver Sexualität ist nichts als ein ständiges Suchen im Außen nach Absicherung und Bestätigung. Derartige Unsicherheit kann unbewußte negative Emotionen schaffen, etwa Eifersucht und Schuldgefühle; sie kann auch zu Taten treiben, die bewußt unsere eigene Integrität verletzen, zum Beispiel Ehebruch. So hört man auf, im Jetzt zu leben, im Schöpferischen. Das Leben verkommt zu einer sklavischen Wiederholung von Lustübungen, von langen Perioden der Langeweile unterbrochen.

Es braucht keinen besonderen Scharfblick, um zu beobachten, wie das Leben vieler Paare nach einer Weile matt, schal, oberflächlich und nutzlos wird. Einer der Gründe hegt darin, daß der Mann bei der Liebesumarmung ejakuliert, auf diese Weise seine tiefste Vitalität vergeudet und seine Yang-Ladung erschöpft. Die Natur ist zwar großzügig und großmütig, doch nach Jahren der Ejakulation macht sich die Energie-Differenz als geschwächtes Sexualverlangen bemerkbar. Wenn das Paar dann nicht spontan den Willen findet, die gemeinsame Lebensenergie in eine höhere Stufe der Liebe umzuwandeln — ein Prozeß spiritueller Einstimmung, der den täglichen Verlust an Vitalenergie ausgleicht -, läuft die Beziehung Gefahr, zu einem Schatten ihres früheren, leidenschaftlichen Selbst zu verkümmern.

Durch die Ejakulation wird Energie, die wahre Freude und Erfüllung bringen könnte, spasmisch aus dem Körper geschleudert. Dieser Verlust begleitet jede Ejakulation. Mit der Zeit kann der Mann seiner Partnerin gegenüber Gefühle der Gleichgültigkeit oder des Hasses entwickeln. Er erkennt unterbewußt, daß er jedes Mal, wenn er in Kontakt mit ihr ist, seine höheren Energien verliert, die ihn sonst zu einem wahrhaft glücklichen Menschen machen könnten. Das kann zu einer schweren Krise fuhren. Während all der Jahre des Liebemachens und des gemeinsamen Lebens ist zwischen beiden ein starkes emotionales Band entstanden. Ein Großteil der männlichen Sexualenergie ist in die Erschaffung dieser Bindung geflossen, und der Mann kann einfach nicht verstehen, wie dieses Band immer noch existieren kann, obwohl er sich in der Beziehung so gelangweilt, verärgert und ermüdet fühlt.

Das Abflachen des sexuellen Verlangens zwischen Partnern, die regelmäßig zusammen sind, beruht vor allem auf einer Erschöpfung der Polarität, der sexuell-elektrischen Spannung. Die gegenseitige Anziehung kann erhöht werden durch Aufladen der positiven und negativen Pole der männlich-weiblichen Batterie. Manche Paare erreichen dies vorübergehend, indem sie getrennt Urlaub machen oder getrennt schlafen, oder sie finden andere Wege, das energetische Gleichgewicht aufrechtzuerhalten, etwa durch Freundschaften und Aktivitäten außerhalb der Beziehung. Ist die Polarität wiederhergestellt, fließt der Strom des Lebens zwischen den beiden Liebenden schneller und kraftvoller. Die Zweifache Höherentwicklung macht es dem Paar möglich, zusammenzubleiben und die Polarität ihrer Partnerschaft aufrechtzuerhalten.

Die Zweifache Höherentwicklung läßt Paare glücklich werden, indem sie die Partner lehrt, ineinander unerschöpfliche Freuden zu entdecken. Es gibt kein Naturgesetz, wonach Liebe mit der Zeit erkalten müßte. Die Methode der Bewahrung und des Austausches von Sexualenergie ohne Samenverlust hilft auch, einen der Hauptgründe für die Promiskuität (Partnerwechsel) zu beseitigen: die mangelnde Zufriedenheit mit dem eigenen Liebespartner.

Sie gibt ebenfalls die Lösung für ein anderes, in Ehen häufig vorkommendes Problem: nicht mehr genug Energie zu haben, um Schwierigkeiten zu besprechen und Auswege zu finden. Weil oft beide Elternteile berufstätig sind und versuchen müssen, sich in die Pflichten und Bürden der Kindererziehung zu teilen, brennen viele Beziehungen einfach aus. Die Partner haben keine Zeit mehr, sich zu heben. Wenn der eine erregt ist, ist der andere bestimmt erschöpft oder schläft bereits. Mit den geheimen taoistischen Liebespraktiken können Mann und Frau die Sexualität wieder als belebend und verjüngend erfahren, als nie endende, faszinierende Reise in das subtile Reich des Chi-Austausches. Mit neuer Spannkraft und leichten Herzens können sie in die mühselige Routine des Alltags zurückkehren. Wenn Ihr Chi im Gleichgewicht ist und alle Meridiane durchströmt, werden die gewöhnlichsten Dinge mit einem Mal wieder interessant. Das Chi ist das Bindeglied, der «Leim», zwischen Körper, Geist und Seele. Bevor Sie es nicht vollkommen integriert haben, werden Sie sich unvollständig fühlen.

Das Tao lehrt, daß in jedem Menschen das Potential unendlicher Freude und grenzenloser Kraft verborgen ist. Durch die Höherentwicklung des Chi im männlichen Körper kann die Abhängigkeit von der Sexualität als emotionaler Nahrung nach und nach umgewandelt werden. Sie werden diese Tatsache erkennen und schätzen lernen, wenn Sie die Samenflüssigkeit einbehalten und sie in verfeinerter Form in das höhere Zentrum des Herzens leiten. Dann erfahrt man die Fülle des Lebens noch lange, nachdem der Liebesakt beendet ist, und erlebt eine Feinfuhligkeit, die jenseits der vorübergehenden Sinnesreizung zu einer ständigen Verbindung der Gefühle mit dem Liebespartner fuhrt.

Wer das Tao eingehend studiert, wird erkennen, daß sich die Quelle aller Gefühle, auch die Quelle der weiblichen Anziehungskraft, in seinem eigenen Inneren befinden. Trotzdem taucht mit dem Auftreten der ersten Schwierigkeiten auch gleich die Frage auf: «Was bedeutet mir meine Bindung zu ihr?» Dieses Infragestellen kann sich jederzeit, auf allen Stufen der spirituellen Entwicklung oder der emotionalen Reifung innerhalb Ihrer Ehe, wiederholen.

Die höchste Verpflichtung, die ein Taoist eingehen kann, ist die gegenüber der Vermählung von Yin und Yang im Universum. Tatsächlich befinden sich Yin und Yang in ständiger Vereinigung, denn sie sind die beiden Pole desselben feinstofflichen Energiefelds. Die Verpflichtung des Taoisten besteht darin, ihre Vereinigung in seinem eigenen Leben bewußt zu erkennen und sich selbst (durch die Einfache Höherentwicklung) und seine Liebespartnerin (durch die Zweifache Höherentwicklung) mit diesem Bewußtsein zu «laden». Gelangt man bei der Höherentwicklung von Chi und Ching auf eine sehr hohe Stufe und werden die beiden mit Shien (Geist) integriert, dehnt sich das Bewußtsein noch weiter aus, vergleichbar mit der allumfassenden christlichen Liebe oder dem buddhistischen Mitgefühl gegenüber allen Wesen.

Der Unterschied liegt darin, daß ein Taoist dieses universale Bewußtsein in seinem Körper entwickelt und es zu einer erfaßbaren Erfahrung seines subtilen Chi-Energie-Feldes wird. So kann es zu keiner bloß abstrakten oder theologischen Liebesvorstellung kommen, der man sein Verhalten anzupassen versucht. Denn das ist unmöglich. Kein menschliches Wesen, das ganz geworden ist, das Körper, Geist und Seele miteinander integriert hat, kann mehr in das Korsett einer abstrakten Idee passen, und sei sie noch so edel wie die der Liebe.

Die Taoisten Chinas haben traditionsgemäß stets in Paaren oder in kleinen Gruppen gearbeitet, ob es sich nun um zwei Freunde handelte, um ein Schüler-Meister Verhältnis, um Mann und Frau oder um eine kleine Gemeinschaft von Adepten. Die verschiedenen Gruppen haben unterschiedliche Möglichkeiten erprobt und benutzt: Einige lebten strikt enthaltsam, andere bevorzugten offen die Zweifache Höherentwicklung zwischen Mann und Frau. Angesichts der starken Betonung der Sexualität in den Ländern des Westens und der weitgehenden Freiheit von gesellschaftlichen Zwängen, glaube ich, daß die Zweifache Höherentwicklung hier ein wichtiger Entwicklungsweg für Paare werden kann. Westliche Menschen wachsen mit der Vorstellung auf, alles tun zu dürfen, was sie wollen. Es mißfällt ihnen, von Priestern oder Gurus hören zu müssen, daß die Liebe zur Sexualität schmutzig und sündhaft ist oder die Erleuchtung verhindert. So laßt sie ihre Sexualität genießen und das Beste davon nehmen; das ist alles Teil des Tao, und ihre Ehen werden gut sein, solange sie mit der Sexualenergie richtig umgehen.

Manche Männer und Frauen werden Liebesbeziehungen außerhalb ehelicher Bindungen vorziehen. Wenn sie dabei ein harmonisches Gleichgewicht zwischen Yin und Yang herstellen, ist ihre Verbindung ebenso heilig wie eine, die durch einen offiziellen staatlichen Stempel bestätigt wurde. Zum Abschluß noch eine Bemerkung über die Vorteile längerer Bindungen: Für gewöhnlich dauert es Jahrzehnte, bis man die. eigene Chi-Energie bis zur höchsten Stufe des Shien verfeinert hat. Ebenso wird es Jahre dauern, bis Sie die subtilen Energien schätzen lernen, die Ihr weiblicher Liebespartner erzeugen und Ihnen für Ihre eigene Entwicklung zur Verfügung stellen kann. Es heißt, daß man sieben Jahre benötigt, um die körperlichen Rhythmen einer Frau kennenzulernen, sieben weitere Jahre, um mit ihrem Geist vertraut zu werden und schließlich nochmals sieben Jahre, um ihre Seele verstehen zu lernen. Seien Sie kein promis-kuöser Narr, der nicht genügend Geduld hat, die wahre Tiefe des Tao jemals zu ergründen.

Moralische Folgen des Samenverlusts

Stärken und Schwächen neigen deutlich dazu, sich zu verstärken: Die Schwachen werden immer schwächer, die Starken versuchen, noch stärker zu werden. Die Methode der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie hilft, selbstzerstörerische Tendenzen zu unterbinden, die durch die ihr zugrundeliegende Schwäche noch verschlimmert werden. Der Taoist achtet die in seiner Vitalflüssigkeit gespeicherte Energie als großen Schatz, Nach und nach wird die Vitalkraft in seinem Inneren sich jeder Art von körperlichem und charakterlichem Mißbrauch widersetzen.

Der durch die Ejakulation bewirkte Verlust beschränkt sich nicht auf den Bereich des Körperlichen, auch geistige und emotionale Funktionen werden stark beeinflußt. Hormonale Fitneß wirkt sich unmittelbar auf die Persönlichkeit und die Fähigkeit aus, schöpferisch zu denken. Der Verstand leidet unter dem Verlust des Testosteron, des Hormons, das in den Hoden erzeugt und mit der Ejakulation ausgestoßen wird.

Die chinesische Medizin hat schon vor langer Zeit beobachtet, daß heimtükkische Verbrechen oft kurz nach einem Samenverlust begangen werden. Nach der Ejakulation befinden sich Mut und Tapferkeit meistens auf einem niedrigen Stand, man erschrickt leicht und reagiert gewalttätig. Darum kommt es nach einer Vergewaltigung auch häufig zu Mord und Verstümmelung.
Ebenso gibt es aber auch einen moralischen Effekt bei der Höherentwicklung der eigenen Sexualessenz, des Ching Chi. Das Yang-Feuer im Samen verbrennt innere Giftstoffe und erzeugt gleichzeitig eine wichtige, lebenserhaltende Substanz. Wer seinen Samen bewahrt und nicht verschleudert, wird einen immer größeren Respekt für alles Leben entwickeln.

Jeder kennt das Gefühl des Unwohlseins, wenn man mitansehen muß, wie jemand sein Kind in aller Öffentlichkeit mißhandelt, jeder hat schon den Blick eines hungernden Obdachlosen am eigenen Leib gespürt. Die Wut und die Verzweiflung anderer Menschen springt auf uns über und beeinflußt uns, ob wir es wollen oder nicht. Auf gleiche Art strahlen jeder unserer Gedanken und unser Tun so weit, wie die Schöpfung reicht.

Wer seine feinstoffliche Energie höherentwickelt, erfahrt im eigenen Körper die Wahrheit der Tatsache, daß alle Lebewesen Teil desselben Lebens sind. Er und seine Gehebte fließen ineinander. Er weiß, daß im ganzen Bewußtseinsgewebe ein Lebewesen unentwegt das andere nährt. Indem er sich der Verbindung zu allen Wesen immer bewußter wird, stärkt er seine eigene Tendenz zur Selbstlosigkeit. Plötzlich wird er sich fragen: Warum sollte ich negative Gedanken in den einen Strom gießen, aus dem wir doch alle trinken müssen? In diesem Sinne ist jede liebevolle Energie eine kosmische oder göttliche Kraft. Wenn zwei Menschen einander bewußt lieben, weihen sie damit ihre Energien dem Wohlergehen der ganzen Menschheit. Diese Art der Liebe fuhrt bei den Liebenden zu einer ganz besonderen Selbstlosigkeit und wird wiederum andere Menschen inspirieren, denen sie begegnen.

Während diese Einstellung zur Liebe keineswegs das alleinige Erbe der taoistischen Liebeslehre ist, können ihre Methoden zur Transformation der Sexualenergie jedoch die ausgestrahle Liebesenergie erheblich vermehren und starken helfen. Nach taoi-stischer Auffassung kann der Mensch den Himmel nicht lenken. Er kann sich aber im Einklang mit den Gesetzen von Himmel und Erde bewegen und, indem er mit sich selbst im Einklang ist, den größeren Strom der Ereignisse lenken. Die taoistische Philosophie predigt keine bestimmte Moral. Sie geht einfach davon aus, daß die Moral dem Menschen innewohnt; kultiviert dieser seine subtile Energie und erfährt er sein wahres Selbst, wird sein Verhalten auch moralisch sein.

Eine kontroverse Frage: Ist Sexualität gut für die Gesundheit?

Der Mensch ist wohl das einzige höherentwickelte Lebewesen, das von Natur aus die Fähigkeit und Neigung zum Geschlechtsverkehr besitzt ohne das ausschließliche Ziel der Fortpflanzung. Weder die schwangere Frau noch ihr Gefährte verlieren ihren sexuellen Appetit. Die sexuelle Aktivität des Menschen setzt kurz nach Erreichen der Pubertät ein. Die meisten verbringen dann ihr weiteres Leben mit der Suche nach sexuellem Vergnügen und emotionaler Bedürfnisbefriedigung. Wenn sie keine Möglichkeit zum Vollzug des Geschlechtsakts haben, träumen sie zumindest davon. Zwar liegt es auf der Hand, daß die Sexualität im Menschen zu etwas Höherem dient, doch können sich Ärzte, Wissenschaftler, Psychologen, Priester und Künstler nicht einmal im Ansatz darauf einigen, worin diese höhere Funktion bestehen mag und wie man mit der Sexualität umgehen könnte, um das menschliche Wohlergehen zu fördern.

Die wissenschaftlichen Publikationen über die gesundheitlichen Wirkungen des Sexualakts sind merkwürdig widersprüchlich. Viele Sexuallehrbücher loben den kraftspendenden Effekt sexueller Aktivität. Andere jedoch, die nicht minder kompetent erscheinen und sich oft auf psychiatrische Studien stützen, warnen vor einem Übermaß an sexueller Betätigung. Wer ist im Recht? Ab wann wird ein Zuviel an Sexualität der Gesundheit abträglich?

Um die Sache noch zu verkomplizieren, sind sich die Weisen des Orients in diesem Punkt ebenfalls uneinig. So rät ein namhafter indischer Heiliger dem Mann, jede Frau nur als einen Sack voller Kot und Urin zu betrachten, um nicht der Versuchung zu erliegen, seinen kostbaren Samen an sie zu verlieren.

Und doch soll Buddha der Erleuchtete selbst gesagt haben: «Frauen sind die Götter, Frauen sind Leben ... Seid stets in .euren Gedanken beim Weibe.»

Die taoistische Lehre des Sexualyoga versöhnt diese Auffassungen miteinander. Sie wählt den Mittelweg und gibt beiden in gewissem Umfang Recht. Ihre Lösung ist bestechend einfach: Freude- und liebevoller Sexualverkehr ohne Samenverlust ist hochgradig gesundheitsfördernd.

Natürlich hängt vieles davon ab, welchen Weg Sie im Leben einschlagen. Es wird Phasen geben, in denen Enthaltsamkeit das Beste ist, um Ihre Gesundheit wiederherzustellen oder Ihren spirituellen Fortschritt zu beschleunigen'. Das Zölibat kann eine äußerst wirkungsvolle Methode sein, weil Sie Ihre gesamte Vitalenergie bewahren können und frei sind, um mit größerer Intensität an Ihrer Entwicklung zu arbeiten. Die meisten westlichen Menschen verlegen jedoch ihre ganze Aufmerksamkeit darauf, den richtigen Partner zu finden, um mit ihm zusammen ihre sexuellen und emotionalen Bedürfnisse zu bewältigen.

Das taoistische Prinzip der Höherentwicklung der Energie funktioniert in beiden Fällen, sowohl in der Einfachen als auch in der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung. Für den Taoisten müssen am Ende alle Pfade von der Konzentration auf die reine Sexual-energie fortfuhren, um zum Einklang mit allen feinstofflichen Energien des Tao zu gelangen.

Doch niemand kann mehr als einen Schritt auf einmal tun. Ist ein Teil Ihres Gemütes auf die Sexualität fixiert, müssen Sie diesen Impuls eben ausleben, ihn studieren und seine Urquelle erkennen, bevor Sie ihn transzendieren können. Taoisten sind immer flexibel: Sie können Ihre Energie unter allen Umständen höherentwickeln, unabhängig von der jeweiligen Lebenssituation. Die Grundprinzipien bleiben dabei gleich: Sexuelle Aktivität ohne Liebe und mit häufigem Samenverlust wirkt sich auf jedem Pfad körperlich und seelisch zerstörerisch aus. Sexuelle Liebe ohne die esoterische Praxis der Chi-Höherentwicklung ist ein unvollständiger Weg zur eigenen Transformation.

Die Liebe wird jedes Paar ganz spontan zu einer höheren Bewußtseinsstufe fuhren, doch gleichzeitig wird wiederholter Samenveriust den körperlichen Verfall der Partner beschleunigen und ihr Weiterkommen behindern. Es ist wie beim Erklimmen eines Berghangs, der voller Geröll ist: Man macht drei Schritte nach oben und rutscht wieder einen in die Tiefe. Dieser Gehrhythmus mag, auf dem ersten Grat angekommen, zu emotionalem und geistigem Glück fuhren. Andererseits kann er vielleicht auch bewirken, daß man - aus Zeit- und Energiemangel - die Täler, Berge, Flüsse und Meere dahinter nicht mehr sehen kann. Das aber ist die Fülle des Tao — das Erreichen einer dauerhaften Erfahrung Ihres höheren geistigen Selbst.

5. KAPITEL

Die Sexualität in den esoterischen Traditionen der Welt

«... Es ist uns unmöglich, woanders etwas zu lernen, was wir innerhalb unseres eigenen Körpers nicht lernen können.»

Schwaller de Lubicz, The Temple of Man

Fast immer haben Religionen versucht, die sexuellen Gewohnheiten ihrer Anhänger zu reglementieren. Der Erfolg dieses Unterfangens scheint Pendelausschlägen von allgemeiner Unterwerfung bis zur offenen Rebellion zu unterliegen. Letztlich, meine ich, sind die Religionen gescheitert, weil für die meisten Menschen die sexuelle Erfahrung viel mächtiger ist als die religiöse. Als biologischer Impuls durchdringt der Sexualtrieb unsere Handlungen und Wünsche derart, daß er sich nur sehr schwer durch Glaubenssätze beherrschen läßt, wie streng und dogmatisch sie auch sein mögen. Das zeigt sich am Beispiel der Prostitution als dem sprichwörtlich ältesten Gewerbe der Welt.

Auf meinen Reisen ist mir aufgefallen, daß sie anscheinend am Rande der fanatischsten Glaubensgemeinschaften besonders gut floriert. Die Sexualität ist wie ein Ball, der auf der Oberfläche eines Wasserbeckens treibt: Je stärker man ihn unter Wasser drückt, um so stärker wird der Gegendruck. Verliert man auch nur für den Bruchteil einer Sekunde die Kontrolle über den Ball, schießt er in die Höhe.

Der Versuch der Religionen, über die allgemeine Sexualmoral zu bestimmen, ist ein Überbleibsel aus einer früheren, weniger materialistisch gesinnten Zeit, als die spirituelle Erfahrung noch intensiver war als die fleischlichen Freuden des Sex. In den frühesten Religionen — den Mysterienschulen und Fruchtbar-keitskulten - wußte man um die Rolle der Sexualität für die geistige Entwicklung des Menschen. Ihre Praktiken und Riten konnten machtvolle Erlebnisse hervorrufen. Viele religiöse Führer unserer Tage, ob Katholiken, Juden, Hindus o.a., haben vergessen, daß auch in ihren religiösen Riten die Sexualkraft mit der Spiritualität verbunden war. Beschneidungszeremonien, Fruchtbarkeitsriten im Frühjahr (z.B. das Osterfest) und Kom-munionsfeiern sind alles Überreste einer Zeit, da man die esoterische und verborgene Bedeutung der Sexualität noch verstand und in die Religion integrierte.

Der Mensch des zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts steht vor der Aufgabe, die leeren Hüllen seines äußeren «exoterischen» Glaubens zu beseitigen, um seinen Geist zu der Freiheit zu fuhren, die Ekstase seiner Existenz im eigenen Körper erleben zu können. Dann werden die äußeren Riten und Glaubenssätze der alten Religionen entweder ganz abfallen oder eine neue, tiefere Bedeutung annehmen. Akzeptiert er die Sexualität als etwas Heiliges, wird die Religion ihre gesellschaftliche Rolle wiederbeleben können und auch im Leben der Menschen wieder sinnvoll werden.

Der Taoismus unterscheidet sich von den großen Religionen der Welt vor allem dadurch, daß er eine geistige Philosophie darstellt und keine organisierte Religion mit einer Schar von Gläubigen, die einer bestimmten heiligen Schrift gehorchen. Dem Taoisten genügt der Glaube an Gott oder an das Tao nicht; die Hingabe an eine höhere, übergeordnete Harmonie muß für ihn stets von der Selbsterkenntnis begleitet sein, die aus der Höherentwicklung der eigenen Energie entspringt. In gewissem Sinn muß der Taoist seine Seele «wachsen lassen», damit er sie ganz erkennen, erfahren und verstehen kann. In jedem Menschen schlummert derselbe Keim; wird dieser jedoch nicht richtig genährt, wird sein Träger nie die Frucht zu sehen bekommen. Die göttliche Welt im Inneren des Menschen weist dieselben Muster auf wie die Welt der Natur - so wie ein Kind sein Selbst erst im Erwachsenenalter wirklich erfahren kann, so muß jeder Mensch seine feinstoffliche spirituelle Energie zur Reife fuhren, wenn er die Fülle des Tao genießen und an ihr teilhaben will.

Es gab einige Volkskulte der taoistischen Priester, die im Wettbewerb zu dem sich im alten China ausbreitenden Buddhismus entstanden, doch mit diesen hat unsere Lehre nichts zu tun. Mir geht es ausschließlich um die ursprünglichen esoterischen Lehren der taoistischen Meister. Sie waren berühmt dafür, daß sie den Gebrauch der Sexualität auf dem spirituellen Pfad gutgeheißen haben. Auf den fünf heiligen Bergen Chinas sind zahlreiche taoistische Sekten entstanden, von denen jede einen anderen Aspekt der Kultivierung des Chi für die spirituelle Weiterentwicklung des Menschen betonte. Nur wenige Richtungen verfolgten den Pfad der «Einfachen Höherentwicklung», der das taoistische Prinzip der Paarung der feinstofflichen männlichen und weiblichen Energien innerhalb eines Körpers lehrte und den körperlichen Liebesakt als entweder überflüssig oder zu risikoreich strikt untersagte.

Die meisten Taoisten wandten die Praktik der «Zweifachen Höherentwicklung» an, sowohl wegen ihrer gesundheitlichen als auch wegen ihrer geistigen Vorzüge. Man warnte allerdings vor einer allzu großen Bindung an den Liebespartner, in der man einen möglichen Stolperstein für jene sah, die nach Unsterblichkeit und der völligen Vereinigung mit dem Tao strebten. Doch hat man die sexuelle Bindung nie als sündig betrachtet. Sie verursachte auch kein Gefühl der Schuld wie in der christlichen Tradition. Sexuell an den Partner gebunden zu sein bedeutete, daß der Yogi in diesem Leben nur die Einheit von Mann und Frau, und nicht die größere Vereinigung von Himmel und Erde, erfahren würde. Aber damit wurde das[1] Liebespaar in keiner Weise verdammt, denn ihre Vereinigung konnte für beide bereits eine hohe Errungenschaft darstellen.

In den christlichen Religionen gibt es eine starke Tradition der «heiligen Ehe», doch hat die Politik der Kirchen - die meistens von männlichen Priestern bestimmt wurde, die sich vor den erdhaften, «dunklen» Yin-Kräften der Frau entweder fürchteten oder auf sie neidisch waren - das Christentum in lange Phasen frauenfeindlicher Hexenverfolgungen gefuhrt, die sich mit frauenverehrenden Kulten um die Jungfrau Maria abwechselten. China, dessen Kultur aus der Verschmelzung von Taoismus und Konfuzianismus entstand, blieb von diesem Teufelskreis verschont. Stets hielt man die Yin-Energie, die von der Frau verkörpert wurde, für notwendig, um das Funktionieren des Universums und das Wohlergehen der Menschen zu gewährleisten.

Selbst im 8. Jahrhundert n. Chr. nach der Mandschu-Herr-schaft, als die ursprünglichen taoistischen Lehren über das vollkommene Gleichgewicht zwischen Yin und Yang einen Niedergang erlebten, wurden die Frauen nicht im gleichen Umfang unterdrückt und mißbraucht, wie man dies in anderen Kulturen beobachten konnte. Wohl wurde die chinesische Gesellschaft immer patriarchalischer, Frauen wurden als eine Art Eigentum des Mannes angesehen, doch galt allgemein die Regel, daß man dieses «Eigentum» mit Respekt zu behandeln habe. Viele der heute noch erhaltenen taoistischen Sexualhandbücher stammen aus dieser Zeit. Sie sind etwas einseitig in ihren Ratschlägen an die Adligen, für die sie bestimmt waren, wie man sich heilende Yin-Energie von der Frau beschaffen kann.

Diese Anleitungen übersehen völlig, daß Männer ihrerseits Frauen mit ihrer mächtigen Yang-Energie zu heilen vermögen. Sie beraten den Mann richtig, seinen Samen zu bewahren, und weisen darauf hin, wie er mit bis zu elf Konkubinen pro Nacht den Liebesakt ausführen kann. Diese Texte sind eigentlich medizinische Lehrbücher, die die Sexualität äußerst trocken und klinisch angehen und sie nur unter dem Gesichtspunkt der Gesundheitsförderung betrachten. Wenngleich sie den höheren Pfad nicht weiter betonen und auch keine meditativen Praktiken für den Energieaustausch zwischen Mann und Frau anbieten, spiegeln sie immerhin das esoterische Grundprinzip des Taois-mus wider, daß die Sexualität mit großem gesundheitlichem Gewinn in den Alltag integriert werden kann, wenn man richtig mit ihr umgeht.

Die Taoisten mögen vielleicht eines der ältesten esoterischen Lehrgebäude für den Umgang mit Sexualenergie erschaffen haben, doch stehen sie damit keineswegs allein da. Die Vorstellung von der Transformation der Sexualenergie zu geistigen Zwecken ist in allen esoterischen Überlieferungen der Welt bekannt, sowohl im Osten als auch im Abendland. Allerdings wurde sie meistens streng geheimgehalten. Ob wir uns Ägypten anschauen, Indien, Tibet oder Europa - stets wurde das der Öffentlichkeit preisgegebene Wissen auf einer vagen oder abstrakten theoretischen oder theologischen Ebene gehalten. Niemals machte man der Allgemeinheit praktische Methoden zur Bewahrung und Transformation der Sexualenergie zugänglich.

Für einen kurzen historischen Überblick über dieses Thema beginnt man am besten mit Theophrastus Bombastus Paracelsus von Hohenheim, dem berühmten Arzt und heraus ragenden Alchemisten des 16. Jahrhunderts. Seine Qualifikationen als Medizinalwissenschaftler sind makellos; immerhin entdeckte er bereits vor 400 Jahren die Quecksilberkur gegen die Syphilis. Auch er gelangte zur selben Schlußfolgerung wie die Tao Meister hinsichtlich der sogenannten Sexual-Alchemie, der scheinbar magischen, aber doch völlig natürlichen Transformation des Sexualsamens.

Paracelsus erlebte das Samenfeuer mit gleicher Intensität und Realität wie ein gewöhnlicher Mensch, der sich die Hand an einem heißen Ofen verbrennt. Über die Zusammensetzung des Samens schrieb er: «Alle Organe des menschlichen Körpers steuern all ihre Kraft und Fähigkeit dazu bei, den Samen zu bilden ... Der Samen ist gewissermaßen die Essenz des menschlichen Körpers und enthält alle Organe desselben in vollkommener Gestalt.» Diese Feststellung erinnert verblüffend an die taoistische Beschreibung des Ching Chi, der Sexualessenz. Auch die taoistische Praktik betont das Ausgleichen der feinstofflichen Energien eines jeden Körperorgans, die dann miteinander zu einem einzigen höheren Geist verschmelzen.

Paracelsus unterscheidet zwischen der Samenflüssigkeit und der «aura seminalis», dem Licht oder der Energie des Samens. Heute würden Wissenschaftler diese «Aura» wohl als «biophysi-sche Energie der Samenflüssigkeit» bezeichnen. Paracelsus behauptete, daß die Energie aus der stofflichen Flüssigkeit destilliert werden könne: «Diese Emanation oder Separatio rindet statt durch eine höhere Art der Verdauung und durch eine innere Hitze, die während der Zeit seiner Virilität im Mann durch die Nähe der Frau, durch seine Gedanken an sie oder durch seinen Kontakt mit ihr auf dieselbe Weise erzeugt werden kann, wie ein Stück Holz, welches den konzentrierten Strahlen der Sonne ausgesetzt wird, zum Brennen gebracht werden mag.»

Übersetzt man diese Aussage in unsere moderne Sprache, bedeutet dies, daß der Kontakt mit einer anziehenden Frau beim Mann die Produktion hochwertiger biophysischer Energie anregen kann. Schon tausend Jahre vor Paracelsus entdeckten die taoistischen Alchemisten praktische Methoden, um diese kostbaren Energien zu bewahren und zu nutzen.

Wenden wir uns von der Renaissance dem großen englischen

Kenner der indischen Tantra-Praktiken zu, Sir John Woodroffe, der auch unter dem Namen «Arthur Avalen» schrieb. Bei ihm finden wir die gleichen Prinzipien wieder. So schreibt er in seinem Hauptwerk Die Schlangenkraft in deutlichen Worten -zumindest für jene, die zwischen den Zeilen lesen können -: «... die Kraft der letzteren (der Sexualzentren) kann, leitet man sie hinauf, die geistigen und körperlichen Funktionen außerordentlich beleben.» Er bemerkt auch, daß Geist, Atmung und Sexualität miteinander in Verbindung stehen. Spirituelles Ziel des Yogi ist es, «seinen Samen hinaufzulenken». Dieser Samen setzt Prana-Energien frei, die, auch als Kundalini-Kraft bekannt, die Wirbelsäule entlang zu den höheren Chakras oder geistigen Zentren hinaufsteigen.

Ein weiterer bekannter spiritueller Lehrer, der mit der Kraft des Samens vertraut war, ist Gurdjieff. Dieser Meister sagt: «Bestimmte Völker wußten darum, daß es mit Hilfe der Substanzen <Exhioehary> oder Samens in ihrem Inneren möglich ist, sich selbst zu vervollkommnen.» Er fügt hinzu: «Diese Selbstvervollkommnung kann wahrscheinlich von allein erreicht werden, indem man das übliche Ausstoßen dieser in ihnen gebildeten Substanzen, die man Samen nennt, vermeidet.»

Gurdjieff betont, daß diese Selbstvervollkommnung meistens nicht einfach nur durch das Zurückhalten des Samens allein erreicht werden kann, sondern es dazu noch einer Technik bedarf, mit der die Energien des Samens freigesetzt werden. In diesem Punkt befindet er sich in völligem Einklang mit Paracelsus und den Taoisten.

Die okkulten Meister wissen ohne Ausnahme um die Kraft des Samens und daß man diese Substanz speichern und transformieren muß, um eine Höherentwicklung zu erreichen. So schreibt der bekannte Magier Kenneth Grant: «Die Funktion des Samens besteht - in den Tantras - darin, den Lichtkörper, den Astralkörper, also den inneren Körper des Mannes aufzubauen. Während sich der Vitalsaft in den Hoden sammelt, wird er von der Hitze der Feuerschlange verzehrt, und die feinstofflichen Dämpfe oder <Duftstoffe> dieses geschmolzenen Samens stärken den inneren Körper.»

Die meisten Autoritäten sind sich darüber einig, daß die Samenflüssigkeit gesammelt und durch Anwendung innerer Hitze umgewandelt werden muß. In der chinesischen Praktik bezeichnen wir diesen Vorgang als «Kochen» des Samensafts, um dadurch seinen «Dampf» zu erhalten. Der erste Schritt zur Freisetzung dieser gewaltigen Vitalkraft aber besteht in der Einbehaltung des Samens beim Liebesakt.

Da Free John, ein moderner amerikanischer spiritueller Meister, unterstreicht ebenfalls die Notwendigkeit, die Samenkraft zu bewahren: «Wir müssen zu Wegen finden, die geschlechtliche Intimität zu genießen, ohne daß dabei Leben verlorengeht; wir dürfen kein Leben vergeuden, nur um Freude zu haben; wir lieben einander und leben in vollkommenem Glück und in Freiheit zusammen.»

Der «Verlust des Lebens», den Da Free John erwähnt, bezieht sich auf die Ejakulation. Er hält den richtigen Umgang mit der Sexualkraft — also das Vermeiden der Ejakulation während des wahrhaft Hebevollen Akts zwischen zwei Partnern - für einen Schlüssel zur Evolution des Menschen. Er legt auch Nachdruck auf die Wichtigkeit der Liebe für die spontane Transmutation des Samens und seine Lenkung in die höheren Zentren der Göttlichkeit. In diesem Punkt steht er in völligem Einklang mit anderen spirituellen Lehrern und Meistern. Alchemisten, Yogis, Magier und Mystiker stimmen einmütig diesem Grundsatz zu.

In den Werken des Kabbalisten und Dichters Carlos Suares finden wir eine weitere Betrachtungsweise des Vitalsamens. Die esoterische Tradition der Kabbala entstand im alten Ägypten. Suares weist darauf hin, daß die Entwicklung des Willens zur Sameneinbehaltung identisch mit der Entwicklung des eigenen wahren Selbst ist: «... der Mensch, dem dieses Selbst eignet (das, wenngleich es statischer Natur ist, lebendigen Samen in sich birgt), muß gegen die Zentrifugalrichtung der Sexualbewegung kämpfen und sie überwinden, da sie ihn in den Abyssus des Weiblichen zu schleudern droht ... Anstatt überwältigt zu werden, erringt sein Geist die Herrschaft über seine Begierden.»

Suares spielt hier auf die zerstörerische Rolle der Frau an, die dem Mann unbewußt den Samen entlockt. Da sie meistens nicht über die yogischen Fähigkeiten verfügt, diesen Samen wirklich in sich aufzunehmen, profitiert sie jedoch nur wenig von seinem Verlust. Für den Mann, der ihr ständig seinen Samen preisgibt, scheint die Frau ein bodenloser Schlund. Sie kann natürlich versuchen, diesen Verlust auszugleichen, indem sie ihm als Gegenleistung von ihrer fast unerschöpflichen weiblichen Energie und Liebe gibt.

Man könnte dieses Kapitel noch erweitern, wenn man auf die Einweihungsschriften der Menschheit eingeht. Es gibt zahlreiche Werke von Meistern, die die Kraft des von der Vitalhitze trans mutierten Samens erfahren haben. Moses spricht in der Bibel während seiner vierzigjährigen Wanderschaft durch die Wüste von einer «Feuerschlange». Da die Bibel außerdem sagt, daß Moses «von den Ägyptern in alle ihre Mysterien eingeweiht wurde», erscheint es wahrscheinlich, daß dieses Feuer die Transmutation seiner psychischen Energien meint. Das letzte Urteil über diese Dinge sollte die eigene Erfahrung des subtilen Bereiches sein.

Der Unterschied zwischen Taoismus und Tantra

Im Laufe der letzten Jahre hat sich die Aufmerksamkeit verstärkt auf den Tantrismus Indiens und Tibets gerichtet. Vor allem Suchende, die ihre Sexualität in ihre spirituelle Entwicklung integrieren wollen, beschäftigen sich mit diesem System. Die dem Tantra zugrundeliegenden Prinzipien sind mit denen des Taoismus fast identisch. Beide Richtungen streben danach, die Gegensätzlichkeiten der Dualität, wie sie von Männlich und Weiblich symbolisiert werden, miteinander zu versöhnen, und beide betrachten jeden Augenblick und jede Erfahrung im Leben als einen Ausgangspunkt für die geistige Entwicklung und als Endpunkt der Erkenntnis der Wahrheit.

Keith Dowman, ein westlicher Gelehrter und praktizierender tibetisch-buddhistischer Tantriker, hat es sehr präzise ausgedrückt: «Nimmt man dem (tantrischen) Yoga seine geheimnisvolle Sprache, so bleibt eine ganz schlichte Meditationstechnik übrig: die Reizung der Begierden, ihre Verwendung als Gegenstand der Meditation und ihre Verwandlung in Bewußtsein, in ein Feld der Leere und der reinen Freude.» Dem würde ein Taoist gewiß zustimmen. Er würde es nur etwas anders formulieren: «In jedem Augenblick empfängt die Leere des Yin die Fülle des Yang.» Dies ist die immerwährende Vermählung von Mann und Frau, von Geist und Materie, von Himmel und Erde.

Der taoistische Weg unterscheidet sich vom tantrischen hauptsächlich durch die verwendete Sprache und die praktischen Yoga-Methoden. Das Ziel, die Einheit von Geist, Körper und Seele, ist bei beiden gleich. Ebenfalls setzen beide die Meisterung der eigenen Sexualität als legitim und sogar als notwendig voraus, um zur höchsten Erleuchtungsstufe zu gelangen, derer man im physischen Körper fähig ist. Dowman beschreibt die Wichtigkeit des Samens für den Pfad des inneren Tantra:

Diese Auffassung deckt sich völlig mit der taoistischen Betrachtungsweise des Samens und seiner Emporleitung. Allerdings personifiziert der Taoismus die subtilen Energien nicht durch einen Pantheon göttlicher Wesenheiten. Deshalb bin ich der Meinung, daß der Tantra etwas für Menschen ist, die sich zu den religiösen Archetypen der Tantriker hingezogen fühlen, den Göttern und Göttinnen, den Boddhisattvas und Dämonen, und die Gefallen an ihren komplizierten geheimen Ritualen, Einwei-hungen und Mantra-Anrufungen finden. Wenn man die Geduld aufbringt, dem strengen Pfad zu folgen, den einem ein Lama oder Guru vorschreibt, der die esoterische Praxis wirklich verstanden hat und nicht einfach nur «nachbetet», kann man damit durchaus Erfolg haben.

Ich persönlich wuchs in Thailand in der Nähe eines buddhistischen Tempels auf und hatte von frühester Kindheit an engen Kontakt zu den dortigen Mönchen. Später gelangte ich zu dem Schluß, daß äußerliche Rituale nicht so wirksam sind wie die verinnerlichten Methoden der Entwicklung, die ich von meinen taoistischen Lehrern gelernt hatte. Rituale stellen eine Verschmelzung der esoterischen mit der jeweiligen Landes- oder Volkskultur dar. Westliche Menschen sind von der archaischen Bildlichkeit östlicher Gottheiten oft nicht sonderlich tief berührt. Auch die unterschiedlichen Bewußtseinszustände, die man anstreben soll, können einige Verwirrung schaffen, weil sich die herkömmlichen Beschreibungen dieser Zustände nicht ohne weiteres aus dem Sankrit oder dem Tibetischen in westliche Sprachen übertragen lassen.

Daß der Taoismus im Westen nur langsam Eingang findet, Hegt auch an der Schwierigkeit, die taoistische Philosophie aus dem Chinesischen in westliche Sprachen zu übersetzen. Die archetypischen Bilder der Taoisten, in der Hauptsache Bilder aus der Natur, die das Yin/Yang-Symbol enthalten, sind allerdings seit langem bekannt, bevor ich selbst und andere überhaupt begonnen hatten, die esoterischen Lehren des Taoismus zu verbreiten. Die Chinesen machen ein Viertel der Weltbevölkerung aus, und unsere Zivilisation existiert schon seit 5000 Jahren, weshalb unsere Grundlehrmodelle in der ganzen Welt recht bekannt sind.

Beachtenswert ist noch die Tatsache, daß die esoterischen Yoga-Praktiken der Taoisten nicht unter Ritualen begraben wurden. Auch durch religiöse Veränderungen, wie sie im Laufe der Zeit immer wieder auftraten, gingen sie nicht verloren. Sie wurden geheimgehalten und in mündlicher Überlieferung viele tausend Jahre weitergegeben. Als sie schließlich Anfang des 2. Jahrhunderts n.Chr. schriftlich niedergelegt wurden, hat man sie mit geheimnisvoller Poesie umgeben, damit die Uneingeweihten oder Nichttugendhaften die Meditationspraktiken nicht erfuhren. Ein großer Teil des esoterischen Wissens wurde von den taoistischen Akupunkteuren und Kräuterheilern bewahrt und weiterentwickelt. Diese trugen auch dazu bei, den Praxisbezug der mystischen Lehren nicht verlorengehen zu lassen, indem sie die Chi-Energie zur Heilung des Körpers benutzten. Ebenso hielt die taoistische Kunst des Tai Chi Chuan die alte Tradition lebendig, eine wunderbar vielseitige Disziplin, die zugleich als Selbstverteidigung, als spielerischer Tanz, als metaphysische Meditation über Yin und Yang, als Gesundheits- und Heilübung und als rituelle Anrufung der Hauptenergien dient. Jeder, der einem Meister des Tai Chi Chuan bei der Ausübung seiner Kunst zusehen kann, wird das erfahren.

Die eigentlichen taoistischen Praktiken sind so leicht zu verstehen wie Sonne und Mond, weil die alten Taoisten stets die natürlichen Elemente des Universums zum Lehrer hatten. Sie beobachteten, wie Pflanzen und Tiere leben und sterben, wie das Wetter ihren eigenen Stoffwechsel beeinflußte und wie ihre subtilen Energien sich je nach Jahreszeit, nach dem Stand der Erde zur Sonne, zu den Sternen und nach den Phasen des Mondes veränderten und verschieden waren. Schon bevor es eine Sprache gab, beobachteten die Weisen der Urzeit das Gleichgewicht der Naturkräfte und entdeckten dieselbe Harmonie in ihrem eigenen Inneren. Wenn man diese aufrechterhält, ist das Leben gleichzeitig einfach und natürlich. Keine äußeren, kulturspezifischen Bilder oder religiösen Vorstellungen sind nötig, um die ursprüngliche, natürliche Vision vom Tao als Harmonie der Natur auszuschmücken.

Jeder, der mit den Qualitäten Wasser, Feuer, Metall, Erde und Holz, also den Hauptelementen, vertraut ist und die vier Jahreszeiten Frühling, Sommer, Herbst und Winter durchlebt hat, ist als Kandidat für die taoistische Praxis geeignet. Will man beispielsweise die eigenen Geschlechtsbeziehungen ins Gleichgewicht bringen, so muß man lediglich wissen, daß die Frau Wasser ist und die Fähigkeit besitzt, den Mann, der Feuer ist, zu lenken. Auf einer tiefergehenderen Erkenntnisebene würde man entdecken, daß der Mann sowohl Feuer als auch Wasser in seinem Körper hat und zu einem vollkommenen inneren Gleichgewicht finden kann, indem er sein Feuer (den denkenden Verstand) mit seinem eigenen Wasser (Samenflüssigkeit oder «Geschlechtswasser» bzw. «-safte») in Einklang bringt.

Diese Symbole Feuer und Wasser, oft als Yin und Yang bezeichnet, machen es einem leicht, sich mit ihnen zu identifizieren und mit ihnen zu arbeiten, sobald man im einzelnen weiß, was man tun muß - wie man den Samen einbehalten kann, wie man die eigene Energie entlang der geistigen Kanäle strömen läßt, wie man sie mit der Frau austauschen kann usw. Selbstverständlich braucht es Zeit, um die subtileren Ebenen der Chi-Energie zu erfahren und die Entwicklung der körperlichen und geistigen Reinheit. Tai Chi, Chi Kung, Meditation und ein tugendhaftes Leben können das Tempo des Zuwachses an Klarheit beschleunigen und so die sexuellen Praktiken ergänzen.

Karezza und Coitus reservatus

Es gibt eine Reihe anderer Methoden, den Sexualakt zu pflegen, die man nicht mit der taoistischen Praxis verwechseln sollte. Am bekanntesten ist wohl die einfache Technik des Coitus reservatus, bei dem man den Liebesakt vollzieht, ohne zum Orgasmus zu gelangen. Zwar wird der kostbare männliche Samen einbehalten, jedoch lehrt sie nicht, wie die Sexualenergie im Körper emporgeleitet und in den höheren Zentren gespeichert werden kann, um sie mit der Partnerin auszutauschen oder sonstwie konstruktiv einzusetzen. Außerdem wird durch den Coitus reservatus ein starker Druck auf die Prostata ausgeübt, was zum Versagen dieser Drüse fuhren kann. Die orgasmische Spannung in der Prostata wird weder nach innen gelenkt, wie bei der taoistischen Praktik, noch nach außen in Form von Ejakulatio-nen. Deshalb rate ich ausdrücklich davon ab, Coitus reservatus zu praktizieren, auch noch aus folgendem Grund: Er erzeugt eine zu große Hitze im Genitalbereich, ohne die Mittel und Methoden zu bieten, diesen wieder abzukühlen.

Karezza ist eine Liebestechnik, die aus Persien stammen soll. Zu ihr gehören lange Phasen passiven Liebens, indem man eine halbe Stunde oder länger stillhält und abwartet, bis die männlichen und weiblichen Energien sich aufgebaut haben. Die taoisti-sche Methode dagegen rät, so viele Liebesbewegungen auszufuhren, wie das Paar verkraften kann, ohne zum Genitalorgasmus zu gelangen. Dieser dynamische Aspekt der Sexualität ist dem westlichen Menschen meistens sehr wichtig, da er in dem romantischen Rollendenken aufwächst, Liebe müsse stets von Leidenschaft geprägt sein. Dem Taoisten ist Bewegung Leben, ob diese nun körperlich stattfindet oder im Bereich der feinstofflichen Energie, man soll sie voll genießen, zumal sie gesundheitlich äußerst förderlich ist. Auch Karezza bietet uns keine Methode, wie man die Sexualenergie zu einem transzendenten inneren Orgasmus umwandelt. Es begnügt sich damit, ein immer intensiveres Freudegefühl hervorzubringen und dieses möglichst lange aufrechtzuerhalten. Ursprünglich diente Karezza dazu, Königen die Möglichkeit zu geben, die langen Liebesnächte mit ihrem Harem zu überstehen. Um 1866 wurde es in der utopischen Gemeinschaft von Oneida auch in Amerika als Methode freiwilliger Geburtenkontrolle verbreitet. Sicherlich ist Karezza der hastigen ejakulatorischen Sexualität überlegen, doch fehlt ihr wirkliche innere Tiefe.

6. KAPITEL

Der Tanz der Hoden: Übungen zur Stärkung des Beckens

«Wenn ein Mann einmal Geschlechtsverkehr hat, ohne seinen Samen zu vergießen, wird seine Lebenskraft dadurch gestärkt. Geschieht es zweimal, so werden sein Gehör und seine Sehfahig-keit geschärft. Bei dreimaliger Praxis weicht alle körperliche Krankheit von ihm. Beim vierten Mal wird er damit beginnen, inneren Frieden zu empfinden. Beim fünften Mal wird sein Blut kraftvoller strömen. Beim sechsten Mal werden seine Geschlechtsorgane gestärkt. Beim siebten Mal gewinnen seine Waden und sein Gesäß an Festigkeit. Beim achten Mal wird sein ganzer Körper blendende Gesundheit ausstrahlen. Das neunte Mal aber wird seine Lebensspanne verlängern.»

aus dem Kanon taoistischer Weisheit, gesammelt von Kaiser Tang

Jeder von uns kennt die Schießszene, wo ein Mann seinen Revolver zieht, der dann nicht losgeht. Ist es der Gute, rettet er sich meistens durch irgendeine heroische Tat aus seiner mißlichen Lage. Wenn die «Waffe» jedoch aus dem männlichen Penis besteht, ergibt eine «Fehlzündung», also das Nichteinsetzen der Erektion, in der Regel ein Fiasko. Hierbei findet man nur schwer einen heroischen Ausweg. Wiederholte, chronische Fehlzündungen bedeuten Impotenz, die Verkörperung männlichen Elends und der Ruin zahlreicher Partnerschaften. In diesem Kapitel wollen wir zwei ausgezeichnete Übungen für das Diaphragma pelvis behandeln, mit deren Hilfe man die urogenitalen und die Schließmuskeln des Afters stärkt. Auf diese Weise gelangt man zur Beherrschung der Erektion, und Fehlzündungen werden weitgehend ausgeschlossen. Wenn Sie diese Übungen sorgfältig durchführen, haben Sie schon eine gute Vorbereitung für die Technik der Sameneinbehaltung während des Liebesaktes.

Die westliche Welt ist geradezu verrückt nach Sport, Gymnastik und Körperertüchtigung. Mit Ausnahme der sexuellen Betätigung gibt es aber nur wenige Übungen, um die so wichtige Beckenmuskulatur zu stärken. Es gibt jedoch Übungen, die die Fortpflanzungsorgane und das sie umgebende komplexe Sehnennetz erheblich kräftigen können. Man kann nicht genug betonen, wie wichtig gerade in diesem Körperbereich Stärke ist. Hier liegt die Quelle aller männlichen Gesundheit! In den Bek-kenbereich fuhren Venen und Arterien und eine Vielzahl von Nervensträngen sowie Gewebe, die mit jedem Quadratzentimeter des gesamten Körpers in Verbindung stehen. Alle Chi-tragenden Hauptmeridiane der Akupunktur laufen hier entlang. Ist dieser Bereich blockiert oder geschwächt, verteilt sich die Energie wahllos, worunter die Organe und das Gehirn zu leiden haben. Dies widerfahrt den meisten Männern, wenn sie älter werden. Ihre Anal- und Beckenmuskulatur erschlafft, und ihr lebenswichtiges Chi sickert langsam aus dem Körper und läßt sie geschwächt und matt zurück.

Wir dürfen nicht vergessen, daß die Kraft des Penis auf der Samenzurückhaltung beruht. Ohne dies lassen sich keine dauerhaften Erfolge erzielen, und wenn man noch so viel übt. Samenverlust führt zu vorzeitiger Impotenz und Altersverfall. Kein Mann, so stark oder triebhaft er auch sein mag, kann oft ejakulieren, ohne dafür einen hohen Preis zu zahlen! Die hier geschilderten Übungen massieren und stimulieren die Beckenregion. Die Lebensenergie wird in die Hoden hinabgezogen und erfüllt sie mit außerordentlicher Vitalität. Zusammen mit der Sameneinbehaltungstechnik des «Großen Emporziehens» (im nächsten Kapitel) ermöglichen die Übungen Ihnen, in Ihrem eigenen Körper einen immer ^gefüllten Speicher voll Sexualessenz zu erzeugen. Erst dann können Sie damit beginnen, Ihre Sexualenergie in eine höhere Form zu bringen und sie mit Ihrem Chi und Ihrem Geist zu verbinden, um Ihre Ganzeit wiederherzustellen.

Das Diaphragma pelvis und das Diaphragma urogenitale

Der Körper besitzt nicht nur ein Diaphragma (Muskel-Scheidewand), sondern mehrere. Jeder von uns kennt das Zwerchfell, das dem Brustkorb hilft, sich beim Einatmen auszuweiten. Weniger bekannt sind das Diaphragma pelvis und das Diaphragma urogenitale, welches das Becken vom Perineum (Damm) trennt. Will man Sexual-Kung Fu richtig praktizieren, muß man nicht nur das Zwerchfell, sondern auch den Beckenboden benutzen. Wirkliche Tiefatmung kommt aus dem unteren Diaphragma. Beide sind sehr wichtig für die Energieübertragung beim Liebesakt.

Das Diaphragma pelvis ist eine Muskelwand, die sich quer über den unteren Teil des Rumpfes erstreckt. Es hängt konkav nach unten, auf derselben Höhe wie Schamfuge und Kreuzbein. Mehrere Organe durchdringen diese Scheidewand zwischen Beckenhöhle und Damm, Harnröhre, Scheide und Mastdarm. Das Diaphragma pelvis bildet den Boden der Beckenhöhle, die Dickdarm, Dünndarm, Blase und Nieren enthält. Es stützt die Organe und hilft ihnen, ihre Form zu behalten. Im Perineum (Damm), das in der Mitte zwischen After und Geschlechtsorganen unterhalb des Diaphragma pelvis liegt, befindet sich eine weitere Muskelscheidewand, das Diaphragma urogenitale. Es wird von der Harnröhre durchdrungen. An seiner Unterseite ist die Peniswurzel befestigt. Der pudendale Penisnerv kontrolliert die Muskehi des Diaphragma urogenitale, welche ihrerseits Prostata (Vorsteherdrüse), Samenleiter, Cowper' Drüse, Penis und Anus halten müssen. Ein Teil dieses untersten Diaphragmas, umschlingt den Hodensack (der ebenfalls Muskehi enthält) und den Penis, um sich dann mit der Bauchwand zu verbinden.

Der Beckenboden und das urogenitale Diaphragma sind die -unteren Siegel, mit denen die Lebenskraft, die Chi-Energie, daran gehindert wird, durch die unteren Körperöffhungen zu entweichen. Werden sie fest versiegelt, erhöhen sie den Chi-Druck in der Bauchhöhle. Stärkerer Chi-Druck belebt alle Organe und läßt Chi und Blut freier fließen. Die Übungen des Eisenhemd Chi Kung fördern ebenfalls die Kraft und Leistungsfähigkeit dieses Körperbereichs. Sie bilden eine ausgezeichnete Ergänzung zur Praxis des Sexual-Kung Fu. (In Kapitel 18 finden Sie eine Beschreibung des Übungsprogramms.)

Das Emporpumpen kalter Samenenergie durch das Scrotum

Für die Taoisten gehört das Scrotum, der Hodensack, zum untersten Diaphragma. Es funktioniert wie eine Pumpe. Während der Jugend und nach einem erfrischenden Schlaf ist das Scrotum fest und straff, erst im Alter oder bei Erschöpfung wird es schlaff. Ein starker Strom von Lebensenergie strafft die Haut.

Abbildung 11
DIAPHRAGMA PELVIS UND DIAPHRAGMA UROGENITALE

Durch die Scrotum-Atmung wird diese Körperzone mit so viel Energie durchflutet, daß sich der Hodensack beinahe sofort spannt und fest wird.

Das Scrotum ist die Fabrik, in der die Sexualenergie, das Sperma und die männlichen Hormone produziert werden. In diesem Bereich findet sich deshalb ein großer Vorrat an Yin-Chi, kalter Lebenskraftenergie. Alle Sexualenergie, ob männlich oder weiblich, ist yin, solange sie sich im Ruhezustand befindet. Nach der chinesischen Klassifikation der Chi-Qualitäten werden die Sexualsäfte dem Element Wasser zugeordnet. Russe, Seen' und Meere sind alle yin. Doch kann die Yin-Energie sehr schnell ihre Natur verändern und mehr yang, also heißer werden, wenn es zur sexuellen Erregung kommt; dies kann allerdings nur geschehen, wenn der Samen bereits in den kalten Hoden erzeugt wurde. Westliche Wissenschaftler haben sogar festgestellt, daß die Menge des männlichen Samens rapide ansteigt, sobald die Hoden auf Eis gelegt werden. Inzwischen gibt es einige Firmen, die spezielle Hilfsmittel wie «Gefrier-Suspensorien» gegen die Unfruchtbarkeit des Mannes anbieten. Da die Samenenergie kalter Natur ist, muß sie im Kreislauf nach oben gelenkt werden, um mit der heißen Mentalenergie in Kopf und Brustgegend zur Harmonie zu gelangen. Umgekehrt muß heiße Energie nach unten geleitet werden.

Die Hoden erzeugen ständig Samen, männliche Hormone und Ching Chi, die Lebenskraftessenz. Die alten Taoisten, die außerordentlich scharfsinnige und genaue Beobachter und Empiriker waren, erkannten, daß die Energie der Samenzellen von größter Bedeutung ist. Sämtliche lebenswichtigen Organe müssen von ihren eigenen Reserven abgeben, damit Samen erzeugt und deren Potenz aufrechterhalten werden kann. Zu diesen betroffenen Organen gehört auch das Gehirn.

Die Aufzeichnungen der Taoisten zum Thema Sexualität sind über lange Zeiträume übereinstimmend geblieben, und das heißt in China nicht nur wenige hundert, sondern einige tausend Jahre. Obwohl viele praktizierende Gruppen voneinander überhaupt nichts wußten, weisen alle Berichte darauf hin, daß der kalte Zustand der Hodenenergie, ein Zustand, der überwiegend yin ist, ein Zeichen für starke und jugendhafte Samenenergie ist. Die Erfahrung der Kälte weicht einer als «leicht warm» bezeichneten Qualität, wenn der Samen aus dem äußeren Hodensack ins Körperinnere geleitet und in Nebenhoden und Samenleiter gespeichert wird.

Abbildung 12

Wenn Sie die Technik des «Kleinen Energiekreislaufs»* erlernen, wird Ihnen dies viel leichter gelingen. Der Energiekreislauf verläuft die Wirbelsäule entlang zum Kopf und von dort aus vorne hinab zum Nabel, den Geschlechtsorganen und zum Perineum. Er wird von Akupunkteuren als Hauptenergiekanal des Körpers betrachtet, der Organe, Drüsen und Gehirn miteinander verbindet.

Die folgende Übung der «Hodenatmung» wird Ihnen ebenfalls helfen, Ihre Energiebahnen zu Öffnen. Bei dieser Übung zieht man mittels Konzentration die «kalte», junge Samenener-gie durch die Wirbelsäule bis zum Kopf empor. Dabei lenkt man nicht den Samen selbst in die Höhe, sondern die Energie, die der Samen erzeugt. Das dauert am Anfang eine ganze Weile, doch ist diese Energie einfach zu handhaben, weil sie noch kühl ist. Mit etwas Übung wird schon nur beim bloßen Gedanken daran eine erfrischend kühle Energiewelle Ihren Rücken entlang zum Kopf hinaufströmen.

* Die Methode des «Kleinen Energiekreislaufs» wird ausfuhrlich behandelt in dem bereits erschienenen Buch von Mantak Chia: Tao Yogü, Erweckung der heilenden Urkraft Chi. Ansata 1985

Die zweite Übung, die «Scrotum-Krompression», lehrt Sie, wie man «warme» Ching-Energie im Hodensack bildet und auf gefahrlose Weise emporleitet. Die dritte Übung, die sogenannte «Kraftsperre», zeigt Ihnen, wie Sie mit dem Ching umgehen müssen, wenn es sexuell erregt und sehr «heiß» ist. Dann ist es nämlich wie ein wildes Pferd und am schwierigsten unter Kontrolle zu bringen. Ich rate Ihnen, dies lieber allein zu üben, indem Sie sich selbst erregen, und später den Versuch zu wagen, Ihre Sexualenergie in ihrem explosivsten Zustand beim Liebesakt mit einer Frau zu zügeln.

Kreuzbeinpumpe und Schädelpumpe

Innerhalb der Wirbelsäule und des Schädels eingeschlossen und von ihnen geschützt befindet sich das eigentliche Herz des menschlichen Nervensystems. Es ist eingebettet in die cerebro-spinale Flüssigkeit (von «cerebrum» = «Gehirn» und «spina» = «Wirbel/Wirbelsäule»), die von zwei Pumpen zum Zirkulieren gebracht wird. Eine davon, die «Kreuzbeinpumpe», befindet sich im Sakrum (Kreuzbein/Steißbein-Bereich), während die andere, die «Schädelpumpe», in der Region des oberen Nackens und Kopfes liegt. Viele Menschen, die diese Pumpen aktiviert haben, berichten, wie sie bei der Hodenatmung eine «große Energieblase» ihre Wirbelsäule emporsteigen fühlten.

Im taoistischen System betrachtet man das Kreuzbein als Pumpe, mit deren Hilfe die aus dem Hodensack stammende Sexualenergie behalten und zur gleichen Zeit transformiert und nach oben befördert wird. Es ist eine Zwischenstation, in der das Ching Chi beim Kreisen durch den Körper verfeinert wird.

Ist die Kreuzbeinöffnung, der Hiatus, blockiert, kann die Lebenskraft nicht eindringen und in höhere Zentren strömen.

Die Schädelkapsel gilt im taoistischen System schon lange als die Hauptpumpe, die Energie aus den unteren in die höheren Zentren pumpt und kreisen läßt. Beim Atmen kommt es 2u winzigen Bewegungen der acht Schädelknochen, was jüngste medizinische Untersuchungen inzwischen bestätigt haben. Diese Schädelbewegung ist verantwortlich für die Produktion und das Funktionierender das Hirn und die Wirbelsäule umgebenden cerebrospinalen Flüssigkeit, die wiederum die normalen Nerven- und Energiemuster im gesamten Körper aufrechterhält. Indem man die Schädelknochengelenke kräftigt, erhöht man den Energiepegel und behebt auch Symptome wie Kopfschmerzen, Nebenhöhlenbeschwerden, Sehstörungen und Nackenver-Spannungen und -schmerzen. In der taoistischen Praktik ist die Stärkung von Becken, Scrotum, Diaphragma urogenitale, Kreuzbein- und Schädelpumpe von größter Wichtigkeit für das Emporlenken der Sexualenergie in die höheren Zentren.

Drei Stellungen für die Hodenatmung: Sitzen, Stehen, Liegen

Sitzen: Im allgemeinen empfehle ich, auf einem Stuhl zu sitzen. Diese Stellung ist einfach und bequem. Sie erleichtert die Übung, die auch gut zur Entspannung und Erhöhung der Konzentration ist.

Setzen Sie sich so auf die Stuhlkante, daß Ihr Körpergewicht von pesäßbacken und Beinen getragen wird. Das Scrotum hängt frei herab. Dieser Punkt ist sehr wichtig. Die Hoden müssen frei hängen, damit man möglichst viel Luftenergie in sie hineinleiten kann. Legen Sie die Zunge an den Gaumen, denn das Chi kann erst dann richtig fließen, wenn Sie die hintere und vordere Energiebahn des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs miteinander verbunden haben.

Die Füße stehen fest auf dem Boden, die Handflächen ruhen auf den Knien. Das Rückgrat sollte im Hüftbereich ganz gerade sein, bei Schulter und Nacken jedoch leicht gebeugt. Durch diese winzige Vorwärtsrundung des oberen Rückens wird der Brustkorb entspannt, und die Kraft fließt müheloser durch Nacken, Brustkorb und Bauch. Ziehen Sie das Kinn leicht ein. Eine militärisch-zackige Haltung, bei der man die Schultern zurückwirft und den Kopf emporreckt, wird die Energie im oberen Körper stauen und ihr Hinabströmen in die unteren Zentren verhindern.

Eine Variante ist das Sitzen mit gekreuzten Beinen, entweder im Lotus- oder im Schneidersitz. Zwar sind wir uns der esoterischen Vorteile des Lotussitzes bewußt, doch gilt diese Stellung im chinesischen System als recht ungünstig. Es ist schon vorgekommen, daß buddhistische Mönche durch langes Meditieren un Lotussitz verkrüppelt wurden. Darüber hinaus verhindert das Empordrehen der Fußsohlen die Aufnahme der Yin-Kraft der Erde. Der menschliche Körper ist dafür eingerichtet, die Erd-Energie durch den Nierenmeridian und andere Meridiane in den Füßen aufzunehmen, um sie erst zu filtern, bevor sie ins Steißbein und schließlich ins Gehirn weitergeleitet wird. Manchen Menschen bekommt es nicht, wenn sie zu viel «rohes» Erd-Chi unmittelbar durch Kreuz- und Steißbein aufnehmen, wie dies im Lotussitz geschieht. Sie können allergisch gegen diese unverarbeitete Energie werden und sogar den Verstand verlieren.

Dennoch läßt sich der Lotussitz durchaus verwenden, wenn Sie ihn so gewohnt sind, daß er für Sie bequem ist und ihre Aufmerksamkeit nicht von der Übung ablenkt. Allerdings bieten nur wenige Sitzstellungen mit gekreuzten Beinen dem Scrotum so viel Bewegungsfreiheit wie das Sitzen auf einer Stuhlkante. Wenn Sie schon mit gekreuzten Beinen sitzen wollen, sollten Sie sehr lockere Hosen tragen und Unterhosen vermeiden, damit das Scrotum sich ohne Widerstand voll ausdehnen kann.

Stehen: Das Stehen ist ebenfalls eine gute Stellung. Auch hier gilt das oben Gesagte für die Stellung der Zunge und die gesamte Haltung des Oberkörpers. Das Stehen ist besonders gut für die Hodenatmung geeignet, weil die Hoden dabei völlig frei hängen. Wenn Sie auf entspannte Weise aufrecht stehen, fördert dies Ihre Körperhaltung. Die Hände sollten neben dem Körper herabhängen und die Füße in Schulterbreite auseinander stehen. Gewöhnen Sie sich darin, sich immer wieder zu entspannen, wenn Sie sich verkrampft haben, sonst kann es passieren, daß -die Chi-Kraft sich in Ihrer Herzgegend staut und Sie gereizt werden läßt.

Liegen: Legen Sie sich nie flach auf den Rücken, wenn Sie diese Übungen durchführen, weil dann der Brustkorb höher hegt als der Unterleib und zuviel Energie bekommt. Auch das Liegen auf der linken Seite sollten Sie vermeiden. Beide Stellungen belasten das Herz unnötig.

Bei der korrekten Stellung liegt man auf der rechten Seite. Sie sollten sich ein Kissen unter den Kopf legen, so daß er 8 bis 10 cm höher liegt und richtig auf den Schultern sitzt. Die vier Finger der rechten Hand Hegen unmittelbar vor dem rechten Ohr, während der Daumen hinter dem Ohr ruht und es leicht nach vorne drückt, damit es offenbleibt.

Die Ohren müssen offenbleiben, damit Luft durch die Eustachische Röhre fließen kann. Die linke Hand ruht auf dem äußeren linken Oberschenkel, das rechte Bein ist gestreckt; das linke Bein, das auf dem rechten liegt, ist leicht gebeugt. So kann das Scrotum von den Oberschenkeln unbehindert herunterhängen.

Manche Tiere schlafen in einer ähnlichen Körperhaltung. Das bewirkt die Weisheit ihres Instinkts. In dieser Stellung unterliegt die Wirbelsäule nämlich nicht dem starken Druck der Schwerkraft und kann ihre natürliche Krümmung einnehmen. Sie wird von Spannungen entlastet.

Abbildung 14

Legen Sie sich auf die rechte Seite, damit das Herz nicht gepreßt wird. Beugen Sie etwas das obere Bein, damit die Hoden frei hängen können.

Die Hodenatmung in Einzelschritten

1. Setzen Sie sich auf die Stuhlkante, die Füße flach auf dem Boden, eine Schulterbreite auseinander. Tragen Sie nur weite Hose oder keinerlei Kleidung unterhalb der Gürtellinie, damit alles im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes «frei heraushängen» kann.* Üben Sie nie unbekleidet in einem kalten Raum, sonst verlieren Sie zuviel Chi. Wenn die Luft Ihren Unterkörper bestreicht, werden Sie sich Ihrer «Intimteile» auf natürliche Weise bewußter. Richten Sie Ihre Aufmerksamkeit auf das Scrotum zwischen den Hoden, Sie werden mit Erstaunen feststellen, daß es dort unten tatsächlich kalt oder yin ist. Sorgen Sie immer dafür, daß Sie richtig entspannt sind. Fühlen Sie sich verspannt, machen Sie vorher ein paar Dehnübungen oder einen kleinen Spaziergang, um die Spannungen zu lösen. >

2. Atmen Sie langsam ein und ziehen Sie die Hoden dabei hoch. Halten Sie eine Weile die Luft an, dann atmen Sie wieder aus und lassen die Hoden sinken. Beim Einatmen denken Sie daran, wie der Atem in die Hoden hinabströmt und sie auffüllt. Gleichzeitig ziehen Sie die Hoden zusammen mit dem Atem empor. Fahren Sie fort, mit den Hoden sanft ein- und auszuatmen, bis Sie eine große Menge kalter Energie im Scrotum spüren. Sie können z.B. eine Runde von 9 Atemzügen machen, sich ausruhen und dann weitere 3 bis 6 Runden üben.

Ziehen Sie die lebenspendende Luft bis in die tiefste Wurzel Ihres Körpers. Atmen Sie die angesammelten Abfallstoffe aus, während die Hoden wieder hinabsinken. So erzeugen Sie in sich einen starken Energiestrom, der den Blutkreislauf im Beckenbereich beschleunigt. Bewegen Sie die Hoden nur mit der Kraft Ihrer Vorstellung — ziehen Sie also nicht Ihre Penis- oder Aftermuskeln zusammen!

Nach ein- bis zweiwöchiger Übung beginnen Sie zu spüren,

* Frauen, die diese Übungen durchführen wollen, nehmen ihre Eierstöcke als Energiequelle; sie sollten jedoch einen Slip anbehalten, damit kein Chi aus dem Körper entweichen kann.

Abbildung 15

Hodenatmung: Atmen Sie langsam ein. Führen Sie den Atem beim Einatmen in die Hoden hinab, und ziehen Sie diese kraft Ihrer Vorstellung empor.

wie sich die Hoden während der Übung tatsächlich heben und senken. Das zeigt, daß Sie nun richtig atmen. Je geübter Sie sind, desto weniger wird sich Ihr Unterleib bewegen: Fast alle sichtbaren Bewegungen werden im Hodensack selbst stattfinden. Sie können die Tanzbewegungen der Hoden im Spiegel beobachten, was recht lustig aussieht.

Wenn nichts anderes angegeben wird, sollten Sie bei den Übungen nur durch die Nase atmen. Bei der Nasenatmung hat man eine bessere Kontrolle über den Atemvorgang. Die Luft wird gefiltert und erwärmt, und wir erhalten Lebenskraft von gut ausgeglichener Qualität.

Der ganze Körper muß sich entspannen. Lassen Sie alle Spannungen ausfließen wie beim Meditieren. Benutzen Sie nur Ihre Vorstellung, um die Hoden hinauf- und hinabzuziehen. Mit etwas Übung werden Sie lernen, das in Ihrem Scrotum gespeicherte kalte Ching Chi genau zu spüren.

3. Lenken Sie die Empfindung aus Ihrem Scrotum durch Einatmen zum Damm empor, und ziehen Sie leicht Ihre Hoden hoch. Spüren Sie gleichzeitig, wie die Kühle die wenigen Zentimeter zum Damm hinaufströmt, wenn Sie Ihre Konzentration auf das Perineum richten. Atmen Sie mit den Hoden mehrmals ein und aus, um noch mehr Energie in diesem Bereich zu bilden. Es ist sehr wichtig, das Ching Chi im Perineum zu halten, denn sobald Ihre Aufmerksamkeit nachläßt, wird die kalte Energie wieder ins Scrotum zurückfließen oder gar aus dem Körper sickern. Es ist, als ob man mit einem Strohhalm Flüssigkeit hochsaugt: Wenn Ihnen die Luft ausgeht und Sie eine Pause machen, müssen Sie den Finger auf die Strohhalmöffnung legen und sie verschließen, d.h. Ihre Konzentration aufrechterhalten. Lassen Sie jedoch los, wird die Flüssigkeit wieder hinabsinken, und Sie müssen von vorne anfangen. Üben Sie dies mehrere Tage oder so lange, bis es gelingt.

4. Fangen Sie nun an, die Sexualenergie von den Hoden aus die Rückenbahn emporzuleiten, als würden Sie an Ihrem Strohhalm saugen. Beginnen Sie immer mit der Hodenatmung, so lange bis Sie spüren, daß die Ching-Energie bereit ist. Atmen Sie ein, ziehen Sie die «Kälte» aus den Hoden hinauf ins Perineum und dann zum Steißbein, der untersten Stelle Ihrer Wirbelsäule. Ein kleines Stück darüber befindet sich eine hauptsächlich aus Knochen bestehende Öffnung, die man Hiatus nennt, die Kreuzbein-Öffnung.

Wenn Sie das kühle Ching erst zum Perineum und dann ins Kreuzbein ziehen, krümmen Sie die untere Rückenpartie ein wenig nach außen, als stünden Sie mit dem Rücken gegen eine Wand gelehnt und wollten sich flach an sie pressen. Neigen, Sie das Kreuzbein nach unten, und belassen Sie es in dieser Stellung, damit die Pumpe besser .aktiviert werden kann; dies können Sie noch dadurch unterstützen, daß Sie den Nacken und die Schädelknochen leicht anspannen. Behalten Sie die Energie eine Weile im Kreuzbein, und atmen Sie schließlich aus, ohne jedoch die Aufmerksamkeit vom Kreuzbein abzuwenden und ihre natürliche Lage einnehmen; das halt die beiden Pumpen im Kreuzbein und im Schädel in Gang. Zur gleichen Zeit fuhren Sie die Hodenatmung durch. Lenken Sie einmal mehr die Energie ins Kreuzbein, und behalten Sie sie dort, bis Sie schließlich fühlen, wie das Kreuzbein sich öffnet und die Energie langsam nach oben fließt. Sie werden die kalte Energie richtig spüren, wie sie langsam hochsteigt. Sollten Sie Schwierigkeiten haben, dies richtig wahrzunehmen, können Sie Ihr Steißbein ein paarmal vor- und zurückbewegen und wieder ruhigstellen, um dann die Wirkung des Pumpens zu beobachten.
Nun lassen Sie Kreuzbein und Nacken sich wieder entspannen

Im Kreuzbeinknochen gibt es eine Mulde, in die Sie die «kalte» Energie aus Ihren Hoden hineinleiten. Meistens ist es etwas schwieriger, diesen Bereich zu bearbeiten, weil die Samenenergie dichter als das Chi ist und heraufgepumpt werden muß. Manche Menschen empfinden das Eindringen der «kalten» Energie in den Hiatus als Schmerz, Prickeln oder Kitzeln - das ist ganz normal und kein Grund zur Besorgnis.. Es fallt Ihnen übrigens leichter, diese Energie durch das Steißbein zu bringen, wenn Sie diesen Körperbereich gelegentlich mit einem Seidentuch sanft massieren.

5. Ist es Ihnen gelungen, die Energie durch das Steißbein zu leiten, können Sie jetzt üben, die Kälte zum T-ll, zum 11. Thorax- oder Brustwirbel in der Mitte des Rückens, zu ziehen. Gehen Sie vor wie bisher, indem Sie mit den Hoden ein- und ausatmen und die Energie wie durch einen «Strohhalm» zum Damm emporziehen, dann ins Kreuzbein und zum T-ll (gegenüber dem Solarplexus oder Sonnengeflecht, unterhalb der letzten «falschen» Rippe). Behalten Sie die Energie im 11. Wirbel, bis dieser sich voll anfühlt und von allein öffnet und die Energie von selbst weiter emporströmt. Weil die Samenenergie dichter und träger ist als Chi, müssen Sie sich ihr anpassen, indem Sie diesen Teil Ihres Rückens nach innen und außen bewegen, um ihn geradezurichten. Dadurch lockert er sich, und die «kalte» Energie kann freier emporfließen.

Am T-ll befindet sich das Energiezentrum der Nebennieren.

Im taoistischen System wird dieser Punkt als eine Art «Mini-Pumpe» betrachtet. An dieser Stelle erschafft Ihr Rücken ein Vakuum, welches die Energie nach oben treibt.

6. Der nächste Haltepunkt ist das «Jadekissen». Er befindet sich am Kopfansatz, zwischen dem 1. Halswirbel und der Schädelbasis. Verfahren Sie wieder wie zuvor, indem Sie mit der Hodenatmung beginnen und die Energie immer weiter emporpumpen, zuerst zum Damm (Perineum) und zum Kreuzbein, dann zum T-ll und weiter zur Schädelbasis. Hier befindet sich ein Speicherplatz, wo die Energie für den späteren Gebrauch aufbewahrt wird.

7. Der nächste Haltepunkt ist der Pai Hui, der Scheitelpunkt des Kopfes. Üben Sie wie bisher, aber füllen Sie den «Strohhalm» nun völlig von unten nach oben. Neigen Sie das Kreuzbein nach hinten, und lassen Sie den unteren Rücken geradewerden (kein Hohlkreuz). Dadurch wird die untere Pumpe in Gang gesetzt. Gleichzeitig ziehen Sie das Kinn etwas ein und drücken den Hinterkopf ganz wenig nach hinten; das aktiviert die obere Schädelpumpe. Ziehen Sie die Energie unentwegt bis zum obersten Punkt Ihres Kopfes empor.

8. Ist die Energie schließlich im Kopf angelangt, werden viele Männer deutlich spüren, daß sie sich dort, wenn man nach oben schaut, im Uhrzeigersinn dreht. Wenn Sie genau aufpassen, werden Sie feststellen, daß sie einem Rhythmus von 36 Umdrehungen folgt. Das sollte sich gut und erfrischend anfühlen. Diese zusätzliche Energie kann Ihre Kreativität steigern helfen und Ihre Gedächtnis leistung verbessern. Sie werden klarer denken können und sind nun am Anfang der Beherrschung Ihrer sexuellen Bedürfnisse oder Frustrationen angelangt. Diese Samenenergie wird später, auf den spirituellen Stufen des Tao Yoga, in Chi umgewandelt, die ursprüngliche Lebenskraft. Wird der Mensch älter, hat er so viel Chi aufgebraucht, daß die Gehirnenergie und die Wirbelsäulenflüssigkeit langsam wegsickern und eintrocknen, wodurch eine leere Höhlung zurückbleibt. Durch die Hodenatmung wird die Sexualenergie emporgeleitet, um die Höhle zu füllen und das Gehirn zu vitalisieren. Die Taoisten sind der Auffassung, daß sich Sexual- und Hirnenergie sehr ähnlich sind.

9. Schließlich können Sie die Sexualenergie in einem geschmeidigen Zug im «Strohhalm» mit einem einzigen Atemzug von den Hoden hinauf in den Kopf leiten. Zu Anfang konnten Sie nur stufenweise vorgehen, bis Sie spürten, daß Ihr Rückenkanal (das Lenkergefäß der Akupunktur) sich weiter geöffnet hat. Nun sind Sie imstande, ihre Vorstellung in Hoden und Scheitel zu lenken und die Sexualenergie mit rein geistiger Kraft von den Hoden ins Gehirn zu fuhren.

10. Lassen Sie sich bei den Übungen Zeit, um die «Kälte» richtig zu spüren. Überstürzen Sie nichts, und halten Sie stets die Pumpen in Gang, während Sie ein- und ausatmen. Verwenden Sie mehr geistige als körperliche Zugkraft dabei. Lassen Sie sich von dem Gefühl der «Kälte» leiten. Wenn Sie zu heftig und ungeduldig verfahren, erhitzt sich das «kalte» Ching nur. Diese heiße Energie läßt sich aber im Gehirn nicht gefahrlos speichern.

Der goldene Nektar

Haben Sie Ihren Kopfmit Samenenergie gefüllt, kann es geschehen, daß das überschüssige Ching plötzlich mit dem Chi in Ihren höheren Zentren «explodiert» und in den Kleinen Energiekreislauf gespült wird, so daß es durch Ihren Gaumen die Zunge hinabströmt. Das wird als höchst unterschiedliche Geschmacksempfindung wahrgenommen. Man nennt es im allgemeinen den Goldenen Nektar, doch kann es wie Sekt, Honig, Kokosmilch oder wie alle möglichen duftenden Essenzen schmecken; es kann aber auch sein, daß Sie es als warmes Prickeln auf der Zunge wahrnehmen.

Diese Übung, den «Tanz der Hoden», können Sie an jedem beliebigen Ort durchführen: in der Bahn, im Auto, am Schreib-

DAS AUFSTEIGEN DER KÜHLEN SAMENENERGIE

Atmen Sie aus, und ziehen Sie das Ching die Wirbelsäule empor. Beim Ausatmen lassen Sie die Hoden sanft wieder hinab. Spüren Sie, wie die Lebenskraft an der Wurzel Ihres Körpers vibriert.

tisch, vor dem Fernseher, im Bett usw. Wichtig ist nur, daß der Rücken dabei gerade und der Brustkorb entspannt ist und das Scrotum frei und ungehindert herabhängen kann.

Es ist sehr zu empfehlen, während der Hodenatmung auch das Diaphragma pelvis anzuspannen. Denn jedesmal, wenn der Beckenboden (Diaphragma pelvis) angespannt wird, erhält der gesamte Unterleib eine Tiefenmassage. Dann strömt die Lebenskraft im Einklang mit der Atmung in periodischen „Wellen durch diese Körperregion, was die Drüsen und die Vitalorgane anregt.

Die Scrotum-Kompression: Erzeugen Sie Druck im Scrotum, um Ihre Sexualkraft zu steigern

Die Wohltaten der Hodenatmung lassen sich noch erheblich steigern, wenn man gleichzeitig die Praktik der Scrotum-Kompression anwendet. Diese Übung hilft bei nächtlichen Samenergüssen und vorzeitiger Ejakulation. Sie verringert außerdem das Auftreten von Leistenbrüchen (Hermen). Bei sexueller Übererregung wirkt sie beruhigend. Die Sexualkraft wird dynamisch gesteigert, indem der Luft das Vital-Chi entnommen und das Ching Chi damit aufgeladen wird.

Von den drei beschriebenen Stellungen sind die Haltung des Sitzens oder des Stehens hierbei am geeignetsten. Füllen Sie Ihren Rachen mit genügend Luft, und schlucken Sie diese herunter. Durch das Schlucken wird die Luft in den Solarplexus gedrückt, von dort in das Becken und dann nach unten in die Hoden geleitet. Das geschieht, indem man die Unterleibsmuskeln in einer langsamen Wellenbewegung nach abwärts zusammenzieht.

Ist die Luft in den Hoden angelangt, werden Sie einen plötzlichen Hitzeschwall wahrnehmen. Die Hoden scheinen sich auszudehnen, und nach kurzer Zeit wird die in sie hineingelenkte Kraft die Wirbelsäule hochfließen bis zum Kopf, was auch als Wärmegefuhl zu spüren ist.

Die Scrotum-Kompression in Einzelschritten

1. Setzen Sie sich auf die Stuhlkante, die Füße flach auf dem Boden, eine Schulterbreite auseinander. Tragen Sie nur weite Hosen oder keinerlei Kleidung unterhalb der Gürtellinie, damit die Hoden herabhängen können.

2. Atmen Sie durch die Nasenlöcher in den Rachen ein. Dann schlucken Sie die Luft zum Solarplexus hinunter, der sich auf halber Höhe zwischen Herz und Nabel befindet. Stellen Sie sich die Luft als einen Ballon vor.

3. Zuerst kommt der Ballon hinter dem Solarplexus zur Ruhe, dann rollt er zum Nabel hinunter, um schließlich durch das Becken ins Scrotum zu gelangen.

4. Pressen Sie die Luft kraftvoll so lange ins Scrotum, wie Sie nur können, mindestens 30 bis 40 Sekunden lang. Versuchen Sie, Ihre Leistung allmählich auf eine ganze Minute zu steigern. Jede Scrotum-Kompression läßt enorme Energie in die Hoden schießen. Die Übung entfaltet ihre volle Wirkung bei einem Druck von einer vollen Minute. Der Afterschließmuskel und der Muskel am Damm müssen während dieser Übung kräftig zusammengezogen werden, damit keine Energie aus dem Körper entweichen kann.

5. Haben Sie die Kompression beendet, atmen Sie aus und entspannen sich völlig. Hat sich während der Druckerzeugung Speichel im Mund angesammelt, schlucken Sie diesen vor dem Ausatmen hinunter.

6. Atmen Sie jetzt mehrmals kurz und schnell durch, um neue Kraft zu gewinnen. Lassen Sie die Luft wie einen Pfeil aus den Nasenlöchern schießen und ebenso schnell wieder einströmen. Atmen Sie dabei durch die Nase, und nehmen Sie nicht zuviel Luft. Man nennt dies die «Blasebalg-Atmung», weil man mit dem Bauch schnell ein- und auspumpen muß.

Diese Übung lädt den gesamten Körper sehr schnell auf. Wenn Sie sich krank fühlen oder aus dem Gleichgewicht geraten sind, werden Sie sich schon nach wenigen Scrotum-Kompres-sionen besser fühlen. Machen Sie die Übungen folgendermaßen: Beginnen Sie mit einer Scrotum-Kompression. Heben Sie: danach die Arme in Schulterhöhe, und kreisen Sie mit den Hüften. Ruhen Sie sich einen Augenblick aus, und wiederholen Sie das Ganze. Behalten Sie die Zunge immer an den Gaumen gedrückt, während Sie den Druck erzeugen. Üben Sie den ganzen Ablauf fünfmal.

Wenn Ihre Kraft gewachsen ist, können Sie fünf Kompressionen hintereinander durchrühren und sich dann mit Hilfe des Hüftkreisens ausruhen. Dann machen Sie weitere fünf Kompressionen. Atmen Sie zwischen den Kompressionen kurz und flach, um keine Kraft im oberen Körperbereich zu stauen.

Üben Sie die Hodenatmung und die Scrotum-Kompression zweimal täglich etwa eine Viertelstunde lang, jeweils morgens und abends. Nur dann können Sie in den vollen Genuß der Vorzüge dieser Praktik gelangen. Abgesehen von den bereits erwähnten Wirkungen helfen diese Techniken auch gegen Impotenz oder Virilitätsmangel; auch Schlaflosigkeit und Übernervosität können erheblich gebessen werden. Durch regelmäßiges Üben lassen sich allgemeiner Energiemangel und seine Begleiterscheinungen beheben.

Wenn Sie Ihre Sexualsäfte vier Wochen oder länger bewahrt haben, sollte diese Übung schon nach drei Tagen zu wirken beginnen. Dann fühlen sich die Hoden warm an, «springen» ein wenig auf und ab und können leicht jucken. Das sind Anzeichen dafür, daß die Hoden mit ungewöhnlich großen Mengen Vitalkraft versorgt werden und das Gewebe sich zu erholen beginnt. Doch läßt sich der gewünschte Erfolg nur dann erzielen, wenn die Übungen korrekt durchgeführt werden. Nach ein bis zwei Monaten regelmäßiger Praxis werden Sie einen merklichen Kraftzuwachs verspüren und sich immer wohler fühlen.

Umlenkungsübung bei hohem Blutdruck

Nach zwei- bis sechswöchiger Praxis werden manche Schüler, die zu hohen Blutdruck haben, spüren, wie ein starker Strom von Chi-Energie in ihren Kopf fließt. Sie empfinden einen Druck im Kopf, weil das Blut der Aufwärtsbewegung der Vitalkraft folgt. Das ähnelt in milder Form dem «Kundalini-Syndrom», bei dem freigesetzte Energie ziellos und unkontrolliert durch den Körper schießt.

Wenn Sie unter Bluthochdruck leiden, können Sie sich auf zwei bestimmte Punkte konzentrieren, um diesen Überdruck abzubauen. Diese Punkte sind der Ming-Men an der Wirbelsäule, direkt gegenüber dem Nabel (zwischen dem 12. und 13.

Brustwirbel, sowie der Yung-Chuan an den Fußballen (s. Abbildung 18).

Zur Lokalisierung des Ming-Men legen Sie einen Faden um die Hüfte wie einen Gürtel. Achten Sie darauf, daß er völlig waagrecht verläuft und auch den Nabel berührt. Der Ming-Men befindet sich am Schnittpunkt von Faden und Wirbelsäule. Haben Sie einen großen Hängebauch, messen Sie von der Stelle aus, wo sich Ihr Nabel befand, bevor er nach unten abgesackt ist. Beugt man sich von der Hüfte aus nach hinten, fühlt sich der gesuchte Punkt an wie eine Vertiefung im Rückgrat.

Der andere Punkt, der Yung-Chuan, liegt auf der Fußsohle. Wenn man die Zehen zusammenzieht, ist es der tiefste Punkt auf dem Fußballen.

Haben Sie den Punkt an beiden Füßen gefunden, kleben Sie kleine stachlige Kugeln darunter. Legen Sie beide Hände auf den Rücken, und konzentrieren Sie sich auf den Ming-Men. Chi und Blut werden jetzt dorthin geleitet.

Wenn Sie die Kraft in den Ming-Men fließen spüren, lenken Sie diese die Wirbelsäule und die Beine hinab in den Yung-Chuan. Drücken Sie mit den Füßen auf die Kugeln, so daß Sie die Stacheln deutlich spüren. In schweren Fällen kann es ein bis zwei Monate dauern, bis die Kraft in den Ming-Men strömt und in den Yung-Chuan hinabgelenkt werden kann.

Wenn Ihnen das Blut während oder nach der Scrotum-Kompression zu heftig in den Kopf steigt, müssen Sie die Kraft austreten lassen. Nichtausgeglichene Kraft strömt durch diese beiden Punkte aus dem Körper. Viele Schüler üben nach der Hodenatmung und der Scrotum-Kompression den Kleinen Energiekreislauf, damit die Energie sich gleichmäßig verteilen kann. Allein mit dieser Technik wurden schon viele Fälle von Bluthochdruck geheilt.

Die Versiegelung der Samenflüssigkeit durch die Übung der Kraftsperre

Eine Variante dieser Übung können Sie später beim Liebesakt anwenden, nämlich das «Große Emporziehen». Die Methode, der Kraftsperre wird ohne Partner durchgeführt. Sie sollte ins tägliche Übungsprogramm eingebaut werden. Sie ist die beste Technik für die Energiebildung im Perineum, um die Samenflüssigkeit zu versiegeln. Die Sexualenergie, mit der wir es hier zu tun haben, ist eine andere als die, mit der wir bei der Hodenatmung und der Scrotum-Kompression arbeiten, und es ist wichtig, daß Sie lernen, diesen subtilen Unterschied wahrzunehmen.

Bei der Hodenatmung bewegt man die kalte Sexualenergie, das Ching Chi im Yin-Zustand nach seiner Erzeugung in den Hoden, aus dem Scrotum zum Kopf empor und schließlich wieder den Körper hinunter. Bei der Übung der Scrotum-Kompression zwingt man die in den Organen - also Herz, Lungen, Milz usw. - erzeugte Chi-Energie nach unten, damit sie sich mit dem in den Sexualorganen ruhenden kalten Ching Chi vermischt, um schließlich die so entstandene warme Energie emporzufuhren und kreisen zu lassen.

Bei der Übung der Kraftsperre erregen wir die Sexualorgane und verwandeln die im Samenleiter befindliche kalte Energie in heiße- Die Hitze wird durch die Bewegung von Abermillionen Samenzellen erzeugt. Diese Yang-Energie ist explosiver, läßt sich nur schwer kontrollieren und sucht stets den kürzesten Weg, uni in eine kühlere (yin) Umgebung zu kommen. Bei den meisten Männern stellt der Penis den Weg des geringsten Widerstands dar. Bei einem Tao Meister fuhrt der am leichtesten zugängliche Kanal dagegen in die höheren Körperzentren. Doch bedarf es einer Menge Erfahrung und Übung, um den Afterschließmuskel und die kleinen Muskeln um den Samenleitertrakt so gut zu kontrollieren, daß man damit den Strom der Sexualenergie in den Penis hinein umzukehren vermag, um ihn die Wirbelsäule emporzuleiten.

Die vier Stufen der Kraftsperre

1. Anfangsstufe: Benutzen Sie die Muskeln der Faust, des Kiefers, des Nackens, der Füße, des Perineums, der Gesäßbacken und des Unterleibs, um die sexuelle Spannung abzulenken und den Drang zur Ejakulation zu blockieren und um das heiße Ching Chi, das den Erregungszustand herbeigeführt hat, nach oben zu lenken.

2. Mittlere Stufe: Spannen Sie die Muskeln der Faust, des Kiefers und der Füße weniger an, arbeiten Sie dafür stärker mit dem Diaphragma pelvis, dem Schließmuskel, der Kreuzbein- und der Schädelpumpe, mit deren Hilfe Sie die Sexualenergie nach oben drängen.

3. Fortgeschrittene Stufe: Damm und Beckenboden werden in geringerem Umfang eingesetzt, dafür Kreuzbein- und Schädelpumpe stärker aktiviert. Auch die Vorstellungskraft wird verstärkt eingesetzt, um das Ching ins Scheitelzentrum zu leiten. Man konzentriert sich auf den Scheitelbereich und zieht dadurch die Energie aus dem unteren Zentrum ins höhere hinauf.

4. Fortgeschrittenste Stufe: Hier wird nur noch reine Vorstellungskraft eingesetzt. Muskelarbeit ist nicht mehr nötig. Die geistige Kraft beherrscht den Penis völlig und steuert ihn nach Belieben in die Erektion oder den Zustand der Schlaflheit und befiehlt der Ching-Energie, nach oben oder unten zu strömen.

Bei dieser Übung muß das Glied bis zu etwa 90 Prozent an die orgasmische Ejakulation herangeführt werden. Vermeiden Sie es, dabei zu weit zu gehen, bis es kein Zurück mehr gibt, sonst werden Sie längere Zeit kein Samen-Chi mehr haben, mit dem Sie arbeiten können. Je mehr Sie die Kraftsperre meistern, um so feiner können Sie sich an den Endpunkt vor der Ejakulation herantasten, bis Sie bei 98 oder 99 Prozent aufhören können. Reiben Sie die Eichel des Penis, bis er erigiert ist. Wenn Sie spüren, daß Sie kurz vor dem Orgasmus stehen, halten Sie inne und fuhren die Methode der Kraftsperre drei- bis neunmal durch, bis die Erektion wieder verschwindet. Damit haben Sie eine Runde hinter sich gebracht. Wiederholen Sie diesen Vorgang, also das Erregen des Glieds bis zur Erektion mit anschließender Kraftsperre, bis die Erektion nachläßt, pro Sitzung 3-, 9-, 18-oder sogar 36mal.

Übung macht auch hier den Meister. Wenn Sie Ihre Geschlechtsorgane durch diese Praktik erst einmal völlig unter Kontrolle gebracht haben, können Sie auch während des Liebesakts auf natürliche Weise die Kontrolle über sich behalten. In der Regel empfehle ich etwa 10000 Runden bis zur fortgeschrittenen Stufe. Manche Menschen werden natürlich sehr viel schneller vorankommen, vor allem dann, wenn sie ihren Geist durch Yoga, Meditation oder andere Disziplinen geschult haben. Wenn Sie nicht täglich Sport oder Gymnastik treiben, rate ich Ihnen dringend, wenigstens einige Aufwärm- und Dehn-übungen zu machen, bevor Sie die Kraftsperre praktizieren. Dadurch wird die Energie in Ihren Organen stimuliert. Sie: können Ihre inneren Chi-Energien besser wahrnehmen und schneller zur Kontrolle über Ihre Sexualenergie gelangen.

Abbildung 19
DIE ÜBUNG DER KRAFTSPERRE

Ching Chi wird daran gehindert, aus dem Penis zu entweichen, und so lange in den Scheitel emporgeleitet, bis die Erektion nachläßt.

Das stufenweise Üben der Kraftsperre

1. Die Sitzhaltung ist die gleiche wie bei der Hodenatmung - die Füße flach auf den Boden gestellt, mit einer weiten Hose oder unbekleidet unterhalb der Gürtellinie. Stimulieren Sie Ihr Glied, bis es erigiert. Konzentrieren Sie sich nun auf Ihre Geschlechtsorgane und auf die sich ausdehnende Energie in Glied und Hodensack.

2. Wenn Sie kurz vor dem Orgasmus stehen, atmen Sie tief durch die Nase ein. Gleichzeitig.bah[1] en Sie die Fäuste und krallen die Zehen in den Boden, so daß sich die Füße anfühlen wie Vakuumpumpen, die am Boden saugen. Gleichzeitig spannen Sie den Kiefer und die Schädelpumpe am Nacken und drücken die Zunge fest gegen den Gaumen. Atmen Sie noch ein weiteres Mal ein, und ziehen Sie den gesamten Genital-Analbereich nach oben, wobei Sie sich auf den Hui-Yin (Perineum, Damm), das Diaphragma urogenitale und vor allem das Glied konzentrieren. Ziehen Sie die Energie aus dem Glied ins Perineum, indem Sie so fest wie möglich die Muskeln zusammenziehen. Dann halten Sie die Luft an und zählen langsam bis 9, wobei alle Muskeln voll angespannt bleiben. Wenn Ihnen die Luft ausgeht, atmen Sie aus und losen sämtliche Muskeln des Körpers. Möglicherweise spüren Sie, wie Energie hoch- und niederschießt, vor allem im Sexualbereich.

Nach ein oder zwei Wochen beginnen Sie zu fühlen, wie die Muskelkontraktion Ihr Glied empor- und einzieht. Der After wird sich anfühlen, als sei er völlig fest. Wenn nicht ausdrücklich anders angegeben, wird nur durch die Nase geatmet. Beim Ausatmen soll sich der Körper ganz entspannen. Lassen Sie alle Spannung ausfließen.

Atmen Sie ein, spannen Sie die Muskeln und ziehen Sie mehrmals die Muskeln im Geschlechtsbereich nach oben, wobei Sie die Energie im Perineum halten. Dieses Halten der Energie im Damm ist von größter Wichtigkeit: Wenn Sie nämlich in Ihrer Aufmerksamkeit nachlassen, wird die heiße Energie in die Geschlechtsorgane zurückfließen oder gar aus dem Glied sickern, und Sie müssen noch einmal von vorne anfangen.

Führen Sie diese Übung mindestens eine Woche lang durch.

3. Bringen Sie den Perus zur Erektion. Ballen Sie die Fäuste, und spannen Sie Füße, Nacken und Kiefer beim Einatmen. Ziehen Sie den gesamten Geschlechtsbereich, vor allem das Diaphragma urogenitale, den After und das Glied nach oben, um die heiße Energie ins Perineum zu ziehen und durch weiteren Sog durch das Steißbein bis ins Kreuzbein hinaufzuführen. Spüren Sie, wie die Energie durch die Hiatus-Öffnung im Kreuzbein strömt.

Aktivieren Sie die Kreuzbeinpumpe, indem Sie die untere Rückenpartie nach außen biegen, damit die Wirbelsäule gerade wird. Das erleichtert dem Chi den Aufstieg. Halten Sie die Energie im Kreuzbein, und atmen Sie weiter ein, dabei die besagten Muskeln emporziehend, bis Sie spüren, wie die Erektion sich wieder beruhigt. Es kann vorkommen, daß Sie dazu 3-bis 9mal einatmen und die Muskeln immer stärker anspannen müssen. Wenn Sie die Gesäßmuskeln fest zusammendrücken, gelingt es Ihnen, das Ching leichter ins Kreuzbein treiben. Können Sie den Atem nicht länger halten, atmen Sie aus. Entspannen Sie sich, und lassen Sie Kreuzbein und Nacken in ihre normale Haltung zurückkehren. Das aktiviert gleichzeitig die beiden Pumpen.

Wenn Sie die Hodenatmung praktiziert haben oder schon den Kleinen Energiekreislauf beherrschen, wird Ihnen dies bei der Kraftsperre sehr weiterhelfen. Es wird dadurch viel leichter, das heiße Sexual-Ching ins Kreuzbein zu fuhren. Sonst läßt sich mit dieser Region etwas schwieriger arbeiten, weil die Chi-Energie des Samens dichter als andere Chi-Arten ist und erst in die Hohe gepumpt werden muß. Dazu ist die Kreuzbeinpumpe nötig. Manche Menschen empfinden einen ziehenden oder stechenden Schmerz, Kitzeln oder Prickeln, wenn die heiße Sexualenergie ins Kreuzbein eindringt. Das braucht Sie nicht aus der Fassung zu bringen. Haben Sie Schwierigkeiten, das Ching in das Steißbein zu bringen, sollten Sie diesen Bereich von Zeit zu Zeit sanft mit einem Seidentuch massieren.

4. Wenn Sie das Kreuzbein durchdrungen haben, verwenden Sie die nächste Woche darauf, die Energie zum 11. Brustwirbel (T-11) an der Wirbelsäule zu ziehen. Er liegt dem Solarplexus gegenüber. Wiederholen Sie die ganze Übung wie gehabt - das Glied erregen, die Muskeln anspannen, einatmen. Pumpen Sie die Energie hoch: ins Perineum, ins Kreuzbein und dann zum T-l l, wo Sie sie halten sollten, bis er sich voll anfühlt. Er ist erst richtig geöffnet, wenn Sie das Ching spüren. Setzen Sie auch wieder die Kreuzbeinpumpe ein, indem Sie das Hohlkreuz ausgleichen, damit das träge Ching leichter hochsteigen kann.

6. Der nächste Energiehaltepunkt ist der Pai Hui am Scheitel. Wiederholen Sie den nun schon geübten Vorgang der Selbsterregung und der Zurücknahme der Erektion durch das Emporziehen der Energie. Achten Sie darauf, das Kinn leicht einzuziehen und den Schädel zu pressen, damit die Schädelpumpe noch stärker aktiviert wird- Halten Sie den oberen Teil der Wirbelsäule gerade. Ziehen Sie die Energie so lange zum Scheitel hinauf, bis die Erektion nachläßt.

Wenn die Energie schließlich in Ihren Kopf eingedrungen ist, werden Sie deutlich ihre Wärme und ein Prickeln spüren. Dies wird meist als angenehm und erstaunlich erfrischend empfunden. Manche Übende berichten, daß sie danach klarer denken können und kreativer sind; es ist möglich, daß sie sich bereits ,auf einer Stufe befinden, auf der sie das Ching Chi instinktiv und automatisch in erweitertes Bewußtsein umwandeln können. Die Samenenergie wird später in den höheren, spirituellen Stufen des Tao Yoga in Ur-Chi, die reine Lebenskraft, verwandelt. Ein alternder Mensch hat schon so viel Hirnenergie verbraucht^ daß seine Säfte nach und nach eintrocknen und eine Höhlung im Schädel zurücklassen. Die Kraftsperre hüft, die Sexualenergie emporzuleiten und diese Höhlung wieder aufzufüllen. Sie wird nun nicht mehr im Scrotum gespeichert, sondern in den höheren Regionen des Körpers und des Geistes, die auf diese Weise sofort und unmittelbar Nutzen daraus ziehen können. Der Taoist sieht in der Sexualenergie eine schöpferische Energie, die in alle Teile unserer Vitalorgane, Drüsen und des Gehirns umgewandelt werden kann.

Die Übung der Kraftsperre schult den Geist, die Sexualenergie stufenweise ohne Muskelkontraktion in die höheren Energiezentren zu lenken.

Üben Sie wie bei der Scrotum-Kompression die Kraftsperre so lange, bis Sie die Sexualenergie mit einem einzigen Zug aus dem Glied in den Kopf hinaufleiten können. Auch hier werden Sie am Anfang nur stufenweise vorgehen können, doch mit der Zeit werden Sie spüren, wie sich die Rückenbahn (das Lenkergefäß der Akupunktur) weiter öffnet. Schließlich wird es Ihnen gelingen, Ihren Geist in Hoden und Scheitel zu verlagern und die Sexualenergie mit rein geistiger Kraft ins Gehirn emporzuziehen. Lassen Sie sich genügend Zeit, um die Sexualenergie richtig zu spüren. Überstürzen Sie nichts. Halten Sie die Pumpen in Gang, während Sie nach der Übung ein- und ausatmen. Zunehmend verwenden Sie mehr geistige als Muskelkraft für das Emporziehen. Lassen Sie sich von dem Fühlen der Energie leiten.

7. Wenn Sie spüren, daß die Energie das Gehirn ausgefüllt hat, konzentrieren Sie sich auf den Punkt zwischen den Augenbrauen, und bringen Sie die Energie durch Nase und Gaumen in die Zunge und von dort ins Halszentrum, Herzzentrum, zum Solarplexus und in den Nabel. Mit dem inneren Druck der Kraftsperre können Sie nun einen Kreislauf herstellen. Sie pressen die Energie mit der Einatmung im unteren Rumpf in die Wirbelsäule und führen Sie nach oben, gleichzeitig drücken Sie die Energie im oberen Teil des Körpers nach unten. Halten Sie die Muskelanspannung so lange wie möglich aufrecht. Dann atmen Sie aus und entspannen den ganzen Körper. Der natürliche Fluß des Chi geht weiter, in einem Kreis den Rükken empor und auf der Vorderseite wieder hinunter in den Nabel.

Lassen Sie die Sexualenergie unentwegt kreisen, bis die Erektion aufgehört hat. Am Anfang (vor allem, wenn Sie sexuell sehr erregt sind) werden Sie vielleicht 3 bis 9 Runden brauchen, um bis hierhin zu gelangen. Doch mit etwas Übung wird schließlich eine einzige Runde genügen.

8. Führen Sie morgens und abends je 36 Kontraktionen durch. Einmal mit der Technik vertraut, sind 36 Muskelanspannungen für einen normalen Mann keine übermäßige Anstrengung. Bei starker Erregung brauchen Sie die Übung weniger häufig zu wiederholen, weil jede Erektion länger braucht, bis sie nachläßt. Mit einem solch intensiven Training werden Sie nach ein bis zwei Monaten den richtigen Muskeltonus entwickelt haben, um den Samen erfolgreich zurückhalten zu können. Es spielt keine Rolle, wie schnell Sie vorankommen: Wichtig ist, daß Sie regelmäßig üben. Das absolute Minimum ist eine Runde pro Tag, damit Ihnen diese Technik zur Gewohnheit wird. Wenn Sie tagsüber vielleicht einer hübschen Frau begegnen oder ein entsprechendes Foto sehen, können Sie sofort die Kraftsperre durchführen und die Energie nach oben ziehen.

Die günstigste Zeit zum Üben liegt zwischen 23 und l Uhr und zwischen 11 und 13 Uhr. Während dieser Phasen löst sich die Welle der Yin-Energie mit dem Yang ab und umgekehrt. Die Sonne beginnt ihren Aufstieg gegen Mitternacht und fängt um* Mittag an, wieder unterzugehen. Zu diesen Zeiten fließt die Energie besonders stark. Wenn Sie dann nicht üben können, sollte Sie das jedoch nicht entmutigen. Regelmäßiges tägliches Üben wird Sie auf jeden Fall voranbringen.

9. Abschließend sei noch eine Feinheit erwähnt: Die untere Kontraktion findet weder im Magen- noch im oberen Unterleibsbereich statt, sondern man konzentriert sich auf die unterste Rumpfpartie - den Penis, das Perineum und das Diaphragma urogenitale. Unser Ziel ist es, diese Muskeln so zu trainieren, bis sie den Samenfluß völlig einzudämmen vermögen. Dann kehren wir ihn um und durchfluten den Körper mit seiner erneuernden, verjüngenden Energie.

Wenn wir aus der oberen und unteren Rumpfpartie Energie in die Körpermitte leiten, wird sie zum Nabel strömen. Da die Samenenergie (ähnlich wie das Blut) dazu neigt, der Bahn des Chi zu folgen, sammeln sich im Nabelzentrum tatsächlich die Samensäfte und werden von dort durch die Wirbelsäule wieder in den oberen Körperbereich emporgeschickt. Also spannen Sie das Diaphragma urogenitale an, als wollten Sie ihre mit Urin gefüllte Blase an der Entleerung hindern. Versperren Sie den Durchgang so kräftig, daß kein innerer Drang ihn plötzlich zu sprengen und die Muskelversiegelung zu durchstoßen vermag..

Sicherheitsmaßnahmen für Hodenatmung, Scrotum-Kompression und Kraftsperre

1. Liegen Sie bei diesen Übungen niemals flach auf dem Rücken, sonst könnte sich die Energie im Brustbereich stauen. Das kann zu starker Gereiztheit und unnötigem Herzdruck fuhren. ;

2. Liegen Sie bei diesen Übungen niemals auf der linken Seite, denn auch dadurch wird das Herz beengt und erhält zuviel Energie.

3. Beim Liegen sollten sich auch keine Gegenstände unter Ihrem Körper befinden. Dadurch wird die Energiebahn geändert und es kann zu Rückenschmerzen kommen.

Haben Sie mit den unter Punkt l bis 3 erwähnten Problemen zu tun, können Sie überschüssige Energie gefahrlos aus dem Körper lassen, indem Sie sich auf die Punkte Ming-Men und Yung-Chuan konzentrieren. Spätestens nach einer Woche werden alle Schmerzen und unangenehmen Begleiterscheinungen verschwunden sein.

4. Üben Sie stets mit leerem Magen. Ist das nicht möglich, sollten Sie frühestens eine Stunde nach dem Essen mit den Übungen beginnen.

5. Tragen Sie entweder bequeme Kleidung, oder hüllen Sie sich in eine leichte Decke. Bei richtigem Üben werden Sie ins Schwitzen geraten und könnten sich erkälten, wenn Sie nicht richtig bedeckt sind. Wechseln Sie auch hinterher die Kleidung, damit Sie nicht den feuchtgewordenen Stoff tragen müssen. Im Raum sollte frische Luft sein, aber vermeiden Sie Durchzug.

Wind kann die Chi-Kraft fortwehen, was Ihre Energie auch schnell auskühlen würde.

6. Nach fünf Scrotum-Kompressionen sollte sich Schweiß auf Ihrer Stirn sammeln. Mit fortschreitender Übung sollte dies bereits nach drei Kompressionen einsetzen. Reiben Sie diesen Schweiß in die Haut ein: Er enthält besondere Stoffe und Eigenschaften, die man dem Körper wieder zuführen sollte.

7. Atmen Sie nie durch den Mund. Die Nasenatmung erleichtert das Kontrollieren des Luftstroms, sie ladt die Luft mit Energie auf und belebt das Gehirn.

8. Seien Sie nicht entmutigt, wenn Sie in den ersten Tagen des Übens wenig oder nichts spüren. Verschiedenartige Menschen bedürfen auch unterschiedlicher Zeitspannen, bis die heiße Energie aus den Hoden fließt.

9. Sie müssen sich intensiv konzentrieren können. Zügeln Sie Ihren Geist, damit er nicht rastlos umherwandert. Lassen Sie die Gedanken und Bilder verschwinden. Folgen Sie ihnen nicht. Leeren Sie das Gefäß des Geistes von allen Gedanken, dann wird das so entstehende Vakuum von einer kraftvollen Energie aufgefüllt werden. Wenn Sie beharrlich daran arbeiten, wird Ihre Konzentrationskraft erheblich zunehmen. Lernen Sie auch die Meditation des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs, und fuhren Sie diese unmittelbar nach der Übung der Kraftsperre durch.

10. Während des Übens sollten Sie die Augen schließen und dem Weg der Energie folgen. Der Geist sollte keinen umherirrenden Gedanken oder Phantasien nachhängen, sondern strikt beim Energiefluß bleiben. Das hört sich schwieriger an, als es ist. Sie werden selbst staunen, wie schnell Sie sich für Ihre Energie sensibilisieren können. Haben Sie diese Energien erst einmal in nrem Inneren erlebt, werden Sie genau wissen, was gemeint ist. Der natürliche Fluß der Energie lenkt Ihren Geist, so wie Ihr Geist seinerseits die Energie lenkt.

11. Wer unter Verstopfung leidet, sollte diese Übungen am Morgen durchführen, der Zeit der natürlichen Darmentleerung. Es wird bei der Beseitigung dieses Problems helfen. •

12. Geschlechtskrankheiten müssen völlig ausgeheilt sein, bevor man mit diesen Übungen beginnt. Wenn so große Mengen an Blut und Energie in den Schambereich geleitet werden, würden sich die Schmerzen erheblich verschlimmern. ;

13. Wenn diese Übungen Nutzen bringen sollen, dürfen Sie 30 Tage lang nicht ejakulieren. Nach jedem ejakulatorischen Orgasmus muß der Körper von neuem beginnen, genügend Chi-Druck in den Hoden aufzubauen. Haben Sie noch nicht gelernt, den Samen beim Liebesakt einzubehalten, sollten Sie 30 Tage lang enthaltsam leben. Nur so können Sie die volle Wirkung dieser Methode erfahren.

Natürlich habe ich nichts gegen Ihr Verlangen nach Sex. Ich weise lediglich darauf hin, daß Ihr Fortschritt gebremst wird, wenn Sie ejakulieren. Fangen Sie jetzt schon an, die Freude des Ejakulierens zugunsten größerer zukünftiger Freuden zu opfern. Haben Sie die Scrotum-Übungen gemeistert, werden Sie auch viel schneller den Ejakulationsdrang beim Liebesakt bemeistern können. Dies ist das Sexual-Kung Fu.

Reinigende NebenefFekte

1. Ich habe die Erfahrung gemacht, daß viele Schüler mit dieser Methode schon sehr bald ihre Eingeweide ungewohnt mühelos bewegen können.

2. Manche werden eine Zeitlang ungewöhnlich viel Gase abgeben und zwei- bis dreimal täglich Stuhl entleeren. Das zeigt, wie der Körper seine neuen Kraftvorräte benutzt, sich auf natürliche Weise gründlich zu reinigen. Nach ein bis zwei Monaten werden diese Symptome verschwinden.

3. Der reinigenden Entgiftung folgt regelmäßiger Stuhlgang und das intensive Gefühl körperlicher Reinheit und Kräftigung. Der Speichel wird dünnflüssiger und angenehmer im Geschmack. Die Ausscheidung ist durch den verstärkten Strom der Vitalenergie durch die Eingeweide reguliert und verbessert worden. Möglicherweise kommt es zu vermehrtem Aufstoßen, was eine gesunde Form der Ausatmung von Unreinheiten und schädlichen Gasen darstellt. Auch dies wird nach einer Weile nachlassen, und Ihr ganzer Körper wird sich erfrischt und erneuert fühlen.

4. Die Kraftsperre ist eine ausgezeichnete Übung gegen Hämorrhoiden. Hämorrhoiden entstehen bei hauptsächlich sitzender Lebensweise, durch Ansammlung von Giftstoffen im Körper, durch schwerkraftbedingten Blutstau, durch angestrengte Kotentleerung und durch den Mangel an Chi-Energie im Hui-Yin. Bereits vorhandene Hämorrhoiden können durch das Üben der Kraftsperre zwei bis vier Wochen lang vermehrt bluten. Sind die Blutungen nicht übermäßig stark, können Sie mit halber Kraft weiterüben. Die Ursachen der Hämorrhoiden werden allmählich behoben; sie können die Heilung mit entsprechenden Arzneien unterstützen. Ackerschachtelhalm (Equise-tum Arvensis) ist ein ausgezeichnetes Mittel gegen Hämorrhoiden, er wird als Tee und für Sitzbäder verwandt. Bei schweren Hämorrhoidalleiden sollte jedoch ein Arzt befragt werden, bevor man zu üben beginnt.

Zusammenfassung: Hodenatmung

1. Wählen Sie die Körperstellung, die Ihnen am meisten zusagt. Die stehende Haltung ist für diese Übung besonders geeignet. Entspannen Sie den gesamten Körper, und richten Sie Ihre Konzentration auf die Hoden.

2. Lassen Sie die Hoden beim Einatmen mental im Scrotum aufsteigen und beim Ausatmen wieder sinken. Üben Sie zwischen 36 und 108 Atemzüge lang.

3. Seien Sie entspannt. Benutzen Sie keine Muskelkraft, nur mentale Kraft. Behalten Sie die Zunge am Gaumen, und spüren Sie, wie die kühle Yin-Energie der Sexualsäfte Ihre Wirbelsäule emporsteigt.

Zusammenfassung: Scrotum-Kompression

1. Wählen Sie die Körperstellung, die Ihnen am meisten zusagt.

2. Atmen Sie sehr langsam durch die Nase ein, und konzentrieren Sie sich auf Rachen und Kehle. Drücken Sie die Luft im Hals-Rachen-Raum zusammen, bis Sie nicht weiter einatmen können.

3. Stellen Sie sich die Luft als Ballon vor, und schlucken Sie ihn kraftvoll in den Solarplexus hinunter. Halten Sie ihn dort.

4. Drücken Sie den Luftball zum Nabel hinab.

5. Vom Nabel aus drücken Sie ihn weiter nach unten in den Beckenbereich hinein.

6. Pressen Sie den Ballon kräftig und kontinuierlich ins Scro-tum, bis Sie die Luft nicht länger anhalten können. Schlucken Sie dann zunächst den im Mund angesammelten Speichel hinunter.

7. Ruhen Sie sich aus, indem Sie schnelle, flache Atemzüge durch die Nase machen.

8. Entspannen Sie sich 4urch mehrmaliges Hüftkreisen.

9. Wiederholen Sie den ganzen Vorgang am Anfang 5mal, und steigern Sie sich langsam bis auf 36mal pro Sitzung.

10. Lassen Sie die Zunge stets am Gaumen.

Die Grundlagen der Alchemie des Sexus

Wenngleich sie sehr einfach erscheinen mögen, stellen die in diesem Kapitel beschriebenen Übungen hochentwickelte Techniken zur Erhöhung der Lebenskraft dar. Sie bilden den Kern der taoistischen Atemtechnik. Sie wirken wie scharfe Schwertklingen, die man mit Vorsicht handhaben muß, damit sie ihren Zweck erfüllen, ohne einem zu schaden. Wenn Sie die Anweisungen sorgfältig befolgen, werden keine unangenehmen Begleiterscheinungen auftreten. Studieren Sie die Methoden sehr genau, bis Sie jede Zeile verstanden haben. Dann üben Sie, bis Sie den gewünschten Erfolg erlangen.

Die hier behandelten Atemübungen stellen eine Verschmelzung der Lehren von vier verschiedenen Meistern dar. Jeder dieser Meister hielt seine eigene Methode für ein alle anderen überragendes Geheimnis und erzielte auch mit seiner einzigen Technik allein beachtliche Erfolge.

Von nichts kommt nichts: Sie müssen schon Zeit und Übung investieren, wenn Sie die Früchte genießen wollen. Ein Gramm Praxis ist mehr wert als eine Tonne Theorie. Das heutige Leben laßt uns in der Regel kaum Zeit für mehr als Geldverdienen und -ausgeben. Sie müssen dazu bereit sein, einen Teil Ihrer Zeit zu opfern, um voranzukommen. Die Übungen sollten zu einem festen Bestandteil Ihres Alltags werden. Wenn Sie nur ab und zu üben, aber immerhin öfter als gar nicht, werden Sie zwar auch einigen Fortschritt machen; doch wenn Sie so'regelmäßig üben, wie Sie auch morgens aus dem Bett springen, wird Ihr Fortschritt rasch sein. Das Ching CM, welches Sie in Ihrem Nabel sammeln, wird sich in Ihrem Oberkörper zu bilden anfangen.

Ein kleines Stück unterhalb des Nabels befindet sich das untere Tan Tien-Zentrum, jenes untere Energiefeld des Körpers, in dem die Taoisten Chi speichern, bevor sie es wieder nach oben leiten und verfeinern. Das Chi bewegt sich zwischen dem unteren, dem mittleren und dem oberen Tan-Tien in Kreisen. Jedesmal, wenn es spiralförmig durch eines dieser Zentren wirbelt, wird es verfeinert und bekommt eine höhere Energiequalität.

Der Vorgang der Höherentwicklung der Energien gleicht der Gewinnung von reinem Honig: Man nimmt den rohen Honig, der noch mit Wachsresten, Schmutz und toten Bienen vermengt ist, um ihn in mehreren Schritten zum allersüßesten Nektar zu raffinieren. Die Taoisten behandeln das Sperma wie rohen Honig. Durch die Kraftsperre verhindert man das Heraussickern und Entweichen des Honigs aus einem alten Eimer und lagert ihn statt dessen in einem intakten neuen Krug, der gut versiegelt ist, ein. Dieser Krug wurde in Nabelhöhe auf Zweidrittel der Strecke bis zur Wirbelsäule deponiert; die alten Meister nannten ihn den «Tiegel». In diesem Tiegel vermischten und brauten sie die verschiedenen Chi-Energien des Körpers zusammen, in einem Prozeß, den sie «Alchemie» nannten - dem Vorläufer der heutigen Chemie.

Das geheime alchemische Agens, mit dem sie arbeiteten, war nichts anderes als normale Sexualessenz, Ihr Ching also. Ohne das Ching kann auf keiner der höheren Stufen der Alchemie erfolgreich gearbeitet werden. Diese einfachen Übungen des Sexual-Kung Fu - die Hodenatmung, die Scrotum-Kompres-sion und die Kraftsperre* - mögen uns als simpel und banal erscheinen, doch sie können unsere spirituelle Entwicklung entscheidend beeinflussen. Es ist unbedingt erforderlich, sie zu meistern, bevor Sie dazu übergehen können, eine Frau zu lieben, in voller Beherrschung Ihrer sexuellen und spirituellen Kräfte. Ihre Sexualessenz kann Ihr Lebenselixier und Ihr Jungbrunnen werden. Es lohnt sich, die Anstrengung zu machen, um sie bewahren zu können.

* Frauen können ebenso diese Übungen durchführen. Sie benutzen als Energiequelle die Eierstöcke (Ovarien).

7. KAPITEL

Die Polarität als Schlüssel zur Transformation der Sexualenergie

«Der sexuelle Austausch läßt sich mit Wasser und Feuer vergleichen. Wasser und Feuer können einen Menschen töten oder ihm helfen, je nachdem, wie sie eingesetzt werden.»

Pao, der schlichte Meister

Als Taoist erfährt man das Leben als harmonisches Fließen der Lebensenergie. Der taoistischen Überlieferung zufolge verläuft dieser Strom im Menschen vom «Chi» zum «Ching» zum «Shien» - also vom Atem zur Sexualessenz zum Geist. Die Energie strömt sowohl sichtbar als auch unsichtbar in einem niemals endenden Kreislauf - innerhalb des Körpers, zwischen dem Menschen und der Welt und zwischen Himmel und Erde, wobei sich der Mensch in der Mitte befindet. Sie ist das Blut, das zwischen Herz und Niere strömt, die Liebe und der Haß zwischen Mann und Frau, die Unwetter und der Sonnenschein, die zwischen Firmament und Erdoberfläche kreisen.

Viele Menschen ertrinken in diesem Strom des Lebens - sie werden von ihm überwältigt. Manche «erwischen» nicht genug von diesem Strom, fühlen sich betrogen und werden verbittert. Andere irren ziel- und sinnlos umher, vom Leben entfremdet und unwissend, daß es so etwas wie einen Energiestrom überhaupt gibt. Wie immer man auch zum Leben stehen mag - fast jeder Mensch versucht früher oder später, sich in einer Liebesbeziehung zu verankern, in ihr Wurzeln zu schlagen. Das gehört zum Wesen des Ching Chi-Stroms zwischen Mann und Frau. Soviel ist offensichtlich. Was ebenso offensichtlich ist, aber meist nicht gesehen wird, das ist die Polarität zwischen dem Männlichen und Weiblichen und der subtile Kraftstrom zwischen ihren magnetischen Polen.

Dieser polare Energieaustausch wird übersehen, weil er für das physische Auge unsichtbar bleibt und auf derart subtile Weise wirkt, daß ein unentwickeltes Gemüt ihn nicht wahrzunehmen vermag. Aus diesem Grund studierten die Taoisten eingehend die Funktionen und Wirkungsweisen von Chi, Ching Chi und Shien. Diese Energien, die als die «drei Kostbarkeiten des Lebens» bezeichnet werden, stellen die subtile, feinstoffliche Sprache des Lebens dar.

Es bedarf jahrelanger Übung, Erfahrung und Verfeinerung, bis man sich dieser Sprache richtig bedienen kann. Zunächst kommt es einem vor, als müsse man eine gänzlich fremde, Sprache erlernen. Doch schon nach wenigen Lektionen merkt man, daß man diese Sprache eigentlich von Geburt an beherrscht und die subtile Grammatik der Chi-Energie einfach vergessen hat, während man von Eltern und Lehrern in verstandesbetonteren Fächern unterwiesen wurde.

Der Energiefluß zwischen den gegensätzlichen Polen von männlich und weiblich ist der Schlüssel zur Harmonisierung des eigenen Lebensstroms. Das ist das einfachste und grundlegendste Geheimnis nicht nur der taoistischen, sondern aller esoteri-; sehen Überlieferungen. Es ist auch der Schlüssel zur geheimen taoistischen Liebeslehre. Es ist so einfach, weil es auf dem Grundgesetz des Universums beruht: Positive und negative Kräfte ziehen sich gegenseitig an und verbinden sich miteinander. Das gilt für zwei Magneten, die aneinander haften, ebenso wie für die Protonen und Elektronen, die sich im Tanz subatomarer Teilchen zum Atom verbinden. Die Taoisten nennen diese Polarität Yin und Yang, Begriffe, die heutzutage zwar populär geworden sind, im Hinblick auf ihre sexuelle Funktion jedoch noch nicht verstanden werden.

Die Taoisten veranschaulichen es häufig mit dem Bild vom Kochen: Das Yang ist das Feuer, und das Yin stellt das Wasser dar. Der Mann ist Feuer, die Frau ist Wasser. Wenn der Mann die Frau liebt, kocht er ihr Wasser (im Schoß) mit seinem Feuer (Penis). Die Frau ist sexuell fast immer der stärkere Teil, weil ihr Wasser das Feuer des Mannes loschen kann- dann verliert seine Erektion an Feurigkeit. Yin, das Weiche, Nachgiebige, besiegt stets das Yang, das Harte. Auf gleiche Weise triumphiert das Wasser auch über den harten Fels. Flüsse sind Yin oder weiblich, und ein Strom kann im Laufe der Zeit einen riesigen Bergdurchschneiden und den Grand Canyon eineinhalb Kilometer tief aushöhlen.

Yin und Yang: Der Krieg der Geschlechter

Der Kampf zwischen Yin und Yang scheint ewig zu währen wie der Kampf der Geschlechter, der auch niemals ein Ende findet. Tatsächlich verwenden die taoistischen Weisen die Metapher vom Kampf oder Krieg, um den Liebesakt zu erläutern. Für manche Menschen stellt die Liebe einen leidenschaftlichen Kampf um Überlegenheit und Unterwerfung des anderen dar; dem Taoisten war und ist sie eher ein legitimes Spiel der Gegensätze. Im Idealfall sollte man mit spielerischem Geist in den Kampf der Geschlechter ziehen: Man will die Geliebte nicht besitzen, sondern hofft, ihrer Anmut und ihrer empfänglichen Energie mit genau ergänzendem männlichem Können und männlicher Kraft zu begegnen.

Leider scheinen heutzutage nur wenige Männer den Liebesakt mit einem solchen Taktgefühl anzugehen; die meisten werden vielmehr binnen weniger Minuten von der Frau hoffnungslos geschlagen. Dieses Versagen beruht auf dem taktischen Ungeschick, mit dem beide mit den männlichen Geschlechtsorganen und der Sexualenergie umgehen. Die Gesetze der Liebesstrategie sind gründlich mißverstanden worden, so daß der Mythos entstehen konnte, daß der Durchschnittsmann eine leidenschaftliche Frau niemals wirklich befriedigen könne.

In Wirklichkeit kann dieser Durchschnitts mann seine Partnenn mit absoluter Gewißheit befriedigen, wenn er nämlich gelernt hat, mit seinen Kräften diszipliniert umzugehen. Ohne besondere Schulung neigt er dazu anzugreifen. Schließlich ist er im Besitz der Angriffswaffe. Die Frau neigt dagegen zur Verteidigung. Sie schützt sich, ohne sich zu verausgaben. Wenn der Mann wie wild angreift und seinen Samen erschöpft, bricht er zusammen. Und die Frau wird vielleicht immer noch begierig darauf sein, weiterzumachen, selbst wenn sie es aus Nettigkeit leugnet und ihren Gegner «schont».

Betrachten wir noch einmal die «Kriegsmetapher» der Chinesen: Der Schild und das Kurzschwert der Frau sind ihre Vagina und die Klitoris. Der Mann ist dagegen nur mit einem langen Speer bewaffnet, dem Penis. Greift er zu stürmisch mit seiner Liebeswaffe an, so wehrt die Frau seine Stöße mühelos ab und versetzt ihm den Todesstoß, sobald er seinen Samen erschöpft. Hält der Mann sich jedoch außerhalb der Reichweite der weibli^ chen Waffen, wird sie den Schild aus Erschöpfung sinken lassen. Dann wird der Wettkampf zu Ende sein, bevor der Mann sein Vehikel gesteigerter Vitalität verloren hat.

Es geht vor allem um eins: Der Mann muß aufhören, seine Sexualenergien zu vergeuden. Sobald der Samenverlust aufhört, ist die Frau ihm auch nicht mehr überlegen. Statt dessen trifft sie in ihm auf einen gleichwertigen Gegner und erleidet keine Enttäuschung mehr. Der Mann dagegen braucht sich nicht mehr zu verausgaben und dann gedemütigt zurückzuziehen. In ihm wird das Gefühl bleiben, auf einen starken, guten Gegner getroffen zu sein. Auf die neue Weise kann die Frau die Grenzen ihrer erotischen Fähigkeit erreichen und ist bereit, wirklich Frieden mit ihrem Gegner zu schließen.

Aus diesem Grund raten die Weisen, zuerst die taktischen Waffen einzusetzen, die strategischen aber in der Reserve zu halten. Mit anderen Worten: Benutzen Sie zuerst Finger, Zunge und andere Körperteile, bevor Sie den Penis ins Gefecht fuhren. Durch einen zärtlichen und geschickten Gebrauch Ihrer anderen Glieder beim Vorspiel können Sie Ihre Partnerin in einen Zustand höchster Aufnahmebereitschaft versetzen, und das ist der erste Schritt auf dem Weg zur Gleichrangigkeit gegenüber einem an sich überlegenen Gegner.

Bei einem solchen Vorspiel werden sich die Brüste der Frau heben, ihre Atmung geht heftiger, und es kommt zu erhöhter Drüsensekretion. Sie sollten abwarten, bis die Schamlippen feucht geworden sind, bevor Sie Ihre Hauptwaffe einsetzen. Lassen Sie Ihrer Geliebten Zeit, bis sie sich voll im Zustand der Liebesempfänglichkeit befindet, bevor Sie schließlich in sie eindringen.

Der Kampf zwischen Mann und Frau ist beendet, wenn beide erkennen, daß keiner «gewinnen» kann, indem er nachgibt oder die Vorherrschaft an sich reißt. In diesem Augenblick erlangen beide die Freiheit, sich hinzugeben und ihre tiefsten Gefühle der Liebe zueinander auszutauschen - denn ihre Verwundbarkeiten haben sich gegenseitig aufgehoben, und die Furcht vor dem Verlieren ist neutralisiert worden.

Der höhere Orgasmus: Das subtile Gleichgewicht zwischen polaren Energien

Wie erlangt man diesen Punkt der Zärtlichkeit, da beide Liebende einander freudevoll geben und voneinander Leben empfangen? Auf dem Papier liest sich so etwas wunderbar, doch was geschieht mit all den Spannungen, die der Arbeitstag oder eine Auseinandersetzung mit der Ehefrau über die Frage, ob sie wieder arbeiten gehen soll oder nicht, mit sich gebfacht haben? Wie hält man die Politik des Alltags aus dem Schlafzimmer fern? Dieses Kapitel bietet Ihnen praktische Methoden, sich der körperlichen Liebe mit dem Ziel zu nähern, den Strom der Yin- und der Yang-Kraft ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Als erstes müssen Sie verstehen, daß in dieser Sexualpraktik das Prinzip der Polarität dominiert.

Erkennen Sie, daß die Energien von Yin und Yang keine getrennten Kräfte sind: Sie stellen ein und dieselbe Energie dar, nur mit unterschiedlicher Polung. Keine von beiden existiert jemals ohne die andere, beide befinden sich stets in einer fließenden Bewegung, wie ein Pendel, das hin und her schwingt; sie werden mal kalt, mal heiß, und wenn sie die vollkommene Mitteltemperatur erreicht haben, kommen sie zum Stillstand. Man könnte auch ein anderes Bild wählen und Mann und Frau als die zwei Seiten einer Münze betrachten. Während des Liebesaktes dreht sich die Münze mit großer Geschwindigkeit, wird zu einer Kugel und verschmilzt beide Seiten miteinander zu einer einzigen.

Auf diese Weise können Mann und Frau «eins» werden: Sie erkennen, daß der Strom der Sexualenergie unentwegt zwischen ihnen fließt und ihnen beiden gehört. Jeder der Liebenden befindet sich am anderen Ende des polaren Stroms. Erreicht der Austausch des Ching Chi eine bestimmte Intensität und ein gewisses Gleichgewicht, beginnen die Körper der beiden Liebenden zu vibrieren und zu pulsieren, als stünden sie unter Strom. Sie verlieren das Gefühl für ihre feststofTQichen Körper. Mit einem Mal ist jeder der beiden eine Säule aus vibrierender Energie, die durch das Energiefeld des Liebespartners in einem makellosen Gleichgewicht gehalten wird. Dies ist ein totaler Orgasmus von Körper und Seele. Das kämpfende Ego schrumpft zu seiner wahren Größe zusammen, zu einem winzigen Sandkorn, und stimmt zögernd in den Chor ein, im Ozean des feinstofflichen Universums, der das «ich» in rhythmischen Wellenbewegungen überflutet. ;

Viele Männer haben eine gewisse Ahnung von diesem Zustand, aber nur wenige können diese Erfahrung stabilisieren, weil sie die Energie aus ihrer Hälfte des polaren Felds entladen, indem sie ejakulieren. Doch das ist nicht der wahre Orgasmus; es ist mehr ein Fortspülen von Unbehagen, das erlösende «Juk-ken» übererregter Energie, die keinen anderen Ausweg als den ins Freie findet.

Der wahre Orgasmus tritt ein, wenn Mann und Frau gemeinsam weiterpulsieren. Dann vollendet ihre Sexualenergie einen vollen Kreislauf zwischen ihren beiden magnetischen Polen und läßt sie erfüllter und aufgeladener zurück als vorher. Dieser Kreis ist das Tao, die schwarzweißen Tränensymbole von Yin und Yang, die in vollkommener Harmonie ineinanderfließen.

Der Strom der Sexualenergie allein kann diesen Kreis nicht vollenden, dazu bedarf es auch der Liebe. Der Geist muß an der Sexualität mit voller Aufmerksamkeit teilhaben. Es genügt nicht, wenn der Mann sein Glied einfach nur in die Scheide einer Frau einfuhrt, ohne sie mit dem Herzen zu lieben. Das ist so, als würde man zwei Hufeisenmagnete eng aneinander halten, sie sich aber nur mit jeweils einem Pol berühren lassen: Der andere Pol will ebenfalls angeschlossen sein, damit die magnetische Anziehung vervollständigt wird. Erst wenn sowohl die positiven als auch die negativen Pole von Mann und Frau verbunden sind, läßt sich ein kraftvoller und stabiler Energiestrom herstellen. Deshalb macht Sex ohne Liebe auch unglücklich: Sie verbinden nur eine Hälfte von sich mit der Frau, noch dazu die niedere. Der Chi-Huß im Kreislauf des Tao wird unterbrochen. Sie können soviel Sex haben, wie Sie wollen - ohne diesen totalen Fluß zwischen Yin und Yang wird Ihr tiefsitzendes Bedürfnis nach Ganzheit niemals befriedigt werden können.

Der ejakulatorische Orgasmus, an dem die meisten Männer so sehr hängen, beschränkt ihre Lebenskraft lediglich auf die Genitalien. Während des Sexualaktes birst der Penis fast vor Leben, weil er zu klein ist, um die sich ausdehnende Sexualkraft völlig aufnehmen zu können. Der Penis ist nicht dazu gedacht, Ihre Lebenskraft zu halten, noch kann der Penis Ihr Gehirn oder Ihr zentrales Nervensystem sein. Die wirkliche Funktion des Perus besteht darin, das Leben in den Körper und aus ihm hinaus zu leiten. Die Geschlechtsorgane sind nichts anderes als Tore, durch welche das Leben eintritt und wieder nach außen gelangt.

Werden die oberen Pole - Mund und Herz - von Mann und Frau ebenso miteinander verbunden wie die Genitalien, kann aus dem Magneten ein elektromagnetischer Dynamo werden. Dann vermag das Chi das Ching Chi irn unteren Körperbereich zu speisen und sich mit ihm zu verbinden, um in der oberen Körperhälfte in Geist transformiert zu werden. Wenn Mann und Frau ihr eigenes Chi verfeinern und nach oben leiten, um es durch Meditation und Liebe zu einer wirklich hohen Stufe weiterzuentwickeln, können sie eine Polarität erzeugen, die einen Supermagneten entstehen läßt und noch viel höhere, feinere geistige Energien durch ihren Körper strömen läßt. Solche Erfahrungen sprengen die Fesseln individuellen Vergnügens und Empfindens und fuhren über die reine Befriedigung des persönlichen Ego hinaus, um beide Partner in einen völlig andersartigen Seinszustand zu geleiten.

Vielleicht haben Sie in Ihrer Bekanntschaft ein strahlend glückliches Paar, das sich innig liebt. Es kennt keine esoterischen Liebespraktiken; der Mann ejakuliert beim Liebesakt, beide haben nach Belieben ihre Orgasmen. In diesem Fall fragen Sie sich zu Recht, warum sich mit all diesen komplizierten und zeitraubenden Techniken zur Transformation der Sexualenergie abplagen? Warum sollten Sie nicht auch Ihre Frau weiterheben wie bisher und der Natur freien Lauf lassen? Weshalb sollten Sie ausgerechnet in jenen Bereich der Freudenerfahrung eingreifen, der doch wohl als erster von aller «Schulung» und Bevormundung frei bleiben sollte?

Die einfachste Antwort lautet: Der Taoist hilft der Natur, ihren Lauf im Leben der Menschen zu nehmen. Er versucht nicht, die Grundprozesse der Natur zu verändern. Das glückliche, strahlende Paar ihrer Bekanntschaft könnte doppelt so glücklich und gesund sein und 10 oder 20 Jahre länger leben, wenn es sein Ching Chi bewahren und die Transformation der Sexualenergie üben würde. Vielleicht hängt das Glück dieser beiden von günstigen äußeren Umständen ab, von einer guten Arbeitsstellung, Beschäftigung mit den Kindern usw. Werden die beiden auch im Alter noch so strahlend sein? Können sie zu höheren, subtileren Stufen vordringen? Die taoistische Liebespraktik hilft den Menschen, ihre natürliche Entwicklung zu beschleunigen, zu intensivieren und zu stabilisieren. Der Tiefe und Intensität ihrer Gesundheit und Liebe sind keine Grenzen gesetzt. Auf jeder höheren Stufe begegnet man wieder neuen spirituellen Herausforderungen. Die Harmonie der Polarität fuhrt über die Pole von Mann und Frau hinaus, und schließlich' wird man sich des Spiels der Gegensätze zwischen Himmel und Erde bewußt.

Die Taoisten wissen, daß diese hohe Stufe der Harmonie eine greifbare Erfahrung ist, die der Mensch immer erleben kann. Sie nennen sie die «Unsterblichkeit». Sie bereiten sich darauf vor, indem sie ihre Sexualenergie bewahren und ihren Geist in harmonischen Einklang mit ihrem Liebespartner bringen. Auf diese Weise wird der Liebesakt zu einem Weg, der näher zu Gott fuhrt, zu einem Akt der Verehrung und Anbetung im Tempel des Körpers und der Seele des Liebespartners.

Der Schlüssel zum höheren Orgasmus besteht darin, die subtilen polaren Energien auf der physischen, emotionalen, mentalen und geistig-spirituellen Ebene ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Yin und Yang sind stets eine einzige Energie mit unterschiedlicher Ladung an jedem Pol.

Das sanfte Vorbereiten der Yin-Essenz

Als Mann haben Sie dafür zu sorgen, daß die Organe Ihrer Gehebten im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes «vorgewärmt» werden. Nach der taoistischen Methode harmonisiert das ihre Yin-Essenz und erhöht ihre Empfänglichkeit für den Liebesakt. Ihre inneren Organe, Nieren, Leber, Lungen, Milz, Bauchspeicheldrüse, produzieren und verfeinern das für das Lieben benötigte Chi. Sind diese geschwächt oder krank, wird die Melodie Ihres Liebens einen Mißklang erzeugen oder als zu schwer empfunden, so gut Sie selbst sich auch dabei fühlen mögen. Wollen Sie die Musik der Himmelssphären hören, müssen Sie lernen, die Gefühle und Empfindungen Ihrer Partnerin mit den Ihren in Einklang zu bringen. Meistens wird sie länger brauchen als der Mann, bis ihre Organe warm geworden sind und sich eingestellt haben.

Betrachten wir noch einmal das chinesische Bild von der Frau, als Wasser und dem Mann als Feuer: Ein Mann kann sein Feuer zwar schnell entfachen, doch wenn er sein Holz zu schnell aufbraucht, reicht die Zeit nicht mehr für das Wasser im Topf, zum Kochen zu gelangen, denn Wasser erhitzt sich langsamer als Feuer. Deshalb sollte der Mann sparsam mit seinem Feuerholz umgehen, während er gleichzeitig das Wasser der Frau erhitzt. Befolgen Sie die Grundregel aller Kochkunst: Geben Sie Ihre Karotten und Erbsen (Penis und Hoden) nicht in den Topf, bevor das Wasser kocht. Viele Männer wissen das nicht, weil sie i auch nichts vom Kochen verstehen: Wirft man Karotten und ‘ Erbsen in kaltes Wasser, nehmen sie die Kochhitze auf, so daß das Wasser viel länger zum Kochen braucht. Außerdem gelingen die Karotten nicht so gut, sie werden matschig und schmekken nicht.

Es ist also besser abzuwarten, bis das Wasser im Schoß der Frau kocht, bevor man mit dem Penis eindringt. Die traditionellen taoistischen Texte erwähnen neun Merkmale, die einem zeigen, ob die Frau wirklich bereit ist, den Mann in sich zu empfangen: Die Energie der Frau durchläuft neun Stadien, während alle ihre Organe sich erwärmen und ihr harmonisches Chi freisetzen. Diese Stadien wurden vor fast zweitausend Jahren von der Geheimnisvollen Dame, der Beraterin des Gelben Kaisers in Liebesdingen, so beschrieben:

l Das Chi ist in den Lungen der Frau, wenn sie heftig zu atmen beginnt.

2. Die Energie hat ihr Herz erreicht, wenn sie den Mann zu küssen beginnt.

3. Umarmt sie den Mann, befindet sich das Chi in ihrer Milz.

4. Wird die Vagina feucht, ist das Chi in den Nieren und Genitalien.

5. Bewegt sie das Becken und beißt sie den Mann sanft, ist das Chi in ihre Knochen geströmt.

6. Umklammern ihre Beine den Mann eng, befindet sich das Chi in den Muskeln.

7. Streichelt sie das Glied, ist Chi in ihr Blut geströmt.

8. Küßt sie den Mann voller Leidenschaft, ist das Chi in Haut und Fleisch vorgedrungen.

9. Gibt sie sich hin und stöhnt sie in Ekstase, ist Chi in ihre Leber geflossen und hat ihren Geist freigesetzt. Nun ist sie wahrhaft bereit, den Mann zu empfangen und ihre Yin-Essenz mit seiner Yang-Essenz auszutauschen.

Der Sinn des Wartens wird Ihnen klarwerden, wenn Sie die Technik der Sameneinbehaltung üben. Mann und Frau beginnen die Sexualessenz, das Ching Chi, «emporzudampfen», doch wenn der «Tiegel» nicht richtig vorbereitet ist und die Temperatur nicht stimmt, fällt es schwer, die Sexualessenz erfolgreich in Geist umzuwandeln. Läßt der Mann sein Feuer durch Ejakula-tion erlöschen, bevor die Frau bereit für den ‘«Verdampfungsprozeß» ist, wird es beiden unmöglich, die männliche Essenz mit der weiblichen zu einem Nektar zu raffinieren.

Die Kunst der Leidenschaft: Zeitliche Abstimmung und Häufigkeit

Befriedigung und Glück der Liebenden hängt nur unwesentlich von der Häufigkeit des Liebesaktes ab. Eine Frau kann nach einem Mal völlig befriedigt sein, nach fünfzehn phantasielosen Begegnungen aber überhaupt nicht. Es kommt eben darauf an, sie von Anfang an mit unwiderstehlicher Zärtlichkeit zu lieben.

Versuchen Sie, weder zu früh noch zu spät in sie einzudringen. Geschieht es zu früh, ermüden Sie vielleicht, bevor sie ihren Höhepunkt erreicht hat. Sind Sie dagegen zu spät, werden Sie den Höhepunkt ihrer Freude nicht mehr miterleben können. Kommen Sie also im richtigen Augenblick zu ihr, und befriedigen Sie sie gleich beim ersten Mal.

So wie man nicht bis zum «Vollgestopftsein» essen sollte, sollten Sie auch nicht lieben bis zur Erschöpfung. Nach dem Essen sollten Sie immer noch ein wenig Appetit haben, und nach dem Liebesakt sollten Sie Ihre Liebespartnerin immer noch begehren. Ein Meister der taoistischen Liebespraktik strebt nach Harmonie, indem er jede maßlose Gier zügelt. Weniger ist manchmal mehr! Überfuttern Sie Ihr sexuelles Verlangen nicht, sonst wird es in Ekel umschlagen. Extremes Yang, Ausdehnung, fuhrt zu extremem Yin, Rückzug. Eine nicht stark sexorientierte Partnerin wird überfordert sein, wenn Sie sie sieben Tage in der Woche sexuell lieben. Verzichtet sie nicht ganz bewußt auf ihren Orgasmus, wird ihr Appetit auf tägliches Lieben nach einer Weile abnehmen. Der Macho-Mythos von «-zig-Mal-können» ist nichts als ein armseliger Versuch, die Oberflächlichkeit des Liebens hinter scheinbar beeindruckenden Zahlen zu verstecken. Nur wenige Partnerinnen werden nach einem einzigen, schonen, erfüllenden Liebesakt unbefriedigt sein. Bei einem ausgedehnten Liebesakt werden viele gleich mehrere Orgasmen erleben.

Der Einfluß der Liebesstellung auf den Energiestrom

Das Thema Liebesstellungen wurde bewußt ausgespart, weil es dazu schon viele andere Bücher gibt. Ein gründliches, reich bebildertes Werk ist Sexual Secrets von Nik Douglas und Penny Slinger (Inner Traditions, New York). Es bietet über dreißig klassische taoistische Liebesstellungen und zeigt auch die Sonderstellungen, mit denen sich die verschiedensten Krankheiten heilen lassen. Der Schlüssel zur Wahl der richtigen Liebesstellung liegt im Wissen um die verborgenen Gesetze des Energiestroms. Behalten Sie die folgenden Punkte im Gedächtnis, dann können Sie jede gewünschte Energie erschaffen:

1. Für Entspannung und Harmonie sollte Gleiches an Gleiches gelegt werden: Bauch an Bauch, Hand an Hand, Mund an Mund, geöffnete Augen an geöffnete Augen usw.

3. Zur Stimulierung und Erregung sollte Ungleiches an Ungleiches gebracht werden: Mund an Genitalien, Genitalien an After, geöffnete Augen an geschlossene usw.

Die Kunst des Liebens besteht darin, stimulierende und harmo-nisierende Stellungen zu einem sublimen Tanz zu verweben.

Die Abkühlung gegen vorzeitige Ejakulation

Sie haben Ihre Partnerin erregt und sind bereit, in sie einzudringen. Ihr Glied ist sehr steif und drängt hinein. Sollen Sie eindringen, wenn das Glied seine größte Länge erreicht hat? Das ist durchaus möglich. Ein geübter taoistischer Liebhaber kann eindringen, wann immer er will. Er hat einen Grad der Selbstbeherrschung erreicht, der ihm völlige Freiheit in der Kunst des Liebens gibt. Doch wenn Sie noch dabei sind, Ihre Leidenschaften unter Kontrolle zu bringen, ziehen Sie es vielleicht vor, sich vorher etwas abzukühlen.

Es gibt eine recht ungewöhnliche Methode für Männer, die zu schnell zum Höhepunkt kommen. Sie benötigen lediglich eine Schale kalten Wassers. Die Technik besteht darin, daß Sie Ihr Glied in das kalte Wasser tauchen, bis die Erektion auf etwa die Hälfte zurückgegangen ist. Das dauert nur wenige Augenblicke. Dann zählen Sie langsam bis 30, wobei Sie nur an das Zählen denken sollten und an nichts anderes. Unterdessen streicheln Sie weiterhin Ihre Liebespartnerin.

Nach der kurzen Abkühlung können Sie Ihrer Liebespartnerin großes Vergnügen bescheren, indem Sie Ihr Glied an der Schei-denöffnung drehen. Während dieser Drehbewegung können Sie erneut bis 30 zählen, wobei Sie langsam und tief atmen sollten. Ihre Partnerin wird sich mit ganzem Körper nach Ihnen sehnen, und wenn Sie schließlich in sie eindringen, wird sie das Gefühl haben, als würde die ganze Welt in sie einströmen.

Anders als der stereotype Macho-Grobian werden Sie Ihre Vitalität nicht schon kurz nach dem Eindringen ausgespien haben. Da, wo andere längst «gestorben» sind, werden Sie erst in der Frau neugeboren! Die Lust Ihrer Partnerin hat sich bereits eine ganze Weile gesteigert, und nun beginnen Sie beide mit dem Anstieg. Das Ziel besteht nicht darin, gemeinsam einen einzigen Gipfel zu erklimmen, sondern ganze Gebirgszüge, wo jeder Gipfel höher ist als der vorige und einen noch schöneren Ausblick bietet. Eine solch ehrgeizige Expedition bedarf eines gewissen disziplinierten Trainings, das andererseits mit Ihrer Liebespartnerin sehr viel Spaß machen kann.

Bildung der Ausdauer

Diese nützliche Technik der Gedankenbeherrschung ist gleichzeitig eine Atemübung. Zählen Sie langsam von eins bis hundert, und dulden Sie dabei keinen anderen Gedanken in Ihrem Geist. Verbinden Sie eine tiefe, harmonische Unterleibsatmung mit dem Zählen: ein tiefes Ein- und Ausatmen zählt zusammen als eins.

Das ist nicht halb so einfach, wie Sie glauben. Die meisten Menschen können kaum bis zehn zählen, ohne abgelenkt zu sein. Schweift Ihr Geist ab, beginnen Sie wieder bei l, bis Sie 100 ohne unerwünschte Gedanken erreicht haben.

Diese Methode beruhigt nicht nur den aufgewühlten Geist, sie hilft Ihnen auch, Selbstkontrolle zu entwickeln, die Grundlage zur Vermeidung der Ejakulation. Haben Sie keine Erfahrung mit Entspannungsübungen, wird es Ihnen schwerfallen, den Drang zu zügeln, Ihren Samen auszustoßen.

Üben Sie das Zählen bis 100 zweimal am Tag. Nach einer Weile gewissenhaften Übens sollte es Ihnen gelingen, den Geist klarwerden zu lassen und auch die heftigste Aufgewühltheit und Aufregung mit einigen Atemzügen, aus der Tiefe des Diaphragma pelvis heraus, zu besänftigen.

Die Abkühlung mit dem Wasser stellt eine einfache mechanische Technik dar, um Selbstkontrolle zu lernen. Es ist vor allem für Männer gedacht, die sich in keiner Weise selbst beherrschen können.

Das Zählen bis 100 wird Ihnen auch helfen, dem Penis zu -befehlen, sich abzukühlen, wenn er zu heiß geworden ist. Um den Samen einzubehalten, müssen Sie willentlich die überschüssige Hitze aus dem Genitalbereich zurückziehen können. Durch regelmäßiges Üben werden Sie die Ejakulation viel leichter verhindern können, als Sie es selbst für möglich hielten. Dies ist ein wichtiger Schritt auf dem Weg zu den höheren Formen esoterischer Liebeskunst. Esoterisches Wissen allein ist nutzlos oder sogar schädlich. Es fuhrt nur zu Selbstzufriedenheit, die jeden Zweifel ausschließt und die praktische Erfahrung an wirklichen Ereignissen und Menschen verhindert. Meine Arbeit möchte dagegen Erkenntnis durch die Praxis lebendig machen.

Die meisten Bücher zur Kunst des Liebens begraben den Leser unter einem verwirrenden Wust zweitklassiger Methoden. Ich finde es weitaus sinnvoller, einige wenige erstklassige Methoden zu erlernen, diese dafür aber gründlich und detailliert. Natürlich bin ich mit einer Vielzahl anderer Techniken vertraut. Die Erfahrung hat mich jedoch gelehrt, daß ein Schüler bei dieser Praktik leicht scheitert, wenn er mit Informationen überladen wird. Ein Boxer, der zwanzig verschiedene Hiebtechniken kennt, versagt meistens vor einem Gegner, der nur zwei oder drei kennt, sie aber bis zur Perfektion entwickelt hat. Meistern Sie zuerst die Grundprinzipien der Liebeskunst, indem Sie die Energie mit Hilfe dieser Techniken in Ihrem Körper zu lenken verstehen; dann können Sie nach Ihrem Willen im Bett improvisieren.

Finger, Zunge, Penis - alle haben sie ihre eigenen Qualitäten. Der Penis kann zwar die höchste Vereinigung herbeiführen, doch ist es für den Anfänger gefährlich, ihn einzusetzen. Bis Sie eine gewisse Selbstkontrolle erlangt haben, benutzen Sie ihn nur für taktische Zwischenspiele. Ist eine Frau eingestimmt, wird ihr schon die bloße Berührung durch den Penis mehr bieten als zahllose leidenschaftliche Stöße ohne richtiges Vorspiel.

Reife ist alles! Ein reifer Apfel schmeckt besser und ist nahrhafter als zehn unreife. Nur wenn eine Frau für das Empfangen des Penis reif ist, kann sie Ihre Yang-Essenz mit jeder Faser ihres Leibes würdigen und lieben.

Die vier Errungenschaften des Jadestengels

Will ein Mann in vollkommener Harmonie mit einer Frau sein, die die neun Stufen der Erregung erlebt, wird auch er naturgemäß verschiedene Erregungstufen erfahren, bevor er in sie eindringt. Der Gelbe Kaiser, so wird erzählt, stellte eines Tages folgende Frage: «Wenn ich lieben will, aber keine Erektion erhalte, ist es da weise, den Verkehr zu erzwingen?»

Die Geheimnisvolle Dame erwiderte: «Nein, das ist nicht weise. Der Jadestengel (Penis) sollte erst die Vier Errungenschaften durchlaufen haben, bevor es richtig ist, in die Frau einzudringen.» Worauf der Kaiser natürlich wissen wollte: «Welches sind diese Vier Errungenschaften?»

«Wenn der Jadestengel unfähig ist zu erigieren», gab sie zur Antwort, «so befinden sich Yin und Yang nicht in Harmonie miteinander. Die erste Errungenschaft ist die Festigkeit. Wenn der Jadestengel zwar erigiert, dabei jedoch nicht anschwillt, so mangelt es dem Blut an Chi. Das Anschwellen ist die zweite

Errungenschaft. Ist der Jadestengel des Mannes zwar angeschwollen, aber nicht steif, so hat das Chi seine Knochen nicht durchdrungen. Steifheit ist die dritte Errungenschaft. Und ist der Jadestengel schließlich steif, ohne heiß zu sein, so hat die Lebenskraft den Geist des Mannes noch nicht erreicht. Pütze aber ist die vierte Errungenschaft.»

Ein kleiner, aber harter, steifer Penis ist viel besser als ein großes, aber halbschlaffes Glied. Deshalb ist auch kein Mann dem anderen im Bereich der Sexualität biologisch-anatomisch wirklich überlegen. Jeder Mann kann seine innere Energie zu einer hohen Stufe der Intensität entwickeln, unabhängig von seiner äußeren Erscheinung. Disziplinen wie Eisenhemd Chi Kung, Tai Chi Chi Kung und Meditation helfen, das Chi zu einer höheren Energie zu entwickeln, das man mit einer Frau austauschen kann, ohne das Glied als Übermittlungskanal zu verwenden. Dann genügen eine leise Berührung mit der Hand, ein Blick oder auch nur ein Gedanke, um die Energie zu übertragen. Doch auch dann wird der Penis nicht überflüssig, da es immer noch subtilere Stufen des Liebens zu erleben gibt.

Sie können Ihr Glied beobachten, um den Grad seiner Erregtheit abzuschätzen. Doch was soll man tun, wenn noch nicht die höchste Stufe erreicht ist, der Penis nicht sehr hart ist und keine Hitze ausstrahlt, die Partnerin aber schon bereit ist, ihn aufzunehmen? Ich empfehle, daß Sie dann in sie eindringen. Die anderen Errungenschaften des Jadestengels werden sich während des Liebesaktes einstellen. Wenn Sie die Technik der «Kraftsperre» oder des «Großen Emporziehens» anwenden, ist das gefahrlos. Kommt Ihr Penis auf diese Erregungsstufe, werden Sie versucht sein, den Samen auszustoßen; deshalb müssen Sie am Anfang den Samen «einsperren», bevor Sie zur vierten Errungenschaft gelangen.

Die Methode des Stoßens

Es gibt eine Vielzahl von Stoßmethoden für das männliche Glied. Das Kama Sutra erwähnt besonders viele. Wir wollen hier eine Methode empfehlen, die zu den allerbesten zählt. Sie basiert auf der Zahl Neun, die in der taoistischen Praktik als machtvolle Yang-Energie angesehen wird.

Das Prinzip dieser Methode besteht darin, neun flache und einen tiefen Stoß zu fuhren. Dieser eine tiefe Stoß verändert nicht nur die Stimulierung, er zwingt auch die Luft aus der Vagina. Dadurch können Sie mit den neun folgenden flachen Stößen ein Vakuum in der Scheide erzeugen. Sie ziehen das Glied dabei nie völlig aus der Scheide, denn dies würde das Vakuumsiegel aufbrechen. Statt dessen verbleiben Sie mit dem Glied am äußersten Rand der Vagina, wo sich ein dichtgespanntes Nervengewebe befindet.

Dieser Rhythmus, neun flache und ein tiefer Stoß, wird Ihre Partnerin entzücken. Das dadurch erzeugte Vakuum hat immense Wirkungen: Sie wird sich zuerst leer und dann voll fühlen, leer und wieder voll. Diese Pause erzeugt deshalb soviel Genuß, weil Sie damit ihre Sinnesorgane unentwegt durch Abwechslung verwöhnen. Wenn wir einfach nur essen, bis wir voll sind, mögen wir hinterher nichts mehr. Ein köstlicher Happen aber, in diesem Fall der tiefe Stoß, steigert das Verlangen. Auf diese Weise befriedigen wir das Verlangen, um es wieder zu wecken, und erzeugen Verlangen, um es dann zu befriedigen.

Ein weiterer Grund für die große Befriedigung der Frau durch flache Stöße ist darin zu sehen, daß sich ihre empfindlichste Zone etwa eineinhalb Zentimeter hinter dem Scheideneingang an der oberen Scheidenwand befindet. Dort verbindet ein dichtes Netz von Nerven zusammen die Geschlechtsorgane mit dem restlichen Körper. Man nennt diese Stelle den «G-Punkt», nach ihrem Entdecker, Graffenberg. Von hier stoßt die Frau bei sehr großer Erregung auch eine Flüssigkeit aus. Die Taoisten sind der Auffassung, daß diese Flüssigkeit hochgeladen mit der Sexualessenz der Frau ist und von der Eichel direkt aufgenommen wird.

Fahren Sie mit den neun flachen Stößen und dem einen tiefen fort, bis Sie insgesamt neun Runden erzielt haben. Die Zahl der flachen Stöße betragt dann 81 - ebenfalls eine sehr kraftvolle Zahl. Vielleicht werden Sie am Anfang zunächst 3 Zyklen, dann 6 und erst nach einer Weile 9 durchführen wollen. Die Kraft wird noch erhöht, wenn Sie jedesmal in der kurzen Pause vor dem tiefen Stoß den Speichel der Partnerin hinunterschlucken. Diese Flüssigkeit ist stark mit ihrer Yin-Essenz geladen und wird Ihre eigene, sich ausdehnende Yang-Essenz ausgleichen. Haben Sie Ihr Ziel erreicht, können Sie sich ausruhen oder die im Kapitel 8 beschriebenen fortgeschritteneren Techniken anwenden.

Nachdem Sie sich ausgeruht und den Überschuß an Energie aus den Hoden geleitet haben, beginnen Sie wieder mit dem aktiven Stoßen. Sie befinden sich nun in einem sehr angenehmen Zustand: ruhig und gelassen und doch fähig, die Samenflüssigkeit einzubehalten und Ihre Erektionskraft zu bewahren, um einen weiteren Zyklus von Stößen durchzuführen. Danach .ruhen Sie sich erneut aus.

Vielleicht ziehen Sie es vor, langsam in Ihre Partnerin einzudringen, um das Glied dafür dann recht schnell herauszuziehen. Das entspricht vollkommen dem inneren Wesen der Frau. Dringen Sie langsam in sie ein, weil sie ja auch langsamer erregt wird als der Mann. Der ungeschulte Mann dagegen fängt immer schnell an und ist auch schnell am Ende.*

Da sie das Leben hervorbringt, benötigt die Frau natürlicherweise länger für Anfang und Ende. Der Mann muß sich bewußt auf den Ur-Rhythmus der Frau einstellen. Entzünden Sie die heiligen, geweihten Kerzen in ihren Schenkeln mit Ehrfurcht.

Wird sie zu heftig und abrupt genommen, hat die Woge des Wohlgefuhls keine Zeit, um ihr gesamtes Nervensystem zu durchfluten. Alle Empfindung bleibt auf den Genitalbereich beschränkt. Man kann es auch so betrachten: Wenn man sich nur

* Die Frau bedarf weniger Belehrung als Sie: Der Mensch ist das Geheimnis Gottes, die Macht ist das Geheimnis des Mannes, die Sexualität ist das Geheimnis der Frau.

Flacher Stoß:

Die 3, 6 oder 9 flachen Stöße stimulieren das Nervengeflecht am G-Punkt. Sie sind am besten für den Austausch von Sexualenergien geeignet.

ein oder zwei Sekunden lang kneift, dann spürt nur die Stelle zwischen den Fingern dieses Kneifen. Dauert es jedoch länger, wird sich die Empfindung über eine größere Fläche ausbreiten und schließlich selbst weitab befindliche Gliedmaßen erreichen. Wie beim Schmerz - so bei der Freude!

Deshalb sollten Sie langsam stoßen: Jeder Stoß ist in sich selbst ein Akt der Liebe. Die Frau erwacht nach ihren eigenen geheimnisvollen Zyklen. Handelt man aber wider die Gesetze der Schöpfung, ist die Enttäuschung gewiß.

Sie haben Ihre Partnerin bereits stimuliert: Sie benötigt nun einen stärkeren Reiz, um zu neuen Höhen zu gelangen. Wenn Sie nach langsamem Eindringen schneller zurückziehen, wird ihr dies zusätzliche Erregung bieten. Doch ziehen Sie das Glied nicht völlig aus der Scheide, lassen Sie es ein bis drei Zentimeter tief in ihrem Körper. Die Rückzugsbewegung drückt Ihr gebogenes Glied heftig gegen die Klitoris der Frau, dem Sitz ihrer erotischen Sensitivität. Erfüllen Sie sie also mit Freude, um dann voller Hitze zuzustoßen.

8. KAPITEL

Das Geheimnis der Sameneinbehaltung

«Verwerft alles Vernünfteln über die Geschlechtlichkeit; übt Euch vielmehr in besonderen Praktiken. Das Geheimnis der Zurückführung des Samens besteht darin, sich zu lieben, ohne den Samen zu verlieren. Den Samen zu mehren und zu kräftigen, ist der Pfad der Lebenskraft.»

Rat der Einfachen Frau an den Gelben Kaiser, 2. Jh. v.Chr.

In früheren Jahrhunderten pflegte der Kaiser von China die Weisen seines Hofs zusammenzurufen, um sich Rat für sein Liebesleben zu holen. Man erzählt sich, daß jeder zukünftige Berater zuerst einen Beweis seiner sexuellen Beherrschung erbringen mußte. Dazu wurde ihm ein volles Glas Wein gereicht, in das er sein Glied einzutauchen hatte. War er ein wahrer Meister, konnte er den Wein mit seinem Penis aufnehmen und wieder in das Glas zurückfließen lassen. Dies galt als absoluter Beweis, daß der Weise auch die Sexualsäfte einer Frau, ihre Yin-Essenz, aufzunehmen verstand und folglich um das Geheimnis der Unsterblichkeit wußte.

Bei dieser Praxis der Flüssigkeits aufnähme mit Hilfe des Penis handelt es sich um ein höchst reales Phänomen: Noch heute kann man es auf den Straßen Indiens vorgeführt bekommen. In Bombay lebt ein recht geschäftstüchtiger Yogi, der mit seinem Penis insgeheim öl aufsaugt, um es dann in aller Öffentlichkeit beim Urinieren anzuzünden und zu verkünden, es handle sich um «göttliches Feuer». Dieses amüsante Beispiel kann natürlich nicht als Modell für die Transformation der Sexualenergie dienen. Die Saugtechnik des Yoga hat nichts mit der wahren, Praktik der Sameneinbehaltung zu tun.

Das Emporziehen von Flüssigkeit in die Harnröhre des Glieds wird erreicht, indem man mit Hilfe bestimmter Körperübungen in der Blase einen Unterdruck erzeugt. Diese Praktik ist gefährlich, weil Prostata und Blase durch die eingesaugten Flüssigkeiten leicht infiziert werden können; das gleiche gilt für die von der Frau beim Liebesakt ausgeschiedenen Säfte, die aus der bakteriell stark belebten Scheidenwand stammen. Mancher Yogi hat sich auf diese Weise Krankheiten zugezogen. Das ließ das Gerücht entstehen, die Technik der Sameneinbehaltung sei ungesund und führe zu Impotenz und Prostatabeschwerden.

Ich warne meine Schüler, die Safte der Partnerin einzusaugen. Die von mir gelehrte taoistische Methode der Sameneinbehal-tung verfolgt ein einziges Ziel: die Transformation der Sexualenergie, des Ching, in höhere Stufen des Körpers, der Seele und des Geistes. Der Samen wird nur einbehalten, damit seine Essenz nicht außerhalb des Körpers verlorengeht. Die Methode ist nutzlos, wenn das Ching nicht dem Samen entzogen, empor-geleitet und in einem Kreislauf durch den Körper geführt wird. Es besteht keinerlei Notwendigkeit, die Körpersäfte der Frau in den eigenen Penis hinaufzusaugen. Die Eichel ist ohnehin so beschaffen, daß sie die mächtige Yin-Essenz der Frau direkt durch die Haut aufzunehmen vermag.

Der kraftvollste Energieaustausch findet bei der taoistischen Methode auf einer Stufe äußerst subtiler, feinstofflicher Energie statt. Aus diesem Grund lehre ich alle meine Schüler, ihr Chi im Kleinen Energiekreislauf zirkulieren zu lassen; denn dies ist die Voraussetzung für die Entwicklung des Ching von der rohen physischen Stufe zur verfeinerten subtilen Energie des Shien oder geistigen Wesens. Hat jemand seinen Kleinen Energiekreislauf hergestellt, ist das bereits eine kleinere Erleuchtung. Der Geist beginnt zu erkennen, daß er seine eigene feinstofiliche Energie selbst beherrschen kann. Und schließlich wird man erkennen, daß auch der Geist nichts als die Bewegung subtiler Energie ist.

Das Kreisenlassen des Chi im Kleinen Energiekreislauf

Alle in diesem Buch besprochenen Methoden der Chi-Ent-wicklung, von der Hodenatmung über das «Große Emporziehen» bis zum Tal-Orgasmus, beruhen darauf, daß die in den Hoden gespeicherte Samenenergie die Wirbelsäule entlang ins Gehirn emporgeleitet wird. Ist dieses mit Energie angefüllt, strömt sie vorne am Körper hinab in Hals, Herz und Nabel. Hirn und Hirnanhangdrüse helfen dem Organismus, diese kraftvolle Energie dorthin zu bringen, wo sie jeweils benötigt wird, sei es zur Abwehr von Erkrankungen, sei es zum Beantworten der Frage, die ein Kind einem gestellt hat, zum Malen oder zum Lieben. Diese einzigartige Eigenschaft unterscheidet das Ching von anderen Arten des Chi, die speziellere Funktionen wahrnehmen, wie zum Beispiel das Leber-Chi. Sexualenergie ist außerordentlich wandlungsfahig und kann durch Transformation vielerlei Funktionen wahrnehmen. Deshalb wirkt sie so fördernd und nährend auf unser geistiges Sein. Der Geist kann sie so mühelos verdauen wie Säuglingsnahrung.

Hat man verstanden, in welchen Bahnen sich die Energie iin Körper bewegt, wird es viel leichter, sie weiterzuentwickeln. Die taoistischen Meister entdeckten zwei Bahnen, die einen besonders kraftvollen Energiestrom befördern.

Die eine Bahn nennt man das «Diener»- oder «Yin»-Gefäß. Sie beginnt fast am Ende der Wirbelsäule in der Mitte zwischen Hoden und After, an dem Punkt, den man als Perineum oder Damm bezeichnet. Von dort verläuft sie vorn im Körper an Perus, Verdauungsorganen und Herz aufwärts zum Hals, um in der Zungenspitze zu enden. Die zweite Bahn, das «Lenker»-oder «Yang»-Gefäß, beginnt an derselben Stelle. Hier fließt die Energie vom Damm zum Kreuzbein hoch, um durch die Wirbelsäule ins Gehirn zu gelangen und vorn wieder hinabzufließen bis zum Gaumen.

Die Zunge funktioniert wie ein Schalter, der diese beiden Energieströme miteinander verbindet: Berührt sie den Gaumen unmittelbar hinter den Vorderzähnen, kann die Energie in einem Kreis die Wirbelsäule empor und vorne im Körper wieder hinabströmen. Die beiden Gefäße oder Bahnen, in der Akupunktur als Meridiane bekannt, bilden zusammen eine Kreisschaltung, durch welche die Energie zirkuliert. Dieser Vitalkreislauf, auch «Kleiner Energiekreislauf» genannt, führt an den Hauptorganen und den Nervensystemen des Körpers vorbei und versorgt die Zellen mit allem, was sie benötigen, um wachsen, heilen und arbeiten zu können. Er stellt die Grundlage der Akupunktur dar, die inzwischen auch von der westlichen Medizin als klinisch wirksam anerkannt wird, obgleich sie zur Zeit noch zugeben muß, daß sie sich nicht erklären kann, wieso dieses System funktioniert. Die Taoisten haben sich jedoch seit Jahrtausenden mit den subtilen Energiepunkten und -Zentren im Körper beschäftigt und sich von der Bedeutung einer jeden Bahn überzeugt.

Dieser Kreislauf befördert auch den Strom der Sexualenergie aus den Hoden weiter und versorgt die anderen Teile des , Körpers mit Lebenskraft. Die Drüsen werden z.B. veranlaßt, die stimulierenden Sexualhormone zu produzieren, welche die chemischen Abläufe im Körper regeln und letztlich unser ganzes Handeln bestimmen. Besonders stark beeinflußt der Kreislauf der Sexualenergie die Qualität des Liebens. Sexualität auf der biologischen Ebene ist zum größten Teil eine Frage des hormonalen Gleichgewichts.

Die im Kleinen Energiekreislauf zirkulierende Sexualenergie stellt eine Ur-Energie dar. Menschliches Leben beginnt mit dem Eindringen einer Samenzelle in ein Ei. Dies ist der ursprüngliche Akt des Kung Fu im Wettkampf zwischen Yin und Yang. Sexual-Kung Fu ist das Nachspielen dieses Akts im männlichen Körper. Doch wird dabei nicht ein Fötus aus einem befruchteten Ei innerhalb der weiblichen Gebärmutter gebildet, sondern die Samenenergie dringt in die höheren Energiezentren im männlichen Körper ein und gebiert den Mann auf einer geistigen Ebene. Die Energie wird durch den Kleinen Energiekreislauf emporgeleitet, um dem Mann im wörtlichen Sinne eine Wiedergeburt zu schenken, ein «neues Leben» - Selbstvertrauen durch die Beherrschung eines kraftvollen Stroms schöpferischer Energie und Erfüllung durch eine tiefempfundene Harmonie. „Wann immer Sie in eine Frau oder in das Leben allgemein «verliebt» sind, strömt die Energie in Ihren Kleinen Energiekreislauf. Es ist ein Gefühl intensiver Verbundenheit und ein Gegründetsein im warmen Lebensstrom.

Die Bedeutung des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs

Wird der Kleine Energiekreislauf hergestellt und von körperlichen oder seelischen Blockaden freigehalten, kann immer mehr Sexualenergie die Wirbelsäule emporgepumpt werden. Sind diese Bahnen jedoch durch Verspannungen blockiert, sucht sich die heiße Samenenergie während der Erregung beim Liebesakt den nächstbesten Ausweg mit dem geringsten Widerstand, durch den Perus. Die Sexualenergie geht verloren, und der Körper muß sich wieder an die langwierige und physisch anstrengende Herstellung weiteren Samens machen. Durch den Samenverlust büßt der Mann vorübergehend etwas von seiner sexuellen Anziehungskraft ein. Kundalini und Tantra Yoga kennen eine Reihe von Methoden, um einen äußerst kraftvollen Energiestrom die Wirbelsäule empor in den Kopf zu erzeugen. Mit Hilfe von Mantras, Atemtechniken, Yoga-Stellungen und bestimmten Verschlüssen wird die Samenkraft nach oben gelenkt. Das Herstellen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs stellt einen wichtigen Schritt dar, um die Energie innerhalb des Körpers zu versiegeln, damit sie kreisen kann und Geist und Körper beleben. Unterläßt man dies, entsteht im Kopf ein starker Druck, der die Energie aus Augen, Ohren, Nase und Mund entweichen läßt. Das ist etwa so, als wollten Sie ein Zimmer mit Ihrer Körperwärme heizen, während alle Fenster offenstehen: Nur die Heizkostenrechnung erhöht sich! Sie aber vergeuden unwiederbringlich eine Menge Samenenergie, ohne sie praktisch anwenden zu können, etwa um sie mit Ihrer Partnerin zu teilen.

Die einfachste Art, den Kleinen Energiekreislauf herzustellen„.

Kreisenlassen des Chi im Kleinen Energiekreislauf erleichtert dem Mann tue Samen-einbehaltung und die Transformation von Sexualenergie besteht darin, sich jeden Morgen hinzusetzen, sich zu entspannen und zu meditieren. Gestatten Sie Ihrer Energie, den Kreislauf von allein herzustellen, indem Sie Ihren Geist mit dem Strom fließen lassen. Beginnen Sie in den Augen, und fließen Sie mit der Energie, während diese durch die Zunge den Hals hinabströmt, durch Brust und Nabel fließt und schließlich durch Kreuzbein und Wirbelsäule zum Kopf emporsteigt.

Am Anfang werden Sie das Gefühl haben, daß überhaupt nichts geschieht; doch nach einer Weile spüren Sie vielleicht, wie sich der Energiestrom an manchen Körperstellen warm anfühlt. Das Geheimnis Hegt darin, sich einfach zu entspannen und zu versuchen, den Geist in jenen Teil des Kreislaufs zu lenken, auf den Sie sich gerade konzentrieren. Das ist jedoch etwas anderes, als sich im Geiste ein Bild im Kopf vorzustellen und zu visuali-sieren, wie ein bestimmter Körperteil aussieht oder wie er sich anfühlt. Benutzen Sie Ihren Geist nicht wie einen Fernsehschirm, sondern spüren, erfahren Sie den tatsächlichen Chi-Strom. Entspannen Sie sich immer wieder, und lassen Sie Ihren Geist mit dem Chi zusammen durch den physischen Körper strömen, entlang den von der Natur gegebenen Bahnen, um das Chi zu jedem gewünschten Punkt zu befördern, z. B. zuni Nabel, ins Perineum usw.*

Der beste Liebhaber ist der völlig entspannte Mann, der genau versteht, was in seinem Inneren vorgeht. Dem Mann, der dieses mühelose Fließenlassen der Energie im Kleinen Energiekreislauf des Körpers gemeistert hat, fällt es auch nicht mehr schwer, seine Sexualkraft anzuzapfen. Für ihn ist dies ein ganz einfacher, natürlicher Vorgang.

Ohne die Beherrschung des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs ist es außerordentlich schwierig, die höheren Stufen der Transformation der Sexualenergie zu erreichen. Viele Menschen haben diese Bahnen bereits in ihrem Inneren geöffnet und brauchen nur noch Erklärungen, wohin die Energie gelenkt werden soll. Andere wiederum gelangen ans Ziel, indem sie ohne Streß und naturnah leben. Der Kleine Energiekreislauf fördert nicht nur den Strom der Sexualenergie, er hat auch eine Vielzahl anderer Vorzüge, unter anderem verhindert er das Altern und vermag zahlreiche Krankheiten zu heilen, angefangen bei Bluthochdruck über Schlafstörungen und Kopfschmerzen bis zu Arthritis.

* Wer an einem intensiven Einstieg in diese Methode der Entspannung und der Herstellung des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs interessiert ist, der sei auf mein erstes Buch TAO YOGA, Praktisches Lehrbuch zur Erweckung 4er heuenden Urkraß Chi (Ansata Verlag, Interlaken) verwiesen.

Betrachten wir nun die erste Technik der Sameneinbehaltung beim Liebesakt. Auch wenn Sie den Kleinen Energiekreislauf nicht täglich üben sollten, genügt schon das Bewußtsein, daß er in Ihrem Körper existiert und automatisch funktioniert, um die Techniken der taoistischen Liebeskunst schneller zu meistern.

Abbildung 24

Sie können ihn sogar durch den Liebesakt selbst lernen; es bedarf nur der entsprechenden Aufmerksamkeit. Je weniger «automatisch-unbewußt» die subtile Chi-Energie Körper, Geist und Seele durchströmt, je bewußter Sie sich ihrer werden, um so größer wird Ihre Freiheit, auf schöpferische Weise zu heben und Sie selbst zu sein.

Der Außenverschluß: Die Dreifingermethode

Die Dreifingermethode der Samenzurückhaltung wird in China schon seit über 5000 Jahren praktiziert. Sie ist so einfach und schlicht, daß jeder sie schnell erlernen und erfolgreich anwenden kann. Die Samenflüssigkeit wird durch Fingerdruck von außen zurückgehalten. Dazu braucht es nicht mehr Koordinationsfähigkeit als den ^fasserfluß in einem Gartenschlauch zu unterbrechen, indem man einen Fuß auf ihn stellt.

Im Prinzip besteht die Dreifingermethode aus folgenden Schritten: Mehrere Sekunden vor der nahenden Ejakulation preßt man mit den drei längsten Fingern der rechten Hand den mittleren Punkt zwischen After und Hodensack. Dadurch werden die Säfte einbehalten - und mit ihnen eine Menge Energie.

Zum praktischen Vorgehen

2. Den richtigen Punkt finden: Drücken Sie den Punkt, der sich in der Mitte zwischen After und Hodensack befindet. Das ist der unterste Punkt des Rumpfs; er stellt ein «Tor» dar, durch welches die Energie in den Körper eindringt und ihn wieder verläßt.

2. Druck ausüben: Geben Sie weder zuviel noch zuwenig Druck. Das Gespür für die richtige Druckstärke bekommen Sie durch die Erfahrung. Allgemein läßt sich sagen: Je kräftiger die Fingerspitzen sind, um so weniger Druck wird gebraucht, um den Samen zu halten.

Abbildung 25

Die Außendruckmethode:
Mehrere Sekunden vor der Ejakulation wird der Punkt zwischen After und Hodensack mit Zeige-, Mittel- und Ringfinger der rechten Hand gepreßt.

3. Gebrauch der drei Finger: Der Samenleiter entgleitet leicht dem Griff der Finger: Zwei Finger allein können dieses Röhrchen nicht gleichzeitig greifen und abschnüren. Deshalb benutzen wir den Zeige- und Ringfinger dazu, um beide Seiten der Harnröhre zu pressen und an Ort und Stelle festzuhalten. Dann drückt der Mittelfinger automatisch auf die Harnröhre, die nicht mehr abrutschen kann, weil Zeige- und Ringfinger sie blockieren. Die Finger sollten dabei leicht gekrümmt bleiben, wobei die Krümmung des Mittelfmgers noch etwas starker ist als die der beiden anderen, um den Samenfluß wirkungsvoll zu blockieren.

4.Wahl des richtigen Zeitpunkts: Sobald Sie spüren, daß die Ejakulation unweigerlich bevorsteht, wenden Sie den Außendruck nach der Dreifingermethode an. Zögern Sie damit zu lange, kann keine noch so große Kraft den Samenfluß mehr authalten. Bringen Sie die Finger also rechtzeitig an die richtige Stelle. Sie sollten vor, während und nach den Kontraktionen Druck ausüben, bis Sie sicher sind, daß das Pumpen gänzlich aufgehört hat.

Durch das Einbehalten des Samens kehrt ein Großteil der Säfte in den Speicher zurück, aus dem sie stammen. Dabei erleiden die Organe keinerlei Schaden, weil das Gewebe in diesem Bereich äußerst elastisch ist und die Säfte wieder aufnehmen kann, nachdem Sie den Strom umgekehrt haben.

Man könnte annehmen, daß der Samenspeicher überfließt, sobald seine Aufnahmekapazität erschöpft ist. Das würde auch geschehen, hätten wir es dabei lediglich mit einer Art Tank mit einem angeschlossenen Abflußschlauch zu tun. Doch dem ist nicht so. Erreicht die Flüssigkeit einen besonders hohen Stand, geschehen gleich mehrere Dinge. Als erstes wird die Samenproduktion automatisch eingestellt. Das spart Energie und Rohsubstanzen ein, die für das nährstoffreiche Sperma erforderlich wären. Zum zweiten neigt der Körper von selbst dazu, diese Säfte wieder zu absorbieren. Und drittens haben die Taoisten ein System vervollkommnet, bei dem die Samenkraft durch «Verdampfung» in die höheren Vitalzentren geleitet wird. Der Druck in den unten gelegenen Samengefäßen und der Prostata wird dadurch vermindert. Dazu muß der flüssige Samen auf einen höheren Energiezustand gebracht werden. Man kann es mit kochendem Wasser vergleichen, das in Dampf (Gas) übergeht, wodurch die Feuchtigkeit zum Himmel emporsteigen kann, ohne ihre Wasser-Natur dabei einzubüßen. Ähnlich wird auch das flüssige Ching Chi in eine andere, schneller beweglichere Energie transmutiert, welche die kreative Essenz des Ching bewahrt.

Vergessen wir nicht, daß die Samenkraft aus mehr besteht, als die rein chemische Analyse zeigen kann. Jeder Wissenschaftler kann die einzelnen Bestandteile des Sperma miteinander mischen, doch ihnen die Fähigkeit zu verleihen, Leben hervorzubringen, ist eine weitaus schwierigere Aufgabe. Unser Ziel ist es, das im Samen enthaltene Leben zu bewahren und zu transformieren.

Die Außendruck-Methode ist in erster Linie für Anfanger gedacht und für Schüler, die die Technik des «Großen Emporziehens» noch nicht beherrschen, dabei aber weiterhin sexuell heben wollen, ohne ihren Samen zu verlieren. Es handelt sich um eine äußere Krücke, die man fortwerfen kann, sobald man die inneren Techniken gelernt hat. Es mag vorkommen, daß Sie nach den ersten Malen ein leichtes Unbehagen verspüren. Das ist normal und kein Grund zur Besorgnis; es ist wie die Steifheit lange Zeit unbenutzter Muskeln nach einer anstrengenden Arbeit.

Ratschlage und Vorsichtsmaßnahmen

1. Übertreiben Sie nichts! In den ersten Wochen sollten Sie diese äußerst wirkungsvolle Methode nicht öfter als alle zwei oder drei Tage anwenden. Ältere und kranke Menschen sollten sie am Anfang höchstens zweimal pro Woche anwenden.

2. Es kann vorkommen, daß Ihre Körperwärme sich erhöht und Sie sehr durstig werden. Trinken Sie dann einfach mehr Wasser.

3. Nach dreimonatiger Anwendung (eventuell auch früher) wird der Geschlechtstrieb sich merklich verstärken, und es kommt zu häufigeren Erektionen als früher. Steigern Sie Ihre sexuelle Aktivität in gemäßigtem Tempo. Mißbrauchen Sie nicht Ihre neugewonnene Kraft.

4. Die Methode erfordert starken Fingerspitzendruck. Sind Sie zu schwach, machen Sie täglich mehrere Liegestütze auf den Fingerspitzen. Beginnen Sie mit fünf Fingern, üben Sie dann mit vier und drei Fingern; wenn Ihre Kraft sich steigert, erhöhen Sie auch die Zahl der Liegestütze.

5. Nach dem Ausüben des Dreifingerdrucks bleibt ein kleiner Rest Sperma in der Harnröhre. Es ist möglich, daß etwas Samen austritt, nachdem die Erektion aufgehört hat. Wollen Sie diese Methode zur Empfängnisverhütung benutzen, müssen Sie sich noch vor dem Abflauen der Erektion zurückziehen. Dann sollten Sie zuerst urinieren, bevor Sie ein zweites Mal eindringen. Wenn Sie 100% ig sichergehen wollen, verwenden Sie zusätzlich Werden Perineum- und Steißbereich sanft massiert, so erleichtert dies die Reabsorp-tion der Samenflüssigkeit und verhindert einen etwaigen Energiestau in der Prostata.

einen samentötenden Schaum oder ein anderes Verhütungsmittel Ihrer Wahl.

6. Am Anfang werden Sie sich nach dem Liebesakt vielleicht leicht ermattet fühlen. Doch werden sich die Energiereserven des Körpers schon bald erhöhen und die Mattigkeit verschwinden. Allerdings werden Sie bei dieser Methode immer etwas Kraft verlieren.

7. Der Verlust an Vitalenergie läßt sich nur durch die Methode des Innenverschlusses völlig verhindern. Bei der Technik des Außen Verschlusses geht in der Regel zwischen 40% und 60% der Samenkraft verloren. Das ist immer noch weit besser, als die gesamte Samenflüssigkeit ziellos zu vergeuden. Durch den Außenverschluß werden Kraft und Virilität merklich gesteigert. Er ist fiir Anfanger geeignet und eine gute Vorübung für die Methode des Innen Verschlusses.

Die anschliessende Massage des Perineums

Wenn Sie die Methode des Außen Verschlusses angewandt haben, sollten Sie hinterher zwei wichtige Akupunkturpunkte massieren: Den Hui-Yin am Damm und den Chang-Chiang am Steißbein.

Hui-Yin: Er hegt ganz unten am Rumpf, in der Mitte zwischen Hodensack und After. Er ist der Anfangspunkt der Energiebahn, die vorn den Rumpf emporiuhrt. Sie haben ihn schon zur Sameneinbehaltung gepreßt. Er verbindet den höchsten Punkt des Körpers, den Scheitelpunkt des Kopfs, Pai-Hui, mit dem untersten Punkt, dem Yung-Chuan, an der Fußsohle.

Durch den Pai-Hui wird die Kraft des Himmels in den Körper gesogen. Durch den Yung-Chuan nimmt das ätherische Energienetz des Körpers die Kraft der Erde auf. Der Hui-Yin bildet also die Mitte zwischen Scheitel und Fußsohle. Er stellt eine Schaltzentrale der Energieübertragung dar.

Durch das Hui-Yin gelangt die Yin-Energie, die Energie der Erde, in den Rumpf. Auch die Hoden-Energie dringt durch dieses Tor in den oberen Körper ein und verläßt ihn durch dieselbe Stelle. Ist das Tor des Hui-Yin verschlossen, wird die Lebensenergie zurückgehalten. Wird der Hui-Yin jedoch durch die Ejakulation geöffnet, kann die Lebenskraft entweichen. Durch die aussickernde Energie wird der Chi-Fluß schwächer und der Blutkreislauf langsamer. Zusätzlich von der Schwerkraft angezogen, staut sich das Blut im Perineum, was zu vielen gesundheitlichen Problemen rühren kann, u. a. zu Hämorrhoiden.

Chang-Chiang: Dieser Punkt liegt zwischen Steißbeinspitze und After. Hier laufen viele wichtige Nervenenden zusammen. Das «Lenkergefäß», die Energiebahn, die die Wirbelsäule empor verläuft, beginnt an dieser Stelle.

Massieren Sie die Punkte Hui-Yin und Chang-Chiang mit zwei Lagen gefalteten Seidenstoffs. Machen Sie 27 bis 81 kräftige Kreisbewegungen. Benutzen Sie Zeige-, Mittel- und Ringfinger. Die Seide hilft eine Überreizung dieser sensitiven Punkte zu vermeiden und erhöht den Kraftstrom, weil sie Elektrizität erzeugt.

Die Massage löst Muskelverspannungen und erleichtert die Reabsorption der Samenflüssigkeit. Sie ist unverzichtbar zur Vermeidung von Prostatabeschwerden. Vor allem stimuliert sie das Aufsteigen der Energie in den Pai-Hui am Scheitelpunkt.

Die große Kraft der Sameneinbehaltung

Die Kraft, die Sie mit der Einbehaltung des Samens zu erzeugen begonnen haben, ist unerhört gewaltig: Sie ist stark genug, um harte Knochen zu zerbrechen. Bei fortgeschrittenen Adepten lockern sich die Knochenfugen am oberen Schädel. Die Kraft kann die Schädelplatten durchbohren und so unmittelbar Zugang zu höheren Energien eröffnen.

Mit den empfohlenen Praktiken kann der Übende einen Teil der wunderbaren Lern- und Regenerationsfähigkeit des Kindes wiedererlangen. Die einzigen Menschen mit gelockerten Schädelknochenfugen (Fontanellen) sind der hochentwik-kelte Adept und das Kind. Andere taoistische Meditationstechniken ermöglichen ihm sogar, die Lebensprozesse des ungeborenen Kindes zu wiederholen und seine Energie die gleichen Bahnen «elektrischer Atmung» entlangzulenken wie einst als Fötus im Mutterleib. Der Fötus geht mit Energie weitaus effizienter um, als es der Mensch auf späteren Entwicklungsstufen jemals tut. Verglichen mit der im Mutterleib vollbrachten Leistung sind alle anderen menschlichen Errungenschaften geradezu winzig. Der Meditationsprozeß erneuert die Quellen schöpferischer Energie, die bereits aktiviert waren, als sich ein einziger, mikroskopisch kleiner Punkt zu einem Menschen mit Abermilliarden von Körperzellen zu entwikkeln begann.

Nach ein bis fünf Monaten Übung der Sameneinbehaltung wird man vielleicht einen gewissen Kopfdruck verspüren. Dies wird manchem als unangenehm erscheinen, während andere es nicht nur erträglich, sondern geradezu als wunderbar empfinden. Es zeigt an, daß die Vitalkraft mit bisher ungewohnter Intensität in den oberen Kopf strömt. Es ist ein Symptom des Fortschritts; der Körper verfugt über mehr Lebenskraft als jemals zuvor.

Wem die Praktik der esoterischen Liebeskunst im Blut liegt, der wird diese Lebensintensität sehr genießen. Im Körper beginnt sich eine Art «Super-Chemie» zu entwickeln. Die auf dem Hinduismus basierenden Yogalehren haben dieses Phänomen als «Kundalini-Kraft» im Westen bekannt gemacht. Durch diese veränderte Körperchemie wird Energie, die normalerweise verlorengeht, einbehalten und in höhere Stufen der Gesundheit und des Bewußtseins transformiert. Wird diese Vitalkraft nach und nach gesteigert, so hat dies keinerlei schädliche Auswirkungen. Wird die Kraft jedoch zu stark oder sehr schmerzhaft, kann „man sie auch freilassen oder in andere Körperteile umlenken. Körperliche Arbeit, Fußmassage und eine stark getreide- oder fleischbetonte Diät können ebenfalls helfen, diese Energie zu erden.

Wenn Sie die in Kapitel 6 beschriebenen Umlenkungsübun-gen nicht durchführen mögen und im Moment auf diesem Weg auch nicht weitergehen wollen, brauchen Sie nur ein- oder zweimal zu ejakulieren, um die überschüssige Energie loszuwerden. Danach hüten Sie den Samen wieder sorgfältig für bessere Gesundheit und Lebensfreude, bis der Druck einmal mehr zu groß wird. Dann können Sie erneut ejakulieren. Selbst wenn Sie in ein bis drei Monaten ein- bis zweimal ejakulieren, werden Sie Ihre Energien wesentlich wirksamer nutzen. Schon durch das regelmäßige Einbehalten Ihres Samens, ohne zu höheren Stufen dieser Praktik vorzustoßen, werden Sie sich vieler Vorteile erfreuen.

Das Kreisenlassen der Energie in den Kopf

Der Außenverschluß, die Dreifingermethode, bewahrt zwar einen großen Teil der Energie davor, verlorenzugehen, fuhrt sie aber nicht automatisch nach oben. Dazu muß eine besondere Technik angewandt werden. Sie lenkt die Sexualkraft aus den unteren Zentren nach oben in die Kraftspeicher im Kopf. Ist der Kopf mit Energie gefüllt, durchströmt die hochwertige Kraft als nächstes den gesamten Organismus. Die Methode gleicht der Hodenatmung (Kapitel 5), mit einem Unterschied: Während die Hodenatmung beim Liebesakt einen Speicher aus Ching Chi aufbaut und im unteren Körperbereich beläßt, wird beim Kreisenlassen der Energie in den Kopf die den Hoden bereits entzogene und durch den Liebesakt zwar erhitzte, sich danach aber wieder abkühlende Energie empor geleitet. Das macht diese Technik viel wirksamer als die reine Hodenatmung allein.

Grundlagen: Nachdem Sie während des Liebesaktes die Technik[1] des Außen Verschlusses angewandt haben, waschen und massieren Sie die Punkte Hui-Yin und Chang-Chiang mit einem Seidentuch oder auch nur mit den Fingern, falls ein solches gerade nicht zur Verfugung stehen sollte. Dann legen Sie sich auf die rechte Seite und ziehen die Kraft aus Penis, Hoden und Hui-Yin in den Kopf empor. Die Zunge muß an den Gaumen gedrückt werden, wie bei allen Übungen, bei denen wir die Energie zum Kreisen bringen. ;

Ziehen Sie die Energie aus den Sexualorganen wie bei der Hodenatmung. Wenden Sie aber beim Einatmen nicht zuviel Kraft an. Bei der Ausatmung fixieren Sie die Energie an dem höchsten Punkt, den sie bereits erreicht hat. Lassen Sie die Kraft beim Ausatmen nicht wieder hinuntersinken. Beim nächsten Einatmen ziehen Sie die Energie dann erneut aus den drei unteren Zentren empor.

Um diesen Vorgang zu veranschaulichen, brauchen Sie sich nur einen sehr langen Strohhalm vorzustellen, den Sie mit Wasser füllen wollen. Das untere Ende dieses Strohhalms ist Dir Penis mit den Hoden, das obere Ende Ihr Scheitelpunkt. Der Strohhalm ist zu lang, als daß man ihn mit einem einzigen Atemzug füllen könnte. Zwischendurch müssen Sie auch ausatmen. Das obere Ende verschließen Sie dabei, weil sonst die Flüssigkeit wieder ausläuft und Sie von vorne beginnen müßten. Halten Sie die Energie also auf der Stufe, auf die Sie sie bereits hinaufgesaugt haben, und atmen Sie aus; beim nächsten Einatmen ziehen Sie die Kraft dann wieder ein Stück höher. Sie werden spüren, wie eine kühle Energie (oder, wenn Sie noch immer sexuell erregt sind, eine heiße) aus Ihren Lenden kommt und die Wirbelsäule hochfließt.

Ziehen Sie die Energie immer höher die Wirbelsäule hoch, bis sie schließlich in den Schädel eindringt und zum Pai-Hui gelangt. Es kann ein oder zwei Monate dauern, bis die Kraft das Kreuzbein zu durchstoßen vermag, doch wird sie dann dafür auch sofort die halbe Wirbelsäule emporschießen. Als nächstes erreicht sie dann mit einem Sprung den Nacken und von dort den Pai-Hui.

Je nach individueller Körperbeschaffenheit und Häufigkeit des .Übens werden Sie nach einigen Wochen oder auch erst Monaten der Praxis Ihren Kopfspeicher gefüllt haben, so daß nun die Kraft vergleichsweise mühelos vorn am Körper wieder nach unten strömen kann. Dabei fließt sie durch den Punkt zwischen den Augenbrauen bis zum Gaumen hinab, wo sie die Zungenspitze erreicht und ihre Bahn durch den Hals und Brustkorb bis zum Nabel fortsetzt. Sammeln Sie die Energie im Nabel; ist dieser (der sogenannte «Tiegel») mit Chi angefüllt, wird sie in die Geschlechtsorgane überfließen, so daß der Kreislauf am Hui-Yin wieder geschlossen wird.

Natürlich können Sie diese Technik nicht von heute auf morgen beherrschen. Wenngleich Sie vielleicht schon innerhalb weniger Tage oder Wochen die lauwarme Energie (den einbe-haltenen Samen) im Unterleib spüren können, mag es noch einige Monate dauern, bis es Ihnen gelingt, diese die ganze Wirbelsäule emporzuleiten und in den Kopf zu lenken. Lassen Sie sich nicht entmutigen. Bleiben Sie beharrlich, eines Tages wird die Kraft mit Sicherheit richtig zu strömen beginnen. Haben Sie den Kreislauf vollends hergestellt, werden Sie spüren, wie ein Strom kühler Yin-Energie die ganze Bahn durchfließt. Sie haben eine wichtige Stufe auf Ihrer Erfolgsleiter erreicht, einen entscheidenden Schritt auf dem Weg zu gesteigerter Kraft und Gesundheit getan.

Zusammenfassung der Methode des Außenverschlusses

A. Während des Liebesakts

1. Wenn Sie spüren, daß Sie kurz vor der Ejakulation stehen, unterbrechen Sie den Samenfluß mit den drei längsten Fingern,

B. Nach dem Liebesakt

1. Waschen und massieren Sie sanft den Hui-Yin (Perineum) und den Chang-Chiang (Steißbein) mit einem zusammengefalteten Seidentuch.

2. Legen Sie sich auf die rechte Seite, und ziehen Sie aus Perus, } } Hoden und Hui-Yin die Kraft in den Kopf hinauf. Ist dieser ‘ damit gefüllt, lassen Sie sie durch Gaumen, Hals, Herzzentrum und Solarplexus strömen, um sie im Nabel zu sammeln. Schließlich lassen Sie die Sexualenergie wieder nach unten fließen, um die Geschlechtsorgane damit zu kräftigen.

Der Innenverschluß: Das Emporziehen des Nektars in die Goldene Blüte (Das «Große Emporziehen»)

Von allen hier beschriebenen Methoden verlangt diese die größte Sorgfalt und Aufmerksamkeit. Die Praktik der Einbehaltung und Transformation des Samens und der Austausch von männlicher und weiblicher Energie werden in allen Einzelheiten erklärt. Sie sollten sich möglichst genau an meine Beschreibung halten. Erst wenn Sie die Grundlagen gemeistert haben, können Sie selber experimentieren und Änderungen durchführen. Sie werden feststellen, daß einige der Methoden bei Ihnen besser wirken als andere. Jeder Mensch ist anders, deshalb benutzen Sie, was am besten für Sie geeignet ist. Vergessen Sie nicht, daß die Einbehaltung des Samens ein Mittel zum Zweck ist und nicht das Ziel selbst. Wir bewahren den Samen, um Energie zu sammeln, damit wir zu größerer Freude an der Liebe und am Leben gelangen.

Wahrhaft esoterische Methoden sind nie kompliziert. Wenn eine bestimmte Technik nur von einem Genie durchgeführt werden kann, kann man sicher sein, daß es sich um keine sonderlich gute Praktik handelt. Das wahre Geheimnis der esoterischen Liebeskunst besteht in ihrer Einfachheit. Ich werde Ihnen alles sorgfältig bis in die Einzelheiten erklären, um Unklarkeiten und Zweifel zu vermeiden, die Sie in die Irre fuhren könnten. Haben Sie die Technik erst einmal verstanden, ist alles sehr einfach. Um der Kürze willen werde ich die Praktik des «Emporziehens des Nektars in die Goldene Blüte» schlicht als «Das Große Emporziehen» bezeichnen. Dies ist der verkürzte Ausdruck, den meine englischsprechenden Schüler anstelle des älteren chinesischen Namens benutzen, und diese Bezeichnung beschreibt den Vorgang auch sehr präzise.

Aus pädagogischen Gründen habe ich die Methode des Großen Emporziehens in mehrere Einzelstufen unterteilt. Wird sie richtig angewandt, haben wir es jedoch mit einer einzigen Bewegung zu tun, die durch die Einheit von Körper, Geist und Seele ausgeführt wird. Sollten Sie das Gefühl haben, daß die drei Aspekte Ihrer Persönlichkeit noch nicht gut integriert sind, üben Sie das Große Emporziehen zunächst auf der körperlichen Ebene. Machen Sie täglich die Meditation des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs, damit Ihre Energie gleichmäßig im Körper verteilt wird. Wenn Sie eine Vielzahl von Blockaden oder Verunreinigungen haben, die Ihr nun höherentwickeltes Chi zu beseitigen versucht, kann das eine ziemlich harte Zeit für Sie werden. Bei beharrlicher Praxis werden Sie jedoch merken, wie das Chi Ihres physischen Körpers sich besser mit der subtilen Sexualessenz und Ihrer Seele integriert. Das erkennen Sie auch daran, daß Ihr Leben reibungsloser und Hebevoller zu verlaufen beginnt.

Die geheime Technik des Großen Emporziehens in Einzelschritten

Um dem Drang zur Ejakulation widerstehen zu können, müssen Sie den Nervenreiz unterbinden, der die Ejakulation auslöst. Dies geschieht im Prinzip, indem Sie die Muskeln des unteren Rumpfs sowie Zähne und Fäuste stark und schnell anspannen. Diese Nervenblockade fuhren Sie durch, nachdem Sie den ersten Zyklus des Stoßens vollendet haben.

Stufe 1: Beenden des Stoßens, festes Anspannen der Muskeln und Rückzug

Als Stoßtechnik für Anfänger empfehle ich drei langsame, flache Stöße, gefolgt von einem tiefen Stoß bis zum Grund der Vagina. Der empfindlichste Teil der Vagina befindet sich innerhalb des etwa vier bis fünf Zentimeter breiten Bereichs unmittelbar hinter dem Scheideneingang. Hier finden wir ein dichtes Nervengeflecht, entsprechend den ersten vier bis fünf Zentimetern des männlichen Perus. Weiter innen wird dieses Netz von Nerven dünner.

Je tiefer Sie stoßen, um so mehr verengt sich Ihre Partnerin. Aus diesem Grund wird die Einbehaltung des Samens dann auch schwieriger. Betrachten wir es wieder aus der Sicht unserer Metapher vom «Krieg der Geschlechter», so entspräche ein zu tiefes Stoßen einem wiederholten zu weiten Vorstoß ins Feindesland, wo der Feind einen einkreisen und niederschlagen kann. Der Rückzug aus einem zu tiefen Stoß ist tückisch, es bedarf dazu großer Disziplin und einem Minimum an Bewegung.

Mit zunehmender Übung werden Sie zunächst sechs, später dann neun flache Stöße ausführen, auf die jeweils ein tiefer folgt.

Abbildung 27
DAS GROSSE EMPORZIEHEN

Vor der nahenden Ejakulation wird das Glied bis auf ca. zwei Zentimeter aus der Scheide zurückgezogen, und zwar unmittelbar im Bereich des G-Punkts.

Wenn Sie mit der Einbehaltung des Samens noch unvertraut sind oder wenn Sie es mit einer neuen, aufregenden Partnerin zu tun haben, wird es Ihnen vielleicht schwerfallen, 81 flache und 9 tiefe Stöße auszuführen, ohne zwischendurch aufhören zu müssen.

Wenn Sie die Ejakulation nahen spüren, so stellen Sie das Stoßen ein, egal wieviel Stöße Sie bereits ausgeführt haben, und verschließen möglichst fest das Diaphragma urogenitale. Ziehen Sie Ihr Glied nun bis auf ca. zwei Zentimeter aus der Scheide, und verharren Sie in dieser Position, bis Sie die Kontrolle über sich wieder erlangt haben. Das Stoßen selbst entwickelt eine große Menge elektrischer Spannung, und beim Liebesakt wird noch mehr elektromagnetische Energie erzeugt, weil die Hunderte von Millionen Samen sich dabei schneller bewegen als sonst. Während sich immer mehr Energie im Genitalsystem ansammelt, schießen die dort befindlichen Nervenimpulse zum Gehirn, bis es den Befehl «Feuer frei!» erteilt. In diesem Sinne findet selbst der Genitalorgasmus im Geist statt. Sie aber sind dabei, Ihren Geist darauf zu trainieren, einen höheren, mental und spirituell besser integrierten Orgasmus zu erreichen.

Versucht Ihre Partnerin, Sie mit ihrem Körper zu umschlingen und Sie tief in sich hineinzuziehen, müssen Sie sich bis zu dem Punkt zurückziehen, an den sie Ihnen nicht mehr folgen kann. Beugt sie ihren Rücken zurück, so folgen Sie ihr nach unten, wobei Ihr Glied an der Scheidenöffnung bleibt. Bringen Sie ihr bei, sich auszuruhen, während Sie eine Pause machen, um Ihre Kontrolle wiederzugewinnen: Vergessen Sie nie, daß Ihre Partnerin zu Ihrem besten Verbündeten wird, sobald Sie sich ihrer liebevollen Mitarbeit versichert haben.

Stufe 2: Neun schnelle, starke Kontraktionen bei angehaltenem Atem Nachdem Sie durch die Nase eingeatmet haben, ziehen Sie die gesamte Unterleibs-, Kiefer und Faustmuskulatur neunmal fest zusammen. Dies ist eine Variante der Kraftsperre mit ihren 36 Wiederholungen. Bei dieser Übung haben Sie mit jedem tiefen Atemzug einmal eine lange Muskelkontraktion durchgeführt. Beim Großen Emporziehen dagegen müssen Sie pro Atemzug neunmal schnell die Muskeln anspannen. Dieses Anspannen der Muskulatur ist sehr kräftig, und es nimmt so viel Energie in Anspruch, daß in den Nerven nur noch wenig davon übrigbleibt, um eine Ejakulation auszulösen. Führen Sie bis zu sechs Zyklen neunmaliger Kontraktion durch, bis der Ejakulations-drang verebbt ist.

Durch diese Methode wird Ihre erregte Sexualenergie aus den Nerven austreten und sich dafür in den sich zusammenziehenden Muskeln sammeln. Der Atemzug nach dem neunmaligen Zusammenziehen muß sehr schnell erfolgen, um die Nervenreizung so häufig wie möglich zu unterbrechen. Haben Sie die neunmalige Kontraktion sechsmal wiederholt, sollte der Ejakulationsdrang deutlich abgeflaut sein. Sie können sich auch mit weniger Zyklen begnügen, wenn Sie dadurch bereits die geforderte Selbstkontrolle wiedergewinnen. Weil Sie in den Armen einer Frau Hegen und Ihr Glied sich in ihrer Scheide befindet, wird Ihr Samen weitaus stürmischer sein als sonst, nämlich wie ein junges, sich aufbäumendes wildes Pferd, das man zum ersten Mal gesattelt hat, um ihm nun die Sporen zu geben. Am Anfang werden Sie die neun Kontraktionen des Großen Emporziehens brauchen, um dem Samen die Zügel anlegen zu können. Mit der Zeit wird es Ihnen jedoch immer leichter fallen, das Aufbäumen zu bezwingen und einen mühelosen und kräftigen Ausritt zu machen.

Die Geschlechtsdrüsen schwellen an, um die Flüssigkeit auszustoßen. Durch die Kontraktionen des Großen Emporziehens schwellen sie wieder ab, weil im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes die Energie herausgepreßt wird, was die sexuell-elektrische Spannung abfallen läßt. Je kürzer die Abstände zwischen den Kontraktionen sind, um so leichter gelingt es den Muskeln, den Samen aufzunehmen. Lassen Sie dazwischen zu viel Zeit verstreichen, können sich die Muskeln nicht stark genug anspannen. Auch das Einatmen muß so schnell erfolgen, daß die Energie nicht wieder in den Sexualbereich zurückströmen kann. Und das Anhalten der Luft während der gesamten neun Kontraktionen schwächt den Nervenimpuls, zu ejakulieren.

Ihr Ziel ist es, die Fließrichtung des Samens umzukehren. Physisch gesehen muß die Samenenergie immer schneller die Wirbelsäule emporgeleitet werden. Diese Beschleunigung wird jedoch nur während der Muskelkontraktion selbst erzielt und nicht während des Beibehaltens der Muskelanspannung. Deshalb bedarf es auch vieler einzelner Kontraktionen, um die Säfte ms Innere des Körpers hineinzupumpen und dem Drang zu begegnen, den Samen ausfließen zu lassen.

Stufe 3: Das Zusammenziehen der Gesäßbacken ;

Ziehen Sie die Gesäßbacken möglichst fest zusammen. Das kann gar nicht genug betont werden. Wir müssen uns der gewaltigen Schubkraft dieses größten aller Körpermuskel bedienen. Pressen Sie also die Hinterbacken so stark zusammen, daß sich Ihr ganzer Körper anhebt.

Das Aufrechterhalten eines guten Muskeltonus in den Gesäßbacken ist von größter Wichtigkeit für die ganze Gesundheit. Ist dieser Muskel nämlich schlaff, sickert die Energie ständig aus dem Körper. Ist er dagegen fest, so wird eines der beiden unteren «Lecks» versiegelt. Das zweite «Leck» ist der ejakulierendePenis.

Preßt man die Muskeln zusammen, laßt sich auch Schmerz leichter ertragen. So wie der Nervenimpuls namens «Schmerz» durch harte Muskelkontraktion abgeschwächt wird, so wird auch der Nervenimpuls, zu ejakulieren, geschwächt. In beiden Fällen absorbieren die Muskeln Energie, was die Nervenleitung unterbricht. Werden bestimmte muskuläre Schlüsselbereiche zusammengezogen, entzieht dies dem Genitaibereich Energie. Das Zusammenziehen der Gesäßbacken ist besonders hilfreich, die Nervenbahn zwischen Gehirn und Geschlechtsorganen am l Ende der Wirbelsäule zu unterbrechen. Pressen Sie die Gesäß-[1] backen zusammen, bis sie steinhart sind. Die Botschaft des Gehirns an die Nerven, den Samen zu ejakulieren, wird abgefangen und erreicht niemals ihr Ziel.

Stufe 4: Das Zusammenbeißen der Zähne

Beißen Sie die Zähne aufeinander, und drücken Sie die Zunge fest gegen den Gaumen. Wenn man die Zähne zusammenbeißt, unterbricht dies den Nervenstrom in Kopf und Nacken und hilft außerdem dabei, die Gesäßbacken fester zusammenzupressen. Beide Muskelkontraktionen müssen gleichzeitig erfolgen, damit sie einander verstärken und eine vollständige Blockade hergestellt wird. Während Sie die Zähne zusammenbeißen, pressen Sie den Samen immer tiefer in den Körper hinein. Der größte Rückzug der Samenflüssigkeit erfolgt gegen Ende des Zyklus:

mit der 7., 8. und 9. Kontraktion preßt man sie am tiefsten ins Innere des Körpers. Bleiben Sie unumstößlich entschlossen, die Säfte zurückzuzwingen. Die Kontraktionen sollten von l bis 9 immer fester und kräftiger werden.

Wahrend Sie den Liebesakt auf diese Weise verlängern und ausdehnen, wird Ihr Vergnügen daran immer intensiver werden. Haben Sie eine hohe Stufe der Freude erreicht, so sollten Sie das Diaphragma urogenitale unentwegt verschlossen halten. Das hindert den Samen daran, sich heimlich aus der Tür zu stehlen. Bremsen Sie die Säfte hinter dem «Deich» ab. Sind sie erst einmal übergeflossen, sind alle Versuche, sie noch aufzuhalten oder ihre Kraft zu zügeln, vergebens. Sie müssen die Ejaku-lation verhindern, bevor der Samen begonnen hat, sich im Körper zu bewegen.

Stufe 5: Das Emporziehen der Energiewelle aus den Genitalien in den Kopf Man kann sich das Große Emporziehen als eine innere Welle ‘vorstellen, die mit Kontraktionen an der Gliedspitze beginnt, sich durch das Perineum und die Gesäßbacken fortsetzt, um schließlich durch die Wirbelsäule in den Kopf zu gelangen. Auf diese Weise wird die Energie, die auf dem Wellenkamm gesteuerter Muskelanspannung reitet, in den Scheitelpunkt gelenkt.

Sollten Sie Schwierigkeiten haben, die Kraft in den Kopf emporzuziehen, versuchen Sie es zunächst damit, sie bis zum Nabel zu leiten. Nachdem sie sich dort eine Weile gesammelt hat, lenken Sie die Energie erneut zum Hui-Yin hinab und die Wirbelsäule empor in den Kopf. Das sollte der Kraft dabei helfen, leichter emporzuströmen, vor allem dann, wenn Sie Ihren Samen sorgfaltig einbehalten haben.

Die Entspannung nach dem Großen Emporziehen weitet die zusammengezogenen Blutgefäße im Penis. Dies ist auch der Zeitpunkt, an dem Sie ohne jede zusätzliche Anstrengung die größte Menge an Yin-Energie aufnehmen. Während des Großen Emporziehens dringt die Kraft der Frau in den Unterleib des Mannes ein. Während der Entspannungsphase schießt sie in die Atmen Sie ein, und ziehen Sie die Orgasmus-Energie in den Kopf empor. Sollte Ihnen das schwerfallen, ziehen Sie die Kraft erst in den Nabel, gestatten ihr, sich dort zu sammeln, und lenken sie zurück zum Hui-Yin und dann die Wirbelsäule empor.

Beim Ausatmen lassen Sie alle Yang-Energie frei und losen alle Spannungen, indem Sie Kopf, Hals, Brustkorb, Unterleib und Becken lockern. Lassen Sie die Entspannung als Welle von oben nach unten durch den gesamten Körper fluten, und erlauben Sie der Energie, in Ihre Partnerin einzuströmen.

höheren Zentren empor, was Sie besonders dann bemerken werden, wenn Sie die Übung der Kraftsperre regelmäßig durchgeführt haben.

Am Anfang mag e&den Anschein haben, als ob diese Technik sehr schwierig sei und den Spaß am Liebesakt regelrecht ruiniere, doch mit etwas Übung wird es Ihnen immer leichter fallen. Halten Sie den rebellischen Samen zurück, der durch das Tor im unteren Körper preschen und Ihnen Ihre Kräfte rauben will. Mit jedem Mal wird Ihr Wille zur Beherrschung :des Samenverlustes stärker werden; und je stärker Ihre Willenskraft bei der Bewahrung der Sexualessenz wird, um so stärker wird sie auch in allen anderen Bereichen Ihres Lebens. Bei der Arbeit, in der Freizeit, in Ihren Familienbeziehungen werden Sie einen solch kraftvollen Willen zur Liebe und zur Spiritualität entfalten, daß Sie täglich aufs neue darüber staunen werden.

Stufe 6: Nach der Erektion: erneutes Stoßen und Sanftes Saugen

Nach dem ersten Zyklus des Stoßens und der starken Kontraktionen können Sie die Eichel, den Kopf Ihres Penis, gelegentlich beim Stoßen in der Frau zusammenziehen. Sie ist wie ein Säugling, der sanft die Milch der Mutterbrust saugt. Auf diese Weise werden Sie das Yin behutsam einziehen. Das Große Emporziehen ist um so wirkungsvoller, wenn der Penis durch das Sanfte Saugen bereits mit Yin-Energie gefüllt wurde.

Seien Sie sich klar bewußt, daß das Sanfte Saugen und das Große Emporziehen zwei verschiedene Techniken sind. Zum Sanften Saugen gehört das regelmäßige Stoßen. Nur die Eichel, die Hoden und das Diaphragma urogenitale werden dabei kontrahiert, die anderen Muskeln bleiben entspannt und saugen keine Kraft auf. Bei dieser Technik leiten wir die Energie auch nicht tief in den Körper hinein. Wir hindern unsere eigene Energie daran, langsam vorwärtszuströmen und plötzlich in die Frau hineinzudrängen. Außerdem wird der Penis selbst mit Energie gefüllt, die wir mit dem Großen Emporziehen zum Kopf emporleiten.

Das Große Emporziehen als Praktik für die Frau

Frauen sollten ebenfalls das Große Emporziehen praktizieren und mit ihrer Scheide die Yang-Kraft des Mannes aus dem Penis einsaugen. Eine ausführliche Beschreibung der Liebestechniken für Frauen gibt der nächste Band dieser Reihe, der sich mit dem Ovar-Kung Fu befaßt. Vorerst genügt es, die Prinzipien des Samen-Kung Fu auf die weibliche Anatomie zu übersetzen und das Große Emporziehen mit den Eierstöcken durchzuführen. Frauen verstehen diesen Vorgang oft sehr gut intuitiv, was auch ihre sexuelle Überlegenheit ausmacht. Doch gibt es immer noch höhere, verfeinertere Stufen der Liebe. Ich möchte den Frauen ausdrücklich empfehlen, sich ebenfalls in der Vermeidung des Genitalorgasmus zu üben. Es wird ihren Energieverlust während des Liebesakts erheblich mindern. Auch die Frau kann einen «Höheren» Orgasmus erlangen, der als «Geheimnisvolles Tor» zum Tao dient. Gemeinsam können Mann und Frau das Tao über den Weg der «Zweifachen Höherentwicklung» erreichen.

Das Große Emporziehen und Selbstbefriedigung

Die Methode des Großen Emporziehens kann sehr gut von alleinstehenden Männern angewandt werden, die keine Partnerin finden oder freiwillig im Zölibat leben. Manche Männer mit Partnerinnen ziehen es vielleicht ebenfalls vor, am Anfang allein zu üben. Ich möchte dies sogar den meisten Männern empfehlen. Es ist viel leichter, den Drang zur Ejakulation zu unterbinden, wenn man nicht noch zusätzlich von der Hitze und der Berührung einer Frau stimuliert wird. Die Technik bleibt gleich, mit dem einzigen Unterschied, daß der Mann seine Eichel durch Streicheln und Massieren erregt, anstatt sie in die Scheide einer Frau einzuführen.

Das ist etwas anderes als Masturbation, die mit dem Ejaku-lieren endet. Sie müssen den Drang zur Ejakulation unterbinden, indem Sie die schnellen kraftvollen Kontraktionen und Muskelanspannungen des Großen Emporziehens anwenden. Dies können Sie in jeder beliebigen Stellung tun, im Stehen, Sitzen oder Liegen. Am Anfang wird es besser sein, dabei zu stehen. Ihre Füße sind dann fest mit dem Boden verwurzelt, und der Kontakt zur kühlenden Yin-Energie kann leichter hergestellt werden.

Wenn Sie das Große Emporziehen zunächst allein üben, können Sie genau überprüfen, ob Sie die erste Stufe dieser Methode, die physische Kontrolle über die Ejakulation, schon gemeistert haben.

Erregen Sie Ihr Glied so lange, bis Sie den ersten Ejakulations-reiz verspüren. Dann führen Sie das Große Emporziehen durch, bevor sich der Samen in Bewegung setzt. Das wiederholte Anspannen der Muskeln und das Ziehen erfolgen so lange, bis das Glied wieder erschlafft. Der Steifheitsgrad Ihres Glieds ist der Gradmesser Ihrer Beherrschung des Großen Emporziehens. Je schneller Sie damit die Erektion zum Abflauen bringen, um so besser meistern Sie diese Technik. Schließlich werden Sie die Erektion durch reine Geisteskraft umkehren können, indem Sie dem Glied einfach die Energie entziehen und sie ohne jede Muskelanspannung in den Kopf leiten.

Diese Methode kann sehr hilfreich sein für sexuell frustrierte Männer. Vollziehen Sie den Liebesakt einfach in Ihrem eigenen Inneren, zwischen den Yin- und Yang-Polen Ihres Körpers, indem Sie sich vorstellen, Sie würden das Ching Chi nach oben .ziehen, um sich mit Ihrem höchsten Zentrum, dem Scheitelpunkt, zu vereinigen. Wenn Sie beim Masturbieren Ihren Samen ausgeben, wird er gänzlich vergeudet. Das. ist viel schlimmer, als wenn Sie Ihren Samen an eine Frau verlieren, die davon immerhin profitieren kann und im Austausch ihre liebliche Yin-Essenz hergibt. Selbst wenn Sie Ihren Samen einbehalten, bietet Ihnen die Masturbation lediglich eine sehr trockene Yang-Ener-gie, die zwar äußerst feurig und intensiv sein kann, aber nicht ausgeglichen ist, solange Sie nicht mit höheren Meditationsstufen vertraut sind, die den Yin-Pol im Mann entwickeln. Aus diesem Grund sollte man auch nur zu Übungszwecken mastur-bieren. Gibt man sich dem Masturbieren zu sehr hin, kann es schließlich die eigene Reifung behindern. Bei manchen Männern wird sich diese Übungsstufe über ein bis zwei Jahre hinziehen, abhängig von der Häufigkeit Ihres Übens des Großen Emporziehens und der anderen Techniken wie auch vom Vorhandensein einer geeigneten Partnerin.

Das kraftvolle Chi der Morgenerektion

Eine weitere Gelegenheit, das Große Emporziehen allein zu praktizieren, ergibt sich für alle Männer, wenn sie nachts oder früh am Morgen mit einer Erektion aufwachen. Diese Erektion ist Zeugnis für ein sehr kraftvolles und reines Chi, das produziert wird, nachdem Körper und Geist vom Schlaf erfrischt sind. Manche Taoisten sind sogar der Auffassung, es sei das stärkste Chi, das einem Mann überhaupt zur Verfugung steht. Es ist noch unbefleckt von den psychischen Giften anderer, und der Geist ist entspannt und frei von äußerem Druck, so daß er leichter Energie aufnehmen kann als bei anderen Gelegenheiten.

Sie können das Große Emporziehen im Bett, auf der rechten Seite liegend, so lange praktizieren, bis die Erektion verschwunden ist. Eventuell sind mehr Kontraktionen erforderlich, weil sich im Samenpalast besonders viel Energie angesammelt hat. Gelangt dabei zu viel Energie in den Kopf, sollten Sie diese Energie durch geistige Konzentration in den Nabel hinunterführen und sie sich dort in einem kleinen Kreis von etwa 7 Zentimetern Durchmesser spiralförmig drehen lassen. Lassen Sie die Energie erst im Uhrzeigersinn und anschließend gegen den' Uhrzeigersinn kreisen. Das wird die überschüssige Energie ins Gleichgewicht bringen und zentrieren. Sollte dies nicht genügen, können Sie außerdem die Energie aus dem Körper leiten.

Das Ableiten zu starken Drucks

Während der starken Kontraktionen wird die Kraft aus dem unteren Rumpf nach oben gepreßt, während gleichzeitig Kraft vom Kopf nach unten gedrückt wird. Dadurch entsteht im mittleren Rumpf ein gewaltiger Druck, der umgelenkt werden muß. Schließlich kann er weder durch das Glied noch durch den After entweichen, weil Sie diese beiden verschlossen halten.

Dieser Druck schießt hinauf in Ohren und Augen und entweicht durch diese Körperöffnungen. Während die Kraft durch diese Sinnesorgane fließt, werden sie belebt und gekräftigt. Hält man die Augen dabei geöffnet und bewegt sie etwas in ihren Höhlen, fließt ihnen noch mehr regenerierende, heilende Energie zu.

Die natürliche geistige Beherrschung der Ejakulation

Nach taoistischer Überlieferung besaßen unsere Vorfahren in den frühen Zeiten der Menschheit die Fähigkeit, ihre Sexualität instinktiv zu steuern. Sie konnten Gefühle, Ejakulation und Sexualität nach Wunsch lenken. Nach und nach gingen sie dieser Fähigkeit verlustig. Durch ein Übermaß an sexuellen Genüssen, durch Vergnügungs- und Trunksucht und durch ein Zuviel an denkerischer Tätigkeit verlor sich diese Gabe im Laufe der Zeit. Doch läßt sie sich wiedergewinnen, indem der Geist dazu erzogen wird, das Aussickern von Sexualenergie automatisch zu unterbinden. Der Schlüssel zu dieser Fähigkeit besteht darin, das Große Emporziehen so lange zu üben, bis es zu einem instinktiven Reflex geworden ist. Dann haben Sie den verborgenen Schlüssel gefunden, und der Nektar Ihrer Sexualessenz wird unentwegt zum Scheitelpunkt, der Goldenen Blüte, emporströ-men. Die Zirbeldrüse ist an dieser automatischen Kontrolle entscheidend beteiligt.

Das höchste Ziel besteht darin, nach 6 bis 21 Monaten oder zehntausendmaligem Großen Emporziehen die Energie allein durch reine Geisteskraft emporleiten zu können, unabhängig von Ort und Zeit, ob im Stehen oder Sitzen oder während einer Unterhaltung. Wenn Sie mit Hilfe des Großen Emporziehens das lecke Tor eine Woche lang ununterbrochen versiegelt halten können, kann man sagen, daß Sie nun begonnen haben, Ihre Sexualität zu bemeistern. Haben Sie das erreicht, konzentrieren Sie sich auf den Scheitel (die Zirbeldrüse) und versuchen, die Energie ohne große Anstrengung durch reine Gedankenkraft hinaufzu-lenken; dann wird sich das Tor automatisch so lange schließen, wie Sie es wünschen. Wenn Sie Ihre Aufmerksamkeit auf den Scheitelpunkt richten, wird die Kraft in den Kopf emporgezogen.

Manche Schüler begehen den Fehler, zu oft emporzuziehen oder es falsch zu machen, so daß die Kraft im Herzzentrum steckenbleibt. Um sie zu befreien, trinken Sie warmen Kräutertee mit viel Honig, oder streichen Sie die Energie mit der Hand vorne am Körper zum Nabel hinunter. Dort läßt sie sich ungefährlicher speichern. Bleibt sie trotzdem im Herzen, atmen Sie ganz normal, und versuchen Sie, diesen Zustand mit der Kraft des Geistes zu beheben. Lassen Sie Ihr Chi aus dem Perineum (Hui-Yin) emporsteigen. Atmen Sie ein, und «denken» Sie die Kraft vom Hui-Yin (dem «Tor des Lebens und des Todes») zum Scheitelpunkt (Zirbeldrüse) empor, um sie dann zum dritten Auge (Yin-Tang) zwischen den Augenbrauen zu fuhren. Dort verharren Sie eine Weile. Dann atmen Sie die Energie nach unten. Wenn sie durch Ihr Herz fließt, stellen Sie sich vor, daß die Kraft wie ein Wasserfall nach unten in den Nabel strömt. Wenn Sie dies 9- bis 36mal tun, wird die im Herzen gestaute Kraft nach und nach verschwinden.

Schließlich werden Sie eine Stufe erreichen, auf der Sie Ihren Geschlechtstrieb jederzeit beherrschen können. Selbst wenn Sie nachts eine Erektion bekommen, werden Sie die Kraft einfach emporziehen, die Erektion wird nachlassen, und Geist und j Geschlechtsorgane werden eins sein. Dann können Sie die Sexualität ebenso beherrschen wie etwa die willkürliche Muskulatur Ihrer Arme. Es hängt vom einzelnen ab, wie lange es dauert, bis er diese Stufe erreicht. Manche Menschen kommen schneller voran, andere brauchen mehr Zeit. Der Schlüssel dazu ist die Praxis! Nachdem Sie eine Weile geübt haben, wird Ihr Selbstvertrauen wachsen, und Sie werden Ihren Geschlechtsorganen befehlen können und das Tor der Unsterblichen (das Tor des Lebens und des Todes) nach Beheben öffnen und schließen.

Praktische Hinweise:

1. Nachdem es Ihnen ohne jeden Zweifel gelungen ist, durch geistige Kraft den Drang zur Ejakulation zu unterbinden, kann es geschehen, daß Sie am zweiten oder dritten Tag Ihrer Übung leichte Schmerzen im Hui-Yin oder im Penis verspüren. Das ist eine ganz normale Erscheinung. Der Geist befiehlt den Muskeln sich zusammenzuziehen und die Flüssigkeit zurückzudrängen, wozu es großer Muskelkraft bedarf. Es ist nur natürlich, • wenn Sie in diesem Bereich einen Muskelkater bekommen. Reiben Sie einfach den Hui-Yin, und versuchen Sie, die Muskeln zu entspannen. Nach mehrmaligem Üben werden die Beschwerden verschwinden.

2. Manche Menschen, die auf diese Weise eine große Menge Energie angesammelt haben, fühlen sich dadurch sehr überhitzt. Andere leiden vielleicht unter Brechreiz oder Kopfschmerzen, weil sich die Sexualenergie im Kopf oder im Brustkorb gestaut hat und die entwickelte Kraft zu stark wird. Dies sind milde Formen des «Kundalini-Syndroms». Mit Honig und Brustmassage allein lassen sich diese Beschwerden nicht lindern. Möglicherweise müssen Sie viel laufen oder sich sonstwie körperlich anstrengen, um die Energie zu verbrennen. Sie sollte möglichst auf unschädliche Weise abgebaut werden. Das Herstellen des .Kleinen Energiekreislaufs ist das sicherste Ventil zur gleichmäßigen Verteilung der Sexualenergie im Körper.

3. Auf den letzten Stufen der automatischen geistigen Kontrolle der Sexualenergie wird es nicht mehr nötig sein, die Zähne zusammenzubeißen und After und Gesäßbacken anzuspannen. Dann bleibt der ganze Körper entspannt, während Sie ausschließlich das Diaphragma urogenitale und das Perineum kontrahieren.

4. Wenn Sie den automatischen Innenverschluß erreichen wollen, sollten Sie daran denken, daß Sie diesen überall und jederzeit üben können, ob Sie nun Auto fahren, irgendwo sitzen, Kaffee trinken oder arbeiten. Üben Sie die Kontraktion des Diaphragma urogenitale, also die vordere Kontraktion, ohne dabei die Gesäßbacken anzuspannen. Tun Sie dies so lange, bis Sie jede Erektion oder jeden Ejakulationsdrang mit einem kurzen Gedankenfunken völlig unter Kontrolle bringen können.

Die Transformation der Sexualenergie in spirituelle Liebe

9. KAPITEL

Der Austausch von Yin und Yang: Der Tal-Orgasmus

«Yang kann nur in Zusammenarbeit mit Yin wirken, Yin kann nur in der Gegenwart von Yang wachsen.»

Die Liebesberaterin des Gelben Kaisers

Unser Universum verändert sich unentwegt durch den ewigen Strom der Energien von Yin und Yang. Der zyklische Wechsel von Tag und Nacht stellt eine Verkörperung des Yin-Yang-Prinzips dar. Durch diesen sich wandelnden Energiefluß, durch dieses Atmen des Himmels, kann alles Lebende erst gedeihen. Gäbe es nur den Tag und keine Nacht, würde alles verbrennen; gäbe es dagegen nur die Nacht ohne den Tag, besäße nichts die Kraft zu wachsen. Als Lebewesen unterliegt auch der Mensch den Gesetzen der Wechselwirkung von Yin und Yang.

Der Mensch kann nur dann ein glückliches Leben fuhren, wenn er sich in Harmonie mit den Prinzipien des Lebens befindet. Verstößt er gegen das Gesetz des Austauschs von Yin und Yang, indem er die sexuelle Vereinigung der Yin- mit der Yang-Energie unterbindet, kann die Energie im Körper nicht fließen, wird die Lebenskraft langsam zum Stillstand kommen und entweichen. Dann wird das Leben für ihn zu einem langen Marsch in die Depression, der gelegentlich von Spasmen des sklavischen Verhaftetseins an die Leidenschaften unterbrochen wird.

Wenn Sie gelernt haben, den Ejakulationsdrang zu verhindern, oder sich auch nur vorgenommen haben, das Tao der Liebe zu erlernen, stehen Sie an der Schwelle zu einer neuen Erfahrung. Diese Erfahrung wird Ihre Körper- und Geisteswahrnehmung gründlich verändern, wird dazu fuhren, daß Sie Ihren Liebespartner mit völlig anderen Augen sehen und zu einem neuen Verständnis von Sexualität und Liebe finden.

Das «Emporziehen des Nektars in die Goldene Blüte» ist unvollständig, solange kein Austausch von Yin- und Yang-Energie stattfindet. Die Goldene Blüte ist das Licht auf dem Scheitelpunkt des Hauptes; das Große Emporziehen bewahrt den Nektar, die Sexualessenz. Erst durch den Austausch mit Ihrer Liebespartnerin wird das Ching transformiert. Während dieses Vorgangs erleben Sie eine Sexualität, die als tiefe Liebe empfunden wird. Ihr Orgasmus wird völlig anderer Art sein als der, den Sie durch die einfache Ejakulation kannten. Während des ausgedehnten Liebens wird die Freude Ihren ganzen Körper durchfluten und erfüllen. Der hastig ejakulierende Mann kennt diesen Ganzkörperorgasmus nicht, weil sich sein sexuelles Vergnügen vornehmlich auf den Genitalbereich beschränkt. Am wichtigsten aber ist, daß Sie durch diese Praktik ein neues inneres Gleichgewicht erfahren werden, das, noch lange nachdem die Freuden der sexuellen Begegnung verklungen und zu einem v Schimmer der Erinnerung geworden sind, in Ihrem Körper gegenwärtig bleiben wird.

Mit dieser Methode wird die Penetration auf eine halbe Stunde, eine ganze Stunde, auf zwei Stunden oder noch länger ausgedehnt. Diese Form der sexuellen Liebe können Sie unbegrenzt .genießen, ohne dafür mit Ihrer Lebenskraft büßen zu müssen. Der entscheidende Unterschied zur gewöhnlichen, nicht-esoterischen Praxis besteht in dem andersartigen Orgasmus, iden man durch Sexual-Kung Fu erzielt. Den gewöhnlichen Höhepunkt könnte man den «Gipfel-Orgasmus» nennen: ein kurzer Augenblick intensivster, ja quälender Freude - und dann nichts,

Die Taoisten dagegen empfehlen den «Tal-Orgasmus»: eine sich ständig ausdehnende Orgasmuswoge, die den ganzen Körper durchflutet. Der Tal-Orgasmus beschert uns eine sich nur allmählich steigernde, dafür aber weitaus intensivere Ekstase. Carlos Suares verwendet ein ähnliches Bild, um die wahre sexuelle Liebe von der reinen Ejakulation abzugrenzen: «Erotisch gesehen, ist der Mensch eher wie ein Tal, das von zahllosen

Bächen bewässert wird, als wie eine tiefe Schlucht, durch die ein tosender Strom jagt.»

Während des Tal-Orgasmus können die Liebenden sich entspannen und sich so viel Zeit lassen, wie sie nur wollen, um zärtlicher zueinander zu sein. Es findet keine panische Explosion statt, sondern eine Welle feinstofQicher, hochgepolter Energie folgt auf die andere und badet die miteinander verschmolzenen Liebenden in ihrer Kraft. Der Tal-Orgasmus ist keine Technik, sondern vielmehr eine Erfahrung, welche die Liebenden sich selbst angedeihen lassen. Doch läßt sich diese Erfahrung fördern, indem Sie auf folgende erprobte Weise vorgehen:

1. Die zeitliche Koordinierung: Nach dem Stoßen ruht man sich aus, entspannt sich und tauscht Energie aus.

Nachdem Sie die kraftvollen Kontraktionen des Großen Emporziehens durchgeführt haben, beginnen Sie wieder -zu stoßen. Nach einem weiteren Zyklus von 81 flachen und 9 tiefen Stößen werden Sie sich möglicherweise von neuem der Ejakula-tion nähern. Inzwischen ist die Frau durch Ihre Leidenschaft stark angeregt worden und steht auch vielleicht kurz vor dem Orgasmus.

Ist sie sehr erregt, beginnt die Scheide vermehrt Gleitflüssigkeit abzusondern. Diese Flüssigkeit enthält große Mengen Yin-Energie. Nach dem zweiten Zyklus von Stößen sollten Sie erneut das Große Emporziehen durchführen, um die Ejakulation zu verhindern. Wenn Ihre Partnerin unmittelbar vor dem Orgasmus steht, hören Sie auf, sich zu bewegen, während sie das Große Emporziehen praktiziert. In beiden Fällen ist nun genügend Triebkraft für Ihre Sexualenergien vorhanden, und Sie sollten sich auf die oberen Zentren des Körpers zubewegen.

An diesem Punkt hören Sie auf zu stoßen, und beginnen Sie, die belebenden Energien mit Ihrer Partnerin auszutauschen. Während Sie auf sanfte Weise die heiße männliche Yang-Energie in sie verströmen, wird sie die kühle weibliche Yin-Energie in Ihren Körper fließen lassen. Vergessen Sie nicht, daß Sie ihre Kraft nur dann aufnehmen können, wenn Sie ihr auch großzügig von Ihrer eigenen geben. Durch diesen Austausch erreichen beide die Heilung: Der Mann bedarf der sanften, empfänglichen Energien der Frau, um zu einem vollkommenen Gleichgewicht zu gelangen. Die Frau wiederum braucht die expansiven männlichen Energien, um zu ihrer eigenen höheren Harmonie zu finden. Dies ist es auch, was die Geschlechter überhaupt erst gegenseitig anzieht.

2. Die Stellung: Beendigung des aktiven Stoßens und Umarmens der Partnerin in jeder beliebigen angenehmen Stellung.

Ist der Mann sehr schwer, sollte die Frau oben liegen. Ist sie kräftiger als er, sollte sie meistens unten liegen, damit er die Kraft leichter emporziehen kann. Auf jeden Fall sollten Sie eine Stellung wählen, in der Sie beide lange Zeit bequem bleiben können. Halten Sie auch zwei zusätzliche Kopfkissen bereit.

3. Das koordinierte Atmen der Liebenden: «Chi» bedeutet im Chinesischen «Atem». Das Leben ist Atem. Alles, was lebt, kennt die Qualität des Ein- und Ausatmens oder eine Kombination von beiden. Aus diesem Grund wird auch in der chinesischen Philosophie alles als mehr oder weniger Yin (Ausatmung) oder Yang (Einatmung) klassifiziert. Der Liebesakt ist im Prinzip ein Akt der Atmung: Man atmet das eigene Ching in den Körper und die Seele des Liebespartners.

Nachdem Sie das Stoßen beendet und Ihre Partnerin umarmt haben, stimmen Sie nun Ihren Atem aufeinander ab. Jeder der Partner legt sein Ohr neben die Nase des anderen, wobei Brust an Brust liegt. In dieser Stellung können Sie mühelos die Atmung des Partners spüren. Beim Liebesakt stimulieren und harmonisieren die Atemzyklen alle Lebens prozesse. Atmen die Liebenden physisch im Einklang miteinander, werden sie dadurch eins. Der Rhythmus aller ihrer Energien zentriert sich, so daß sie gemeinsam zur Urquelle ihres Lebensstroms vorstoßen können. Sie sollten so sensibel für die Atmung der Partnerin werden, daß Sie sich in ihrem Atem ebenso intensiv und kraftvoll spüren, als würden Sie Ihr Glied bis in die Tiefe ihrer Scheide stoßen. ‘

Abbildung 29

Der gewöhnliche Orgasmus

Die Talorgasmen sind spontane Öffnungen, durch welche die Liebenden zu höheren spirituellen Stufen vorstoßen können. • ‘

4. Das Einatmen durch die Wirbelsäule bis in den Kopf und das Ausatmen durch den Penis: Nachdem beide eine Weile gemeinsam im Einklang geatmet haben, ziehen Sie die Kraft langsam zum Scheitel empor. Beim Einatmen fuhrt der Mann die Yin-Energie mit Gedankenkraft aus der Scheide in den Penis, während die

Frau die Yang-Kraft aus dem Penis in die Scheide «denkt». Dann ziehen beide die Energie zum Hui-Yin (Perineum), dann zum Chang-Chiang (Steißbein) und schließlich stufenweise bis zum Pai-Hui (Scheitelpunkt) empor. Von dort strömt sie dann durch die Zunge hinab, die während der ganzen Übung am Gaumen liegt.

Nehmen Sie nicht die Muskelkraft zu Hilfe wie beim Großen Emporziehen, sondern steuern Sie die Sexualenergie nur mit der Kraft der Gedanken. Denken Sie die Energie empor. Diese Anweisung mag sich zunächst verwirrend lesen, doch wer mit dem Sexual-Kung Fu begonnen hat, wird die Kraft bereits in sich spüren und ganz intuitiv verstehen, was ich meine. Wenn der Geist gelernt hat, seine eigene Chi-Energie, die Körper und Geist miteinander verbindet, zu lenken, wird die Kraft schließlich in den Kopf emporsteigen.

Am Anfang können Sie den Austausch von Yin- und Yang-Kraft mit einer langen, tiefen Muskelkontraktion beschleunigen. Wenn die Scheidenflüssigkeit in der Frau wallt, atmen Sie langsam und tief durch die Nase ein. Dabei spannen Sie den Penis, den Hui-Yin, den After, die Gesäßbacken, den Kiefer und die Fäuste, und zwar in dieser Reihenfolge. Während Sie die Kontraktion starker werden lassen, denken Sie die Kraft in den Penis hinein, vorbei am Hui-Yin in den Chang-Chiang und die Wirbelsäule empor bis zum Scheitelpunkt. Ist das Einatmen beendet, halten Sie Atem und Kontraktion so lange an, wie Sie nur können. Ziehen Sie dabei die Kraft unentwegt in den Kopf empor, bis Sie die Luft nicht mehr länger anhalten können.

Während Sie die Luft ausatmen, geben Sie Ihre überschüssige Yang-Energie und Hitze an die Frau ab. Dazu müssen Sie allerdings sehr tief ausatmen und alle Spannung von sich weichen lassen, indem Sie Kopf, Hals, Brustkorb, Unterleib und Beckenbereich wieder entspannen. Lassen Sie die Entspannung als Welle von oben nach unten durch Ihren Körper fluten. Hat diese sanfte Woge die Beckenregion erreicht, geben Sie die Wärmeenergie des Yang - nicht jedoch den Samen! - durch Ihr Glied an die Frau weiter. Kontraktion und Entspannung sollten sehr sanft ausgeführt werden und beide fühlen lassen, wie es zwischen den Körpern pulsiert.

Abbildung 30

Der Austausch von Yin und Yang Beide Partner ziehen die Energie langsam zum Pai-Hui, dem Scheitelpunkt, empor, bevor sie sie miteinander austauschen.

Bieten Sie Ihrer Liebespartnerin liebevoll Ihre Energieessenz dar. Diese Hingabe wird begleitet von jeder nur erdenklichen Liebe und Verehrung. Das hat nichts mit Sentimentalität zu tun! Die Frau wird dadurch inspiriert, ihre nährende Yin-Essenz hinzugeben und das Yang völlig in ihr Yin aufzunehmen. Dies ist ihre wahre Erfüllung. Wenn Sie jedoch Ihre eigene Energie zurückzuhalten versuchen, wird sie, bewußt oder unbewußt, Ihre Distanz spüren, Ihr hartnäckiges Ego, das in gewissem Sinne nichts anderes ist als Energie, die sich an einer Stelle gestaut hat (beim Mann meistens im Kopf). Gestatten Sie ihr, die Yang-Energie aufzunehmen, die sie braucht, indem Sie den Überschuß an Yang geben, der Sie sonst zur Ejakulation getrieben hätte. Wenn der Ejakulationsdrang mit zunehmender Entspannung von Ihnen weicht, wird die Yin-Energie Ihren gesamten Körper durchfluten, während Ihr Yang das gleiche im Körper der Partnerin tut. i Am Anfang dieser Praktik kann die Freude an der sexuellen Liebe Sie derart überwältigen, daß es Ihnen unmöglich erscheint, die Yin-Energie Ihrer Partnerin von Ihrer eigenen Yang-Kraft zu unterscheiden. Vielleicht erscheint Ihnen alles wie eine einzige heiße, explosive Energie. Indem Sie jedoch Ihr Nervensystem nach und nach aufbauen, um immer stärkere Energien zu verkraften und mit ihnen umzugehen, wird dieser Austausch von Yin und Yang Ihnen schließlich immer bewußter werden. Wenn Sie Energie an aufeinanderfolgenden Punkten im Körper bilden, werden sich Ihnen und Ihrer Partnerin immer größere Austauschmöglichkeiten erschließen. Beginnen Sie damit, die Kraft in den Hui-Yin zu ziehen und sie meditativ dort zu halten.

Steht dem Mann mehr Energie zur Verfügung als der Frau, kann er ihr helfen, die Zentren zu öffnen, indem er seine Kraft in ihre verschlossenen Zentren schickt; dabei konzentrieren sich beide auf diese Punkte. Das Chi fließt stets dorthin, wo der Geist sich konzentriert hat. Nachdem die Kraft in den Hui-Yin (Peri-neum) geströmt ist, leiten Sie sie zum Chang-Chiang (Steißbein) empor. Wenn Sie auf diese Stelle meditieren, werden Sie ein leises, leicht schmerzhaftes Prickeln auf dem Scrotum fühlen, wahrend sich das Zentrum öffnet. Dann führen Sie die Energie zum Ming-Meng, dem Tor des Lebens, am Rücken gegenüber dem Nabel, und zum T-l l an den Nebennierendrüsen. Spüren Sie die Wärme an dieser Stelle, leiten Sie sie höher zum Punkt Gia-Pe zwischen den Schulterblättern.

Ist sie dorthin geströmt, wird sich der Punkt stark erwärmen, und diese Warme wird sich in die Lunge ausbreiten. Als nächstes wird die Kraft zum «Smaragd-» oder «Jade-Kissen», dem Punkt Yu-Chen am oberen Halswirbel im Hinterkopfbereich, geführt. Das Öffnen dieses Zentrums wird von einem Gefühl der Schwere begleitet. Dann lenken Sie die Energie zum Scheitel, und zwar auf einer gedachten Linie zwischen Ohr und Nase. Eventuell fühlt sich Ihr Kopf sehr schwer, oder Sie haben die Empfindung, als ob sich etwas von unten in Ihren Schädel bohrt. Danach führen Sie die Kraft zum Punkt mitten zwischen den Augenbrauen.

Bedenken Sie, daß Sie in einem einzigen Liebesakt nicht sämtliche Punkte auf einmal öffnen können. Es kann eines mehrfachen Austausches von Yin und Yang bedürfen, um einen Punkt zu öffnen. Wenn man ejakuliert, läßt sich kaum Energie austauschen, weil der Mann viel Kraft verliert und nur wenig übrigbleibt, was nach oben geleitet werden könnte. Sind die oberen Zentren mit Kraft angefüllt, wird die Energie von der Zunge hinabströmen. Führen Sie sie dann zum Nabel, um sie dort zu sammeln.

5. Die Plateau-Phase: Die Verschmelzung des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs der Liebenden: Abhängig von der Vitalenergie und der geistigen Entwicklung der einzelnen Partner, wird das Liebespaar im Laufe der Zeit neue «Öffnungen» während des Liebens erleben. Das bedeutet, daß Sie plötzlich einen «Quantensprung» in Ihrer Gefühls- und Bewußtseinsentwicklung gemacht haben. In der Regel geschieht dies beim Austausch von Yin und Yang während der Plateau-Phase: Das ist die Phase des Liebesspiels, in der Sie keine leidenschaftlichen Stöße fuhren. Die «Gipfel» sind die Augenblicke kurz vor dem durch das Große Emporziehen vermiedenen Orgasmus. Das «Plateau» ist der körperlich passive Austausch von Energie zwischen diesen Gipfeln.

Die subtilen Energien der ruhenden Körper sind während dieser Periode jedoch alles andere als passiv: Sie bewegen sich sehr dynamisch zwischen den Partnern hin und her und bauen eine neue Ebene sexuell-elektromagnetischer Spannung auf. Dabei handelt es sich um eine innere Energiewelle, um eine Meereswoge, die sich erhebt, an Wucht gewinnt und sich schließlich bricht, nur um von der nächsten Woge ersetzt zu werden. Ist die Sexualenergie durch Stoßen intensiviert und mit Hilfe des Großen Emporziehens entlang der Bahn des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs die Wirbelsäule emporgeleitet worden, kann der Austausch von Yin und Yang zwischen den Liebenden auf sehr unterschiedliche Weise stattfinden.

Am Anfang mag dieser Energieaustausch chaotisch wirken und zwischen irgendwelchen beliebigen Körperpunkten stattfinden, die einander berühren. Je vertrauter Sie jedoch mit der durch die Unterbindung der Ejakulation gewonnenen Energie werden, um so leichter werden Sie spüren, wie die Energie klar den Bahnen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs die Wirbelsäule empor folgt, um vorne am Körper wieder hinabzuströmen. Während der Plateau-Phase werden Sie dann vielleicht einen Wärmestrom spüren, der zwischen der Scheide Ihrer Partnerin und Ihrem Penis sowie von Mund zu Mund und Brust zu Brust fließt.

Abbildung 31

Durch die Berührung der Zungen wird der Kleine Energiekreislauf in beiden Partnern geschlossen.

Die beiden individuellen Kleinen Energiekreisläufe werden miteinander verbunden, um einen größeren Kreislauf herzustellen, der beide Körper durchströmt. In beiden Liebenden wird das Energiegleichgewicht harmonisiert. Eine tiefe, liebevolle Verbundenheit auch im Alltagsleben ergibt sich daraus. Der Chi-Strom wird verstärkt. Sie können sogar so etwas wie einen warmen elektrischen Strom zwischen sich fließen spüren. Diese Wirkung zeigt sich übrigens recht schnell bei Liebespartnern, die sich guter Gesundheit erfreuen und das Große Emporziehen praktizieren, oft schon nach wenigen Liebesakten, manchmal erst nach mehreren Wochen oder Monaten.

Die beiden Kleinen Energiekreisläufe von Mann zu Frau lassen sich auf verschiedene Weise miteinander verbinden. Die verbreitetste Technik besteht darin, die Kreisläufe am Mund und an den Genitalien der Partner zu verbinden und eine Acht zu bilden. Dabei zieht der Mann seine Energie die Wirbelsäule empor und gibt sie durch die Zunge weiter, die als elektrischer Zwischenschalter füngiert. Die männliche Energie tritt in den Kleinen Energiekreislauf der Frau ein, um durch ihr Dienergefäß vorne am Körper hinabzuströmen, durch ihre Vagina zu fließen und in seinen Penis zu gelangen, von wo sie erneut die Wirbelsäule emporgezogen wird. Die Frau läßt ihre Energie auf ähnliche Weise kreisen, also ihre eigene Wirbelsäule empör und sein Dienergefäß hinab, um sie wieder in der Scheide zu empfangen und über den Damm die Wirbelsäule hochzulenken. Dies ist die einfachste Methode, den Austausch von Yin und Yang bewußt zu lenken.

Jedes Liebespaar kann seine eigenen Achterfiguren für den Energieaustausch entwickeln und damit spielen. Am Anfang werden Sie sich vielleicht noch mündlich mitteilen müssen, worauf Sie sich gerade konzentrieren. Später, wenn beide sensitiver geworden sind für die eigene Energie und die des anderen, wird der Chi-Austausch zu einer stummen Sprache, von der Freude getragen, einen prickelnden warmen Strom in den Partner leiten zu können. Die Achterfigur kann nur am Mund hergestellt werden oder, wenn Sie sich nicht küssen, aber ineinander sind, nur an den Genitalien. Sie kann sich auch schlangengleich um Ihre Lenkergefäße ranken, etwa indem die Energie Ihre Wirbelsäule empor- und die Wirbelsäule der Partnerin hinabstrÖmt und umgekehrt.

Auf dieser Stufe erleben viele Liebespaare ein spontanes Sich-Öffnen einiger der 8 Besonderen Bahnen, was im System des Tao Yoga unter der Bezeichnung «Verschmelzung der Fünf Elemente» gelehrt wird. Zu diesen Bahnen gehören die positiven und negativen Arm- und Beinkanäle, die Gürtelbahn, die sich spiralartig um den Leib windet, und die Aufsteigende Bahn, die mitten im Körper emporfuhrt. Seien Sie nicht beunruhigt, wenn Ihre Energie «wild» wird und plötzlich Bahnen entlang-läuft die Ihnen unvertraut sind. Viele Liebende spüren auch eine Enereiesäule, die auf einer Mittellinie durch ihren Körper emporsteigt: Sollte dies geschehen, so entspannen Sie sich einfach und genießen das Spiel dieser subtilen Energien. Manche Paare berichten auch davon, wie ihnen das Chi in den Kopf schießt und wie ein Nektar-Springbrunnen hinabsprüht. Andere wiederum haben das Gefühl, mit ihrem Liebespartner in einen Kokon eingehüllt zu sein und von Strängen unsichtbarer Energie umsponnen zu werden.

Wenn Sie alle Ihre subtilen Bahnen geöffnet haben und um alle Möglichkeiten des Energieaustaus chs wissen, können Sie selbst frei entscheiden, auf welcher Bahn Sie Ihrer Liebe Ausdruck verleihen wollen. Interessant ist auch die Tatsache, daß Liebende, die nichts über diese esoterischen Methoden wissen, oft ganz ähnliche Erfahrungen machen. Zwar können sie diese Erlebnisse nicht willentlich herbeifuhren, aber sie kennen sie aus eigener Anschauung, weil sich einige ihrer feinstofflichen Energie-Bahnen spontan geöffnet haben. Die geheimen Lehren taoistischer Liebeskunst dienen dazu, Ihr Bewußtsein auf die unendlichen Möglichkeiten, die in Ihrem Inneren verborgen hegen, zu richten. Dieses konzentrierte Bewußtsein führt auch diese Erfahrungen göttlichen Energieaustauschs spontan herbei. In diesem Sinne ist die Liebe der universelle Weg zu größtmöglicher Freiheit - je mehr Sie mit Ihrem Liebespartner teilen, um so mehr Möglichkeiten eröffnen sich für Sie.

6. Der Tal-Orgasmus in den drei Tan-Tiens: Haben beide Partner ihr Chi im Kleinen Energiekreislauf oder über andere Bahnen miteinander ausgetauscht, ist ihre Energie intensiviert und har-monisiert worden. Nun ist die Voraussetzung für eine wirkliche Verschmelzung ihres Seins im Tal-Orgasmus gegeben.
Der Tal-Orgasmus stellt eine noch intensivere Erfahrung des Austauschs von Yin und Yang dar. Er kann bei jedem Paar, das daran arbeitet, Liebe und spirituelles Bewußtsein weiterzuent-wickeln, spontan auftreten. Es gibt keine Technik, die den Erfolg garantieren könnte, doch erhöhen die hier gelehrten Methoden die Wahrscheinlichkeit, daß es während des Liebens

Abbildung 32
DER AUSTAUSCH VON YIN UND YANG:

Der Mann entläßt seine heiße Yang-Energie in die Scheide der Frau und nimmt ihre kühlende Yin-Energie durch seinen Penis auf.

zu regelmäßigen Tal-Orgasmen kommt. Dabei handelt es sich um einen ausgedehnten Orgasmuszustand, der in der Regel während der Plateau-Phase auftritt, wenn sich die Yin- und Yang-Energien zu einer feinausgewogenen Harmonie finden. Es geschieht eine Vereinigung der Gegensätze, eine wirkliche Yer-schmelzung. Seien Sie nicht enttäuscht, wenn Sie, obwohl Sie die Ejakulation verhindern können und das Große Emporziehen beherrschen, dennoch aber keinen Tal-Orgasmus erleben. Das kommt recht häufig vor, vor allem in einer streßreichen städtischen Umgebung, wo es so viele ablenkende Kräfte gibt, die dem dauerhaften Gleichgewicht feinstofflicher Energie entgegenwirken.

Während eines Tal-Orgasmus erleben die Liebenden gleichzeitig das «Sich-Öffnen» eines Energiezentrums. Es setzt eine gewaltige Energie frei, die alle Zellen des Körpers durchflutet und sie mit denen des Liebes partners verschmilzt. Die Hindus nennen diese Zentren «Chakras». Im Taoismus werden sie als Unterer, Mittlerer und Oberer Tan-Tien bezeichnet, die sich im Unterleib, im Herzen und im Kopf befinden.

In Wirklichkeit ist der ganze Körper ein einziges Energiefeld. Doch in der Praxis ist es leichter, zunächst mit kleineren Energiewirbeln zu arbeiten, bis man mit stärkerer Kraft umgehen kann. Die Zentren sollten sich in der Reihenfolge von unten nach oben öffnen. Wenn sich zuerst die höheren Zentren zu öffnen beginnen, ist die Energie oft recht instabil und kurzlebig. In diesem Fall sollten die Liebenden ihre höhere Energie zu den unteren Zentren leiten, um eine stärker geerdete Polarität zu schaffen. Sind die unteren Körperpartien mit höheren Energien gefüllt, fuhrt dies zu größerer Vertrautheit und erschafft eine stabilere Grundlage für weitere gemeinsame Forschungsreisen in die geistige Welt.

Das öffnen dieser Energiezentren stellt den eigentlichen Prozeß der Umwandlung der Sexualessenz in Geist dar. Der Tal-Orgasmus ist eine Verschmelzung von Ching, Chi und Shien der beiden Liebenden. Alle drei sind zwar in jedem Menschen vorhanden, aber in getrennter und geschwächter Form. Liebende können sich gegenseitig die Energie übertragen, die im anderen fehlen sollte, und allein durch die Gegenwart ihrer jeweils gegenpoligen feinstofflichen Energie auch verborgene Energien freisetzen. Wenn Sie ein neues Energiezentrum öffnen, vollzieht der Geist einen Bewußtseinssprung. In dem spontanen alchemistischen Prozeß, der Ching, Chi und Shien miteinander verschmilzt, wird der Geist gereinigt und gelangt einen Schritt weiter auf dem Weg zur wirklichen Zentrierung im Körper.

Das Offnen dieser Zentren läßt sich nicht erzwingen, ebensowenig wie man ein Kind zwingen kann, plötzlich erwachsen zu werden. Es sind natürliche Entwicklungs- und Wachstumsstufen. Durch völliges Entspanntsein kann man die Tan-Tiens dazu verlocken, sich zu öffnen. Dann erfährt man den Tal-Orgasmus als unerwartetes Geschenk, als funkelndes Juwel, welches das Tao einem beschert. Man hat diese Erfahrung auch als Zustand tiefster Klarheit und Ruhe beschrieben, doch alle Worte genügen nicht, um ihre unbeschreibliche Schönheit und Wahrheit wiederzugeben.

Je tiefer Sie sich während des Austauschs von Yin und Yang entspannen, um so intensiver können Sie sich Ihrem Liebespartner hingeben und um so wahrscheinlicher wird es, daß Sie das Gleichgewicht der polaren Kraft erreichen, das für das Öffnen aller Zentren erforderlich ist. Diese Öffnung findet zwar innerhalb eines Sekundenbruchteils statt, kann aber monate- oder gar jahrelanger Vorbereitung durch die Liebenden bedürfen, die ihre Energien fein aufeinander abstimmen müssen. Wenn man die höheren Stufen der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung erreichen will, ist in der Regel eine feste Partnerschaft nötig. Es verlangt sehr viel Zeit, das Spiel der feinstofflichen Kräfte zu erfassen und die gröberen körperlichen und emotionalen Energien zu verfeinern.

Darüber hinaus muß das Nervensystem gestärkt genug sein, um den intensiven Chi-Strom während eines Tal-Orgasmus auszuhalten. Aus diesem Grunde empfehle ich Übungen wie die Kraftsperre (Kapitel 6). Jede Arbeit mit Tai Chi, Chi Kung oder anderen reinigenden meditativen Techniken ist ebenfalls von großem Nutzen.

Der Tal-Orgasmus kann geschehen, wenn beide Liebende ihre Willenskraft und ihre Atmung während des Austauschs von Yin und Yang miteinander harmonisiert haben. Dann strömt die Energie zwischen Mann und Frau, und beide konzentrieren sich gemeinsam auf jedes der Zentren. Bei manchen Punkten kann es hilfreich sein, die Energie in einem Kreis von etwa 8 Zentimetern Durchmesser kreisen zu lassen (beim Mann im Uhrzeigersinn, bei der Frau umgekehrt), und zwar etwa 8 Zentimeter tief im Körperinneren. Manchmal wirkt die Energie auch kraftvoller, wenn sie sich ein Stückchen näher am Rückgrat befindet.

Die Chi-Energie bewegt sich mit Vorliebe in einer Spiralbahn; wenn Sie also an den Schlüsselpunkten die Energie entsprechend kreisen lassen, können Sie eventuell einen weitaus intensiveren Energiewirbel auslösen, den Tal-Orgasmus. Die Spiralbewegung des Chi wird vom Zusammenspiel zwischen männlicher und weiblicher Energie verursacht. Das läßt sich auch am Symbol des Weiblichen, einem Kreis, und des Männlichen, eines geraden Pfeils, erkennen. Die Verschmelzung dieser beiden Zeichen ergibt eine Spirale, also eine kreisförmige Energie, die eine lineare Energie enthält, welche sich auf eine Kreismitte zubewegt. Wenn Mann und Frau sich heben, geschieht das gleiche: Das Yang-Chi dringt in den Kreis des Yin-Chi ein. Beide Chi verschmelzen miteinander, der Energiekreis dehnt sich aus und bewegt sich in einer Spiralbewegung in beiden Korpern empor.

Fuhren Sie die Energie in der angegebenen Reihenfolge durch die einzelnen Zentren:

1. Das Nabelzentrum, der Untere Tan-Tien, ist die Verbindungsstelle vieler Energiebahnen. Durch das Öffnen des Nabels werden alle Bahnen im Körper miteinander verbunden. Dann erhalten Sie etwas von der gewaltigen Vitalität eines Neugeborenen zurück, das seine Energie von der Mutter auch durch den Nabel empfangen hat.

2. Als nächstes bewegen Sie die Kraft in den Solarplexus, der das Verdauungssystem, den Magen, die Milz und die Leber kontrolliert. Hier werden Gesundheit und Willenskraft gekräftigt. Im Solarplexuszentrum ist die Kraft stärker, reiner und expansiver, doch muß sie zuerst durch den Nabelpunkt geflossen sein.

3. Nun rühren Sie die Kraft ins Herzzentrum, wodurch Herz und Lungen gestärkt werden und Liebe und Mitgefühl eine Vertiefung erfahren. Dies ist das Zentrum des Mittleren Tan-Tien, das sich in die Körperbereiche unmittelbar darüber und darunter ausdehnt.

4. Als nächstes lenken Sie die Energie zum Halszentrum hinauf, zur Schilddrüse. Es stellt das Energie-Tor zwischen Mensch und Himmel dar. Da es außerdem das Sprechvermögen beherrscht, wird es auch als das «schöpferische» oder «kreative» Zentrum bezeichnet.

5. Vom Halszentrum aus wird die Kraft zum Yin-Tang (dem «dritten Auge») zwischen den Augenbrauen geleitet, welches über das Nervensystem und die Seele herrscht. Die Öffnung dieses Zentrums gibt Gelassenheit und Ruhe und mindert den Einfluß von Streß und Angst. Der Kopf stellt das obere Energiefeld oder den Oberen Tan-Tien dar.

6. Schließlich fuhren Sie die Kraft zum Pai-Hui, der «Krone», dem Scheitelpunkt. Er ist das Zentrum spirituellen Wissens und das Tor zur spirituellen Höherentwicklung.

Zusammenfassung: Die Vorbereitung des Tal-Orgasmus

1. Als erstes vollziehen Sie den Liebesakt, indem Sie für jeden tiefen Stoß 3 oder 6 flache führen oder aber den Rhythmus: 9 flache Stöße und einen tiefen Stoß wählen.

2. Wenn Sie kurz vor dem Orgasmus stehen, stellen Sie das Stoßen ein. Führen Sie die Kraft mit Hilfe des Großen Emporziehens zum Pai-Hui empor.

3. Umarmen Sie Ihren Liebes partner, und stimmen Sie beide Ihre Atmung aufeinander ab. Wählen Sie eine bequeme Stellung, bei der die Glieder nicht übermäßig belastet werden.

4. Öffnen Sie den Kleinen Energiekreislauf, indem Sie Ihr Chi mittels Gedankenkraft entlang seiner Bahnen kreisen lassen.

5. Tauschen Sie mit Ihrem Liebespartner Kraft aus, indem Sie die Energie mit der Hilfe von Meditation in Ihren umschlungenen Körpern kreisen lassen. Konzentrieren Sie sich auf das polare Gleichgewicht der Energie in Ihrem Unteren Tan-Tien. Wenn die Kraft sich gebildet hat, lassen Sie sie in einer Wellenbewegung zum Mittleren und schließlich zum Oberen Tan-Tien strömen.

6. Ist Ihre Energie durch das Emporleiten transformiert worden oder hat Ihre Erektion etwa zur Hälfte nachgelassen, können Sie wieder mit dem Stoßen beginnen, wenn Sie wollen, und weitere Energie aufbauen, wobei Sie das Diaphragma urogenitale geschlossen halten und vor der Ejakulation wieder mit dem Stoßen aufhören.

7. Tauschen Sie mehrmals Energie miteinander aus. Dabei sollte die Kxaft jedesmal ein Stück höher gelenkt werden, wobei Sie so lange über jeden Tan-Tien meditieren, wie es Ihnen angenehm ist. °

8. Auch die Frau sollte während des Liebesakts das Große Emporziehen durchführen. Es wird ihr helfen, die Vagina zu verengen, regt ihre Hormonproduktion an und bietet ihr dieselben Vorteile der Lebensverlängerung und der spirituellen Weiterentwicklung wie dem Mann. Vergessen Sie nicht, daß das Große Emporziehen sowohl eine Übung der Muskeln als auch des Geistes ist, das Austauschen der Energie dagegen eine rein mentale und spirituelle Praktik.

Durch die taoistische Methode der «Zweifachen Höherentwicklung» werden Mann und Frau verjüngt und regeneriert. Keiner kann dadurch Schaden nehmen. Allerdings darf diese Praktik nie für selbstsüchtige Zwecke mißbraucht werden! Ich empfehle, daß beide Partner auf den höheren Stufen dieser Praktik den Genitalorgasmus vermeiden, wenngleich dieser für die Frau keinen solch großen Verlust darstellt wie für den Mann und sie sogar gelegentlich auf noch höhere Stufen fuhren kann. Nähert sich einer der Partner zu sehr dem Abgrund des Orgasmus, muß er dem anderen ein Signal geben, die Bewegung einzustellen. Beide können den Orgasmusdrang vermindern, wenn sie sofort das Große Emporziehen durchführen und so die Kraft aus den Genitalien lenken.

Die taoistische Praktik der «Einfachen Höherentwicklung» ermöglicht es dem alleinstehenden Mann, eine Art inneren Tal-Orgasmus in sich herbeizuführen, indem er lernt, den Austausch der Yin- und Yang-Energien zwischen seinen verschiedenen Tan-Tiens ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Es gibt eine andere Methode des «Selbstverkehrs», bei welcher die Polarität zwischen bestimmten Organen umgekehrt wird, was zu einer ganz wunderbaren Erfahrung führt. Diese Meditation wird als Liebesakt erlebt. Sie stellt eine noch höherstehende Praktik dar, zu der auch die Liebenden in einer Paarbeziehung schließlich vordringen sollten. Dies gehört zum Bereich der «Kleinen Erleuchtung von Kan und Li», was im Kapitel 19 beschrieben wird.

Das Große Emporziehen als Methode der Empfängnisverhütung

Die taoistische Methode der Entwicklung und Verfeinerung der Sexualenergie bietet Ihnen eine der gesündesten und organischsten Verhütungsmethoden, die jemals erfunden wurden. Ich selbst habe zehn Jahre lang mit dieser Methode das Ejakulieren vermieden. In dieser ganzen Zeit kam es zu keiner unerwünschten Befruchtung. Als meine Frau und ich dann beschlossen, ein Kind zur Welt zu bringen, habe ich zweimal ejakuliert. Die erste Ejakulation geschah für mich allein. Ich wollte damit alle geschwächten Samenzellen aus meinem Körper entfernen - Zellen, die geschwächt waren, weil ich ihnen während meiner Meditationen ihr Chi entzogen und in meine höheren Energiezentren umgeleitet hatte. Mein Körper reagierte mit kraftvollem Produzieren neuer Samenzellen, um die bei der ersten Ejakulation verlorenen zu ersetzen; gleichzeitig konzentrierte ich mein Wollen und meine Energie darauf, sie so kraftvoll und widerstandsfähig wie möglich zu machen.

Ich habe ein einziges Mal in meiner Frau ejakuliert, um sie zu befruchten. Natürlich haben wir darauf geachtet, den Beginn ihres Eisprungs zu wählen, damit meinem Sperma mehrere Tage Zeit blieb, sich ein Ei zu suchen. Max, unser Sohn, ist das Ergebnis dieser Zeugung, und wie alle meine Schüler bestätigen können, ist er ein richtiger kleiner Wirbelwind auf Beinen. Ich glaube, wir haben ihm die besten Chancen für sein Leben gegeben, indem ich meinen Samen bewahrt und optimal gestärkt habe, indem ich die Gesundheit meines Körpers gestärkt habe.

Dennoch muß an dieser Stelle eine Warnung ausgesprochen werden. Weil Ihr Samen durch die hier geschilderten Praktiken immer kraftvoller wird, kann es bei einem «Ausrutscher» weitaus leichter geschehen, daß die Frau schwanger wird. Auch wenn Sie sich Ihrer Selbstkontrolle hundertprozentig sicher sind und die orgasmische Ejakulation Ihres Samens verhindern können, rate ich Ihnen dringend: Benutzen Sie stets ein Verhütungsmittel ah zusätzliche Schutzmaßnahme. Es kann immer noch gesche-hen, daß ein wenig von dem klaren «Wasser» oder der Samenflüssigkeit, die das eigentliche Sperma leichter durch den Penis gleiten läßt, während des Austauschs von Energie in der Plateau-Phase austritt. In dieser wässrigen Samenflüssigkeit können unsichtbare Samenzellen umherschwimmen, die es darauf abgesehen haben, einem einsamen Ei zu begegnen. Diese Warnung gilt auch für das Schlafen mit Frauen, die Sie nicht wirklich lieben - denn ein ungewünschtes Kind kostet beide Beteiligten weitaus mehr an Energie, Kraft und materiellen Gütern, als es der kurze Augenblick sexuellen Vergnügens wert ist. Bedenken Sie, daß Sie nicht nur den Umgang mit Ihrer Sexualenergie lernen wollen, sondern das Tao in allem, was Sie tun und denken, erkennen und entfalten wollen. Tun Sie dies auf möglichst weise Art - indem Sie großen Problemen durch Sorgfalt in kleinen Dingen aus dem Weg gehen. Sichern Sie sich also durch ein zusätzliches Verhütungsmittel ab. Aber vermeiden Sie Eingriffe in den Körper wie Vasektomie oder Sterilisierung. Kondome machen das Aufnehmen der weiblichen Yin-Flüssigkeit unmöglich und mindern die Sensibilität für den Strom des Chi durch den Penis.

Die zweifache Höherentwicklung aus der Sicht einer Frau

Dieses Interview führte Michael Winn mit einer funfunddreißig-jährigen Frau, die als Tänzerin, Lehrerin und Psychotherapeutin tätig ist und Mutter eines Kindes ist.

MW: Fiel es Ihnen schwer, den weiblichen Teil der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung, den Ovar-Kung Fu, zu erlernen?

Schülerin: Ich praktiziere diese Technik jetzt seit zwei Jahren. Das Konzept ist recht einfach und auch die körperlichen Übungen, aber ich brauchte doch eine gewisse Zeit, bis ich zu meinen eigenen sexuellen Bedürfnissen und zu meinem sexuellen Gleichgewicht gefunden hatte. Es war allerdings schwieriger, meinem Partner dabei zu helfen, keinen Orgasmus zu bekom-men, als meinen eigenen zurückzuhalten. Die Frage, ob man einen Orgasmus haben sollte oder nicht, ob er einem Energie gibt oder nimmt, ist weniger wichtig. Es hängt unter anderem auch von der Art des Orgasmus ab, von der Art der Energie, die zwischen mir und meinem Partner fließt, aber auch davon, auf welchem Niveau meine Energie sich während des Liebesakts gerade befindet, wie ich mich an diesem Tag oder in dieser Phase körperlich fühle oder in welcher Gemütsverfassung ich bin.

MW: Heißt das, daß Ihr Orgasmus Ihre Energie steigert, wenn sie sich auf einem niedrigen Stand befindet? Oder schwächt er Sie, wenn Sie bereits voller Energie sind?

Schülerin: Ich glaube, daß die sexuelle Erregung meine Energie erhöht, wenn ich kraftlos bin. Doch wenn ich die Sache zu Ende führe und einen normalen Orgasmus habe, bin ich nachher erschöpft. Wenn ich viel Energie habe, dann wird diese Kraft durch die Zufuhr sexueller Energie noch höher und klarer, und der Orgasmus schwächt mich nicht. Manchmal verschafft er mir sogar noch gesteigerte Energie. Wenn mein Partner mehr Energie durch meinen Orgasmus erhält, kann er sie mittlerweile in transformierter Form an mich zurückgeben, so daß ich durch einen Orgasmus keine Energie verliere, es sei denn, ich war schon zuvor geschwächt. Meistens ziehe ich es dann vor, meine Energie zu bewahren und das Große Emporziehen zu praktizieren.

MW: Hat sich Ihre Beziehung zur Sexualität wesentlich geändert?

Schülerin: Auf jeden Fall. Sex ist für uns zu etwas ganz Besonderem geworden. Ich würde sagen, daß unsere Fähigkeit, uns aufeinander einzustimmen, sich deutlich gesteigert hat. Diese Harmonie übertrifft bei weitem alles, was ich vorher an sexuellen Erfahrungen gemacht habe. Der Liebesakt ist für mich zu einer hohen Kunst der Kommunikation geworden. Ich habe bex zwar schon immer genossen, aber jetzt geht alles viel mehr m die Tiefe. Das hat wohl mit der Fähigkeit zu tun, sich physisch und seelisch zu verständigen. Ich bin zwar früher auch schon dahin gekommen, aber auf diesem Weg ist es dauerhaft.

MW: Betrachten wir die Sache im einzelnen. Handelt es sich lediglich um eine gesteigerte Intensität rein körperlicher Art?

Schülerin: Der Liebesakt ist viel intensiver, wärmer, er dauert länger. Und ich glaube, die Tatsache, daß er länger andauert, ist ein ganz wichtiger Bestandteil dieser neuen Intensität. Ich kann dabei einen Ganzkörperorgasmus erleben, und mein gesamter Körper ist dabei sexuell erregt. Auch das habe ich früher gelegentlich erlebt, aber inzwischen kommt es viel häufiger vor. Ich kann den Orgasmus eine ganze Zeit beibehalten. Die Orgasmen dauern länger, manchmal sogar mehrere Minuten lang. Früher waren es dagegen immer nur wenige Sekunden. Inzwischen erfahre ich ganz verschiedene Arten des Orgasmus, was ich früher nie erlebt habe.

MW: Um welche verschiedenen Arten des Orgasmus handelt es sich dabei?

Schülerin: Jeder Orgasmus ist anders. Es gibt richtig sanfte, weiche Orgasmen, aber auch intensive, kraftvolle. Sie können an verschiedenen Körperstellen auftreten, sei es im Gehirn oder in den Geschlechtsorganen. Ich habe auch Heilungen damit versucht, und es funktioniert tatsächlich. Mehrere Male habe ich beim Orgasmus die Energie in die geschwächten Organe gelenkt, aber ich muß sagen, daß es wirkungsvoller ist, wenn man den Orgasmus zurückbehält und dann die Energie an die betroffene Stelle fuhrt. Ich habe auch einen Trick herausgefunden, mit dem ich einen Orgasmus ausdehnen und intensivieren kann. Dazu muß man den Orgasmus etwa bis zur Hälfte zulassen, um ihn dann zurückzuhalten.

MW: Sie können also Ovar-Kung Fu einsetzen, wenn Sie sich bereits im Orgasmus befinden?

Schülerin: Ja, das kann ich. Es ist, als würde man sich zurückziehen, doch weil man ja schon mittendrin ist, wird er fortgesetzt und verlängert, um wirklich lange anzuhalten. Ich falle also nicht aus dem Orgasmus heraus, sondern verlängere ihn erheblich. Dabei lenke ich die Energie meine Wirbelsäule empor. Ich praktiziere eigentlich nicht die Muskelkontraktionen des Großen Emporziehens dabei, sondern verenge die Scheidenmuskulatur und drücke das Becken nach hinten. Dabei wird die Wirbelsäule leicht gebogen, so daß der Rücken etwas gerundet ist.

MW: Was Ihren Orgasmus also verlängert?

Schülerin: Ja, ungeheuer.

MW: Meinen Sie, daß die Energie leichter nach oben steigt, weil der Rücken etwas gebogen ist?

Schülerin: Wahrscheinlich. Ich weiß zwar nicht genau, auf welche Weise die Energie nach oben gezogen wird, ich habe diese Technik ja erst kennengelernt, als ich versuchte, meinem Partner dabei zu helfen, seinen Orgasmus zu vermeiden. Denn wenn ich im Begriff bin, einen Orgasmus zu bekommen, löst das auch bei ihm einen aus, und das will ich nicht. Wenn ich also spüre, daß ich kurz vor einem Orgasmus stehe und seinen auch kommen fühle, ziehe ich mich zurück. Ich ziehe sein Glied aus meiner Scheide und leite meine Energie nach oben. Und dabei habe ich festgestellt, daß es den Orgasmus in mir verlängert.

MW: Das heißt also, daß Sie einen Orgasmus ohne ihn haben, also eher für sich?

Schülerin: Ja, ich versuche nicht, ihn mit hineinzuziehen. Zu anderen Zeiten, wenn er die völlige Beherrschung über sich hat, bleiben wir zusammen, und das ist dann wirklich wunderbar.

MW: Wie reagieren andere Frauen auf Ovar-Kung Fu?

Schülerin: Im allgemeinen mögen sie diese Praktik sehr. Die meisten Frauen, mit denen ich gesprochen habe, meinen, daß sie das Ganze eigentlich schon längst kennen würden.

MW: Das habe ich auch oft gehört. Ist das wirklich eine weitverbreitete Reaktion?

Schülerin: Ehrlich gesagt, glaube ich, daß es nur wenige Frauen gibt, die diese Praktiken wirklich mit Partnern geübt haben. Einige der Frauen praktizieren sie zwar, aber ich persön-i • i , . * i ucn kenne nur eine einzige, die es mit einem Partner getan hat-Insofern kann ich eigentlich nur über meine ureigenste Erfahrung sprechen, es gibt einfach zu wenig Frauen, die das gleiche tun.

MW: Haben Sie bei der Sexualität jemals eine Energiesteigerung verspürt, eine hochgepolte Schwingung?

Schülerin: Ja, manchmal habe ich nach einem Orgasmus das

Gefühl, unter Wasser zu stehen. Dann sehe ich alles ganz anders, und in meinen Ohren ertönt ein Summen. Das ist mir auch schon nach ganz intensiver Meditation passiert.

MW: Inwieweit hat Ovar-Kung Fu Ihren Alltag verändert?

Schülerin: Ich bin einfühlsamer geworden, was meinen Partner angeht, und auch meine eigene Energie spüre ich jetzt viel deutlicher. Es hat bei mir zu einer vertieften Zärtlichkeit geführt, und ich glaube, daß von daher auch das Bedürfnis kommt, die eigene Energie zu bewahren. Es ist einfach etwas Kostbares, sie zu bewahren und weiterzuentwickeln. Ich glaube, daß man dadurch eine ganz bestimmte Schwingung in die Welt setzt und daß andere Menschen dadurch auf gleiche Weise auf einen reagieren. v

MW: Was ist denn für Sie der Unterschied zwischen Energie und Liebe? Ist eine gesteigerte Körperintensität denn dasselbe wie eine intensivierte Liebe?

Schülerin: Nein, das ist nichts rein Körperliches, es fühlt sich eher seelisch an. Man erschafft dadurch eine liebevolle Beziehung zueinander. Die Sexualität ist dabei das Vehikel, durch das die Harmonie erreicht wird. Die taoistischen Methoden machen die Gefühle intensiver, ja eigentlich alles viel intensiver. Es ist schon vorgekommen, daß wir beide mitten im Liebesakt in Tränen ausgebrochen sind, weil es so überwältigend war. Diese Zärtlichkeit, diese Einheit! Nein, es ist wirklich etwas, das über das rein Körperliche weit hinausgeht!

MW: Glauben Sie, daß Sie zwischen den Yin- und Yang-Energien auf allen Ebenen zu unterscheiden gelernt haben?

Schülerin: Ich bezeichne sie zwar selbst nicht als Yin und Yang, aber ich spüre deutlich, wie diese Hitze meine Wirbelsäule emporsteigt, und das verändert mich. Dadurch fühle ich mich mehr als Frau. Aber ich könnte das nicht in einer Qefuhls-begrifflichkeit ausdrücken, deshalb spreche ich lieber vori einer ganz besonderen Energie. Es ist, als würde man das Feuer im eigenen Inneren entfachen, um damit zu verschmelzen.

MW: Was ist denn der Unterschied zwischen diesem Chi-Austausch und Liebe? !

Schülerin: Es ist ein Weg, um Liebe miteinander zu teilen. Ein Weg, Energien miteinander auszutauschen, zu teilen. Es entsteht dadurch eine gesteigerte Polarität. Ich fühle mich dadurch ernährt, es ist wie eine Nahrungsaufnahme. Ich erhalte Yang-Energie, und heiße Yang-Energie ermöglicht es mir daraufhin, noch mehr Yin hervorzubringen. Ich werde ausgeglichener, was ich auch schon früher gelegentlich erlebt habe, aber nie jedesmal erreichen konnte. Und außerdem war es früher nicht so intensiv.

M W: Hat diese Erfahrung Ihr Verlangen nach dem Liebesakt gesteigert?

Schülerin: Ja, das Verlangen ist dadurch gesteigert worden, aber ich fühle mich auch ohne Liebesakt gut. Ich fühle mich so befriedigt, daß der Liebesakt selbst keine unabdingbare Forderung mehr darstellt. Und da der Ovar-Kung Fu es mir ermöglicht, meine Sexualenergie nach oben zu leiten, sie zu transformieren, werde ich auch nicht mehr halb wahnsinnig, wenn ich mal sexuell stark erregt bin, mein Partner aber nicht. Doch wenn sich die Gelegenheit bietet, nehme ich sie sehr gerne wahr.

M W: Haben Sie jemals das Gefühl gehabt, daß Ihr Partner mehr darauf bedacht war, seine Energie einzubehalten, als wirklich Sie zu lieben? Hatten Sie das Gefühl, daß Ihr Lieben dadurch beeinträchtigt wurde?

Schülerin: Nein, niemals. Im Gegenteil, das Lieben ist dadurch nur gesteigert worden. Manchmal ist es natürlich frustrierend, wenn es nicht richtig funktioniert, aber ich hoffe darauf, daß es immer besser und besser wird.

10.KAPITEL

Die sieben spirituellen Stufen der Entwicklung der Sexualenergie

Es gibt viele Möglichkeiten, seine Sexualkraft mit einem Partner auszutauschen oder die eigene Samenkraft aufzunehmen und umzuwandeln. Jeder Mensch kann sich nur von seiner jeweiligen Entwicklungsstufe aus weiterentwickeln. Natürlich gibt es noch höhere, rein spirituelle Ebenen der Bewußtseinstransformation als die in diesem Buch gelehrten Anfängertechniken. Solange man jedoch nicht fähig ist, seinen Geschlechtstrieb vollkommen zu beherrschen, können diese Ebenen nicht verstanden werden. Schon viele Yogis, Gurus und Meister aus dem Osten sind in den Westen gekommen in dem Glauben, die vollkommene Erleuchtung zu haben. Sie mußten schon bald feststellen, daß sie noch nicht einmal ihre Sexualität unter Kontrolle hatten. Sie hatten ihre sexuellen Begierden einfach unterdrückt, während sie ihre höheren geistigen Zentren weiterentwickelten. Manche mögen ihr Ziel zwar wirklich erreicht haben, sind dann aber in die Fallen ihrer eigenen religiös oder kulturell bedingten sexuellen Tabus gelaufen.

Die östliche Kultur wird noch immer von starken religiösen oder familiären Zwängen beherrscht, die der Versuchung, außerehelichen Geschlechtsverkehr zu pflegen, einen Riegel vorschieben. Jeder angehende Yogi oder spirituelle Lehrer, der dabei entdeckt würde, würde seine «Karriere» ruinieren, weil von ihm erwartet wird, daß er seinen Geschlechtstrieb überwunden hat. In dem völlig anderen Klima sexueller Freiheit im Westen erwachen die sexuellen Begierden dann um so stärker und werden zu Stolpersteinen auf dem spirituellen Weg.

Andere spirituelle Lehrer nehmen eine äußerst kritische Haltung gegenüber «niederen» Versuchen ein, die Sexualenergie mit körperlichen Techniken zu transformieren, wie sie etwa im Tao Yoga der Liebe gelehrt werden. Sie übersehen freilich, daß der Mensch nun einmal Mensch ist und auch auf dem spirituellen Pfad Fehler macht. Das Bedürfnis nach Nahrung und Sexualität ist zu tief in der menschlichen Natur verwurzelt, um es über Nacht einfach auszumerzen. Gelingt es dem Menschen dagegen, sich in seinem Inneren nach und nach zu verändern, werden sich sein Denken und Tun allmählich seinem inneren geistigen Wesen anpassen. Das ist auch das Grundprinzip der Höherentwicklung der Chi-Energie. Man kann es mit einem jungen Baum vergleichen, der neben einem alten steht: Der junge Baum ist biegsam, der alte Baum dagegen nicht. Die Sexualessenz, das Ching Chi, stellt unseren eigenen inneren Jungbrunnen dar, den Saft, der durch den jungen Baum strömt. Wird diese Kraft bewahrt und in einen Kreislauf gebracht, wirkt sie verjüngend. Geist, Körper und Seele werden wieder beweglich und gefugig; die spirituelle Entwicklung setzt mit Anmut und ohne Verkrampfung ein. Ist der Saft dagegen eingetrocknet, wird man arthritisch und krumm, so daß einem der Weg Schmerzen und Beschwerden bereitet.

Die Zweifache Höherentwicklung - ein «Pfad der Linken Hand»?

Mancher spirituell engagierte Mensch wird vor der taoistischen Praktik der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie zurückschrek-ken und ihre Anhänger beschuldigen, den «Pfad der Linken Hand» zu beschreiten. Darunter verstehen sie eine Methode, bei der Mann und Frau in sexueller Vereinigung meditieren. Das erscheint ihnen suspekt, befleckt und irgendwie unreiner als eine Meditations- oder Gebetstechnik, die nicht bewußt sexuelle Energien benutzt. Beim «Pfad der Rechten Hand» leistet man ein Keuschheitsgelübde.

Die Sexualität an sich ist spirituell keineswegs unerwünscht. Ohne sie wäre schließlich kein einziger Heiliger zur Welt gekommen. Wie bei jeder spirituellen Praktik ist auch bei der zweifachen Höherentwicklung die Reinheit der Absichten von größter Wichtigkeit. Will jemand einen anderen damit beein-flussen oder beherrschen, kann diese Praktik zu einer «schwarzen» werden. Der wesentliche Punkt ist, ob man damit versucht, in den Willen eines anderen einzugreifen, sei es zu seinem «Besten» oder Schaden. Jede mit subtiler Energie geladene Manipulation oder Einmischung ist eine Form der schwarzen Magie, außer, der andere hat aus freien Stücken um Hilfe oder Liebe gebeten und seinem Wunsch Ausdruck gegeben, diese auch anzunehmen.

Abgesehen davon braucht man die Sexualität nicht zu furchten. Sie ist Teil von uns, wir werden mit ihr (und durch sie) geboren, und wir sterben mit ihr; sie verleiht der menschlichen Liebe Wärme und Kraft, sie ist mit den gleichen polaren Kräften geladen wie das ganze übrige Universum auch. Es gibt Tao Meister, die diese Methode der Energieverfeinerung «Weiße Magie» nennen, weil sie den Menschen lehrt, wie er durch das Herstellen des Gleichgewichts von Yin und Yang zu einer wirklich reinen Polarität findet. Selbst der Name meines eigenen Meisters, der sich nach dem heiligen Berg in China, auf dem er lebt, «Weiße Wolke» nennt, spiegelt diese Lehre wider. Es gibt auch andere, sehr wirkungsvolle Wege, die sich stärker der Yang- oder der Yin-Energie zuwenden, doch sind sie meiner Meinung nach riskanter. Manche Leute kritisieren den Umgang mit Sexualität als «roten Yoga», doch verwechseln sie diese Farbe mit der Feuerenergie der Leidenschaft. Bei der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung mischt man Weiß und Rot zu gleichen Teilen, den Samen des Mannes mit dem Blut der Frau, den Geist mit dem Trieb, den Ur-Mann mit der Ur-Frau, das Yang mit dem Yin. Durch einen alchemistischen Prozeß wird daraus eine neutrale Essenz destilliert, ein kostbares Elixier ohne eigene Farbe, das die Kraft enthält, die Seele in einen unsterblichen Geist mit einem unsterblichen Körper zu erans mutieren. Dieses Elixier besteht aus verfeinertem Chi, Ching und Geist. Aber-au seiner richtigen Zubereitung braucht es Jahre.

Kein Heiliger, Guru oder König wird ohne Fortpflanzungsorgane geboren. Jeder als Mann Geborene muß die männlichen Stadien sexueller Entwicklung durchlaufen. Wie schnell er dies tut, und welche Methoden er dabei anwendet, mag unterschied-lieh sein, doch wird ein jeder sexuelle Erregung, Erektion und Eiakulation erleben. Bringt er dieses weltliche Stadium schnell hinter sich, wird er vielleicht zu einem Mönch, einem Heiligen, einem Meister oder einem Guru. Vielleicht zieht er es aber auch vor ein ganz «gewöhnlicher» weltlicher Mann zu bleiben.

Viele Tao Meister arbeiten in der Stille, ohne sonderlich aufzufallen. Wenn man ihnen begegnet, wird man nichts Ungewöhnliches an ihnen entdecken, es sei denn, man ist bewußt und sensitiv genug, um die heitere Gelassenheit zu spüren, die sie umgibt. Ihre Energie ist wie eine sanfte Brise, die leise durch den Raum zieht und jeden auf ganz besondere Art berührt.

Bei der taoistischen Methode der Energieentwicklung meditieren Mann und Frau gemeinsam. Sie benutzen den natürlichen menschlichen Geschlechtstrieb als Brücke zu einem höheren Bewußtsein. Der Taoismus bietet die Techniken, mit denen ein Mensch seine sexuellen Triebe meistern kann, so daß er die Freiheit erhält, selbst zu entscheiden, wie er leben will. Als Alternative dazu kann er ein Sklave seiner animalischen Instinkte oder sexuellen Frustrationen bleiben. Man kann sie noch so tief in seinem Inneren begraben - eines Tages brechen sie hervor, wenn man sich ihrer nicht annimmt.

Der «Pfad der Linken Hand» und der «Pfad der Rechten Hand»

Selbst jene Taoisten, die der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung skeptisch gegenüberstanden und strikte Enthaltsamkeit bevorzugten, taten dies keineswegs, weil sie Frauen oder Sexualenergie als etwas Schmutziges, Unreines oder Böses angesehen hätten. In China wurde die Yin-Essenz der Frau schon immer wegen ihrer Kraft und ihres harmonisierenden Einflusses geschätzt. Die Zweifel an der Praktik des Energieaustauschs beim Liebesakt hatten andere Gründe: Mancher Meister hegte Bedenken, ob es dem Adepten gelingen würde, über die sinnlichen und emotionalen Freuden der Sexualität hinauszugelangen, um das höchste spirituelle Bewußtsein anzustreben.

Die Gefahr besteht tatsächlich, die emotionale Bindung an den Liebespartner mit der Einstimmung auf die höhere, subtile Vereinigung von Yin und Yang zu verwechseln. Ich glaube zwar, daß die meisten Menschen dieser Phase nicht entgehen können, daß sie aber mit der Zeit und durch beständiges Verfeinern der eigenen Energie, durch Meditation, Tai Chi und verwandte Praktiken, darüber hinauswachsen werden. Das heißt nun nicht, daß man ein Leben ohne jedes Gefühl fuhren sollte. Es bedeutet vielmehr, die Gefühle im Gleichgewicht zu halten und die auftauchenden Emotionen positiv zu nutzen, indem ihre Kraft in den Prozeß der Chi-Kultivierung geleitet wird. Es ist viel gefährlicher, sich zum Zölibat zu zwingen, solange man noch nicht wirklich bereit dafür ist. Man weiß sonst nie, ob nian die eigenen sexuellen Begierden und Gefühle wirklich gemeistert hat oder ihnen nur ausweicht oder sie anderweitig unterdrückt.

Ein zu früher Eintritt ins Zölibat kann sehr störend wirken. Es kann leicht geschehen, daß man mehr sexuelle Kraft aufbaut, als man während der Meditation ins Gleichgewicht bringen kann. Vielleicht hat man den inneren Willen, sich sexuellen Beziehungen zu Frauen zu widersetzen; doch wenn die Seele weiter in Träumen oder Gedanken dorthin wandert, verliert man nur Energie und Konzentration und Aufmerksamkeit. Aus diesem Grund braucht der Mann die Frau. Er mag noch so viele Schwierigkeiten haben, mit ihr zu einem Gleichgewicht zu finden, doch schon ihre bloße Anwesenheit gewahrt ihm einen gewissen urgründigen Seelenfrieden.

In diesem Sinne stellt die Zweifache Höherentwicklung den sichersten Pfad dar, weil sie nichts unberücksichtigt laßt. Man hat einen Gefährten auf der langen Lebensreise, was sie viel angenehmer macht. Und wer diese Reise genießt, bleibt <mit größerer Sicherheit auf diesem Pfad als jemand, der sich zu einem strengen Programm der Selbstverleugnung zwingt. Ein mit Yin-Essenz gefülltes Frauenherz ist wunderschön, akzeptieren Sie es. Betrachten Sie beide Ihre Beziehung als mikrokosmisches Abbild des Universums. Dieses Abbild wird als Spiegel dienen und eine bestimmte spirituelle Wahrheit widerspiegeln.

Die Resonanz durch den Partner ist äußerst wertvoll. Darum arbeiteten viele Taoisten auch in Zweiergemeinschaften, die keineswegs immer nur aus Liebenden bestanden. Jede Beziehung zu einem anderen Menschen bietet wertvolle Unterstützung und Resonanz.

Bei der Pflege des «Pfades der Rechten Hand» benutzt man seinen Geist und seinen Körper als mikrokosmisches Abbild des Universums. Das Zölibat kann das Leben vereinfachen, es weniger kompliziert und verworren machen, auch die Grenzen des eigenen individuellen Bewußtseins werden schärfer definiert. Die so eingesparte Energie kann zu schnellem Fortschritt in der Meditation fuhren. Wenn man nicht umsichtig vorgeht, kann allerdings eine gewisse Sterilität entstehen, die Illusion einer makellosen Innenwelt, welche die Wirklichkeit der Außenwelt negiert.

Dieser Zustand läßt sich mit einer Kristallkugel vergleichen, aus der heraus man die Welt betrachtet, ohne sie wirklich zu erleben und ohne in Harmonie mit ihr zu gelangen. So geht man seinen eigentlichen Lebensverpflichtungen aus dem Weg, weil man sich fälschlicherweise einbildet, durch seine spirituellen Errungenschaften über der Welt zu stehen. Gehören Sie dazu, sind Sie vielleicht auch in die übliche Falle gelaufen, zuviel Energie in Ihren Kopf gelenkt zu haben, ohne in wirklichem Kontakt zum Körper und zu den fünf Ur-Elementen geblieben zu sein.

Wenn man sich die eigene Integrität, das Gleichgewicht von Körper, Geist und Seele bewahrt, gibt es ‘nichts auf der Welt, was man zu furchten hätte, auch nicht die Frau. Zwar mag die Yin-Energie der Frau gelegentlich recht andersartig oder beunruhigend wirken, doch gleichzeitig ist sie für den Mann eine Herausforderung: sie aufzunehmen und zu nutzen, um selbst zu wachsen und auch die Partnerin durch Erhöhung ihres Yang ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Spirituelle Männer, die Frauen meiden, weil sie Angst haben, sie könnten sich an sie binden oder von ihnen verunreinigt werden, versuchen ledighch, ein ichbezogenes männliches spirituelles Ego zu schützen. Sie furchten, sie der Macht, die eine Frau auf sie ausübt, nicht gewachsen sein könnten. Das heißt, den Fluß des Tao zu blockieren. Das ist ebenso irrational wie die Angst vor dem Wasser. Sicherlich kann man im Wasser ertrinken, wenn man z. B. mitten im Meer aus einem Boot fällt, doch deshalb wird man sich nicht weigern, Wasser zu trinken. Alles ist eine Frage des Gleichgewichts, der Harmonie zwischen den fünf feinstofflichen Elementen. Dieses Gleichgewicht läßt sich leichter erschaffen, wenn man erst einmal gelernt hat, seinen eigenen Samenfluß zu beherrschen. Wenn Sie dann, bildlich gesprochen, den Boden jeden Tag mit der Wasser-Essenz der Frau und Ihrer eigenen Samenessenz tränken, werden Sie bald einen blühenden Garten haben, an dem sich beide erfreuen können.

Ein Beispiel zur Methode des «Pfades der Rechten Hand»

Vielleicht möchten Sie eine Übung für den «Pfad der Rechten Hand» ausprobieren. Gehen Sie früh zu Bett, und sorgen Sie dafür, daß Sie in den frühen Morgenstunden aufwachen, irgendwann zwischen Mitternacht und 6.30 Uhr. Oft kommt es zu dieser Zeit zu einer spontanen Erektion; sollte dies nicht der Fall sein, können Sie mühelos eine herbeiführen. Haben Sie die Erektion erreicht, so nehmen Sie die empfohlene Liegestellung auf der rechten Seite ein.

Führen Sie das Große Emporziehen 9-, 18- oder 36mal aus, je nachdem, wie lange es dauert, bis die Erektion abflaut. Führen Sie die Kraft dabei jedesmal zum Kopf. Ist dieser mit Energie aufgefüllt, lassen Sie die Kraft nacheinander ins Herz, in den Solarplexus und in den Nabel hinabströmen. Von dort gelangt sie in den Hui-Yin und steigt erneut zum Kopf empor, somit den Kreislauf schließend. Diese Technik wirkt sehr kräftigend. Sie kann jede Nacht durchgeführt werden, mit wachsender Wirkung.

Meiner Erfahrung nach hilft diese Übung auch sehr gut bei Prostata-Beschwerden, weil unnötiger Druck, der diese Drüse reizt und anschwellen läßt, buchstäblich weggezogen wird.

Außerdem hilft sie, die Energiebahnen im Körper zu öffnen, wodurch man durchlässiger und empfänglicher sowohl für die Energie des Partners als auch für alle anderen Energiequellen im Leben wird.

Manche Meister halten die Energien, die mit dem Geschlechtsakt verbunden sind, für schmutzig, unrechtschaffen und irgendwie «unrein». Bereitet Ihnen das Sorgen, denken Sie daran, daß gerade die Mittagsstunde als die reinste Zeit des Tages gilt, weil sich in diesem Moment Yang zu Yin wandelt. Und beachten Sie, daß die Kraft, die man erringt, sich mit dem Geld vergleichen läßt, welches man verdient: Manche Menschen verdienen es leicht in hochstehenden Positionen, während andere dafür körperlich hart arbeiten müssen, bei der Müllabfuhr, als Lastwagenfahrer oder Fensterputzer. Doch alle verdienen das gleiche Geld. Kann man daraus schließen, wer von diesen Menschen rechtschaffener ist? Es kommt nicht auf das Geld an, das man verdient, sondern darauf, wie man es ausgibt. Der Taoist gibt seine Energie aus, um sich selbst und andere bis zur höchstmöglichen Stufe weiterzuentwickeln, und dabei bedient er sich der Linken Hand, der Rechten Hand und der Nicht-Hand.

Der Tao-Pfad der Nicht-Hand

Die taoistische Lehre von den drei Stufen der Erleuchtung und dem höchsten Ziel, der Unsterblichkeit, geht über das in diesem Buch Geschilderte weit hinaus. In meinen Meditationskursen versuche ich, den taoistischen Weg zur absoluten Freiheit des Menschen zu zeigen. Wir Taoisten kennen eine Vielzahl geheimer Techniken, um zu unserem reinen Sein zu finden. Beim Eisenhemd Chi Kung z. B. lehre ich eine Technik des Gewichthebens mit dem männlichen Geschlechtsorgan, mit der große Mengen an Samenenergie geradewegs in Kopf und Körper gepumpt werden können. In China oder Indien sitzt man sein ganzes Leben zu Füßen eines Meisters, bevor er einem dieses Geheimnis anvertraut. Ich habe keine Geheimnisse zu hüten, ich mochte lieber an andere Menschen weitergeben, was ich selbst gelernt habe. Das einzige Problem besteht darin, Schüler zu finden, die genügend Geduld und Selbstdisziplin aufbringen, um das Gelehrte auch anzuwenden.

DER TAO-PFAD DER NICHT-HAND

Die Energien von Yin und Yang sind im Gleichgewicht.

Durch Eisenhemd Chi Kung wird die Stabilität unserer Lebensenergie verstärkt, indem man sie tiefer in der Erde verwurzelt und das Chi in die Faszien, Knochen und Hohlräume des Körpers einlagert. In der «Kleinen Erleuchtung» oder «Kan und Li» lehre ich die esoterische Praktik der Steigerung der Yin-und Yang-Kräfte im Körper und das «Empordampfen» der gespeicherten Chi- und Ching-Energie in verfeinerterer Form ins Herz und in den Kopf. Bei der «Großen Erleuchtung» lernt der Schüler, Yin- und Yang-Energie aus Quellen außerhalb des eigenen Körpers - von Erde, Sonne und Mond - aufzunehmen und diese in einem alchemistischen Prozeß der Verfeinerung «emporzudampfen». Doch bevor man nicht gelernt hat, die eigene schöpferische Sexualenergie zu meistern, läßt sich nicht einmal davon träumen, die subtilen Sphären des restlichen Universums beherrschen zu wollen. Sonst verbringt man sein ganzes Leben damit, illusionären Kräften oder einem falschen Gefühl der Einheit nachzujagen, die entweder im Alter oder auf dem Sterbebett verschwinden werden, wenn man erkennen muß, daß man seine Träume nicht in das Leben nach dem Tod mit hinübernehmen kann.

Die taoistische Tradition lehrt, daß die Transformation der Körperenergie bestimmten Stufen folgt: Zuerst wird die Samenenergie in den warmen Strom des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs hineingeleitet. Der warme Strom wird in geistige Kraft umgewandelt, und diese Kraft oder «Seele» wird schließlich in die höchste Manifestationsform transformiert, den reinen Geist. Wird dieser Geist in einem Unsterblichen Körper verkörpert, so gewinnt er dadurch die Freiheit, behebig auf verschiedenen spirituellen Ebenen zu agieren. Dieser Schritt fuhrt noch über das Bewußtsein des kosmischen Einsseins hinaus.

Ein Mensch, der die taoistische Lehre der Energieverfeinerung befolgt, wird ein steigendes Bewußtsein für das Einssein aller Lebewesen entwickeln. Er weiß, daß die Kraft anderer in ihn hineinströmt und wieder zu ihnen zurückkehrt. Wo immer Leben ist, dort strömt auch die Kraft. Er versteht diese Wahrheit, weil er sie in seinem eigenen Körper erfährt. Vom anderen zu nehmen bedeutet, von sich selbst zu nehmen, weil man selbst der andere ist. Den Strom eines anderen zu beschmutzen heißt, seinen eigenen zu verunreinigen: Es gibt nur einen einzigen Strom der Schöpfung, und das ist der Strom des Lebens.

Aus diesem Grund biete ich Ihnen eine ganze Reihe von Methoden an, aus denen Sie Ihre Auswahl treffen können, um ohne Forcierung und Gewaltanwendung Fortschritte zu erzielen. Es ist ratsam, eine Stufe nach der anderen zu bearbeiten.

Auch die Meister haben mit den unteren Stufen begonnen und sich dann nach und nach an die fortgeschritteneren Techniken gewagt.

Es ist falsch zu glauben, der Gebrauch der menschlichen Sexualenergie auf der körperlichen Ebene sei ein «unreiner» Pfad, denn in Wirklichkeit ist dies ein Pfad, den jeder Mensch beschreiten muß. Wenn man mit dem Pfad der Linken Hand beginnt, wird man eines Tages zum Pfad der Rechten Hand vorstoßen, um schließlich den Pfad der Nicht-Hand zu erreichen. Doch lassen sich die höchsten Stufen nicht verwirklichen, bevor man nicht Stufe um Stufe die Leiter von unten nach oben erklommen hat und dabei mit beiden Händen die Sprossen fest packt. Beim Aufstieg dient sowohl die rechte als auch die linke Hand zur Stabilisierung des Gleichgewichts, und man läßt erst los, nachdem man oben angekommen ist. Dann hat man festen Boden unter den Füßen, kann die Leiter fortstoßen und mit den «Nicht-Händen» dastehen, mit freien Händen, die nun tun können, was immer man als nächstes wählt, sei es, eine weitere Leiter zu erklimmen, oder dort zu bleiben, wo man ist.

In Wirklichkeit gibt es überhaupt keinen Pfad der Linken oder Rechten Hand, sondern nur die harmonische Verbindung von Yin und Yang in einer Vielzahl von Gestalten. Alles fuhrt zu seinem eigenen Gegenteil: Sexualität fuhrt zur Nicht-Sexualität; Einheit fuhrt zur Zweiheit (der Zweiheit von Yin und Yang), Zweiheit wiederum zur Dreiheit, und All-Sein fuhrt zum Nicht-Sein, zum Nichts (Wu Chi). Die Befolgung des Tao ist der Pfad der Nicht-Hand. Befolgt man das Prinzip der Nicht-Hand, wird das Leben völlig mühelos. ‘

Im Tai Chi Chuan gibt es eine Stufe, die als die «Wunderbaren Hände» bezeichnet wird. Ein Anfänger des Tai Chi benutzt etwa 90% Yang-Energie, um seinen Körper zu bewegen. Ein Fortgeschrittener wird etwa 60% Yang und 40% Yin einsetzen, während ein Meister des «Wunderbare Hand Tai Chi» 50% Yin und 50% Yang benutzt. Ein Tao Meister erschafft in jedem Augenblick seines Lebens dasselbe Gleichgewicht. Der Tao Pfad der Nicht-Hand ist deswegen so wunderbar, weil er anmutig und mühelos ist, eben so, wie der Mensch sein Leben fuhren sollte.

Die sieben spirituellen Stufen der tao istischen Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie

Erste Stufe: Die physische Beherrschung des Samenverlusts

Wie bei allen fünf ersten Stufen der taoistischen Energietransformation erfolgt auch die Beherrschung des Samenverlusts auf der «menschlichen Ebene» des Bewußtseins. Während des Liebesakts oder der Selbstbefriedigung wird der Samenfluß mit Hilfe der Finger unterbrochen. Dies verringert den Verlust der Vitalsäfte und erleichtert ihre Umverteilung an die Körperstellen, die ihrer bedürfen. Der Einsatz der Finger verhindert zwar das Ausstoßen des Samens, doch wird das Ching Chi noch nicht im Körper empor geleitet. Es erfolgt ein normaler Orgasmus mit einem 60-70%igen Verlust an Samenenergie, der elektromagnetischen Energie, die durch die Bewegung der 2-500 Millionen Samenzellen erzeugt wird. Immerhin verbleibt der größte Teil des Samens im Körper, und die in ihm enthaltenen Hormone können reabsorbiert werden.

Der Körper spart Energie ein, weil er weniger Sperma zu produzieren braucht. Spürt er nämlich, daß noch Sperma vorhanden ist, reduziert er automatisch die Samenproduktion. Unmittelbar nach Anwendung dieser Methode des Außenver-schlusses wird das Glied erschlaffen, und Mattigkeitsgefuhle treten auf. Nach einer gewissen Zeit aber werden Gesundheit und körperliche Kraft zunehmen, und das Sexualleben erfährt Vertiefung und Intensivierung.

Zweite Stufe: Die physische und mentale Beherrschung des sexuellen Orgasmus

Diese Stufe verbindet die Technik des äußeren Fingerdrucks mit der inneren Verschlußtechnik des «Emporziehens des Nektars in die Goldene Blüte», dem sogenannten Großen Emporziehen.

Vor der Ejakulation drücken die Finger den Hui Yin, während gleichzeitig mit Hilfe des Großen Emporziehens Energie emporgelenkt wird, bevor sie aus dem Glied entweichen kann. Auf diese Weise bleibt der Verlust zwar geringer als auf der ersten Stufe, doch wird das Glied danach ebenfalls erschlaffen, und es kommt weiterhin zu einem normalen Orgasmus, der sich auf den Genitalbereich konzentriert.

Das Herstellen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs bildet den Schlüssel zum Emporleiten der Energie, die dadurch nicht mehr aus dem Penis gedrängt wird. Gelingt es, die Energie ins Steißbein und Kreuzbein zu leiten, wird sie bei den meisten Menschen mühelos die Wirbelsäule emporströmen. Spürt man den Druck des Chi im Kopfbereich, so muß die Energie zum Nabel hinabgelenkt werden.

Dritte Stufe: Die geistige Beherrschung des Geschlechtstriebs und des Orgasmus Nach einiger Übung des Großen Emporziehens gelingt es, die Ejakulation mit reiner Geisteskraft zu verhindern. Dann läßt sich auch das Große Emporziehen ohne körperliche Kraft durchführen, und der Übende lernt, mit seinem Orgasmus zu spielen. Gelegentlich mag es zu S amen Verlusten kommen, doch wird die Beherrschung der physischen Ejakulation mit der Zeit wachsen und die Möglichkeit bieten, eine ganz andersartige, mit unbekannten Freuden verbundene Form des Orgasmus zu erfahren, den «Tal-Orgasmus».

Wird die Ejakulation rechtzeitig vermieden, ist man fähig, die Energie der Frau aufzunehmen, und es kann ein Energieaustausch stattfinden. Auf diese Weise verliert man die eine Energie, erhält dafür aber die andere. Der Mann verliert Yang-Energie und empfängt die für ihn notwendige Yin-Energie. Dieser Vorgang laßt sich mit einem Tauschhandel vergleichen: Wahrend der Mann einen Überschuß an Yang besitzt, verfugt die Frau über ein Zuviel an Yin, so daß beide ihre Energien austauschen und jeder der Beteiligten das erhält, was er braucht. Diese Methode verlangt eine höhere Bewußtseinsstufe, gesteigerte Selbstkontrolle und den Abschied von der Gedankenerotik und sexuellen Vorstellungen. Die an den Liebespartner abgegebene Energie sollte als bewußtes Opfer am Altar des höheren Bewußtseins dargebracht werden.

Die dritte Stufe steht über der zweiten, weil der Geist in eine neue Beziehung zum Ching Chi getreten ist. Er hat begonnen, die Sexualessenz mit dem allgemeinen Chi zu einem einzigen, einsgewordenen Sein zu vereinen. Die rein geistige Methode fuhrt zu ganz anderen Erfahrungen als die Methode des Fingerdrucks in Verbindung mit dem Großen Emporziehen. Durch das Große Emporziehen wird die überschüssige Kraft aus den Fortpflanzungsorganen in die höhergelegenen Körperzentren umgeleitet, wo sie zu weitaus größeren Aufgaben gespeichert wird. Dadurch wird die Sexualessenz zu einem Nährmittel des höherentwickelten Geistes.

Wird auf der dritten Stufe das Große Emporziehen angewandt, erfolgt bei jedem Mal eine Kraftsteigerung. Beim Liebesakt verhindert diese Methode die Ermüdung, so daß der Liebesakt so oft ausgeführt werden kann, wie man will. Allerdings braucht man sexuelle Begegnungen weniger häufig, weil jeder Liebesakt als derart befriedigend und erfüllend erfahren wird, daß man sich kräftiger fühlt, mehr Selbstbeherrschung hat und andere weltliche Begierden, die das Leben früher bestimmten, leichter überwindet.

Dennoch sollte sich der Lernende stets vor Augen halten, daß er seine zusätzliche Energie von einem anderen unvollkommenen Menschen bezieht. Aus diesem Grund muß er in der Lage sein, die Mängel dieser Person im eigenen.Inneren zu überwinden. Auf dieser dritten Stufe müssen beide Partner viel Verständnis füreinander aufbringen und sich der Praktik voll und ganz verschreiben. Denn wenn einer der Partner der Arbeit distanziert gegenübersteht, wird der Energieaustausch empfindlich erschwert. Hat einer der beiden Sorgen oder ist er zornig, wird der andere diese psychischen Stimmungen ebenfalls in sich aufnehmen. Gelegentlich scheitert diese Methode, weil ein Partner unter persönlichen Problemen leidet. Dies muß als erstes überprüft und durch Meditation oder andere Therapien gelöst werden. Sonst mmmt der Partner diese Probleme in seinen eigenen Körper auf, wo sie als seelisches Gift wirksam werden.

Das Anwenden dieser Methode wäre ziemlich unfair, wenn sich die Partnerin traurig und niedergeschlagen, der Mann aber j fröhlich und energiegeladen fühlt. Dann wird die Frau Glücksgefühle und Energie des Mannes aufnehmen, während dieser dafür ihre Niedergeschlagenheit und ihre Probleme aufsaugt. Nur bei sehr intensiver Hingabe an den anderen ist es möglich, ihn zu reinigen und ihm Hilfe bei der Bewältigung seiner inneren Probleme zu geben, indem man ihn auf einen höheren Weg fuhrt. Darum sollte der Partner auch sehr sorgfältig ausgewählt werden, denn schließlich trinkt er buchstäblich die Lebensessenz dieses Menschen. Ist der Partner sehr vulgär, eitel oder eifersüchtig, wird auch der andere zu einem solchen Menschen werden, außer er setzt alle Kräfte seiner höheren Liebe und Hingabe ein, um diese niederen Impulse zum Verschwinden zu bringen.

Vierte Stufe: Energieaustausch ohne Sexualakt

Männern gelingt diese Übung leichter mit einer jungen Partnerin, die noch keine Kinder zur Welt gebracht hat und noch immer über große Vitalität verfügt, oder mit einer Frau, die durch Meditation ihr Chi deutlich verstärkt hat. Es handelt sich um eine Methode der Selbstheilung, die vor allem für (ältere) Menschen geeignet ist, die weniger Interesse an einem aktiven Geschlechtsleben haben, aber die verjüngenden Kräfte der Sexualenergien suchen. Der wohl bekannteste Praktikant dieser Stufe war zweifellos Mahatma Gandhi, der in aller Keuschheit seine achtzehnjährige Nichte nachts sein Bett mit ihm teilen ließ. Das spirituelle Feuer, das in Gandhi so leuchtend brannte, bedurfte des nährenden und kühlenden weiblichen Ching, doch'war es ihm als hinduistischem Heiligen durch Kultur und Religion verboten, sexuelle Kontakte zu pflegen.

Im Mittelalter standen die dem ritterlichen Kodex verpflichteten Edelleute unter einem ähnlichen Zwang, ihre sexuellen Triebe zu einer Art spiritueller Romantik zu sublimieren. Der keusche Kuß einer Dame oder eine nichtsexuelle Umarmung mit liebevollem Augenkontakt - dergleichen wurde in den Gesängen der Troubadoure und in der Legende vom Heiligen Gral idealisiert, die ein eindeutiges Symbol für die Suche nach der reinen weiblichen Energie im Inneren eines jeden Ritters darstellte.

Heute eignet sich diese Methode auch für Situationen, wo befreundete Menschen ihren spirituellen Kontakt vertiefen oder einander heilen möchten, aufgrund von ehelichen Bindungen oder anderer Partnerverpflichtungen jedoch die Disharmonie einer sexuellen Affäre zu vermeiden trachten. Obwohl die taoi-stische Philosophie die Stabilität harmonischer Beziehungen hoch achtet, erkennt sie auch die Notwendigkeit spiritueller Freiheit an, persönliche Bedürfnisse ausgleichen und erfüllen zu können. Diese Methode gestattet ein weitaus breiteres Spektrum freiheitlicher Partnerbeziehungen, eines, das sich nicht auf die begrenzten Kategorien Liebhaber/Nicht-Liebhaber beschränkt. Sie ermöglicht die spirituelle Freundschaft, bei welcher der Austausch sexuell polarisierter Energie mit Anmut und ohne falsche Scham zugegeben und akzeptiert wird. Es ist ein zarter, wundervoller Weg für zwei Menschen, die ihre Energie gemeinsam weiterentwickeln mochten. Auch Ehepaare werden ihn vielleicht gehen wollen, um ihre Liebe zueinander zu vertiefen.

Diese Stufe eignet sich aber nur für Männer, die bereits die vorangegangenen drei Ebenen beherrschen und zu einem bestimmten Grad der spirituellen Selbsterkenntnis gelangt sind. Der Mann, der diesen Weg geht, hat erkannt, daß das, was er sucht, nicht in der äußeren Frau zu finden ist und auch nicht in ihrer Sinnlichkeit. Sein Chi strömt nicht nach außen zu seinen Sinnen, sondern es fließt nach innen in sein Zentrum. Er sucht die innere Frau in sich selbst und weiß, daß sich seine eigene Yin-Kraft besser entfalten kann, wenn sie durch die Gegenwart einer starken weiblichen Energie angeregt wird.

Zur Methode:

Liegen oder sitzen Sie mit dem Gesicht zum Partner. Physischer Kontakt durch Händehalten oder durch Umarmung ist nicht unbedingt erforderlich, doch sollte die Gegenwart des Partners Sie erregen. Konzentrieren Sie Ihre Aufmerksamkeit auf das subtile Energiefeld des Partners; Sie müssen die Aura des anderen «spüren». Zu Anfang nehmen Sie die Energie des Partners in Ihren Unteren Tan-Tien auf. Ziehen Sie die Kraft in den Kopf, öffnen Sie stufenweise die Bahn, damit mehr Energie einströmen kann. Auf einer fortgeschritteneren Stufe dieser Übung kann die Energie ohne Umwege direkt in Herz oder Kopf geleitet werden, doch muß sie gründlich verteilt werden, damit jedes Ungleichgewicht vermieden wird. Bei täglicher Übung werden Sie eine gewaltige Kraft erreichen, die zum großen Teil aus Ihrem eigenen Körper stammt. Es ist eine Yin-Kraft der Samenflüssigkeit, die weitaus reiner als jene der ersten und zweiten Stufe ist. Indem Sie diese neue Sensitivität in Ihrem: Inneren entwickeln, können Sie Ihr eigenes spirituelles Wachstum und das Ihres Partners erheblich beschleunigen.

Fünfte Stufe: Jenseits des Sexus

Diese Stufe wird von hochdisziplinierten Taoistischen Yogis angestrebt. Zwar befindet man sich dabei noch immer auf der menschlichen Ebene, doch ist die Energie schon viel höher entwickelt als jene, die man nachts im Schlaf erlangt und die bereits einen großen Reinheitsgrad aufweist. Auf dieser Stufe! erfolgt keinerlei sexuelle Reizung. Im Taoismus wird diese Methode als «Meditation der Lebensstunde» oder auch als «Stunde des Tsu» bezeichnet, weil sie zwischen 23 Uhr und l' Uhr durchgeführt wird. Die Tao Meister wußten, daß die Kraft, die man aus dem eigenen Körper bezieht, für alle Zeiten im Körper verbleiben kann. Die von einem anderen Menschen aufgenommene Kraft dagegen wird nicht so lange in einem verweilen und läßt sich auch nicht so mühelos integrieren. Es ist einer Blutübertragung vergleichbar, bei der die fremden Zellen auch nur 24 Tage erhalten bleiben, um dann abzusterben. Ziel der esoterischen Sexualität ist es, die geheime Fähigkeit des Ausgleichens subtiler Yin- und Yang-Energien zu erlangen. Die Sexualität gehört nun einmal zu den tiefsitzendsten Gewohnheiten des Menschen. Also muß man stufenweise vorgehen und sein Verhalten langsam ändern. Schließlich erwartet man auch von einem Löwen nicht, daß er über Nacht seine Ernährung von Fleisch auf Gras umstellt. Je weiter man in dieser Praktik kommt, um so müheloser ändern sich die Gewohnheiten, ohne Zwang und Vorschriften von außen.

Nach dem Aufwachen erlebt der Mann häufig eine Erektion, weil der Schlaf den Körper mit Sexualessenz und mit der Lebenskraft Chi aufgefüllt hat. Es ist äußerst wichtig, zu diesem Zeitpunkt die Energie emporzuziehen, um ihre intensive und reine Kraft genießen zu können. Unterläßt man es, wird sie aus dem Körper entweichen. Viele Menschen sind dann versucht, sexuell tätig zu werden oder zu masturbieren, was nur zu großem Kraftverlust fuhrt. Diese Stufe steht über den ersten vier, weil ohne menschlichen Partner auch jedes erotische Denken unterbleibt und man der ursprünglichen Leere des Tao näher ist. Auch der Penis erigiert durch seine eigene Kraft. Diese Technik wird im Taoismus als großes Geheimnis gehütet.

Sechste Stufe: Die Transformation der spirituellen Energie über den Geist und den Körper hinaus

Diese Stufe ist für Menschen gedacht, die durch Yoga, Meditation oder durch die taoistische Höherentwicklung des Chi bereits eine gewisse geistige Ausbildung erhalten haben. Viele glauben, einem rechtschaffenen oder heiligen Pfad zu folgen, indem sie sich von allem Weltlichen abwenden. Das fuhrt häufig dazu, daß ehrgeizige Yogis versuchen, ihre sexuellen Gefühle völlig zu unterdrücken. In Wirklichkeit muß man sich aber zuerst mit dem eigenen Sexualtrieb auseinandergesetzt haben, bevor man die sechste Stufe wirklich meistern kann.

Auf dieser hohen spirituellen Stufe lernt der Mensch, Energie direkt und unmittelbar aus der universalen, alles durchdringenden Lebenskraft aufzunehmen. Zunächst muß der Schüler mehrere Jahre darauf verwenden, auf der menschlichen Ebene Kraft aufzunehmen, bis die Energie in seinem Körper, in seiner Seele und in seinem Geist - also Chi, Ching und Shien - bis zum Überlaufen voll ist (Stufen l -5). Danach kann er sich dem großen Gebiet der Yin- und Yang-Energienjenseits des Körpers widmen und sein Chi dorthin projizieren, wo es am nützlichsten ist.

Viele Menschen versuchen ungeduldig, gleich zu den göttlichen Aspekten ihrer Natur vorzustoßen, ohne jedoch vorher ihre menschlichen und tierischen Eigenschaften und Bedingtheiten verstanden zu haben. Wie ein Weiser einmal sagte: «Es ist leicht, Gott zu erkennen, aber sehr schwer, ein Mensch zu sein.» Aus diesem Grund beginnen die Taoisten die Arbeit an sich selbst ganz unten am Fundament und betonen die Verwurzelung mit der Erde als Grundbedingung für das Herabholen der Kraft des Himmels.

Die Macht der Sexualenergie ist winzig, wenn man sie mit der Totalität der kosmischen Energie des Tao vergleicht. Doch für den Menschen ist die Sexualität außerordentlich machtvoll, eine Brücke zu den gewaltigen Kräften des Universums und der spirituellen Bereiche des Bewußtseins. Eines der am häufigsten anzutreffenden Hindernisse auf dem Weg zu erweitertem Bewußtsein ist die Vernachlässigung dieser Energie. Viele Menschen mögen zwar durch Meditation oder Vision einen zeitweiligen Einblick in dieses Reich erhalten, doch nur wenige von ihnen sind imstande, darin zu leben.

Die vitale Chi-Energie, die vorher dazu benutzt wurde, generative (Samen-)Kraft zu erzeugen, wird nun im Körper umgelenkt und auf direktem Weg in die höheren Energiezentren geleitet. Die Taoisten bezeichnen die Stufen dieses Prozesses als Kleine Erleuchtung. Ist sie gemeistert worden, wird der Körper durchlässig und empfänglich für die Energien des Himmels, ohne irgendeiner Zwischenstufe zu bedürfen. Er stellt die Produktion von Samenzellen ein.

Auf dieser höheren Stufe nehmen der Pai-Hui (Scheitel) und der Yin-Tang (drittes Auge) die universale Kraft auf, während der Yung-Chuan (am Fußballen) die Energie der Erde absor-biert. In diesem Stadium kann man mit der Morgen-, der Mittagssonne und dem Mond üben. Dies verleiht dem Adepten die reine, überbewußte Kraft des Universums, die mit der durch den Yin-Tang (drittes Auge) eindringenden Mond-Energie ins Gleichgewicht gebracht wird.

Die universale Energie ist derart unverarbeitet, daß der Körper sie erst transformieren und mit der eigenen Energie vermengen muß, damit sie auch auf menschlicher Ebene von Nutzen sein kann. Erlangt man diese Stufe, bedient man sich in immer geringerem Ausmaß der menschlichen Kraftquellen. Dies ist das Stadium, von dem an einige Tao Meister keine Nahrung mehr zu sich nehmen. Sie ziehen sich in die Reinheit der einsamen Berge zurück und ernähren sich durch Atmen von den subtilen Energien der Natur. Mein eigener Meister erlangte diese Stufe, wurde aber im Zweiten Weltkrieg durch die japanischen Bombenangriffe gezwungen, seine Bergzuflucht wieder zu verlassen.

Siebte Stufe: Die Vereinigung von Mensch und Tao

Diese Stufe wird von den Taoisten als «Unsterblichkeit» bezeichnet. Ich kann sie zwar nicht aus persönlicher Anschauung beschreiben, doch ist sie im tausendbändigen taoistischen Kanon sehr gut dokumentiert, wobei auch viele namentlich erwähnt werden, die dieses Stadium erreichten. Man kann an diese Unsterblichkeit glauben oder sie als Metapher für irgendeinen Zustand kosmischer Bewußtheit abturi. Doch sind die taoistischen Lehren in diesem Punkt völlig eindeutig: Es ist eine durchaus wörtliche, also keine rein symbolische Unsterblichkeit damit gemeint. Die höchste Schöpfung des Menschen ist die bewußte Erschaffung seiner selbst. Die Vereinigung mit dem Tao verlangt einen Akt völliger Neuerschaffung aus dem Ur-Chi oder Wu Chi.

Im Kapitel 18 findet sich eine noch ausführlichere Beschreibung der sieben höheren Meditationsformeln des Tao, die zu diesem Zustand der Göttlichkeit führen.

Alle sieben Stufen werden Sie nach und nach zu immer höheren spirituellen Ebenen fuhren, doch liegt es an Ihnen selbst zu entscheiden, wie weit Sie Ihre persönliche Evolution fortsetzen wollen. Ich kann Ihnen nicht empfehlen, welche Stufe am besten für Sie wäre. Niemand kann Ihnen vorschreiben, wie Sie Ihr Leben zu fuhren haben. Manche Menschen sind, so wird uns überliefert, mit der ersten und zweiten Stufe über hundert Jahre alt geworden. Andere sollen mit Hilfe der dritten und vierten Stufe gleich mehrere hundert Jahre alt geworden; sein und dabei ein glückliches, vitales Leben gefuhrt haben.

Wenn Sie noch jung sind und nach mehreren Partnern verlangen, sind die Stufen zwei bis vier für Sie vielleicht am geeignetsten. Sind Sie reifer geworden, wollen Sie vielleicht nur noch eine einzige Frau. Junge Männer wünschen sich oft eine möglichst schöne Ehefrau, doch nach einigen Jahren Ehe ist Schönheit nicht länger die wichtigste Eigenschaft der Frau. Oft kann ein einfaches Mädchen mit liebenswertem Charakter die sicherste Garantie für seelischen Frieden sein. Das hängt von Ihrem spirituellen Streben und Ihrer Reife- und Entwicklungsstufe ab.

Nachdem Sie dieses Buch gelesen haben, können Sie die Praktik des Sexual-Kung Fu natürlich auch wieder völlig aufgeben und weiterhin fröhlich ejakulieren wie ein Wasserfall. Doch wenn Ihnen daran gelegen sein sollte, Ihre Energie zu verfeinern, werden Sie sich von selbst weiterentwickeln und.zu höheren spirituellen Stufen vorstoßen. Am schnellsten erreichen Sie Ihr Ziel, indem Sie sich mit ganzer Hingabe Ihrer spirituellen Entwicklung widmen. Sobald Sie aufhören, gegen Ihre eigene Natur anzukämpfen, die in ihrem Wesen mit der des Tao identisch ist, wird Ihnen alles mühelos erscheinen. Dann wird Ihr Gewahrsein der universalen feinstofBichen Energien auf natürliche Weise wachsen. Sie werden von allein Fortschritte machen, aus innerer Führung heraus und nicht, weil irgendeine Religion oder Philosophie es vorschreibt.

Der große chinesische Arzt Sun S'su-mo (581-682 n. Chr.), der berühmt für die Erfindung der Pockenimpfung war und 101 Jahre alt wurde, hat das Problem der Entwicklung in seiner

Rezeptur für die Herstellung des Unschätzbaren Goldes scharfsinnig formuliert:

«In seiner Jugend versteht der Mensch das Tao nicht.

In seinen mittleren Jahren erfährt er viel über das Tao, handelt aber nicht entsprechend.

Ist er alt geworden, erkennt er die Wahrheit des Tao, ist aber zu schwach, um noch entsprechend zu handeln.»

11. KAPITEL

Orgasmus und Wu Wei

von

Michael Winn

Aus dem taoistischen Kanon

Im Laufe der Geschichte hat es einige Diskussionen über die Frage gegeben, ob die Frau über eine unendliche Menge Yin-Energie verfügt und folglich zu einer endlosen Zahl von Orgasmen fähig sei. Diese Auffassung vertreten die medizinischen taoistischen Texte aus dem 8. Jahrhundert, und sie empfehlen dem Mann aus diesem Grund, Frauen so viele Orgasmen zu bereiten wie möglich, um ein Maximum an Yin-Energie freizusetzen.

Die Energie der Frau ist lunarer Natur und folgt einem Monatszyklus. Sie verliert jeden Monat Energie durch die Menstruation. Andererseits wird sie auch monatlich von der Erdenergie erneuert, was ihr ein gewaltiges orgasmisches Potential verleiht. Doch können mehrfache Orgasmen sehr auslaugend wirken, je nach Art des Orgasmus und abhängig vom individuellen Energieniveau der Frau. Da sich die Geschlechtsorgane der Frau in ihrem Körperinneren befinden, ist es für sie weitaus leichter als für den Mann, die orgasmische Energie durch Umwandlung in die höheren Zentren zu leiten. Aus diesem Grund sind auch so viele Frauen, selbst ohne spirituellen Hintergrund, immer noch wesentlich spiritueller eingestellt als vergleichbar unwissende Männer. Die Männer stoßen einfach, ihrem Instinkt folgend, ihren Samen aus und verlieren damit seine subtilen Vorzüge.

Hat aber ein Mann begonnen, seinen Samen zu bewahren und höherzuentwickehi, kann er dies, hinreichende Disziplin vorausgesetzt, Tag und Nacht tun. Sein Körper wird die Samenproduktion beschleunigen. Das ermöglicht es dem Mann, sein Chi schneller zu verfeinern, als es die Frau vermag, die einem langsameren Monatszyklus unterworfen ist. Aus diesem Grund sind auch so viele Gurus und Meister männlichen Geschlechts. Darüber hinaus sind Frauen von Natur aus Yin, stehen somit der Leere näher als Männer und verspüren auch keinen solch starken Drang, ein expansives, yang-betontes Ziel wie die Verbreitung einer Lehre zu verfolgen. Die Frauen haben einen anderen Weg.

Doch ist es ebendiese Faszination der Frau und ihres Orgasmus, welche dem männlichen Adepten, sofern er sensibel genug ist, als innere Lehre dienen kann. Der weibliche Orgasmus ist eine inwendige Explosion - eine Implosion - ihrer Yin-Essenz. Beim Tal-Orgasmus kann der Mann diese implodierende Yin-Energie in seinen verschiedenen Tan-Tiens als Fusion, als eine Art Zusammenschmelzen erfahren. Das Yin steht für die Energie der Erde oder für die physische Materie. Beim Orgasmus der Frau vibriert und implodiert der ganze Körper. Wenn der Mann seine Energie mit der ihren in ein harmonisches Gleichgewicht bringt, eröffnet sich ihm damit eine neue, seiner bisherigen polar entgegengesetzte Erfahrung. Die Frau lehrt uns, daß man tief in die Erde, in den eigenen Körper eindringen muß, um in den Himmel emporgehoben zu werden. Diese Einweihung in eines der inneren Mysterien des Seins kann die Frau dem Mann schenken, doch bedarf sie dazu der männlichen Energie als Katalysator.

Liebende ohne esoterische Praxis und Anleitung können diesen Zustand der Verschmelzung manchmal erfahren, wenn sie in einer Art süßer Trance nach dem Liebesakt schwelgen und ihre Energien miteinander spontan zu einem Tal-Orgasmus verschmelzen. Dann spüren sie ihre Körper als durchsichtig, oder sie glauben zu schweben; alle Geräusche erhalten eine klingende, kristallene Klarheit, und auch die Farben im Zimmer wirken frisch, fast wie neu. Dies ist ein veränderter Bewußt-seinszustand, in dem die Liebenden in Reinheit und Unmittelbarkeit die Ur-Einheit der Natur erkennen.

Das Ziel der taoistischen Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie ist die Aufrechterhaltung und Intensivierung dieses Zustands, in dem das normale Gefühl der Trennung sich auflöst und in eine höhere Realität integriert wird. Der höhere Orgasmus von Geist und Körper fuhrt uns auf magische Weise zum ursprünglichen Chi zurück, das überall vorhanden ist. Die reine Verschmelzung der subtilen Energien von Yin und Yang im Mikrokosmos unseres Körpers ruft uns in Erinnerung, daß dasselbe auch im Makrokosmos geschieht — daß Sonne, Mond, Erde und Milchstraße im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes sich lieben. Die Planeten ziehen einander mit gewaltigen elektromagnetischen und Gravitationsfeldern an, Sonnen und Quasare lassen heiße Yang-StrÖme aus Licht und Strahlung hervorschießen, die vom kalten Yin-Vakuum des leeren Alls empfangen werden. Aus der Ferne können wir diesen kosmischen Liebesakt beobachten, der uns im gespenstischen Licht des Mondes auf der Erde erreicht oder als Sternschnuppen, die über den Himmel jagen. Vielleicht wird all diese Lichtenergie schließlich wieder vom Schoß des Universums aufgesogen, von den schwarzen Löchern, jenseits derer das wirkliche Nichts ist, welches die Taoisten «Wu Chi» nennen.

Auf analoge Weise ist der männliche Samen die solare oder Kernenergie des Mannes. Er speichert sie oder reichert sie an, damit sie auf kontrollierte Weise in seinen Tan-Tiens explodieren kann. Die Explosion wird in sein individuelles Weltall als Hitze ausgestrahlt. Die Frau kann sie in sich aufnehmen und sie in Form von kühlender mystischer Hitze zurückgeben, die heilend wirkt. Der Taoist nennt das Gleichgewicht des Geistes, innerhalb dessen dieser alchemistische Transformationsprozeß ohne jede Anstrengung abläuft, «Wu Wei». Diese Bezeichnung wird als «Nicht-Handeln» übersetzt und manchmal so ausgelegt, als ob Taoisten passive, mystische Beobachter der Natur seien, die sich niemals an irgend etwas beteiligen, weil sie befürchten, das empfindliche Gleichgewicht von Yin und Yang dadurch zu stören. In Wirklichkeit ist damit jedoch eine Neutralität oder ein Zustand der Empfänglichkeit gemeint, der es möglich macht, daß buchstäblich alles ganz spontan geschehen kann. Dieser Zustand ist in dem Sinne passiv, als das gesamte Universum aus potentieller Art ist, doch ist er insoweit aktiv, als er in völliger Harmonie mit dem Universum steht, das sich jeden Augenblick auf dynamische Weise manifestiert. So ist der Mensch ewig frei, zu handeln oder nicht zu handeln, der jeweiligen Situation gemäß.

Aus oberflächlicher Sicht scheint es, daß Frauen näher am Zustand des «Wu Wei» leben als Männer, weil es ihrer Yin-Natur entspricht, sich zu leeren und das Universum aufzunehmen, um dadurch die Fülle zu erfahren. Diese Yin-Essenz der weiblichen Energie ist es, die sie dem Mann als so spontan und anziehend erscheinen läßt. Je weniger die Frau sich anstrengt, um so natürlicher, leichter und zugänglicher erscheint sie dem Mann. Eine Frau kann sich einfach hinlegen und schwanger werden - sie verleiht dem Akt der Schöpfung den Nimbus des Schlichten, Einfachen. Männer andererseits sind yang, mit sich ausdehnender Energie, die anscheinend einer großen Anstrengung bedarf, um sich selbst aufrechterhalten zu können. Wie sollten Männer auch jemals größer oder starker werden oder überhaupt irgend etwas hervorbringen, ohne Arbeit, Arbeit und nochmals Arbeit?

Vielleicht kann der Mann eine Antwort auf diese Frage im Tal-Orgasmus finden, denn in diesen totalen Orgasmus von Geist, Körper und Seele tritt man mühelos, ohne Anstrengung ein. Wenn Sie durch das Tal spazieren, durch eine wunderschöne Landschaft, in der es nur Sie selbst, Ihre Liebespartnerin und den feinstoitlichen Kosmos gibt, so wird Ihnen wieder vor Augen geführt, wie schlicht und natürlich diese höhere Harmonie doch ist. Daß Sie aber schon einmal hier gewesen sind, haben Sie vergessen, während Sie draußen in der Welt damit beschäftigt waren, Geld zu verdienen, eine Familie zu erhalten usw. Sie brauchen nicht zu arbeiten, sich verkrampft anzustrengen, um dieses Gefühl Hebevollen Friedens zu erlangen. Im Gegenteil, dieser Zustand des «Wu Wei» wird nicht erreicht, indem man sich erschöpft, sondern vielmehr dadurch, daß man auf entspannte Weise die Partnerin hebt und einfach bei ihr ist. Wu Wei ist nichts anderes als der Zustand der Ausgewogenheit im Feld feinstofflicher, subtiler Energien, das Ihre Körper erzeugen, und in jenen bereits bestehenden Feldern von Yin- und Yang-Ener-gie im Universum. Ihr Liebesakt ist eine Übung im Verweilen in diesem entspannten Zustand, damit Sie dazu fähig werden, diese tiefe Ruhe auch dann noch in Ihrem eigenen Inneren 7u spüren, wenn Sie sich wieder der Welt der Alltagssorgen zugewendet haben.

Die spontane Mühelosigkeit des Tal-Orgasmus berührt meiner Meinung nach den Kern der taoistischen Lehre. Manche Menschen werden möglicherweise in die Falle laufen, weil sie von den rein mechanischen Aspekten der Chi-Höherentwick-lung, der Methode des Großen Emporziehens, fasziniert sind. Dadurch mögen sie zwar eine Menge Chi ansammeln, doch wenn sie es zu angestrengt versuchen, werden sie niemals den Tal-Orgasmus oder Wu Wei erleben, welches ein empfindliches Gleichgewicht zwischen nicht-strebender Yin- und zielgerichteter Yang-Energie ist. Werden die beiden im Tal-Orgasmus miteinander in Harmonie gebracht, erlebt man das Paradoxon, gleichzeitig stillzustehen (Yin) und sich zu bewegen (Yang).

Aus diesem Grunde schreiben die großen taoistischen Dichter auch von der paradoxen Natur des Tao. Wu Wei ist Nicht-Tun - aber alles geschieht! Mein erstes Erlebnis des Tal-Orgasmus hat meine Liebespartnerin und mich völlig überrascht, vielleicht weil wir erwartet hatten, daß die esoterischen Methoden der taoistischen Liebeskunst wie die tiefen Meditationserfahrungen sein würden, mit denen wir schon seit Jahren vertraut gewesen waren, bevor wir zu Liebenden wurden. Während des Tal-Orgasmus hatte ich das Gefühl, an zwei Orten gleichzeitig zu sein. Mein Körper implodierte und verschmolz inwendig, während mein Bewußtsein sich nach außen ausdehnte, in immer größere Energiefelder und subtilere Bereiche, die zu beschreiben völlig unmöglich ist.

Ich empfand es auch als erstaunlich, wie mein Körper auf die

Signale des Körpers meiner Partnerin reagierte: Er fing im gleichen Tempo an zu vibrieren wie ihrer, und dieser Zustand dauerte mehrere Minuten. Trotz der Intensität des Orgasmus war mein Körper weder heiß noch kalt, sondern von mittlerer, angenehmer Temperatur. Das war etwas ganz anderes als meine frühere Meditationspraxis, bei der die Kundalini-Energie als Säule heißer Yang-Energie emporschoß und mein Scheitelzentrum und das dritte Auge öffnete. Manchmal war ich dadurch in eine Trance geraten, in der ich sogar völlig jedes Körperbewußtsein verlor. Dabei schaltete mein Bewußtsein ab, wahrend mein Körper hektisch versuchte, die hohe Dosis feinstofflicher Yang-Energie zu absorbieren und zu verkraften.

Mit dieser Beschreibung einer doch sehr subtilen und subjektiven Erfahrung möchte ich nur darauf hinweisen, daß die Methode taoistischer Chi-HÖherentwicklung zu einer ausgewogenen Meditation in allen Tan-Tiens (oder Chakras) des Körpers fuhrt.

Die stabilste Vermählung von Yin und Yang entsteht dann, wenn die kühleren unteren Zentren die Hitze der expandierenden oberen Zentren aufnehmen, es also zur klassischen Vermischung von Feuer und Wasser kommt. Dies ist der Mittelpfad des Tao - im Körper gegründet zu bleiben, während man sich auf die lebenslange Reise in die subtilen Bereiche macht.

Das spirituelle Ziel der taoistischen Zweifachen Höherentwicklung ist nicht dasselbe wie plötzliche Erleuchtung, Astralreisen, Auflösung in der Glückseligkeit oder phantastische Visionen. Zwar können diese Phänomene dabei als vorübergehende Nebenwirkungen auftreten, doch ging es den Taoisten bei ihrem Streben nach Unsterblichkeit stets in erster Linie um das Aufrechterhalten des Energiegleichgewichts während der zehntausend ganz gewöhnlichen Augenblicke des Alltags. So begegnet der Taoist jedem transzendenten Weg mit größtem Mißtrauen, der vorgibt, in kürzester Zeit sehr weit zu fuhren, oder im eifrigen Streben nach Göttlichkeit den menschlichen Körper außer acht läßt. Die taoistische Weisheitslehre besagt, daß nur jene Weiterentwicklung zählt, die auch dauerhaft ist; und eine solche entsteht nun einmal in der Regel nur langsam und stufenweise. Zählt man die zehntausend Augenblicke des gewöhnlichen Alltags zusammen, erhält man im Laufe von 25 Jahren ganze 125 Millionen solcher Augenblicke - man hat also im Leben ausreichend Gelegenheit, das eigene Chi zu entwik-keln! Glücklicherweise treten diese Gelegenheiten nicht alle auf einmal auf, sondern nacheinander, was das ganze etwas einfacher und weniger gewaltig und voluminös erscheinen laßt.

Viele Menschen im Westen suchen die Sechzig-Sekunden-Erleuchtung, und oft werden sie auch genau das erhalten, was sie sich wünschen — eine Erleuchtung, die sechzig Sekunden andauert! Das taoistische Vorgehen mag manchem als träge erscheinen, weil es ständig darauf besteht, die höheren Energien wieder in die unteren Zentren zurückzufuhren. Da erscheint es vielen doch wesentlich leichter, sofort das dritte Auge zu öffnen und ohne Umschweife in die geistigen Sphären vorzustoßen, ohne sich dabei mit dem groben, schweren physischen Körper : abzugeben. Doch liegt gerade darin der eigentliche Wert der taoistischen Zweifachen Höherentwicklung: Sie führt dazu, daß man den ganz gewöhnlichen Augenblick akzeptiert, das menschliche Verlangen, den nie endenden geschlechtlichen Impuls — all diese werden als kostbarer, körpereigener Pfad zum Verständnis des Tao begriffen.

Diese Betonung der gewöhnlichen, unspektakulären Aspekte des Alltags, als wesentlicher Bestandteil der Ganzheit des Tao, ist auch der Grund, weshalb die alten Weisen des Tao nicht danach strebten, spirituelle Gipfelerlebnisse oder einen explosiven Orgasmushöhepunkt in der Sexualität zu erreichen. Ein solches Streben nach Glückseligkeit ist wie der Versuch, ausschließlich yang sein zu wollen, ein Extremzustand. Der Tal-Orgasmus ist jedoch keine andere Bezeichnung für Glückseligkeit. Er harmonisiert und transzendiert die Yin-Energie unseres irdischen Körpers (und das Karma oder Leiden, das er erschafft) und bringt sie ins Gleichgewicht mit der Glückseligkeit der himmlischen Energie. Sind körperliches Leiden und himmlische Glückseligkeit erst einmal ausgewogen, heben sie einander auf. Das Ergebnis ist die Leere. Dies ist die wahre Ruhe: leer zu bleiben, wiewohl man die beiden Pole der Erfahrung als Möglichkeiten anerkennt. Keiner der beiden Pole kann einen dann beherrschen, so daß man völlige Entscheidungsfreiheit hat. Das Verlangen nach körperlicher Freude und spiritueller Transzendenz entsteht jeden Augenblick aufs neue und wird immer wieder vernichtet. So bleibt man gleichzeitig leer und voll, und das ganze Leben wird zu einem einzigen Tai Chi Tanz. Wer dies einmal gekostet hat, weiß, was Erleuchtung ist. Und wer in diesem Zustand verharren kann, ist unsterblich geworden.

Das Aufrechterhalten der Polarität: Was es bedeutet, Yang zu sein

von

Michael Winn

«Der Weise lebt das Tao. Der Narr bewundert es nur.»

Altes taoistisches Sprichwort

Für dieses Buch habe ich Dutzende von Meister Chias Schülern befragt. Bei diesen Interviews fiel mir besonders auf, wie unterschiedlich Männer und Frauen zur taoistischen Höherentwicklung der Sexualität eingestellt sind. Bei Paaren, die nach dieser Methode lebten, waren die Männer fasziniert von der Energie und den Bewußtseinszuständen, die damit erlangt werden können, während die Frauen erleben wollten, daß ihr Mann sie wirklich liebt. Ob er Erfolg bei seiner spirituellen Arbeit hatte oder nicht, war ihnen zweitrangig.

Manche Frauen sorgten sich am Anfang, daß die taoistischen Übungen und Meditationen ihres Partners bedeuten würden, daß ihm weniger Zeit für die Beziehung bleiben würde. Einige wenige beschwerten sich auch darüber, daß sie das Gefühl hätten, daß ihr Liebesspiel etwas Technisches bekommen habe. Allerdings gaben die meisten zu, daß diese negativen Begleiterscheinungen wieder verschwanden, nachdem die taoistischen Methoden der Sameneinbehaltung Wirkung zu zeigen begannen. Der Liebesakt verlängerte sich, was der Beziehung auch in Form vermehrter Zärtlichkeit zugute kam.

Einige Männer trafen bei ihren Partnerinnen auf Widerstand, als sie mit diesen Übungen begannen, weil sie dadurch die Ejakulation vermieden. Ihre Frauen waren der Auffassung, daß die Ejakulation des Mannes eine vollkommenere Hingabe an sie und somit eine größere Liebe bedeute. Darüber hinaus befürchteten sie, daß sie selbst irgendwie versagt hätten, wenn sie ihrem

Partner nicht zu einem konventionellen ejakulatorischen Orgasmus verhalfen. Der größte Teil dieser Widerstände beruht wohl auf mangelhafter spiritueller Aufklärung oder auf dem unbewußten Versuch, den Mann sexuell zu beherrschen. Wie es eine Frau mir gegenüber einmal ausdrückte: «Manche Frauen haben das Gefühl, daß sie ihren Mann nur dann wirklich besitzen, wenn er sich durch Ejakulation preisgegeben hat. Sie sind sich des Energie-Gleichgewichts nicht bewußt, und möglicherweise verdecken sie damit ihre eigene Unsicherheit, die sie ihrer Liebe ihm gegenüber hegen.»

In solchen Beziehungen ist die männliche Ejakulation zu einer Art Fußball auf dem Spielfeld der Sexualität geworden. Alles verläuft dabei nach einem recht einfachen Schema: Der Mann gibt seinen Samen preis und begegnet der Frau dafür ganz unbewußt auf anderen Gebieten mit Reserviertheit, um seine Energie und seine Identität zu bewahren. Die Frau wiederum spürt dies unbewußt und ermutigt ihn zur Ejakulation in dem irrigen Glauben, damit die Beziehung zu festigen. Erfährt der Mann dann etwas von der taoistischen Methode der Sameneinbehaltung und des Kreisenlassens der Energie in seinem eigenen Inneren, sperrt sich seine Partnerin dagegen, weil sie den greifbaren Beweis für seine Preisgabe, nämlich den Samen, nicht mehr erhält. Sie mag zwar glauben, aus Liebe so zu reagieren, doch in Wirklichkeit handelt es sich um eine sehr besitzergreifende Einstellung, Diese Situation kann nur geheilt werden, indem der Mann das Erlebnis seiner gesteigerten Energie und Liebe mit der Frau auch teilt. Die taoistische Liebeskunst läßt sich unmöglich meistern, wenn in einer Beziehung Eifersucht und Besitzgier den Austausch der niederen Sexualenergie vergiften. Das Wesen der esoterischen Liebe besteht gerade darin, die Energie zum Herzen und in die spirituellen Zentren emporzuleiten, bevor man sie mit dem Liebespartner austauscht. Deshalb ist es auch so wichtig, daß der Mann die Energie, die er während des Liebesakts von der Frau empfangen hat, wieder an sie zurückgibt. Denn wenn er sie für eigene Ziele oder Vorhaben einbehält oder sie durch sein drittes Auge austreten läßt, um irgendeine phantastische Vision zu erschaffen, vergeudet er das Chi und unterbricht den Kreislauf des Austauschs mit seiner Partnerin, Deshalb glauben die Taoisten, daß es besser sei, den Spender der Energie, in diesem Fall die Liebespartnerin, sofort zu «entgelten». Dann kann sie die höher transformierte Energie, die ihr gegeben wird, dazu verwenden, sich selbst und ihren Partner in Harmonie zu bringen.

Die Energie der beiden Partner bewegt sich nach und nach in einer Spiralbewegung empor und wird mit jeder Spiraldrehung weiter verfeinert. Schließlich weitet sie sich aus und umspannt auch Freunde und Familienmitglieder innerhalb dieses dynamischen Energiefelds, Diese Spiral-Beziehung wird auch im taoistischen Symbol von Yin und Yang ausgedrückt, die sich endlos im Kreis bewegen. Die männliche Energie ist zielgerich-; tet wie ein Pfeil und bewegt sich auf einer geraden Linie, während die weibliche Energie rund und aufnehmend ist wie ein leerer Kreis. Dort, wo sie sich durchdringen, umschlingt der Kreis die gerade Linie und biegt sie zu einer Spirale. Die taoistische Liebeslehre ist ein System spiritueller Ökologie, bei dem die niederen Energien durch «Recycling» in höhere umgewandelt werden, wobei die Erleuchtung und die Unsterblichkeit Phasen dieses Spiralprozesses darstellen, in denen die Energien vollkommen rein sind.

Doch die meisten von uns, und darin bin ich selbst keine Ausnahme, sind immer noch sterblich und haben mit ihrem Ego zu kämpfen. Verläßt man die kleine, private Welt der sexuellen Intimität oder der Meditation, weigert sich das Ego des Alltagslebens unerbittlich, die Haltung des spontanen Nicht-Handelns, Wu Wei, zu übernehmen. Statt dessen beharrt es darauf, weiterhin Pläne zu seinem eigenen Vorteil zu schmieden. Um diese selbstsüchtige Neigung zu meistern, versuche ich persönlich, dem sich unentwegt wandelnden Gleichgewicht subtiler Energie zu dienen, das mich umgibt, anstatt meinem Ego. Mein Ego macht sich sehr leicht etwas vor und bringt mich mit seinen eigenen Projektionen, Rationalisierungen und verdeckten Planungsvorhaben oft in Schwierigkeiten. Beachtet man die Energie, die allen Dingen zugrunde liegt, verleiht einem dies eine gewisse Neutralität. Dann höre ich beispielsweise auf, nach Geld oder gesellschaftlichen Positionen zu streben und schaue mir statt dessen an, aus welcher Art Energie die Dinge bestehen, die ich haben will.

Obgleich es leicht ist, die Qualität des Chi, die ich in mir, in anderen Menschen oder in Situationen spüre, falsch auszulegen, glaube ich doch, daß Energie niemals lügt; denn sie ist es, die mich mit anderen Wesen, sowohl menschlichen wie geistigen, verbindet. In diesem Sinne stellt die taoistische Methode der Chi-Entwicklung einen Weg der Intuitionsschärfung dar, eine Entwicklung der Fähigkeit, -über das rein Rationale hinaus Dinge zu erkennen. Die meisten westlichen Menschen akzeptieren diese Theorie zwar ohne große Mühe, doch erscheint ihnen die praktische Herstellung des Gleichgewichts von Yin und Yang oft als etwas recht Abstraktes und Undurchführbares. Ich selbst habe beispielsweise jahrelang taoistische Dichtung und das / Ging mit Genuß gelesen, ohne jedoch dabei ein tiefes «Bauch-Wissen» dafür zu erlangen, was es mit Yin und Yang wirklich auf sich hat.

Erst nachdem ich begann mich mit Tao Yoga zu befassen und die Hodenatmung, das Große Emporziehen, den Kleinen Energiekreislauf und die Verschmelzungsmeditationen praktizierte, erlebte ich im eigenen Körper die deutlich voneinander zu unterscheidenden Energien von Hitze und Kälte und die Energien in den fünf Hauptorganen wie Herz, Nieren usw. Meister Chia mußte mich zuerst lehren, auf was ich zu achten hatte. Als ich es dann im eigenen Leib spürte, war mir sehr ekstatisch zumute, wie einem Christopher Columbus, der den Beweis dafür erbracht hatte, daß die Welt keine Scheibe ist. Ich spürte eine kühle Yin-Energie in meinem Inneren, eine völlig neue Dimension meines Seins, die es zu erforschen galt. Also verschrieb ich mich dem taoistischen Weg in der Überzeugung, daß die Welt rund sei und daß ich wieder an meinen Ausgangspunkt zurückkehren würde, etwas weiser geworden. Ich entdeckte, daß diese Einstellung meinem Liebesleben ebenfalls neues Leben eingehaucht hat. So wurde die Zweifache Höherentwicklung für meine Liebespartne-nn und mich zu einer abenteuerreichen Reise in neue Bereiche unseres Seins.

Yin und Yang sind mehr als bloße Konzepte. Sie stellen vielmehr höchst reale Qualitäten der Chi-Energie dar, die im Körper gespeichert und im Alltag eingesetzt werden kann. Eines der wohl größten Hindernisse, die sich dem westlichen Schüler in den Weg stellen, ist die rein intellektuelle Beschäftigung mit dem Taoismus. Die Menschen des Westens setzen den Intellekt mit dem Geist gleich, während er für den Taoisten nur eines von, vielen Werkzeugen der Einheit von Geist, Körper und Seele darstellt. Die Entwicklung des Chi und die Verfeinerung der Einheit von Körper, Geist und Seele durch geistige Übungen und alchemistische Meditationen schult den Geist des Taoisten,. in einer Welt zu leben, die von dynamischen Energiefeldern ausgefüllt wird.

Dies bedeutet, daß man als Taoist aufhört, in einer vom Intellekt konstruierten entkörperten Welt aus Worten und Konzepten zu leben. Zwar stellt man das Denken keineswegs ein, doch ist es notwendig zu lernen, wie man mit seinem ganzen -Wesen denkt-fuhlt. Dazu bedarf es der Entwicklung jener Fähigkeiten, von denen man schon völlig vergessen hat, daß man sie besitzt, und die gegenwärtig in jenen 90% Hirnmasse und Körpervermögen schlummern, die wir nie aktivieren. Deshalb ist die Sexualität so gesund für den Menschen des Westens: Sie stellt oft die einzige Gelegenheit dar, um aus den Gedankenkäfigen des Intellekts und des Egos zu entfliehen und die Erfahrung zu machen, voll und ganz im Körper zu sein. Wenn Sie erst am Anfang der Chi-Verfeinerung stehen, sollten Sie sich nicht beunruhigen, wenn es Ihnen schwerfallt, zwischen Yin- und Yang-Energie zu unterscheiden. Führen Sie einfach täglich Ihre Übungen und Meditationen durch.

Wenn Sie dann ein Vibrieren, Wärrneempfindungen, Prickeln oder veränderte Sinnes Wahrnehmungen an sich beobachten können, so ist dies ein Zeichen dafür, daß Ihr Körper sich seiner subtilen Energie bewußt zu werden beginnt. Mit der Zeit werden Sie, erkennen, daß diese Interaktion der Energie von Yin und Yang-kein abstraktes metaphysisches Spiel darstellt, sondern Ihre persönliche Bestimmung. Indem Sie dies erfassen, können Sie nach und nach auch die Quelle der subtilen Energien in den GrifiC bekommen, welche durch Ihre Psyche wirken. Das sind die polarisierten Energien, die sich ihren Weg in Ihre Hormone, Ihre Gesundheit, Ihr Verhalten, Ihre Persönlichkeit als Mann und in Ihre Vorstellungen davon, wer Sie sind und was der Sinn des Lebens ist, bahnen.

Manche Männer glauben irrigerweise, daß spirituell zu werden gleichbedeutend damit sei, ihre bejahenden, dynamischen männlichen Eigenschaften beiseite zu legen, um passiv und meditativ zu werden, weiche wallende Gewänder zu tragen und sich nach weiblichem Yin-Muster mütterlich und fürsorglich zu geben. Die taoistischc Lehre sieht darin jedoch einen Fehler: Wenn ein Mann zu sehr yin wird, läuft er Gefahr, seine polare Anziehungskraft auf Frauen zu verlieren, eben jene Eigenschaften, die beide sexuell und spirituell befriedigen können. Anstatt spirituell zu werden, wird man weibisch - weich, nachgiebig und ohne Rückgrat. Die Herstellung des Gleichgewichts zwischen den Polaritäten von Yin und Yang in der Psyche bedeutet nicht, daß man als Mann die Yang-Energie schwächen und sich seiner maskulinen Attribute entledigen sollte. Ziel der taoisti-schen Praxis ist nicht der Androgynismus, ein färb- und geschlechtsloses Leben. Es geht keineswegs darum zu beweisen, daß es zwischen Mann und Frau in Wirklichkeit keinen Unterschied gibt, weil beide in einer faden Suppe namens Tao ja «eins» sind!

Es ist gerade der Unterschied zwischen männlicher und weiblicher Polarität, wodurch Energie entsteht. Die dynamische Spannung zwischen Yin und Yang haucht der Beziehung zwischen Mann und Frau Leben ein. Jeder von ihnen hat einen Yin-und einen Yang-Pol in seinem Inneren und drückt ein breites Spektrum verschiedener Mischungen männlicher und weiblicher Energie in seiner Persönlichkeit aus. Doch bleibt die Ladung der feinstofflichen Hauptenergie des Mannes das Yang, und nur in Beziehung dazu kann er den Yin-Pol seiner Yang-Energie in seinem Inneren entwickeln. Dies mag dazu fuhren, daß er seine männliche Qualität nach außen hin etwas verändert, an Kanten und Ecken verliert oder die Yang-Energie auf ganzheitlichere und liebevollere Ziele richtet als früher. Trotzdem wird und sollte er nach wie vor in seiner Ausrichtung männlich bleiben, um sich in der Außenwelt zurechtzufinden, weil dies seine wahre Natur ist. Frauen lieben starke Männer. Die Höherentwicklung des Chi sollte dazu fuhren, daß Sie innerhalb dieser männlichen Stärke sensibler und gefühlvoller werden. Umgekehrt müssen Sie Ihrer Liebes partnerin dabei helfen, auch ihre eigenen Stärken zu entwickeln.

Vom psychologischen Standpunkt aus möchte ich die Behauptung wagen, daß eines der Hauptprobleme des Mannes bei der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung darin besteht, sein eigenes Ego mit der emotionalen Sensibilität der Frau ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Dabei müssen beide Beteiligten lernen, daß der Mensch nicht aus seinem Ego oder seinen Gefühlen allein besteht, sondern daß diese wiederum Manifestationen tieferliegender subtiler Energien in ihrem Selbst darstellen. Viele Paare investieren eine Unmenge an Zeit, Geld und Energie darauf, um voller Verzweiflung ihre welk gewordene Beziehung wieder aufzufrischen, indem sie sich an Eheberater und Psychiater wenden. Dies bedeutet aber nur, daß man versucht, sich von außen nach innen vorzuarbeiten. Auf einer Ebene ist das sogar sehr hilfreich, weil schon die bloße Aussprache über ein Problem ein Weg zur Besserung sein kann.

Der Taoist jedoch strebt danach, die Wurzeln des Baumes selbst zu speisen, damit der Saft kraftvoll strömen und den gesamten Stamm, die Äste und die welkenden Blätter von innen heraus ernähren kann. Hier arbeitet man sich von innen nach außen vor. Dieser Vorgang ist wohl schwerer wahrzunehmen, dafür aber auch dauerhafter. Der Saft im menschlichen Baum ist die Chi-Energie, und wenn Sie Ihre Partnerin speisen wollen, dürfen Sie nicht zulassen, daß Ihr Ego den Vorgang des Energieaustausches abblockt. Die Frau ist der Spiegel des Mannes. Das subtile Gesetz der universalen Energie besagt, daß man stets nur zurückbekommt, was man zuvor gegeben hat. Wenn Sie der Frau eine Fülle der Liebe und Energie senden, so wird sie Ihnen ihrerseits das gleiche schenken. Der Beweis dafür, ob es einem Liebespaar durch die Zweifache Höherentwicklung gelungen ist, das Ego- und Gefühlsungleichgewicht auszubalancieren oder nicht, erfährt jeder in seinem Inneren; doch spiegelt er sich auch in der Zärtlichkeit und der Harmonie, die den Alltag beider bestimmen.

Eine gute Faustregel für die taoistische Liebespraktik besagt, daß man mit der eigenen Chi-Energie und nicht mit dem Ego lieben soll. Wenn die Sexualenergk nur dazu dient, den männlichen Egozentrismus oder die weibliche Gefühlsdominanz zu speisen, so führt dies bei beiden Beteiligten zu Verfallserscheinungen. Darin liegt die Gefahr, die Sexualität für die spirituelle Entwicklung zu benutzen, bevor man sein eigenes Privatleben wirklich in Ordnung gebracht hat. Vor dieser Gefahr können Sie sich nur dadurch schützen, daß Sie Ihrer Partnerin so viel Liebe und Respekt entgegenbringen, wie es Ihnen als Mensch möglich ist. Die Frau braucht eine gewisse emotionale Stabilität, bevor sie die höheren subtilen Energien in ein inneres Gleichgewicht bringen kann. Der Mann steht dagegen vor dem Problem, daß sein Ego ihn daran hindern kann, die höheren Energien zu empfangen oder den Tal-Orgasmus zu erleben. Wenn es Ihnen gelingt, Ihrer Partnerin auf selbstlose Weise Ihre unterstützende männliche Energie zu senden, so wird diese sie dazu in die Lage versetzen, es Ihnen zehnfach zu vergelten. Darin besteht die Dynamik von Yin und Yang. Es ist eine einzige Energie, die unentwegt dorthin strömt, wohin die Absicht sie lenkt, und dann wieder zur Urquelle zurückfließt, so wie auch der Mensch spirituell zu seinem Ursprung zurückkehrt.

Ich habe langsam begonnen, den subtilen Dominoeffekt zwischen der sexuellen Liebe und meinem Lebens Schicksal zu bemerken. Wenn ich den Zustand des Wu Wei erreiche, das spontane Nicht-Handeln während des Liebesakts, entsteht dadurch eine Ruhe in meinem Inneren, welche die Bedürfnisse meines Ego in der Außenwelt abschwächt. Irgendwie wird der Lebenskampf erleichtert, gelingt es mir, meine Probleme mit weniger Anstrengungen zu lösen.

Das Leben ist wie ein Puzzle-Ei: Öffnet man das eine Ei, findet man darin ein zweites und so weiter. Die sexuelle Liebe ist eines dieser Eier, das sich auf halber Strecke zur Mitte des Puzzles befindet. Wenn man hebt und sein selbstsüchtiges Ego transformiert, werden niedere Vital-Chi-Energien und niederer Sexualtrieb zu etwas Edlem, Strahlendem, schimmert das mittlere Ei durch die anderen hindurch und erhellt sowohl das innerste Ei der Spiritualität als auch die äußere Schale des Weltlichen.

Die Vorstellung, gleichzeitig Wu Wei zu leben und sich einem Partner hinzugeben, ist äußerst verwirrend. Man sollte doch meinen, daß das Prinzip des spontanen Unbeteiligtseins nach dem genauen Gegenteil einer langfristigen Bindung an einen anderen Menschen verlangt. Tatsächlich gibt es auch eine Reihe taoistischer Sexualhandbücher auf dem Markt, die dem Leser raten, so viele Menschen wie möglich zu lieben, um die spontanen Impulse zu befriedigen. Meiner Meinung nach ist das eine unverantwortliche und irreführende Übervereinfachung der Sexuallehren des esoterischen Taoismus. Die Zweifache Höherentwicklung zielt darauf ab, die subtilen Energiefelder im eigenen Inneren zu erleben und ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen, nicht aber darauf, durch unseren Körper immer und immer wieder einunddenselben Sexualtrieb auszuleben. Die Promiskuität hat nichts mit der mühelosen Anmut des Tao zu tun, sondern ist nichts anderes als das oberflächliche Ausnutzen spiritueller Philosophie zur Rechtfertigung dilettantischer Praktiken und erotischer Phantasien. Die Entschuldigung, man bedürfe zahlreicher verschiedener Partner, verschleiert oft die Furcht vor tieferer Intimität mit sich selbst und dem Liebespartner. Spirituell betrachtet, kann dies die alchemistische Vereinigung von Ching, Chi und Shien verhindern. Der Prozeß der Transformation verlangt nach einer gewissen Stabilität der niederen körperlichen Energien, die durch wahlloses, hektisches oder exzessives Sexualverhalten nur aufgewühlt und durcheinandergebracht werden.

Während die taoistische Sexualphilosophie eine von Besitzgier völlig freie Einstellung zu den sich wandelnden Energien erfordert, heißt dies jedoch nicht, daß sie lehrt, man solle sich anderen Menschen gegenüber verantwortungslos verhalten. Zum unbeteiligten Geist des Wu Wei gehört die harmonische Weisheit, jeden Augenblick des Lebens absichtslos den Mittelweg zu wählen. Dies gilt auch für Beziehungen und Bindungen. Der vollkommene Mittelweg besteht darin, die Tugend der Stabilität einer Beziehung mit dem Freiheitsbedürfnis des Menschen auf natürliche Weise ins Gleichgewicht zu bringen, um die eigenen subtilen Energien damit zu nähren. Das sind schwierige Fragen, doch gibt es keinen alten Weisen des Tao, der sie für Sie beantworten könnte. Sie und Ihr Liebespartner müssen vielmehr Ihre eigene Energie höher-entwickeln, um zu subtileren Wesen zu werden, die weise genug sind, um den wahren Hintergrund ihrer Situation zu erkennen. Kurz gesagt: Sie müssen selbst zum Weisen werden, Augenblick für Augenblick, ein ganzes Leben lang.

12. KAPITEL

Fragen zur Sameneinbehaltung

1. Ich habe eine Vasektomie an mir durchführen lassen. Beeinträchtigt dies meine Fähigkeit für das Große Emporziehen?

Chia: Die Auswirkungen der Vasektomie auf Geschlechtsleben und Gesundheit verdienen eine genauere Betrachtung. Es ist allgemein anerkannt, daß Männer, die eine solche Sterilisierung haben durchführen lassen, sich in der Regel einer ganz normalen körperlichen und geistigen Gesundheit erfreuen. Die meisten befragten Männer gaben nach der Vasektomie an, daß sie guter bis ausgezeichneter Gesundheit seien, und viele ihrer Ehefrauen meinten, daß sie ihre Partner ausgesprochen viriler finden würden.

Was die verbesserte sexuelle Leistungskraft dieser Männer anbelangt, so läßt sich diese leicht erklären: Sie verlieren keinen Samen mehr beim Liebesakt, so daß die Samenenergie nicht mehr verschleudert wird. Der Körper reabsorbiert die aktiven Kräfte der Samenzellen durch den Blutkreislauf. Es werden aber jene Sekrete, die nicht in den Hoden hergestellt werden, immer noch ejakuliert.

Taoistische Liebhaber erfreuen sich dieser und noch weitaus größerer Vorteile, denn sie bewahren nicht nur das Sperma, sondern die gesamte Samenflüssigkeit, die im Überfluß Enzyme, Vitamine, Proteine, Spurenelemente und elektrische Energien enthalt. Doch ist dies keineswegs der größte Vorteil ihrer Praktik.

Beim vasektomierten Mann verringert sich im Laufe der Zeit die Sekretproduktion der Hoden, und die für die Reabsorption zur Verfügung stehende Hormonmenge läßt nach. Weil der Vasektomierte einerseits seinen Samen nie mehr verliert, stimuliert er andererseits normalerweise aber auch nicht mehr die Hormonproduktion.

Die Methode des Großen Emporziehens dagegen erhöht den Hormonausstoß. Das liegt erstens daran, daß man Energie auf die Geschlechtsorgane konzentriert, um sie zu stimulieren, und zweitens fuhrt die Transformation der Sexualenergie auf eine höhere Stufe auch zur Ausschüttung qualitativ hochwertigerer Hormone.

Glücklicherweise kann ein vasektomierter Mann das Große Emporziehen dazu benutzen, um die Samenenergien in den Kopf und die Vitalorgane «emporzudampfen». Außerdem kann jeder Mann, ob vasektomiert oder nicht, mit Hilfe dieser Technik kräftigende Energien mit seiner Liebes partnerin austauschen.

2. Ich denke, Yin-Energie sei kühl und Yang dagegen warm. Warum fühlen sich Frauen beim Sex dann immer so warm an?

Chia: Im Vergleich zum Mann bleibt die Frau in ihrer Grundpolarität mehr Yin. Manche Männer besitzen sehr frauenhafte Yin-Eigenschaften, die sie kultiviert haben, während manche Frauen von ihrer Persönlichkeit her sehr aggressiv und yang sind. Ein solches Paar müßte seine überschüssige Energie austauschen, um zu einem Gleichgewicht zu gelangen. Doch ändert dies nichts an der Grundpolarität auf ihrer ursprünglichsten, reinsten Stufe.

Im Laufe dieser Praktik werden Sie schließlich an einen Punkt gelangen, wo Sie die Energie der Frau als kühl erleben. Dies geschieht meistens in der Ruhephase, während des Austausches von Yin und Yang. Dann werden Sie spüren, wie ein kühler Strom Ihre Wirbelsäule bis zum Scheitel emporsteigt. Das erfolgt stufenweise, wie bei einer Leiter. Wenn Sie erst einmal gelernt haben, Ihre heiße, feurige, männliche Yang-Energie hinzugeben, werden Sie auch diese kühle, lindernde, weibliche Yin-Energie in Ihrem Inneren wahrnehmen. Auf einer noch fortgeschritteneren Stufe dieser Praktik können Sie diese Wirkung dann dadurch erzielen, daß Sie einfach allein auf den Yin-Pol Ihrer Yang-Energie meditieren.

3. Wie lange dauert der Liebesakt bei den Taoisten? Es klingt so, als wäre das eine ausgedehnte Angelegenheit.

Chia: Der Liebesakt dauert so lange, wie die Liebenden es wünschen, und sollte von der Qualität der ausgetauschten Energie abhängig gemacht werden. Forcieren Sie keine zusätzlichen Orgasmen oder, falls Sie diese Methode noch nicht gemeistert haben, keine Ejakulationen. Sobald Sie tiefe Befriedigung zu empfinden beginnen, wird es Sie nicht mehr so häufig nach Sex verlangen wie früher; wenn Sie dann Sex haben, sollten Sie nichts überstürzen. Manchmal läßt sich die vollkommene Polarität sehr schnell erreichen, doch ist der taoistische Liebesakt in der Regel keine zufällige Angelegenheit. Vom anfänglichen Vorspiel bis zur letzten ruhigen Umarmung können zwei Stunden vergehen oder ein ganzer Tag. Die taoistischen Klassiker sprechen davon, daß man eintausend Stöße fuhren sollte, um eine Frau zu befriedigen. Dabei können Sie natürlich mehrmals Ruhepausen einlegen und aufs neue und noch aktiver mit dem Lieben beginnen. Lassen Sie sich genügend Zeit ohne jede Ablenkung. Hangen Sie den Telefonhörer aus, und sorgen Sie dafür, daß die Kinder Sie nicht stören können.

4. Wenn man ejakuliert, kann die Frau doch eine Menge Yang-Energie auf direktem Wege vom Mann empfangen. Worin besteht der Unterschied, ihr die Energie auf diese Weise zu geben, anstatt sie ihr zusammen mit dem Yin-Yang-Aus-tausch zuteilwerden zu lassen?

Chia: Solange Sie die Samenflüssigkeit einbehalten, können Sie ihr Energie geben und sich selbst schnell wieder aufladen. Wenn Sie aber Ihre Flüssigkeit ausgeben, verlieren Sie für lange Zeit die Möglichkeit, sich wieder mit Energie zu laden. Sie sollen ihr natürlich Energie geben, aber nicht gleich die ganze Batterie! Wenn sie nicht gerade eine sehr fortgeschrittene Yogini ist, die die meditative Fähigkeit entwickelt hat, wirklich die volle Kraft des Samens aufzunehmen, kann sie damit ohnehin nicht viel anfangen, während Sie selbst die Fähigkeit verlieren, ihr noch mehr zu geben. Selbst eine hochentwickelte Yogini kann nur eine bestimmte Menge Energie aus dem physischen Samen ziehen. Im Endeffekt erhält sie mehr Energie, wenn ihr Yogi seinen Samen bewahrt und umwandelt. Sie können ihr gern einen großen Korb voller Pfirsiche schenken, Sie sollen nur nicht dafür den ganzen Baum ausreißen, um ihr noch zottige Wurzeln zu geben.

5. Während des Austausches von Yin und Yang spüre ich manchmal eine Art Mini-Orgasmus in meinen Genitalien. Wie kann ich dabei sichergehen, keinen Samen zu verlieren?

Chia: Während des Ein- und Ausatmens wird der Perus oft ein wenig «hüpfen», so als würde er ejakulieren. Doch dabei entweicht keine Samenflüssigkeit aus dem Körper. Auch die Prostata und die Samenblasen können gelegentlich «Sprünge» machen, was großes Vergnügen bereiten kann. Die taoistische Methode schenkt uns diese orgasmische Freude, sorgt aber gleichzeitig dafür, daß die Flüssigkeit im Körper verbleibt.

Überzeugen Sie sich als erstes davon, daß Sie bei diesen Sprüngen wirklich keine Flüssigkeit verlieren. Wenn Sie jeden Tropfen einbehalten, üben Sie die Methode richtig. Sollte es gelegentlich doch zu Flüssigkeitsverlusten kommen, beginnen Sie sofort mit den kräftigen Kontraktionen und der Dreifinger-Verschlußübung, um jedem weiteren Samenverlust vorzubeugen. Ferner müssen Sie zwischen dem Verlust von «Milch» und «Wasser» unterscheiden. Milch ist die dickliche weiße Samenflüssigkeit - dies ist das geheime Elixier, welches die Taoisten zu bewahren trachten. Wasser ist dagegen die klare und dünnflüssige Samenflüssigkeit, die von der Prostata erzeugt wird, um den eigentlichen Samen auszustoßen. Es ist möglich, daß man auch ohne Ejakulation etwas Wasser verliert. Solange Sie sich auf dieser Stufe befinden, sollten Sie sich nicht auf diese Methode zur Empfängnisverhütung verlassen, da schon eine einzige Samenzelle in der wässrigen Samenflüssigkeit genügen kann, um eine Frau zu befruchten.

6. Ich lerne gerade erst das Große Emporziehen. Wird es meinen Bemühungen schaden, wenn ich dabei noch versage und doch ejakuliere?

Chia: Sie sollten das nicht als «Versagen» oder «Nicht-Versagen» ansehen. Niemand verlangt von Ihnen, daß Sie gleich beim allerersten Versuch perfekt sind. Es gelingt erst einmal, dann zweimal hintereinander, und schließlich wird man immer besser. Wenn man etwas Neues lernt, sollte man dies auf bejahende, zuversichtliche Weise tun, das ist die Hauptsache.

Wenn Sie mit der Praxis der Sameneinbehaltung beginnen, sollten Sie versuchen, nicht öfter als einmal pro Woche zu ejakulieren. Sind Sie schon etwas fortgeschrittener, reduzieren Sie dies auf ein- bis zweimal im Monat. Später werden Sie immer weniger Flüssigkeit verlieren. Machen Sie sich also keine Sorgen, wenn Sie Samen verlieren, versuchen Sie vielmehr, ihn immer länger zu bewahren. Der Taoist akzeptiert alles, was natürlich ist, und er versucht nie, dem Körper irgendwelche plötzlichen Veränderungen aufzuzwingen. Wenn Sie Ihren Samen verlieren, dann genießen Sie es eben und geben ihn voller Liebe an Ihre Partnerin ab, die dadurch wenigstens einen Teil seiner Yang-Essenz in ihren Leib aufnehmen wird. Ebenso sollten Sie sich aber auch nie dazu zwingen zu ejakulieren, um sich selbst oder Ihrer Partnerin eine Freude zu machen. Dieser ganze Prozeß verläuft in Stufen, eine nach der anderen. Sie werden den Rest Ihres Lebens damit verbringen, das Tao der Liebe zu vervollkommnen und Ihr Wissen darum zu vermehren.

7. Welcher Zusammenhang besteht zwischen der Kraft der Gesäß- und Beckenmuskeln und der Sexualität? Ich dachte immer, daß Sex sie kräftigen würde, weil man dabei doch den Unterleib viel bewegt.

Chia: Sexualität in Maßen kann für den Körper auf vielerlei Weise forderlich sein: Die Drüsen werden angeregt, vor allem die Prostata, und durch die Meridiane strömt mehr Chi als sonst. Aber viel von dieser Energie geht durch den Schließmuskel und das Gesäß wieder verloren, sickert aus, weil so-viele Männer mit sitzender Tätigkeit ein ausgeprägtes Hinter—teil mit schlaffer Muskulatur entwickeln. Man glaubt gar nicht, wieviel Chi durch die Hinterbacken einfach aus dem Körper sickert. Die Ejakulation öffnet dem Energieverlust alle Schleusen, und das wirkt sich hinterher auch auf den Gesäßmuskel aus.

Häufiger ejakulatorischer Sex schadet der Gesundheit, weil dabei die Lebenskraft spasmisch ausgespien wird. Nach einer Zeit längeren Mißbrauchs erschlafft das Gewebe und kann keine Lebenskraft mehr richtig einatmen. Häufiges Ejakulieren vermindert auch den Tonus des Unterleibs, erzeugt chronische Fettleibigkeit und fuhrt zu einem ständigen, schleichenden Kraftverlust. Ich unterweise meine Schüler in Übungen zur Stärkung des Beckens, um den Tonus des Unterleibs zu verbessern. Durch Aufrechterhalten dieser Spannkraft retten sie ständig Energie vor dem Aussickern.

8. Wenn ich das Große Emporziehen mehrere Wochen lang täglich praktiziere, läßt mein Geschlechtstrieb nach. Was passiert da mit meiner Sexualenergie?

Chia: In den ersten paar Wochen des Großen Emporziehens kann es vorkommen, daß Ihr sexueller Appetit etwas nachläßt. Das geschieht mit noch größerer Wahrscheinlichkeit dann, wenn Sie sich in einer geschwächten Verfassung befinden. Das ist ein Zeichen dafür, daß Sie Ihre Energie erfolgreich aus dem Genitalbereich in die höheren Zentren befördern. Seien Sie also unbesorgt! Dieses Phänomen zeigt an, daß Sie gute Fortschritte machen. Jetzt bewahren Sie Energie wie nie zuvor in Ihrem Leben und beginnen sie in eine höhere Kraft umzuwandeln. Nach einigen Wochen wird diese Kraft den Kleinen Energiekreislauf herstellen, um in wesentlich verstärktem Zustand in die Geschlechtszentren zurückzuströmen. Nachdem Sie erst einmal den Kreislauf hergestellt haben, fließt die Kraft bei jedem Liebesakt durch Ihren ganzen Körper, um Sie noch mehr zu vitalisieren. Dann kann es durchaus sein, daß Ihr sexuelles Verlangen wieder wächst. Doch das ist von Paar zu Paar unterschiedlich.

9. Sind Sie nicht ein bißchen fanatisch darauf bedacht, unbedingt jeden Tropfen Samen zu bewahren? Schließlich gibt es doch genug davon. Ich dachte immer, der Taoismus wäre ein «Mittelpfad», der keine Extreme predigt.

Chia: Die Sameneinbehaltung ist einfach und natürlich, wenn man seine alten Gewohnheiten erst einmal abgelegt hat. Die Taoisten behaupten, daß es sich dabei um den ursprünglichen Mittelpfad handelt, um etwas, was alle Menschen früher von Natur aus beherrschten, und daß unsere heutigen Sexualgewohnheiten eine Degenerationserscheinung sind. Aus diesem Grund leben jetzt auch über 4 Milliarden Menschen auf der Erde, und deshalb haben wir auch all die Probleme mit der Überbevölkerung und der Verschmutzung der einstmals reinen Erde. Wenn die Menschen mehr Erfüllung in ihrem Inneren fänden, würden sie im Außen nicht so viele Wünsche und Forderungen haben. Doch keine Sorge - die Natur, das Tao, findet immer einen Weg, um das richtige Gleichgewicht wiederherzustellen.

Die gängige, konventionelle Vorstellung vom männlichen Orgasmus als einer Erscheinung von wenigen Augenblicken (im wörtlichen Sinne) blinden Vergnügens ist ein Extrem. Nach der Ejakulation ist der Mann erledigt, außer er geht tiefer in sich hinein, um weitere Energie zu mobilisieren, die er dann aber auch wieder nur ausstößt, um schließlich in eine angenehme Leere zu stürzen. Den Vitalsamen zu vergeuden heißt, Leben auszuscheiden. Häufiges Ejakulieren ist der infantile Versuch, die Einsamkeit unseres Getrenntseins von der Glückseligkeit zu überwinden. Es ist das Zurückweisen der uns angeborenen, inwendigen Freude, die wir alle erfahren können. s Selbstverständlich kann man auch mit Samenverlust zu einer tiefen Liebesempfindung gelangen. Menschen, die dies tun, verwandeln in der übrigen Zeit, außerhalb des Liebesakts, ihre Samenkraft unbewußt in Liebe - dadurch erhält die Liebe auch ihre Spontaneität. Doch entgeht ihnen vielleicht eine weitaus intensivere Freude. Bevor Sie diese Freude nicht erfahren haben, empfehle ich Ihnen eindringlich, nicht fanatisch zu reagieren, wenn Sie mal ein paar Tropfen Samen verlieren sollten - die Natur ist reich, großzügig und nachsichtig, und es ist besser, sich ganz allmählich zu ändern; dann ist die Wandlung dauerhafter.

Auf der anderen Seite sind Sie aber erst dann dazu motiviert, Ihr Sexualverhalten zu ändern, wenn Sie sich vor Augen halten, daß die Ejakulation Sie von der wahren, tiefen Freude isoliert. Sie schneidet Sie von höheren Energien ab und macht Sie in kleinen Schritten zum Sklaven eines niedrigeren Energiezustands. Die Ejakulation ist eine der vielen subtilen, schleichenden Formen des Selbstmords, genau wie Drogen, Völlerei oder überhaupt jedes Übermaß. In Wirklichkeit ist es nicht Ihre Aufgabe, die Ejakulation zu verhindern, sondern einen direkten. Kontakt zwischen Ihrem physischen Nervensystem und den subtilen Quellen des Lebens herzustellen. Um dies zu erreichen, müssen Sie die Trägersubstanz bewahren, durch welches Ihre Lebensenergie, Ihr Chi, strömt.

10. Die meisten Sexhandbücher behaupten, daß es gesund sei, seine erotischen Bedürfnisse in sexuelle Phantasien umzusetzen. Was meint der Taoist dazu?

Chia: Viele Sexualforscher wissen nichts von den wirklichen Möglichkeiten des Geistes und verstehen den Vorgang der Energietransformation von Ching in Shien nicht. Der Taoist schult in erster Linie den Geist, und es ist sehr wichtig, diesen von ablenkenden Bildern freizuhalten. Sexuelle Phantasien ersticken schließlich irgendwann den Geist, sie unterbrechen den Lebensstrom und provozieren den Orgasmus.

Öffnen Sie Ihren Geist fiir die Kraft des Lebens: das wird alle Phantasie auflösen. Wenn man den Geist von Gedanken leert, fließen kosmische Energien in die so entstandene Leere ein. Dies ist das Grundprinzip der Meditation. So wird der Liebesakt zu einer Meditation über die große Lebenskraft. Natürlich braucht es Zeit, um diesen Zustand kristallener geistiger Klarheit zu erreichen, deshalb sollten Sie sich keine allzu großen Sorgen machen, wenn Sie jetzt noch sexuellen Phantasien nachhängen. Beginnen Sie ganz einfach damit, solche Phantasien nicht mehr zu fördern, indem Sie sich zurückholen, sobald Sie merken, daß Sie wieder abdriften, und kehren Sie in die Gegenwart zurück.

Die Nähe Ihres Liebespartners sollte Sie erregen. Wenn dies nicht der Fall ist, wenn Sie erst erotische Phantasien ins Spiel bringen müssen, um erregt zu werden, warten Sie lieber eine spätere Gelegenheit oder einen anderen Partner ab. Obsessives erotisches Denken fuhrt unweigerlich zum Verlust der Lebenskraft. Das Phantasieren läßt die Energie selbst dann entweichen, wenn es dabei nicht zur Ejakulation kommt, und außerdem verhindert es das spontane Einströmen der Lebensenergie. Das gilt übrigens auch für Vibratoren und andere Hilfsmittel: Sie bereiten zwar Vergnügen, lassen die sexuellen Reaktionen aber zunehmend mechanischer werden. Man kann von diesen ganz abhängig werden. Wenn Sie jedoch mehr Mensch sein wollen und schließlich wirklich intensive, tiefergehende Freuden erfah-ren möchten, sollten Sie nur Ihren natürlichen Impulsen folgen und nicht denen Ihres kulturell konditionierten Verstandes.

11. Führt das Einbehalten des Samens irgendwann dazu, daß man sexuell das Bedürfnis nach körperlicher Leidenschaft ver- ‘ liert?

Chia: Je weiter Sie fortschreiten, um so weniger körperliche Bewegung werden Sie brauchen. Die Bewegung des physischen Körpers ist nur der Schatten der Bewegung des Energiekörpers. Kontakt zum subtilen Chi Ihrer Partnerin herzustellen ist viel aufregender, als wie ein Fisch an der Angel zu zappeln, was man oft für den Höhepunkt der Liebe hält. Wenn Sie diese Praktiken meistern, wird sich Ihre Definition der Sexualität radikal ändern, und Sie werden feststellen, daß es Ihnen viel eher darum geht, sich mit der Qualität der feinstofflichen Energiebeziehung zwischen Ihnen und Ihrer Liebespartnerin zu beschäftigen.

12. Was ist der Unterschied zwischen den körperlichen Freuden des Sex und der Freude der Empfindung der Liebe?

Chia: Das Ausmaß Ihrer Freude wird nur durch Ihre eigene Bewußtseinsstufe begrenzt. Der Unterschied zwischen dem Ganzkörperorgasmus und dem ejakulatorischen Orgasmus ist der Unterschied zwischen tierischer und menschlicher Liebe. Das Tier stößt seine Energien hektisch aus. Der höherstehende Mensch bewahrt seine Vitalenergie jedoch, weil er verantwortungsbewußt ist, und wandelt sie in Liebe um. Der wahrhaft freie und weise Mann erneuert sich und seine Partnerin unentwegt. Diese höchste aller Künste ist zugleich seine Verpflichtung, sein Recht und sein Vergnügen. Die reinste Freude geht über alles hinaus, was unsere Sinne, unsere Emotionen oder unser Denken uns zu bieten haben. Wenn Sie Ihren ursprünglichen Geist entwickeln, dann entfaltet sich Ihr feines Gespür für subtile Energieströme ebenso wie Ihre körperlichen Empfindungen; beide sind sie einen ganzen Quantensprung weiter als alles, was die meisten Menschen für Freude halten mögen.

Die Qualität Ihrer Empfindung bestimmt die Qualität der Energie, die Sie erzeugen und in sich aufnehmen. Wenn Ihr Verlangen selbstsüchtig erotisch ist, dann mag die Energie zwar vorübergehend ihre tierische Vitalität erhöhen, doch wird sie dann nicht emporsteigen und den höheren Genius Ihres Herzens, Ihres Geistes und Ihrer Seele aufschließen.

Diese Prinzipien gelten zwar universell, doch ist gerade der Liebesakt für den Menschen etwas besonders Gewaltiges, etwas, was das gesamte eigene Schicksal bestimmt und mit einbezieht. Die Energie einer jeden Handlung und eines jeden Gedankens wird gespeichert: Wer egozentrisch denkt, wird stets nur mit dem Egozentrismus anderer konfrontiert werden. Wer dagegen stets Liebe in sich trägt, wird überall auf Liebe stoßen. Veredelt man seine Samenessenz zu einer höheren Stufe spiritueller Ausrichtung, so verwandelt sie sich in eine Lichtessenz oder einen Licht-Samen, der den ganzen Pfad durchs Leben und darüber hinaus erhellt. Das ist die taoistische Erleuchtung, wie sie in den höheren Stufen der Meditation gelehrt wird.

13. Wenn es doch darum geht, eigene Sexualenergie zu bilden, warum sollte es dann schaden, mit vielen verschiedenen Partnern zu schlafen, um das eigene Ching Chi zu vermehren?

Chia: Es geht nicht darum, die Menge an Sexualenergie zu erhöhen, sondern die niedere, unverarbeitete Sexualenergie in verfeinerte subtile Energie umzuwandeln. Die Sexualität ist dabei nur eine Methode von vielen, um dies zu erreichen. Wenn Sie Partner wählen, die moralische oder körperliche Schwächen aufweisen, kann die Promiskuität Ihr Energieniveau sogar merklich senken.

Wenn Sie Menschen mit niederem Charakter beischlafen, schaden Sie sich, weil Sie vorübergehend etwas von der Niederträchtigkeit Ihres Partners aufnehmen. Denn wenn man subtile Energie miteinander austauscht, nimmt man tatsächlich etwas vom Wesenskern des anderen in sich auf. Man wird dadurch zum anderen und nimmt eine neue karmische Last auf sich. Aus diesem Grund werden Mann und Frau in sehr alten Partnerbeziehungen einander oft so ähnlich: Sie haben so viel Energie ausgetauscht, daß sie aus derselben Lebenssubstanz bestehen. Unsere Praktik beschleunigt dieses Einswerden, fuhrt es jedoch auf eine höhere Stufe spiritueller Erfahrung.

Deshalb lautet der beste Rat, den ich Ihnen geben kann: Setzen Sie niemals Ihre Integrität von Körper, Geist und Seele aufs Spiel! Wenn Sie sich einen Liebespartner aussuchen, suchen Sie sich damit gleichzeitig Ihr Schicksal aus, also sollten Sie auch sichergehen, daß Sie die Frau, mit der Sie Sex haben, auch Heben. Dann werden Sie in Harmonie mit dem sein, was durch den Austausch in Sie einfließt, und Sie werden stets das Richtige tun.

Wenn Sie meinen, daß Sie zwei Frauen gleichzeitig lieben können, so seien Sie auch dazu bereit, doppelt soviel Chi einzusetzen, um ihre Energien zu transformieren und in ein Gleichgewicht zu bringen. Ich persönlich bezweifle, daß viele Männer dies wirklich vermögen und gleichzeitig noch eine tiefe innere Ruhe empfinden können. Um der Einfachheit willen sollten Sie sich stets nur auf eine Frau auf einmal beschränken, denn es bedarf einer Menge Zeit und Energie, um die subtilen Energien wirklich tiefgehend zu veredeln.

Es ist unmöglich, das Wort «Liebe» ganz präzise zu definieren. Dazu müssen Sie Ihre eigene innere Stimme befragen. Doch die Höherentwicklung Ihrer Chi-Energie sensibilisiert Sie für die Stimme Ihres Gewissens. Was früher vielleicht nur ein leises, Wispern war, mag nun mit einem Mal laut und vernehmlich ertönen. In Ihrem eigenen Interesse sollten Sie niemals Ihre, Integrität um der körperlichen Freude oder um des falschen Vorwands willen, Sie würden hochgeistige Übungen durchführen, preisgeben. Wenn Sie mit einem Menschen schlafen, den Sie nicht lieben, werden Ihre subtilen Energien unausgewogen bleiben, so daß es zum psychischen Kampf kommen kann. Dieser fordert seinen Preis, egal wie weit sie auch körperlich voneinander entfernt sein mögen, bis Sie die seelische Verbindung mit dem anderen entweder durchtrennen oder heilen. Es ist besser, von Anfang an ehrlich zu sein.

Aus dem gleichen Grund sollten Sie auch stets nur dann sexuell lieben, wenn Sie eine echte Zärtlichkeit in Ihrem Inneren verspüren. Auf diese Weise wachst Ihre Liebesfahigkeit. Der selbstsüchtige oder manipulative Umgang mit Sexualität, selbst mit einem gehebten Partner, kann zu großer Disharmonie fuhren. Wenn Sie das Gefühl haben, Ihre sexuelle Kraft nicht auf liebevolle Weise einsetzen zu können, sollten Sie ganz davon Abstand nehmen. Die Sexualität ist ein glitzerndes, zweischneidiges Schwert, ein Heilungsinstrument, das schnell zu einer Waffe werden kann. Mißbraucht man sie für niedere Ziele, wird sie einen erbarmungslos zerstückeln. Wenn Sie keinen Partner gefunden haben, zu dem sie wirklich zärtlich sein können, sollten Sie einfach niemanden berühren. Arbeiten Sie daran, Ihre eigene innere Energie zu entwickeln, und wenn Sie darin ein hohes Niveau erreicht haben, werden Sie entweder einen entsprechenden Liebespartner mit hohen Qualitäten finden oder aber eine vertiefte Erfahrungsebene in Ihrem eigenen Inneren erschließen.

14. Ist das Große Emporziehen nicht im Grunde eine Art sexueller Vampirismus, bei dem Männer lernen sollen, wie sie die Säfte der Frau aufsaugen können?

Chia: Diese Auffassung ist gleich aus mehreren Gründen falsch. Das wohl gewichtigste Gegenargument lautet, daß es sich um einen Energieaustausch zwischen den Partnern handelt, jeder tauscht seine Energie mit dem anderen. Das Große Emporziehen steigert lediglich diesen Prozeß. Man kann das Yin der Partnerin nicht aufnehmen, ohne die gleiche Menge Yang an sie abzugeben, das ist ein Grundgesetz der ätherischen Energie.

Freigebigkeit ist sich selbst der größte Lohn: Je mehr man gibt, um so mehr wird man auch empfangen. Wenn man sich auf egoistische Weise weigert, seiner Partnerin das eigene Yang zu überlassen, wird man auch nur sehr wenig Energie von ihr empfangen. Deshalb sind auch alle Versuche, das Große Emporziehen selbstsüchtig zu mißbrauchen, von vornherein zum Scheitern verurteilt. Das fuhrt nur zu einem großen geistigen und spirituellen Ungleichgewicht im eigenen Inneren. Umgekehrt garantiert die freigebige und hingebungsvolle Anwendung dieser Methode den optimalen Fluß belebender Energie des Partners.

Diese «Mißbrauchssicherung» verhindert nicht nur, daß der Partner ernsthaft ausgebeutet werden kann, das Naturgesetz des Tao wird auch jeden, der seinen Partner auszunutzen versucht, mit gleichem strafen. In diesem Punkt stimmt der Taoist mit der Bibel überein: «Gebet, so wird euch gegeben.»

Zweitens, wenn Sie die Kraft hinaufziehen, werden Sie überwiegend die Energie Ihrer eigenen Sexualzentren « einatmen» v Während des Liebesakts schwimmen Hunderte von Millionen Samenzellen aufgeregt umher und wollen aus Ihnen heraus, um in ein Ei zu gelangen. Ihre Bewegung verleiht dem Sperma eine hohe elektromagnetische Spannung. Auf diese Weise stimuliert Ihre Liebes partnerin Sie dazu, eigene Energie zu erzeugen und sie zu konzentrieren; diese leiten Sie dann durch das Große Emporziehen in die höhergelegenen Zentren empor.

Und schließlich würde Ihre Liebespartnerin durch die sexuelle Stimulierung ohnehin einen Großteil ihrer eigenen Energie ver-, Heren. Wenn Sie diese Energie nicht aufnähmen, würde sie sich einfach in der Atmosphäre verteilen. Wenn der Mann jedoch seine Ejakulation verhindert und seine Partnerin ihren Genital-orgasmus vermeidet, verlieren beide weitaus weniger Energie, als dies bei konventionellem Sex der Fall gewesen wäre. Durch die Methode des Großen Emporziehens nehmen beide Beteiligten einen Teil der Energie des anderen auf, anstatt sie verpuffen zu lassen. •

15. Was hat man für ein Gefühl, wenn man nach einer Weile der Zweifachen Höherentwicklung wieder ejakuliert?

Chia: Wenn man damit begonnen hat, zu meditieren und seine Sexual-energie mit den verschiedenen taoistischen Übungen hÖherzuentwickeln, spürt man sofort, was passiert, wenn man ejakuliert. Sie erhalten eine sofortige Rück-meldung über das, was mit Ihrem Energiezustand geschieht: Man fühlt sich, geschwächt, manchmal sogar so sehr, daß man vorübergehend* stark deprimiert wird. Bevor Sie mit der taoistischen Praxis angefangen haben, hätten Sie dasselbe Gefühl wahrscheinlich als «angenehme Müdigkeit» bezeichnet; doch nun wirkt es auf Sie seelisch schmerzhaft, weil Sie es inzwischen gewöhnt sind, auf einem höheren Niveau der Chi-Energie zu leben. Der Energieverlust durch Ejakulation beim Sexualakt läßt sich deutlich spüren.

16. Wie werden die Augen im Sexual-Kung Fu gebraucht?

Chia: Die Augen sind sehr wichtig. Auf späteren Stufen können Sie nur mit Hilfe der Augen und einem Minimum richtiger Atmung das Große Emporziehen vollführen. Man sollte die Augen beim Liebesakt geschlossen halten, um die innere Energie zu vergrößern; wenn Sie dabei umhersehen, wird der Geist abgelenkt, und es kommt zu Chi-Verlusten, weil die Augen das Organ mit dem stärksten Yang-Charakter sind. Lernen Sie, in sich und in den Körper Ihres Liebespartners hineinzublicken. Die Augen spiegeln psychologisch gesehen die eigenen Absichten wider, weshalb man mit ihnen auch alles buchstäblich lenken kann. Wenn Sie die taoistischen Praktiken korrekt üben, wird das Ihre Augenkraft erheblich vermehren. Das Umgekehrte ist aber auch wahr: Durch unrichtigen Sex werden Ihre Augen ihren Glanz verlieren. Als aufmerksamer Beobachter können Sie auch ohne jede Kenntnis östlicher Medizin erkennen, ob Menschen sich sexuell erschöpfen. Man sieht es im Gesicht, am eingefallenen Zustand von Augen und Haut und am matten Haar.

17. Inwieweit können Krankheit, Verspannung, Streß und andere negative psychische Zustände die taoistische Liebespraktik beeinflussen?

Chia: Ein gesundes Sexualleben hängt sehr eng mit der körperlichen Gesundheit und dem geistigen Wohlbefinden zusammen. Wenn Sie sehr angespannt sind, wird es Ihnen schwerfallen, die geistige Beherrschung und das Große Emporziehen auszuüben. Verspannungen beeinträchtigen die Fähigkeit, mit diesen Methoden den Liebesakt auszuführen. Aber es macht ohnehin nicht viel Spaß, im verkrampften Zustand Sex zu haben. Die Meditation des Großen Energiekreislaufs und Tai Chi Chi Kung sind sehr hilfreich, um wieder zur Ruhe zu kommen. Wenn Sie sich nicht wohlfühlen oder einen niedrigen Chi-Pegel haben, sollten Sie sich in der Sexualität passiv verhalten und Ihren Liebespartner die obere Stellung einnehmen lassen, damit er Ihnen heilende Energie zuführen kann. Die sexuelle Begegnung ist das mikrokosmische Abbild des Alltags auf einer stark intensivierten Stufe.

Auch das psychische Befinden ist sehr wichtig. Es ist unabdingbar, daß Sie Liebe empfinden, sich ausgeruht und entspannt fühlen und nicht voller negativer Gefühle stecken. Wenn Sie sehr zornig oder traurig oder ängstlich sind, wird es Ihnen schwerfallen, die Sexualität zu genießen und die hier gelehrten Praktiken anzuwenden. Das kann Sie selbst oder Ihren Partner emotional völlig aus dem Gleichgewicht bringen, weil die Aura wahrend des Liebesaktes weit geöffnet ist und man leicht alles Negative aufnimmt. Da ist es schon besser, sich gemeinsam hinzusetzen und die Verschmelzung der Fünf Elemente auszuüben, um den Geist zu beruhigen. Selbst wenn Sie schon jahrelang das Große Emporziehen praktizieren, kann es Ihnen größte Mühe bereiten, den Samen einzubehalten, wenn Sie in keinem ausgeglichenen geistigen Zustand sind. Fühlen Sie sich seelisch und geistig dagegen wohl und ruhig, fällt es Ihnen überhaupt nicht schwer.

18. Was ist der Unterschied zwischen dem unwillkürlichen Blockieren der Ejakulation durch Enthaltsamkeit und der taoi-stischen Methode der Energie-Höherentwicklung?

Chia: Die Ejakulation läßt sich unwillkürlich auch durch geistige Kraft unterbinden, indem man sich einfach weigert, Sex zu haben oder zu masturbieren. Doch heißt das, die Willenskraft gegen die Triebe des Körpers zu stellen. Der Taoist dagegen veredelt die Körpertriebe und leitet die Chi-Energie um, um sie woanders einzusetzen. Wenn man im Zölibat lebt, die eigene Sexualenergie auf natürliche Weise transformieren und Körper und Geist miteinander integrieren kann, sollte man ein strahlen-, des, vitales Äußeres haben. Doch gibt es nicht viele Menschen, die von Natur aus so erleuchtet sind.

Es gibt eine ganze Reihe negativer Beobachtungen über die Auswirkungen der Enthaltsamkeit auf die Gesundheit. Diese Daten hat man durch Untersuchungen von Priestern erhalten, die die Sexualität mit reiner Willenskraft unterdrückt hatten. Dergleichen kann zu langfristigen schmerzhaften Beschwerden der Prostata fuhren, die versagt oder sich entzündet.

Ich glaube allerdings, daß solche Probleme darauf zurückzuführen sind, daß die Betroffenen nicht wußten, wie sie richtig mit ihrer Sexualenergie umzugehen hatten. Die Energiebahnen zwischen Unter- und Oberleib waren bei ihnen verschlossen, so daß ihre Sexualenergie blockiert wurde und zu Blut- und Hormonüberfullung in den Genitalien und der Prostata führte. Um solchen Prostatabeschwerden vorzubeugen, sollte jeder im Zölibat lebende Mann sein Perineum mehrmals täglich fest anziehen und wieder lockern. Das stärkt die Prostata ein wenig, allerdings nicht so gut wie das Große Emporziehen, bei dem auch Chi-Energie hindurchgeleitet wird. Durch mehr Geschlechtsverkehr kann eine geschwächte Prostata auch geheilt werden. Der Orgasmus kräftigt sie, doch riskiert man einen gewaltigen Energieverlust, wenn man die taoistischen Methoden nicht kennt. Andere wiederum schwächen ihre Prostata gerade durch übermäßiges Ejakulieren. Für diese Männer ist das Zölibat ausgesprochen heilsam.

Wenn man die Ejakulation mit einer innerlichen Übung wie dem Großen Emporziehen verhindert, mag es den Anschein haben, als wäre es das gleiche wie das Verhindern der Sexualität durch Enthaltsamkeit, doch das stimmt nicht, es gibt dabei einen sehr großen Unterschied: Das Große Emporziehen leitet die Energie bewußt nach oben, durch innere Fähigkeit, nicht durch reinen Zufall oder die Macht des Willens allein. Ich praktiziere diese Technik nun schon seit vielen Jahren und habe nie Probleme damit gehabt. Manchmal kann man einen leichten Stau durch eine sanfte Massage beheben. Diese Übung läßt sich vom Standpunkt der Reinheit nicht vom größeren Kontext der Meditation und der Energiearbeit im taoistischen System trennen; ebensowenig dürfen die ethischen, psychologischen und spirituellen Aspekte übersehen werden.

19. Könnten Sie kurz zusammenfassen, welche Vorteile der taoistische Ganzkörperorgasmus gegenüber dem normalen eja-kulatorischen Orgasmus bietet?

Chia: Ein totaler Orgasmus von Körper und Geist läßt sich damit umschreiben, daß man vom Kopf einen Nektarstrom wie einen Frühlingsschauer innen durch den Körper rinnen fühlt. Ein solcher Orgasmus ist unverwechselbar. Er besteht aus einer Welle subtiler Chi-Energie, die Muskelpanzer sprengt, Spannungen im Nerven- und Lymphsystem löst und verborgene Gefiihlskräfte aufschließt. Man fühlt sich dabei wie ein neugeborenes Kind, nur daß man diese Wiedergeburt nicht wie ein Säugling erfährt, als unbewußte Glückseligkeit, sondern dabei sehr wohl erwachsen und bewußt ist. Die Welt ist noch immer da, doch scheint sie plötzlich leichter als eine Feder zu sein.

Dieses Gefühl der Leichtigkeit ist ein Ergebnis der erfolgreichen Umwandlung der schweren Samenflüssigkeit in einen Licht-Samen, der das höhere Bewußtsein nährt. Man verspürt ein tiefes Glücksgefiihl, weil man weiß, daß man nun endlich nach Hause gefunden hat. Man wird weder durch sich selbst noch durch die Liebespartnerin niedergedrückt. Das ist etwas völlig anderes als ein Genitalorgasmus, auf den in der Regel entweder ein tiefer, schwerer Schlaf folgt, weil der Körper versucht, die verlorengegangene Energie wiederzugewinnen, oder ein immer noch unruhiger Gemütszustand, der die Frage stellt: «Und was nun?» Beim Genitalorgasmus wird zwar der Körper entspannt, nicht aber der Geist und die Seele; diese hungern noch immer nach subtiler Energie, weil die Polarität zwischen den Liebenden nicht vollständig hergestellt wurde.

20. Was geschieht eigentlich genau, wenn man beim Orgasmus den Punkt ohne Rückkehr erreicht hat?

Chia: Die Kurve sexueller Erregung verläuft bei Mann und Frau - besonders aber beim Mann, weil die Frau die größere Fähigkeit besitzt, einen Zustand zeitweiliger Stabilität aufrechtzuerhalten - folgendermaßen: Nach einer langsamen oder auch schnellen Erregung wird eine kurze Stabilität, eine Plateau-Phase, erreicht, auf die ein schneller und plötzlicher Abfall folgt. Das war's dann auch schon - das ist Urknalltheorie. Die taoisti-sche Höherentwicklung lehrt dagegen die Stabilitätstheorie: Dabei sollen Yin und Yang durch eine Reihe von Tal-Orgasmen sich ständig ausdehnen und wieder zusammenziehen. Die Urknalltheorie, die im Augenblick als Theorie von der Entstehung des Universums Mode ist, wurzelt im Prinzip in den sexuellen Begierden der>männlichen westlichen Wissenschaftler.

Nun kann man den Zustand der Stabilität, des Plateaus, mit einer Art «ursprünglichen Zone» vergleichen, einer Erfahrung der ursprünglichen Zeit und des ursprünglichen Raums. Da erscheinen einem Minuten wie Stunden, wie immer man es nun definieren will. Psychologen nennen dies einen veränderten Bewußtseins zustand. Anscheinend können Frauen diesen Zustand weitaus leichter ausdehnen und verlängern als Männer. Jenseits davon liegt ein kritischer Punkt ohne Umkehr - und dann der «Absturz». Der Zustand des Plateaus kann von wenigen Sekunden bis zu einer halben Stunde oder noch länger andauern. Charakteristisch für ihn ist die Beruhigung, Entspannung und nachlassende Erektion des Mannes. In der Praxis sieht das so aus, daß die Liebespartner nach dieser Phase der Ruhe sich gegenseitig erneut stimulieren, das Chi durch Stoßen und andere Erregungsmethoden steigern und dadurch Energie in sich erzeugen. Dann wird erneut die Plateau-Phase erreicht und eine Weile aufrechterhalten.

Es bedarf einiger Übung, um nicht «über den Rand zu fallen», aber die Belohnung ist großartig. Es ist wie das Erklimmen einer Pyramide: Jede Stufe ist oben flach und ungefährlich, doch die Kante der nächsten zu erklimmen läßt einen leicht ins Schwindeln geraten. Bei unseren Übungen baut man stufenweise ein immer größeres Potential auf, um auf den Partner reagieren zu können, das schließlich so mächtig wird, daß die Wahrscheinlichkeit, die Kontrolle zu verlieren, mit jeder Stufe größer wird. Man könnte sagen, daß man immer mehr Druck erzeugt, doch einen angenehmen Druck, weil die Energie auf jedem neuen Plateau größer ist als auf dem vorhergehenden. Die Plateau-Phasen werden immer länger, je mehr Energie gebildet wird. Hat man genügend Energie aufgebaut und befindet man sich auf einem Plateau, beginnt das Chi durch die Energiebahnen im Körper zu strömen, so daß die ursprünglich vielleicht rein genitale Reaktion nun zu einer Ganzkörperreaktion wird. Ist der gesamte Körper des Mannes mit dem der Frau ins Gleichgewicht gekommen, dringt die Energie auch in die subtilen Körper der mentalen und spirituellen Ebene ein, stellt die völlige Polarität her und öffnet das Bewußtsein für Wissen und Glückseligkeit. Dann erweist sich das Wesen des Tao als gleichzeitig ehrfurchtgebietend und alltäglich.

Die «ursprüngliche Zone» auf dem Plateau ist ein recht empfindlicher Ort, und man kann sagen, daß hier die Kunst der taoistischen Zweifachen Höherentwicklung erst richtig geübt werden muß. Das Feingefühl und die Fähigkeit, nicht zum «Punkt ohne Umkehr» weiterzugehen, ist eine Sache der Erfahrung, der Zielgerichtetheit und des allgemeinen Entspannungsund Gesundheitszustands wie auch der Art der Beziehung zum Partner. Nun könnte die Frau die Ejakulation des Mannes recht einfach durch ihren eigenen Orgasmus auslösen oder indem sie ihn durch Kontraktion ihrer Scheidemuskeln stimuliert. Unsere Technik verlangt nicht nach einem gemeinsamen Orgasmus beider, und besonders in der Lernphase sollte dem Mann genügend Zeit gelassen werden, um in der Plateau-Phase zur Stabilität zu finden. Es ist recht aufschlußreich, daß viele Frauen meinen, daß der Mann nur dann befriedigt sein kann, wenn er eine Ejakulation hat. Hier haben wir es mit sexueller Politik zu tun, mit all den Erwartungen und Einstellungen, die unsere Reaktionen so stark beeinflussen. Männer wie Frauen müssen sich nach und nach de-konditionieren, von ihren alten, eingefahrenen Vorstellungen lösen. Doch wird dies auf ganz natürliche Weise geschehen, wenn das Paar seine Energie gemeinsam veredelt.

21. Stellen Homosexualität und Gruppensex Hindernisse auf dem Pfad zur spirituellen Weiterentwicklung dar?

Chia: Die Taoisten sind viel zu weise, um irgend etwas von vornherein zu verdammen, weil alles irgendwann zum Tao zurückführt. Die eigentliche Frage lautet eher, wieso Homosexualität gegen die Natur oder das Tao sein kann, wenn das Tao sie doch erschaffen hat. Die Homosexualität verstößt nicht gegen das Tao, aber sie stellt auch nicht die größtmögliche Erfahrung des Tao dar. Es ist unmöglich, durch homosexuelle Liebe das Gleichgewicht der Polarität von Männlich und Weiblich in seiner ganzen Fülle zu erfahren. Die subtilen Energien fehlen, und man kann nichts erschaffen, wenn die Rohsubstanzen dafür nicht vorhanden sind. Die höchste Harmonie von Yin und Yang läßt sich damit nicht erreichen. Doch hangt alles davon ab, wie weit man den spirituellen Pfad beschreiten will. Wenn man in der Meditation tief genug kommt, kann man die entgegengesetzte, polare Energie im eigenen Inneren entwik-kehi. Dann kann ein homosexuelles Liebesleben dieses Gleichgewicht stören, so daß man ständig damit beschäftigt ist, es wiederherzustellen.

Dieses Problem ist für Männer größer als für Frauen, weil ihre doppelte Yang-Energie zu expansiv ist und leichter zum Konflikt fuhrt. Eine doppelte Yin-Energie kann durchaus harmonisch sein, weil das Yin nachgiebig ist, doch wird auch in einer solchen Partnerschaft keine der beiden Frauen die höchste Erfüllung erfahren. In beiden Fällen kann es zu subtilen Störungen des organischen Gleichgewichts kommen, was man beachten muß, wenn man ein Optimum an Gesundheit erhalten will.

Die Situation läßt sich für männliche Homosexuelle etwas verbessern, wenn sie sich andere Quellen der Yin-Energie suchen. So könnten sie mehr Yin-Nahrung zu sich nehmen, mehr Zeit mit Frauen verbringen oder im Garten arbeiten, um das Erd-Chi zu kultivieren. Man kann auch direkt Energie aus der Erde aufnehmen, indem man sich mit dem Gesicht auf den Boden legt und meditiert, wobei man die Kraft ins Glied und in die Hände zieht. Das kann eine Hilfe sein, wenn man es vor oder nach dem Sexualakt durchfuhrt. Wenn Sie die Sameneinbehaltung praktizieren wollen, sich aber in schnell wechselnden homosexuellen Beziehungen befinden, rate ich Ihnen, eine Weile enthaltsam zu leben und zu versuchen, Stabilität zu erreichen, indem Sie die Einfache Höherentwicklung mit dem Großen Emporziehen und der Meditation praktizieren.

Beim Gruppensex ist es noch viel schwieriger, die subtilen Energien zu harmonisieren. Ich rate davon ab, weil er nur selten von Liebe motiviert ist. Die einzige Ausnahme bildet die Kombination von zwei Frauen und einem Mann, weil das doppelte Yin sein Yang harmonisieren kann, wenn sie sich ebenfalls in Harmonie miteinander befinden. Fühlen Sie sich von mehreren Menschen angezogen, ist das Beste, was Sie für sie tun können, sie zu inspirieren, sich weiterzuentwickeln, durch Tai Chi, Meditation, Yoga oder die in diesem Buch behandelten Methoden. Lehren Sie durch Beispiel. Sie brauchen nicht jeden körperlich zu heben, von dem Sie sich angezogen fühlen. Wenn Sie Ihre Energie überall verstreuen, werden Sie niemals wirklich tief in sich selbst eindringen können.

22. Was verursacht das Erschlaffen des Glieds, wenn man mit einer steifen Erektion begonnen hat, aber nicht ejakuliert?

Chia: Möglicherweise hat Ihr Geist seine Aufmerksamkeit dann vom Liebesakt selbst abgewendet. Das Chi bewegt sich im Einklang mit dem Geist, es wird von ihm gelenkt. Wenn sich Ihr Geist auf einen subtileren Energieaustausch mit Ihrer Liebespartnerin konzentriert, Ihre Erektion aber nachläßt, kann dies ein Zeichen sein, daß die körperliche Liebe nicht mehr erforder-' lieh ist. Dann sollten Sie sich entspannen und die Vereinigung genießen. Behalten Sie nach Möglichkeit Ihren erschlafften Penis in Ihrer Partnerin oder zumindest so, daß er sie noch berührt, weil das Chi noch immer durch ihn hindurchströmt. Aber um Ihrer psychischen Gesundheit willen - versuchen Sie nur nicht, eine neue Erektion zu forcieren!

23. Was soll ich tun, wenn ich das Große Emporziehen meistere und enthaltsam lebe, aber immer noch feuchte Träume habe?

Chia: Wenn Sie das Große Emporziehen wirklich gemeistert haben, dürfte das überhaupt nicht vorkommen. Dies geschieht eher bei Männern, die die Sexualenergie zwar einbehalten, sie aber nicht vollständig durch Umwandlung in ein höheres Zentrum geleitet haben. Die Sexualenergie verbleibt dann im unteren Körper und kann zu Problemen fuhren. Die taoistischen Methoden des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs, der Verschmelzung der Fünf Elemente und des Kan und Li bieten die Formeln für das Transformieren der Energie in höhere Zentren. Wenn das nicht funktionieren sollte und die feuchten Träume andauern, sollten Sie auf die Botschaft ihres Körpers hören und sich eine Liebespartnerin suchen.

24. Ist es zulässig, im Augenblick des Orgasmus bestimmte Wünsche oder Gedanken zu projizieren?

Chia: Ich rate sehr davon ab, das Ego im Augenblick des Orgasmus oder überhaupt irgendwann während des Liebesaktes zu projizieren. Das ist eine magische Praktik, die zu sehr unerwarteten Ergebnissen fuhren kann und eine Gefahr für die spirituelle Entwicklung darstellt. Wenn Sie nicht ein festes inneres Gleichgewicht besitzen, können sich bösartige astrale Wesenheiten an Sie hängen. Manche Männer haben auch im Traumzustand Verkehr mit «Phantom-Geliebten», die echte Wesenheiten sind. Sie erhalten möglicherweise durchaus, was Sie haben wollten - aber auch noch vieles mehr, um das sie nicht gebeten hatten und das Ihnen äußerst zuwider sein dürfte. Außerdem verlieren Sie Energie, wenn Sie alles nach außen projizieren. Ich kenne eine Frau, die zehn Jahre lang die «Projektion des Magischen Kindes» praktizierte. Sie ist blaß und kränklich geworden. Es ist besser, Ihrem Liebespartner die Energie zurückzugeben, von dem sie schließlich auch stammt. Auf diese Weise geben Sie dem Universum sofort die Ihnen zuteilgewordene Gnade zurück. Wenn Sie die Energie Ihrer Liebespartnerin steigern, anstatt irgendein Ego-Bedürfnis damit zu befriedigen, wird sie dadurch auf eine höhere Stufe gelangen und dazu in der Lage sein, Ihnen oder auch anderen Lebewesen im Universum noch mehr zu schenken. Der spirituelle Fortschritt wird dadurch erlangt, daß man das Gleichgewicht von Yin und Yang herstellt, indem man auf spontane Weise unbeteiligt in der Gegenwart lebt und nicht dadurch, daß man irgendeine Mentalprojektion auslebt und Wirklichkeit werden läßt. Taoisten veredeln das Chi in ihrem Körper. Wir schicken unsere schmutzige Wäsche nicht einfach weg in der Hoffnung, daß sie irgendwann schon gewaschen zurückkommen wird — wir waschen sie vielmehr selbst. Konzentrieren Sie sich also darauf, das Chi an Ort und Stelle, wo immer Sie gerade sein mögen, im Gleichgewicht zu halten. Das ist Ihre ganze Verpflichtung, die Sie dem Universum gegenüber haben.

13- KAPITEL

Erfahrungen mit der taoistischen Methode der Höherentwicklung der Sexualkraft

Das folgende Interview führte Michael Winn mit einem 46jähri-gen Psychologen und Schüler von Mantak Chia, einem Vater von mehreren Kindern.

M.W.: Ist es Ihnen leichtgefallen, Sexual-Kung Fu zu lernen?

Schüler: Ich praktiziere das Sexual-Kung Fu jetzt seit eineinhalb Jahren. Solange ich allein übte, fiel es mir recht leicht, doch es war schwierig, die Methode in meine Sexualität zu integrieren, weil ich einen unbewußten Widerstand dagegen hatte, der wohl daher rührte, daß ich so viele Jahre lang auf völlig andere Weise geliebt hatte.

Als ich mir immer stärker der Tatsache bewußt wurde, daß mich die herkömmliche Sexualität ermüdete, wurde es leichter. Doch ist es unmöglich, diese Praktik von anderen Methoden loszulösen, die ich gelernt habe, etwa den Kleinen Energiekreislauf und die Verschmelzungsmeditationen, Eisenhemd Chi ! Kung und Tai Chi. Durch diese erhöhte sich meine Sensibilität für subtile Energien, vor allem durch das Eisenhemd Chi Kung.

M.W.: Inwieweit hat diese Praktik Ihre Partnerbeziehung im Alltag beeinflußt?

Schüler: Unsere Bindung ist dadurch erheblich verstärkt worden. Oft äußert sich dies durch ein Strömen der Energie zwischen uns, manchmal auch in Form von telepathischen oder hellseherischen Erfahrungen. Das geschieht aber in vielen anderen Partnerschaften auch, die schon längere Zeit existieren. Ungewöhnlich ist bei uns vor allem, daß all dies sehr, sehr schnell geschah. Mein Üben des Tao Yoga hat diesen Prozeß stark beschleunigt.

M.W.: War die Erfahrung so befriedigend für Sie, daß Ihr Verlangen nach häufigem Sex dadurch vermindert wurde?

Schüler: Nein, im Gegenteil. Ich möchte häufiger Sex haben als früher, drei- oder viermal in der Woche, je nach Situation und Gelegenheit, manchmal auch mehrmals am Tag.

Ermüdend wird die Sexualität für mich nur dann, wenn ich mich nicht an meine Übungen halte und meine Energie durch Ejakulation verliere. Und ich muß sagen, daß ich nun, nach fast zweijähriger Übung, noch immer zeitweilig den festen Willen verliere, sie anzuwenden. Für mich als Psychologen ist es sehr interessant zu beobachten, wie in mir die alte Konditionierung, einen Orgasmus zu haben, immer noch da ist. Das ist etwas, womit ich noch kämpfe. Ich beherrsche es jetzt, aber ich muß doch sehr aufpassen.

M.W.: Es ist wie das Betrachten eines Aspekts seines früheren Ichs.

Schüler: Das liegt bei mir zu einem großen Teil an gesellschaftlicher und kultureller Konditionierung. Diese Art der Sexualität ist der diametrale Gegensatz zur westlichen Sexualität, wie wir sie verstehen.

M.W.: Könnten Sie eine ungewöhnliche Erfahrung beschreiben, die Sie dabei gemacht haben?

Schüler: Es gab eine ganze Reihe. Zum Beispiel strömte zwischen uns nach einer Weile des Liebens und der wiederholten Vermeidung der Ejakulation eine intensive Energie. Oft war es so, daß die Energie, die sich bildete, zwischen unseren Mündern und Genitalien eine Art Energiebrücke erdichtete, wie Elektrizität. Es konnte aber auch vorkommen, daß die Energie durch unsere Kleinen Energiekreisläufe jagte, immer hin und her. Manchmal wurden wir auch in eine Art Energiekokon eingesponnen, der uns beide umhüllte und innerhalb und außerhalb unserer Körper strahlte.

M.W.: Ist dieses Eingesponnenwerden in Energie etwas, was Ihre Beziehung bereichert, oder macht es einfach nur Spaß?

Schüler: Es macht viel Freude, aber es hat auch eine enorme unwiderstehliche emotionale Qualität. Es ist eine ganz außergewöhnliche Kommunikation zwischen Partnern, die über die rein sexuelle Erfahrung hinaus die ganze Beziehung selbst ausfüllt. Wir spüren, wie die Energie strömt, oft auch wenn wir uns nicht sexuell lieben, also im Alltag. Wenn wir gemeinsam meditieren, zieht sich ein Energiebogen durch den Kopf, vor allem dann, wenn wir die Verschmelzungsformel praktizieren. Außerdem habe ich beim Liebesakt die Erfahrung gemacht, daß ich spürte, wie die Aufsteigenden Gefäße sich miteinander verbanden. Es war ein Gefühl, als gebe es eine Leiter zwischen unseren Körpern. An der Spitze bildete die Energie einen Springbrunnen und strömte in die Körper hinab und um sie herum, so daß die Aufsteigenden Gefäße sich am Mittelpunkt verbanden und ein magnetisches Feld entwickelten. Das war eine sehr kraftvolle Erfahrung.

M.W.: Haben Sie kalte und heiße Energien deutlich vonein-^ ander unterscheiden können?

Schüler: Ja, das geschieht sogar recht oft, genau dann, wenn ich die Ejakulation meistere. In dem Moment strömt viel heiße Energie von mir durch den Penis. Gerade dann spürte ich oft, wie ein Kältestrom meinen Rücken emporstieg. Einmal habe ich zum Fenster hinübergeschaut, weil ich dachte, es wäre ein Luftzug, so stark war es. Ich habe auch oft erfahren, wie sich der Körper meiner Partnerin kühl und feucht anfühlte, während meine eigene Energie sehr heiß und trocken ist.

M.W.: Würden Sie als Psychologe diese Praktik jemandem empfehlen, der emotional durcheinander ist oder gerade an einer Beziehung laboriert?

Schüler: Auf gar keinen Fall! Diese Energieschwankungen könnten sich sonst sehr destabilisierend auswirken.

M.W.: Dann ist das also nur etwas für Menschen, die eine halbwegs stabile Partnerbeziehung haben?

Schüler: Ja, das glaube ich schon. Es ist auch wichtig, daß die Beteiligten die Meditation des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs gemeinsam praktizieren. Man sollte diese Übung nicht von der Gesamtlehre trennen.

M.W.: Sie haben gesagt, daß diese Praktik Ihre Partnerbeziehung sehr bereichert hat. Es gibt eine Vielzahl von Beziehungen, die wegen sexueller Unverträglichkeit versagen. Glauben Sie denn, daß diese Übung dergleichen heilen kann, also therapeutischen Wert hat?

Schüler: Was bestimmte Probleme angeht, glaube ich das schon, ja. Zum Beispiel wird dadurch die vorzeitige, verfrühte Ejakulation behoben. Ich glaube aber, daß ihr eigentlicher Wert darin liegt, daß man den spirituellen Zusammenhang erkennt. Natürlich wäre es interessant, diese Methode auch einmal als therapeutisches Mittel zu unterrichten.

M.W.: Könnten Sie sich vorstellen, daß westliche Sexualforscher wie Kinsey und Masters sich dafür interessieren würden?

Schüler: Ja, wenn man es ihnen in einem Zusammenhang anbietet, den sie verstehen können. Masters, Johnson und andere Sexualwissenschaftler arbeiten ja ebenfalls mit Ejakula-tionskontrolle; insofern ist diese Methode gar nicht so verschieden von ihrer. Das manuelle Drücken des Samenleiters weist große Ähnlichkeit mit der Methode von Masters und Johnson auf. Doch davon abgesehen befinden sie sich noch auf dem Kindergartenniveau, was ihr Verständnis der Rolle der Sexualität im menschlichen Energiesystem angeht oder wie man das energetische Gleichgewicht und den Sexualtrieb mit der Kraft des Geistes meistert.

M.W.: Viele Männer Ihres Alters durchlaufen eine Midlifecri-sis, die man allgemein auch als eine zumindest teilweise sexuelle Krise begreift. Wie geht die taoistische Praktik damit um?

Schüler: In den letzten Jahren hatte ich selbst meine Midlife-crisis. Ein großer Teil der Probleme hing mit Berufswechsel zusammen und mit der Frage, welchen Beruf ich eigentlich wirklich ausüben wollte. Diese taoistische Arbeit hat mir dabei geholfen, mich zu entscheiden, was ich eigentlich im Leben will, wie ich meine Energie einsetzen möchte, auch im Bereich der Sexualität.

Ja wirklich, die taoistischen Praktiken und das Sexual-Kung Fu haben mir sehr geholfen, Klarheit zu gewinnen, weil ja auch ein großer Teil der Midlifecrisis damit zu tun hat, daß man seine spirituelle Ausrichtung im Leben finden möchte.

Die folgenden Auszüge geben eine Diskussion zwischen Meister Chia und seinen Schülern bei einem Kung Fu Workshop in Denver wieder.

Schüler: Ich befasse mich jetzt schon seit gut zwölfjahren mit Esoterik und habe viel über Chakras und Energieströme gehört, welche Eigenschaften sie haben und wie man sie verstehen sollte. Ich glaube, daß die Sexualenergie eine sehr wichtige Lebenskraft ist, die das Denken vieler Menschen beherrscht. Deshalb finde ich es auch sehr wichtig, diese Sache zu ordnen, sie in die richtige Perspektive einzubetten, und ich bin froh darüber, daß ich jetzt jemandem begegnet bin, der mir das beibringt, Chia: Wenn man zur Schule geht, folgt man auch einer; bestimmten Ordnung. Man versucht beispielsweise nicht, seinen Magisterabschluß in Angriff zu nehmen, bevor man überhaupt die Grundschule absolviert hat. Ebensowenig sollte man sich z. B. an Tai Chi Chuan wagen, was einem Magistergrad entsprechen würde, bevor man sich in seiner esoterischen Praxis eine fundierte Grundlage verschafft hat. Man sollte mindestens den Kleinen Energiekreislauf beherrschen. Es ist nicht so wichtig, welchen Tai Chi Stil man sich aussucht, es kommt vielmehr darauf an, einen inneren Energiestrom herzustellen.

Schüler 2: Ich habe festgestellt, daß die Hodenatmung mir wirklich hilft, sie hält wach und erfrischt. Ich habe früher immer eine Art Autogenes Training beim Autofahren praktiziert, wenn ich lange Strecken fahren mußte. Jetzt wende ich statt dessen die Hodenatmung an, und das funktioniert ausgezeichnet.

Schüler 3: Ich weiß den Detailreichtum, mit dem Sie das taoistische Sexual-Kung Fu vermitteln, sehr zu schätzen. Ich habe eine tantrisch-buddhistische Methode praktiziert, die auch den Kleinen Energiekreislauf verwendete, die Zunge und den Schließmuskel, eigentlich den ganzen Dammbereich. Bei der taoistischen Methode habe ich nun ganz andere Erfahrungen gemacht. Sobald ich mein Glied und die Hoden eingezogen habe, wie Sie es empfehlen, schoß bei mir die Energie durchs Perineum bis in den Kopf.

Chia: Konnten Sie diese tantrisch-buddhis tische Methode einmal beschreiben?

Schüler: Ja, ich halte die Luft an, drücke die Zunge an den Gaumen und blicke in meinen Kopf hinein, um dann das Perineum anzuspannen. Doch wie ich schon sagte, die Einzelheiten wurden dabei nicht erläutert. Sobald ich Glied und Hoden einzog, verlief alles plötzlich ganz anders als sonst. Ich glaube, die Kraft, die ich hier daraus gezogen habe, war mindestens zwanzigmal stärker als alles, was ich mit der tibetischen Methode zustandegebracht habe. Während unseres letzten Workshops habe ich sogar gespürt, wie die Sehnen um meinen Perus und die Hodenstränge emporgezogen wurden. Als das Perineum dann versiegelt war, war der Energiestrom geradezu überwältigend.

Bei der Kundalini-Methode zieht man manchmal ganz spontan Luft durch die Harnröhre in die Blase. Das kann sehr weh tun und sogar zu Problemen fuhren, wenn sich dann nämlich eine Druckblase bildet. Wenn man dann Wasser in die Harnblase zieht, wobei man ja auch denselben Schließmuskel anspannt, kann diese Luftblase sich dazwischen schieben und einem erneut Schmerzen bereiten.

Chia: Ich möchte auf einen wesentlichen Unterschied zwischen den von Ihnen geschilderten Methoden und unserem Ansatz hinweisen, den Sie hier kennengelernt haben. Bei den Techniken, die Sie erwähnen, wird das Perineum während des Großen Emporziehens offengelassen. Wenn Sie es jedoch zuerst schließen und dann die Luft einziehen, gelangt diese nicht in die Harnblase. Wenn Sie Wasser in die Blase hinaufziehen, müssen Sie sich vorher vergewissern, daß Sie diese völlig entleert haben, sonst kann es zu Schmerzen kommen. Aus diesem Grund unterrichte ich diese Technik auch nicht. Davon abgesehen ist sie auch unnötig. Bei unserer Methode schließen Sie die Muskeln vor dem Emporziehen, damit weder Luft noch Wasser eindringen können. Wenn Sie die Kleine Erleuchtung, die Große Erleuchtung und die Größte Erleuchtung erfahren, werden Sie feststellen, daß Sie beim Mischen der kosmischen Energie ebenfalls alles versiegeln müssen, damit beim Emporziehen keine Luft eindringt. Auf diesen Stufen wird das Emporziehen spon-tan geschehen; das bedeutet, daß Sie das Verschließen vorher gemeistert haben müssen, um beim Einziehen der Luft keine Probleme zu bekommen, Schüler: Bei der Tibetisch-Tantrischen Unterweisung sagte man uns, daß Buddha sein Glied einziehen konnte, doch hat man uns das nie als Technik gelehrt. Hier dagegen wird alles zu einem einheitlichen Ganzen verbunden, das sowohl die körperliche als auch die geistige Ebene mit einschließt. Übrigens erinnert mich das Laden des Körpers mit Chi beim Eisenhemd Chi Kung stark an den Tumo-Yoga, die Praktik des Inneren Feuers, weil dieses Laden oder «Einlagern» dort ebenfalls eine wesentliche Rolle spielt. Auch hierbei hat mir wieder sehr gut gefallen, wie genau Sie beschrieben haben, was man im Körper tun muß. Unser tibetischer Lehrer hat zwar die Techniken vorgeführt, aber die Art und Weise, wie viele von uns ihn dann nachahmten, erinnerte eher an einen komischen Tanz.

Schüler 4: Beim Mann kommt es im Verlauf der normalen Ejakulation zu einer starken Aufladung im Perineum, durch welche die parasympathische Stimulierung in eine sympathische umgeschaltet wird, was schnell zur Erschöpfung führt. Die Frau dagegen bleibt die ganze Zeit in einem parasympathischen Zustand der Erregung. Nach dem Ejakulationsreflex wird beim Mann das sympathische Nervensystem angeregt. Das erkennt man an der Rötung und der Austrocknung im Mund. Jede Ejakulation fuhrt zu einem totalen katabolischen Zustand. Anstatt etwas aufzubauen, wird etwas niedergerissen.

Chia: Ja, und das erzeugt Zorngefuhle oder löst in Extremfällen sogar kriminelles Verhalten aus.

Schüler 5: Diese taoistische Methode ist wirklich sehr, sehr gut. Ich nehme schon zum zweiten Mal an diesem Workshop teil. Nach dem ersten Mal habe ich nicht regelmäßig geübt. Vor drei Wochen habe ich dann plötzlich das Große Emporziehen entdeckt, ohne es überhaupt zu wollen: Plötzlich strömte die Energie aus dem Perineum empor. Daraufhin habe ich mich beim Lieben darauf konzentriert, sie ins Kreuzbein zu leiten, worauf sich mein ganzer Körper mit einer gewaltigen Energieblase füllte. Am nächsten Tag habe ich dann das Große Emporziehen mit Erfolg wiederholt. Allerdings möchte ich eine Warnung an alle aussprechen, nicht denselben Fehler zu machen, wie ich. Ich hatte nämlich vergessen, die Energie wieder nach unten zu leiten. Etwa eine Woche später wurde ich plötzlich entsetzlich wütend und jähzornig und habe erst heute in der Sitzung erkannt, daß man sich ja auch darauf konzentrieren muß, die Energie wieder nach unten zu leiten. Ich habe sie damals einfach nur hinaufschießen lassen und vergessen, sie wieder nach unten zu fuhren. Deshalb möchte ich alle noch einmal warnen: Es ist wirklich sehr wichtig, die Energie wieder hinunterzulenken! Die Methode selbst ist ganz phantastisch, sie verleiht einem enorme Energie und große Vitalität.

14 - KAPITEL

Praktische Hinweise für eine erfüllte und gesunde Sexualität

«Der Weg des Tao besteht darin, den Geist zu einen. Tue dies, indem du deine Lebenskraft sammelst, deinen Geist beruhigst und deinen Willen harmonisierst. Der Körper sollte weder zu heiß noch zu kalt sein, weder hungrig noch übersättigt. So wird das Geschlechtsleben stets entspannt und erholsam sein.»

Rat der Einfachen Frau an den Gelben Kaiser

Über die Jahrhunderte hinweg beobachteten die Taoisten, wie viele verschiedene Möglichkeiten es gibt, die Liebeskraft zu steigern und den schädigenden Verlust von Sexualenergien auf ein Minimum zu reduzieren. Gehen wir von folgendem Beispiel aus: Angenommen, Sie beherrschen bereits das Große Emporziehen und haben volle Kontrolle über Ihren Orgasmus. Bevor Sie leidenschaftlich mehrere Stunden lang Ihre Partnerin lieben, nehmen Sie ein üppiges Mahl zu sich. Nach dem Liebesakt duschen Sie sich sofort und liegen nackt in der kühlen Sommerbrise, die durch das offene Fenster hereinweht.

Wahrscheinlich haben Sie nun die energetisierenden Wirkungen der Sexualität neutralisiert oder, schlimmer, Ihrer Gesundheit geschadet, weil Sie nicht beachtet haben, daß der Energiestrom vor und nach dem Liebesakt ebenso wichtig ist wie der Chi-Fluß während des Sexualakts.

Die Sameneinbehaltung ist völlig wertlos, wenn Sie die erzeugte Energie nicht auch mit dem Rest Ihres Lebens in Einklang bringen. Das üppige Essen bindet die Verdauungsenergien, während das Duschen und der Windzug das beim Liebesakt so sorgfaltig gehütete Chi wieder zerstreuen. Dem Taoisten geht es darum, den allgemeinen Strom der Lebensenergie als Ganzes im Gleichgewicht zu halten, und dies verlangt nach einem wachsenden Bewußtsein für die subtilen Geschehnisse, durch welche Ihr Leben beeinflußt wird.

Im folgenden finden Sie einige Beobachtungen und Ratschläge aus den taoistischen Lehren, mit deren Hilfe Sie zu einer erfüllten, freudigen und gesunden Sexualität finden können.

l. Stimmen Sie sich bereits 48 Stunden vor dem Liebesakt auf die Energie Ihres Liebespartners ein.

Der Liebesakt beginnt in Wirklichkeit bereits 48 Stunden vor dem eigentlichen Zusammenkommen, weil die in dieser Zeit angesammelten Energien zutage treten, wenn Sie zu den intensiveren, höheren Stufen der Sexualität vorstoßen. Aus diesem Grund sollten Sie einen Tag vorher, während des Liebesakts und danach jedes Gefühl der Aufwühlung oder des Zorns besänftigen, weil dies mehr als alles andere den harmonischen Energiestrom sowohl mit Ihrer Partnerin als auch bei Ihnen selbst stört. Die Yin-Natur der Frau hat sie mit sehr empfindlichen Antennen ausgestattet, mit deren Hilfe sie Untertöne recht genau wahrnehmen kann. Wenn Sie also mit sich selbst im reinen sind, wird dies auch Ihrer Partnerin dabei helfen, innere Klarheit zu finden und sich zu entspannen, wenn Sie mit dem Liebesakt beginnen. Wenn Sie in einem gelassenen, ausgeglichenen Zustand damit beginnen, wird die Sexualität Sie wesentlich leichter in einen Zustand gesteigerter Ekstase führen. Bleiben Sie feinfühlig und gehen Sie mit Ihrer Partnerin mit, schwingen Sie sich auf sie ein; es geht darum, gemeinsam zu einem vertieften Seinszustand zu finden und nicht einfach nur einen kurzen Höhepunkt zu erleben. Lassen Sie die Sexualität zu einem Teil der umfassenderen Meditation werden, die Ihr Leben ist.

2. Das Vorspiel beginnt mit der Schaffung einer entspannten Atmosphäre.

Bedenken Sie, daß die erogenen Zonen der Frau anders und meistens größer sind als die des Mannes. Verwöhnen Sie Ihre Partnerin auch dadurch, daß Sie ihr eine liebevolle, traute Umgebung, also ein «Heim» (und sei es auch nur das Schlafzimmer) herrichten. Das Vorspiel beginnt schon, bevor Sie den Körper einer Frau berühren: Gedämpfte Beleuchtung oder Kerzenlicht, weiche Kissen und weite, natürlich anhegende Kleidung, angenehme Düfte, Musik und sanftes Gespräch stimulieren ihre Sexualenergie und machen sie offener für die Ihre.

3. Führen Sie den Liebesakt niemals nach einer üppigen Mahlzeit aus.

Dieses weitverbreitete Fehlverhalten kann entweder Ihre Verdauung oder Ihr Liebesleben ruinieren! Sexualität und Essen sind zwei völlig unterschiedliche Tätigkeiten, die am besten dann funktionieren, wenn sie nicht miteinander im Wettstreit um die Energie des Körpers liegen. Sex mit vollem Bauch reduziert die Samenproduktion, verursacht Verdauungsstörungen und schadet der Milz. Warten Sie, bis das Essen völlig verdaut ist, bevor Sie mit dem Liebesakt beginnen, dann werden Sie zu einer weitaus hochwertigeren Sexualität finden. Nach dem Liebesakt mag es gut sein, etwas Warmes, Süßes zu essen. Kräutertees wirken besonders anregend und helfen dem Mann, seine Energie wiederzugewinnen. Vermeiden Sie kalte Getränke, Eiscreme oder Eiswürfel nach dem Liebesakt - denn diese muß Ihr Körper erst erwärmen und verbraucht dazu Ihre subtile Sexualenergie.

4. Vermeiden Sie den Liebesakt in körperlichen oder seelischen Extremzuständen.

Betätigen Sie sich nicht sexuell, wenn Sie müde, zornig, hungrig, ängstlich, traurig, schwach oder wütend sind. Die für den Liebesakt erforderliche Energie könnte Ihre Gesundheit sonst noch mehr aus dem Gleichgewicht bringen und aus einer kleinen, harmlosen Erkrankung schnell eine ernste machen. So könnte etwa eine Erkältung, mit der Sie der Partner angesteckt hat, dadurch rasch in eine Grippe ausarten.
Wenn Sie sich sexuell frustriert fühlen und vor extrem starker Yang-Energie geradezu aus allen Nähten platzen, sollten Sie sich zwar sexuell betätigen, doch nur auf beherrschte, maßvolle Weise. Erschöpfen Sie diese Yang-Energie nicht so weit, daß Sie dadurch in den anderen Extremzustand des Yin, in diesem Fall der völligen Erschöpfung verfallen. Ein solches Verhalten ließe sich mit einem Verdurstenden vergleichen, der plötzlich eine Wasserquelle entdeckt und so viel trinkt, daß er schließlich daran stirbt.

Sie können leidenschaftliche Gefühle empfinden und die körperlichen und emotionalen Freuden der Sexualität voll ausschöpfen, doch sollten Sie sich dabei nicht in Extremen verlieren, sonst wird aus Freude sehr leicht Schmerz. In einer Atmosphäre entspannten Genießens fällt es beiden Liebenden leichter, sich für die höheren Energien in ihrem eigenen Inneren zu öffnen. Gerät einer der Partner in einen Zustand übermäßiger Erregung, fühlt sich der andere möglicherweise davon ausgeschlossen oder aus dem Gleichgewicht geworfen.

5. Vermeiden Sie den Liebesakt in betrunkenem Zustand.

Wenn man betrunken ist, ist es äußerst schwierig, den Samenfluß zu kontrollieren, ganz zu schweigen vom Chi-Fluß selbst. Das durch Alkohol bewirkte Gefühl der Wärme hat nur vorübergehenden Charakter. Sie entsteht durch die Ausdehnung der haarfeinen Blutgefäße, die die inneren Energien freisetzen. Wenn Sie sich im betrunkenen Zustand körperlich stark anstrengen, können Sie durch mangelnde Atembeherrschung Ihren Lungen schaden. Ein oder zwei Drinks helfen manchmal einigen Menschen, sich zu entspannen, ohne die Beherrschung zu verlieren. Wollen Sie unbedingt Alkohol trinken, sollten Sie Ihre Grenzen genau kennen und diese auch einhalten. Wird Ihre eigene Energie eines Tages für Sie befriedigender als jeder Alkohol, wird auch dieses Bedürfnis von selbst verschwinden, ohne jede Anstrengung.

6. Urinieren Sie 20 Minuten vor dem Liebesakt.

Der Liebesakt bei voller Blase belastet die Nieren und erschwert die Entspannung. Nach dem Liebesakt sollten Sie nur dann urinieren, wenn die Frau gerade ihre Periode hat. Dann verhindert das Ausscheiden des Urins, daß ihr Blut in der Harnröhre eintrocknet und diese blockiert, was sehr schmerzhaft sein kann. Wenn Sie vor dem Liebesakt urinieren oder Stuhl entleeren, sollten Sie danach der Blase, den Eingeweiden und den anderen Organen Gelegenheit geben, zuerst ihr Gleichgewicht wiederzuerlangen. Eine kurze Ruhepause im Liegen genügt schon.

7. Sex unter extremen Wetterbedingungen kann ungesund sein.

Extreme Kälte oder Hitze, Regen und Feuchtigkeit, Nebel, starker Wind und Gewitter beeinflussen die Funktionen Ihrer lebenswichtigen Organe und das Gleichgewicht Ihres elektromagnetischen Feldes. Das kann das Gleichgewicht zwischen Lieb es p artnern stören und sogar zu Erkrankungen fuhren, sofern einer der beiden bereits geschwächt ist. Das- Wetter ist eine mächtige Kraft. Man sollte sie stets respektieren, vor allem wenn man ein Kind zeugen will. Für diesen Zweck ist es besonders wichtig, ein ausgeglichenes «Heim» (Eltern-Energiefeld) für den Geist dieses neuen Lebewesens zu schaffen.

8. Vermeiden Sie schwere körperliche Arbeit vor und nach dem Sex.

Wenn Sie sich in den Stunden vor und nach dem Liebesakt körperlich sehr anstrengen, kann dies vorübergehend den betroffenen Muskeln-und Organen Energie entziehen. Dadurch wird die Transformation und Emporleitung der Sexualenergie in die höheren Zentren beeinträchtigt, da diese Energie für die körperliche Regeneration benötigt wird. Wenn man schwitzt oder sich körperlich erschöpft fühlt, kann die Lebenskraft leicht aus dem Körper entweichen. Ein solcher Zustand läßt sich mittels Sexualität nur dann beheben, wenn das Lieben völlig passiv und ruhig geschieht.

9. Machen Sie sich nicht von künstlichen Geräten zur sexuellen Intensitätssteigerung abhängig.

Vibratoren und Dildos können zwar eine große Hilfe für Menschen sein, die unter sexuellen Störungen leiden, indem sie keine Erektion oder keinen Orgasmus bekommen können. Doch für die meisten Männer ist es besser, «die eigene Waffe zu schärfen» und die Geschlechtsorgane durch körperliche Übungen, Diät und Sexual-Kung Fu zu stärken, als sich auf künstliche Hilfen zu verlassen. Ziel ist es, das Lieben zu einem verinnerlichten Prozeß werden zu lassen, der zwischen den Energiepolen von Mann und Frau stattfindet. Je früher Sie die künstlichen Hilfen beiseite legen können, um so besser.

10. Baden oder duschen Sie nicht unmittelbar nach dem Liebesakt.

Wasser leitet Elektrizität sehr stark, und das gilt auch für die menschliche oder Bioelektrizität. Wenn man sofort nach dem Lieben badet, wird dadurch ein Teil der erzeugten Energie entladen. Warten Sie lieber, bis Körper und Geist sich etwas entspannt und die Sexualenergie aufgenommen haben, bevor Sie sich unter die Dusche stellen. Im Yoga wird häufig der Wert des Wassers betont, das negative Teilchen und Energien aus dem Körper spülen kann, doch sollte dies täglich durchgeführt werden und auf jeden Fall vor dem Liebesakt. Die Haut duftet frischer und fühlt sich auch jünger an, wenn man den übermäßigen Gebrauch von Seifen vermeidet, welche die natürlichen Öle des Körpers zerstören. Versuchen Sie, nur die Achselhöhlen und die Schamgegend mit Seife zu waschen und den Rest der Haut dafür mit einem Schwamm abzureiben. Dadurch wird die Haut weich und natürlich.

11. Vermeiden Sie allzu heftige Stöße beim Liebesakt.

Wenn Sie die Scheide der Frau ununterbrochen mit Ihrem Schambein und Ihrem Glied stoßen, kann sie davon taub oder erschöpft werden; möglicherweise kommt es dadurch bei der Frau auch zu negativen Assoziationen zur Sexualität. Feste, aber sanfte Stöße schenken die größte und dauerhafteste Freude. Am Anfang wird Ihnen dies auch die Sameneinbehaltung erleichtern. Je mehr Sie die Transformation der Sexualenergie gemeistert haben, um so mehr können Sie dann auch mit leidenschaftlicheren Varianten experimentieren.

12. Die Sexualkraft hat ihren Höhepunkt im Frühling.

Ihr Körper kennt vier Jahreszeiten, ganz wie die restliche Natur auch. Zwingen Sie sich nicht dazu, zu allen Zeiten dieselbe Intensität aufzubringen. Das ist unnatürlich und fuhrt letzten Endes zur Erschöpfung. April und Mai sind die besten Monate für die sexuelle Betätigung, da der Samen sich dann in einem Zustand der Expansion befindet. Die gleiche Menge Samen wird im Winter viel untätiger sein, wenn sie die eigene Energie von Natur aus zusammenzieht, um die Kälte zu überleben. Wenn Sie schon ejakulieren müssen, ist der Frühling dafür die geeignetste Zeit, gefolgt von Sommer und Herbst, während Ihre Energiereserven im Winter zur Neige gehen.

13. Wenn Sie krank sind, sollten Sie passiv lieben.

Ist der Mann in einem geschwächten Zustand, kann die sexuelle Betätigung sich für ihn sehr heilsam auswirken, doch nur dann, wenn er die passive Rolle übernimmt und die Frau oben liegt. Auf diese Weise können Sie die heilende Yin-Energie Ihrer Partnerin aufnehmen, ohne noch mehr von Ihrer ohnehin schon erschöpften Yang-Energie zu verlieren. Wenn Sie stark sind, Ihre Partnerin aber geschwächt ist, können Sie ihre Heilung dadurch unterstützen, daß Sie den aktiven Part übernehmen. Wenn Sie sich wegen übermäßiger sexueller Betätigung krank fühlen, kann dies durch passives Lieben ohne körperliche Bewegung kuriert werden. Symptome einer solchen Schwächung sind Penisschmerzen, ein feuchtes Scrotum und ein niedriger Energiepegel.

14. Hören Sie auf, sich sexuell zu betätigen, wenn der Liebesakt zur Routine geworden ist.

Die Sexualität wird in dem Augenblick für den Mann zu etwas Mechanischem, wenn er die richtige Vorbereitung der Frau auf den Liebesakt entweder vergißt oder ignoriert. Sorgen Sie durch richtiges Vorspiel und eigene Gefühlswärme dafür, daß die Frau «warm» wird. Wenn Sie ihren Körper oder ihr Geschlecht für selbstverständlich und gegeben erachten, wird die Frau nicht richtig darauf vorbereitet sein, ihre eigene Liebesenergie durch Brüste und Lippen mit Ihnen auszutauschen. Bei rein genitalem Kontakt zwischen Penis und Scheide strömt die Energie bei Mann und Frau nicht zum Herz und den höheren Zentren empor, so daß der Mann im Grunde gegen sich selbst handelt, wenn er die Frau für eine Art Masturbation gebraucht. Wenn er sich auf rein mechanische Sexualität einläßt, schneidet er den Strom seiner zu ihm zurückkehrenden Sexualenergie selbst ab. Es ist besser, mit Ihrer Liebespartnerin überhaupt nicht mehr zu schlafen, als «toten Sex» zu haben, denn durch die Enthaltsamkeit kann sich die Polarität zwischen den beiden Partnern wenigstens wieder aufbauen und ihnen vor Augen fuhren, wieviel gegenseitige Anziehung doch noch vorhanden ist.

Wenn Sie das Gefühl haben sollten, daß Sexualität zu etwas Langweiligem geworden ist, sollten Sie weniger häufig sexuell lieben. Betrachten Sie den Liebesakt eher wie ein Fest, das Sie nur dann feiern, wenn beide Partner sich kerngesund und voller Leidenschaft fühlen. Hören Sie damit auf, die Sexualität als Fluchtweg vor Ihrer Langeweile oder Ihrem Ärger zu benutzen oder sie gar dazu zu verwenden, Ihre geheime Angst vor dem Tod Ihrer Liebe zu kaschieren. Es kommt nicht auf die Quantität der Sexualität an, sondern auf die Qualität der Liebe!

15. Machen Sie sich nicht von sexuellen Phantasien abhängig, um erregt zu werden, Sich auf sexuelle Phantasien zu verlassen, wenn man erregt werden will, birgt die Gefahr, daß Sexualität zu einer reinen Kopfangelegenheit verkommt. Die Energien von Yin und Yang, welche Mann und Frau durchströmen, sind etwas höchst Reales und alles andere als eine Phantasie! Wenn Sie die Sexualität auf idealisierte Bilder aus dem Playboy oder Ihrer eigenen Vorstellungskraft reduzieren, wird es Ihnen sehr schwerfallen, den tiefen, intensiven ursprünglichen Energiestrom im eigenen Körper überhaupt noch wahrzunehmen. Wenn die Sexualität zu einem reinen Gedankenspiel geworden ist, kann sie die tiefsten Schichten Ihres Seins energetisch blockieren, weil sie nicht mehr im Hier und Jetzt des Körpers verankert ist, sondern irgendwo in der Zukunft. Wie kann man eine Frau, die man in den Armen hält, lieben, wenn man gleichzeitig damit beschäftigt ist, in Gedanken eine andere zu liebkosen? Ein solches Vorgehen betrügt beide Liebende um ihre Erfahrung.

Der Mann neigt in der Regel dazu, Vorgehenspläne in die Zukunft zu projizieren. Diese Vors tellungs gäbe stellt so lange eine Starke dar, wie sie auch zu realen, konstruktiven Erfolgen fuhrt. Eine gemeinsame Projektion spirituellen Willens kann sicher beide Liebende zu einer tieferen Erfüllung fuhren.

Sexuelle Phantasien werden jedoch zu einer negativen Projektion, zu einer Flucht aus der Gegenwart, zu etwas, was keine Frau aus Fleisch und Blut jemals bieten oder erfüllen kann. Und was noch schlimmer ist: Die Frau wird dadurch auf ein reines Phantasieobjekt reduziert. Leicht wird die Phantasie zu einer Entschuldigung, die wirkliche Frau in Ihrem Leben zu verlassen, um einer eingebildeten nachzulaufen. Die klassischen taoisti-schen Texte sprechen von «Gespenstern», die Männer im Schlaf aufsuchen und leidenschaftlich mit ihnen hebemachen. Solche Männer sind niemals glücklich und zufrieden mit ihrem Leben, unentwegt hetzen sie der Intensität im Traum hinterher und werden sich nie der Möglichkeit bewußt, daß sie eine weitaus erfullendere Liebe mit einer richtigen Frau, die einen Körper aus Fleisch und Blut und eine Seele besitzt, erreichen könnten, wenn sie ihre Energie nur darauf verwendeten, dies möglich zu machen.

Doch wie entzieht man sich dem mächtigen Sog sexueller Phantasien? Die Antwort ist einfach: indem man den eigenen Energiestrom durch gesunde körperliche Betätigung kultiviert, wie Sport, Yoga, Kampfsport und die Meditation des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs. Das Große Emporziehen ist ebenfalls sehr wirkungsvoll, wenn man es immer dann anwendet, sobald man sich dabei ertappt, wieder einmal einer Phantasie zum Opfer zu fallen. Wenn Sie die Energie jedesmal, wenn Sie eine Erektion oder eine sexuelle Phantasie kommen spüren, in den Scheitel lenken, werden Sie dieser Neigung schließlich auch Herr werden.

Es gibt noch eine andere Möglichkeit, die sexuellen Phantasien unter Kontrolle zu bringen, indem man sie nämlich auslebt, sobald sich die Gelegenheit bietet. Lassen Sie Ihr wildes erotisches Tun Wirklichkeit werden, oder jagen Sie hinter Frauen her, von denen Sie im Innersten doch wissen, daß sie nicht für Sie geschaffen sind - doch beobachten Sie sich sorgfältig, und fragen Sie sich, welcherart Befriedigung Ihnen dies wirklich verschafft. Häufig wird die Phantasie dadurch entschärft, weil das wirkliche Leben sich nur selten mit Ihren Träumen wird messen können. Der Taoist würde es so formulieren, daß Sie «diese Welt» nicht vollkommener machen können. Nur die schlichte Bewußtheit um die in Ihrem Leben wirksamen Kräfte kann Ihnen die tiefe, intensive Erfahrung schenken, daß die Welt tatsächlich vollkommen ist. „

16. Halten Sie mehrere Kissen bereit.

Weil das taoistische Lieben sich über recht lange Zeit erstrecken kann, ist es wichtig, genügend Kissen zur Verfügung zu haben, damit Ihre Partnerin während der ausgedehnten Ruhe- und Energieaustausch-Phasen nicht von Ihrem Gewicht erdrückt wird. Ein Männerbein kann sehr schwer werden und der Frau das Blut abschnüren. Wenn Sie nebeneinander, Seite an Seite, Hegen, werden Sie mindestens zwei Kissen benötigen.

15. KAPITEL

Übungen zur Steigerung der männlichen Potenz

In diesem Kapitel werden zahlreiche Übungen zur Steigerung der männlichen Potenz vorgestellt. Jede dieser Übungen richtet sich gezielt auf einen Einzelaspekt der männlichen Genitalien und Energie. Wählen Sie aus, was Ihnen gefällt oder was Ihren individuellen gesundheitlichen Bedürfnissen entspricht. Ist die sexuelle Vitalität erst einmal wiederhergestellt, sind es die Hauptübungen des Kapitels 6, also die Hodenatmung und die Kraftsperre, auf welche, zusammen mit der Aufnahme solarer Energie und Massage von Penis, Prostata und After, der Schwerpunkt gelegt werden sollte.

Die Heilung der Impotenz

Männer, die unter Impotenz leiden, müssen vor allem erst einmal für eine Weile alle sexuelle Betätigung aufgeben. Man könnte ihren Zustand mit einem Mann vergleichen, der kein Geld gespart, aber welches ansammeln will; wenn er etwas gespart hat, sollte er es nicht wieder sofort zum Fenster hinauswerfen! Ähnlich bei der Impotenz: Wenn Sie Ihre Potenz zurückgewinnen wollen, müssen Sie sich so lange der Sexualität enthalten, bis Ihr Körper wieder geheilt ist. Da helfen auch keine Hormone, Medikamente oder Reizdrogen - das wäre wie beim Bankrott, bei dem man borgt und borgt und borgt, bis einem niemand mehr Geld zu leihen bereit ist. Ähnlich würde man dadurch Raubbau an den Reserven der Lebensenergie betreiben. Bewahren Sie Ihren Samen, fuhren Sie die Übungen durch, und achten Sie auf eine vernünftige Ernährung, wobei Sie auch alle schlechten Angewohnheiten wie Rauchen, Alkohol und das Anschauen von Sexfilmen ablegen sollten - letztere entziehen Ihnen auch eine Menge Kraft, wenn Sie nur daran denken. Wenn Sie Sex haben, sollten Sie sich mit der Technik des «Schärfens der Waffe» darauf vorbereiten. Diese wird Ihnen nicht nur dazu verhelfen, Ihre Potenz zu halten, sondern auch die vorzeitige Ejakulation zu vermeiden.

Diese Methode, die erste, die hier behandelt werden soll, wird durchgeführt, während der Mann in einer Wanne mit heißem Wasser hegt. Dabei wird das Glied gerieben wie bei der Masturba-tion. Ist der Penis voll erigiert und erregt, umfassen Sie die Hoden mit beiden Händen und packen, drücken, ziehen und halten die Hoden mit großer Kraft. Das sollten Sie zahllose Male wiederholen (mindestens 100- bis 200mal). Am Anfang sollten Sie das Glied langsam, aber ausdauernd reiben. Mit dieser Methode wird die Sexualkraft des Mannes nach und nach gesteigert.

Die Methode funktioniert nach folgendem Prinzip: Durch das Liegen unter Wasser wird der Wasserdruck durch zusätzliches Packen, Ziehen und Quetschen der Hoden gesteigert, und dadurch werden Hormonausstoß und Samenproduktion angeregt. Nach einer Weile der Übung wird sich die Potenz sehr deutlich erhöhen. Doch sollte man während der Übung um jeden Preis die Ejakulation vermeiden, weil man dadurch sonst alles wieder zunichte macht.

Das Vermeiden von feuchten Träumen

Für feuchte Träume gibt es verschiedene Ursachen: tägliche sexuelle Reizung, reichliches Essen oder Nahrungsaufnahme zu sehr später Stunde, aber auch eine zu warme Decke oder zu enge Unterwäsche können sie herbeifuhren. Wenn man zuviel Wasser trinkt, wodurch die Blase auf die Prostata drückt, können ebenfalls feuchte Träume erzeugt werden.

Beim durchschnittlichen Erwachsenen gilt ein feuchter Traum im Monat als völlig normal. Doch gibt es auch Männer, die 4- oder sogar 8mal im Monat ihren Samen verlieren, weil sie entweder zu geschwächt sind, zuviel Sex haben oder masturbie-ren. Wenn viel Sperma vorhanden ist und noch stimuliert wurde, erfolgt ein Samenerguß. Auch Infektionen der Prostata oder Geschlechtskrankheiten können die Genitalien schädigen und bewirken, daß es besonders leicht zur Ejakulation kommt.

Noch schlimmer ist es natürlich, wenn man noch häufiger feuchte Träume hat, vielleicht sogar einen pro Nacht. Es gibt sogar Männer, die während des Mittagsschlafs solche Träume bekommen. Ihr Gesicht ist meist sehr fahl, ihre Augen wirken matt, ihr Körper unbeholfen und schlecht kontrolliert, sie leiden unter Gedächtnisstörungen und leben ständig auf einem sehr niedrigen Energiepegel. Doch schon nach wenigen Wochen Praxis mit der hier vorgestellten Übung werden sie wieder an Kraft gewinnen.

Als erstes müssen Sie versuchen, das Leck zu beseitigen, denn je schwächer der Körper ist, um so mehr Samen wird er auch verlieren. Vorrang hat das Verschließen oder Versiegeln des undichten Penis. Diese Praktik nennt man das «Versiegeln des Undichten Tors». Wenn Sie diese Methode gewissenhaft üben, können Sie das Leck schon binnen einer einzigen Woche abdichten. Die hier vorgestellte Technik wurde mit großem Erfolg von Männern getestet, die ernsthaft unter feuchten Träumen litten.

Bei dieser Methode gibt es grundsätzlich zwei mögliche Körperhaltungen. Die erste ist das flache Liegen auf dem Rücken, bei dem man sich geistig darauf konzentriert, Wärme in den Hui-Yin und die Hoden strömen zu lassen. Tun Sie dies etwa zehn Minuten lang. Danach fuhren Sie das Große Emporziehen durch, wobei Sie die Zähne zusammenbeißen und die Fäuste anspannen, die Zunge gegen den Gaumen drücken und Fußmuskeln und Gesäßbacken spannen. Ziehen Sie die Energie vom Hui-Yin, den Hoden und dem Penis ein, und halten Sie dabei die Luft an, und zwar zunächst ein bis zwei Minuten lang, was Sie im Laufe der Zeit nach und nach auf fünf Minuten erhöhen sollten.

Wiederholen Sie dies 5mal am Tag 36 Male, also insgesamt ISOmal am Tag. Sie können sich aber auch mit geradem Rückgrat hinsetzen und 10 bis 15 Minuten auf den Bereich des Hui-Yin meditieren, um nach und nach die Zähne zusammenzubeißen sowie Fäuste, Fußmuskeln und Gesäßbacken anzuspan-nen. Dann fuhren Sie ebenfalls das Große Emporziehen 36mal durch, und zwar 5mal täglich für die Dauer von mindestens zwei Wochen bis einen Monat.

Bei der zweiten Stellung liegen Sie flach auf dem Bett und reiben sich die Hände, bis sie heiß geworden sind. Legen Sie die rechte Hand unter den Kopf und die linke unter die Hoden. Dann ziehen Sie den Perus hoch und pressen mit der Handfläche die Hoden in ihrer Gänze, während Sie mit geistiger Kraft die Energie die „Wirbelsäule empor hinauf in den Kopf und von der linken in die rechte Hand leiten. Spannen Sie die Fußmuskeln an, beißen Sie die Zähne aufeinander, und wiederholen Sie dieses Große Emporziehen 5mal am Tag je 24mal.

Es gibt noch eine dritte Methode, bei der Sie mit geradem Rücken auf dem Boden sitzen und den linken Fuß auf den rechten legen. Reiben Sie nun den ganzen Fuß, besonders den Yung-Chuan 36mal. Wechseln Sie dann die Beine, und wiederholen Sie die Prozedur, wobei Sie die Kraft in die Füße hinableiten und später wieder zum Kopf emporziehen.

Die erste Methode ist die effektivste, besonders für Menschen, die bereits Meditationserfahrung haben und die Kraft stufenweise in den Kopf emporleiten können. Doch auch für Menschen ohne Meditationserfahrung hat sie sich als die wirkungsvollste herausgestellt. Zwar verlangt sie nach etwas mehr Übung als die anderen, doch dafür bringt sie auch gute Ergebnisse hervor. Die zweite Methode ist nur für Männer geeignet, die keine Meditationserfahrung haben und ihren Geist nicht besonders gut beherrschen können. Die dritte Methode ist für jeden Zustand oder Zeitpunkt geeignet, da das Reiben der Füße für die gesamte Gesundheit sehr förderlich ist.

Noch einmal mochte ich daraufhinweisen, daß diese Methoden früher streng geheimgehalten wurden. Viele Bücher sprechen zwar über dieses Thema, schildern aber nie, wie das Ganze zu geschehen habe. Obwohl die Methode selbst sehr einfach ist, ist sie äußerst wirkungsvoll, wie sich schon oft bei vielen Männern herausgestellt hat.

Das Erhitzen des Ofens

Die nächste Methode zur Steigerung der männlichen Potenz ist eine Variante der Hirsch-Übung, die man das «Erhitzen des Goldenen Ofens» nennt. Dazu sollte man entweder in leichter Hockstellung wie beim Reiten stehen oder sich auf eine Stuhlkante setzen, so daß der Hodensack frei herabhängt. Man kann die Übung allerdings auch auf der rechten Seite hegend durchführen, wobei das rechte Bein gestreckt und das Unke im Knie angewinkelt wird, damit die Hoden frei herabhängen. Der linke

Abbildung 35

Halten Sie mit einer Hand den Hodensack, mit der ändern reiben Sie den Tiegel.
Dadurch werden Hormon- und Samenproduktion angeregt, um Impotenz zu beheben.

Arm kann dann auf einem Kissen ruhen, während die Rechte den Kopf abstützt und Daumen und Finger das Ohr umfassen.

Bevor Sie die Übung durchführen, reiben Sie die Handflächen gegeneinander, bis beide heiß geworden sind. Mit einer Hand umfassen Sie den Hodensack, mit der anderen reiben Sie den Unterleib (Unterer Tan-Tien), linksherum und rechtsherum, mindestens 100- bis 300mal. Dabei atmen Sie ein und kontrahieren die Muskehl von After, Perineum und Gesäßbacken. Halten Sie so lange die Luft bei gespannten Muskeln an, wie Sie nur, können. Versuchen Sie, die dadurch erzeugte Energie die Wirbelsäule empor ins Gehirn zu lenken, um sie dann vorne am Körper wieder zum Nabel zurückzufuhren. Nach einer Weile können Sie die Hände wechseln und mit der anderen reiben. Sollten Sie die Übung im Liegen durchgeführt haben, legen Sie sich dazu nun auf die andere Seite.

Die Massage des Unteren Tan-Tien

Diese Übung stellt eine Variante des Erhitzens des Ofens dar und wird schlicht als «Massage des Felds der Kügelchen» bezeichnet. Dazu werden die Handflächen kräftig gegeneinander gerieben, bis sie heiß geworden sind, um dann eine Hand fest gegen den rechten Oberschenkel in Leistenhöhe und die andere Hand fest an den Tan-Tien zu drücken. Dann massiert man mit der einen Hand vom rechten Oberschenkel zum linken, danach mit der anderen den Bereich des Tan-Tien. Die Hände sollten die Genitalien nicht berühren. Reiben Sie jede Stelle in der beschriebenen Reihenfolge insgesamt 36mal. Wenn Sie den Bereich des Tan-Tien reiben, sollte die kraftvolle Massage den Penis steif werden und sich bewegen lassen. Dies ist ein Zeichen dafür, daß die Energie den Penis- und Scrotumbereich erreicht hat. Mit dieser Technik läßt sich sowohl Impotenz heilen als auch die männliche Energie steigern. Darüber hinaus wird dadurch die Prostata indirekt stimuliert und die Samenproduktion gesteigert.

Das Harmonisieren der Sehnen, des Marks und der Knochen

Für diese Übung setzen Sie sich mit nach vorne ausgestreckten Beinen auf eine Matte, ein Bett o.a., wobei die Hände entspannt auf den Knien liegen. Beim Einatmen heben Sie die Arme seitlich, ballen die Hände zu Fäusten, während die Handflächen nach oben zeigen und die Ellenbogen an Ihre Seiten gebeugt sind. Ziehen Sie Genitalien und After ein, und pressen Sie die Gesäßbacken fest gegeneinander. Die Beine werden gerade ausgestreckt, während die Zehen sich zurückbeugen und auf den Körper zeigen. Zur gleichen Zeit drücken Sie die Arme hoch. Drehen Sie die Handgelenke, so daß die Handflächen weiterhin nach oben zeigen, und drehen Sie die Augen nach oben, urn die Handrücken anstarren zu können. Atmen Sie in den Tan-Tien ein, und behalten Sie diese Stellung so lange bei, wie es Ihnen angenehm ist, wobei Sie die Energie auf den Bereich ca. 2,5 — 5 cm unterhalb des Bauchnabels konzentrieren.

Beim Ausatmen beugen Sie sich aus der Hüfte vor, um Ihre Zehen (oder die Knie) zu berühren. Kehren Sie beim Einatmen wieder in die sitzende Haltung zurück, und entspannen Sie sich. Atmen Sie einmal durch, und wiederholen Sie die Übung. Fangen Sie mit 10 Wiederholungen an, und erhöhen Sie diese Zahl auf 36 oder 100. Diese Übung können Sie morgens nach dem Aufstehen und abends vor dem Zubettgehen durchführen.

Die geheime taoistische Methode des richtigen Urinierens

Eine weitere Übung zur Stärkung der Nieren besteht darin, sich beim Urinieren auf die Zehenspitzen zu stellen. Denn wenn man die eigene sexuelle Leistungsfähigkeit erhöhen will, ist es von großer Wichtigkeit, auch die Nieren zu stärken. Diese Übung hilft bei der Behebung von Impotenz und verhindert die vorzeitige Ejakulation, weil sie die Nieren kräftigt, sofern sie über einen längeren Zeitraum praktiziert wird. Die eigentliche Technik ist sehr einfach: Stellen Sie sich beim Urinieren lediglich auf die Zehenspitzen, und halten Sie dabei Rücken und Hüfte gerade. Beißen Sie die Zähne zusammen, pressen Sie die Gesäßbacken fest gegeneinander, und halten Sie den Druck im Unterleib aufrecht, indem Sie den Urin beim langsamen Ausatmen kraftvoll ausstoßen. Dadurch wird die Nierenenergie gesteigert und angeregt.

Impotenz und verminderte sexuelle Leistungskraft gehen meist mit Symptomen geschwächter Nierenenergie einher; dazu zählen unter anderem Mattigkeit, Trägheit und mangelnde Willenskraft bei der Durchsetzung persönlicher Ziele. Die sexuelle Kraft läßt sich leicht überprüfen, indem man die Stärke des Harnstrahls betrachtet. Wenn der Urin sehr stark strömt, ist die Sexualkraft gut. Ist er dagegen schwach und kraftlos und wird er zum Schluß nur zu einem dünnen Rinnsal, so ist die sexuelle Kraft geschwächt.

Man kann die Nieren und damit die sexuelle Kraft auch durch eine andere einfache Methode stärken, indem man sich auf einen Hocker oder Stuhl ohne Rückenlehne setzt oder einfach auf den Boden. Beugen Sie die Knie, und legen Sie die Hände darauf. Schaukeln Sie nach hinten, bis Sie einen Winkel von 45 Grad erreicht haben, und schaukeln Sie dann wieder in die Ausgangsposition zurück. Wiederholen Sie dies so oft Sie können, und fuhren Sie die gesamte Übung mindestens zehnmal am Tag durch. Diese Übung belastet die Unterleibs muskulatur und kräftigt sie. Ein kräftiger Unterleib aber ist ebenfalls ein Indikator für große sexuelle Leistungskraft.

Sechs Übungen für Nieren und Rücken

Es folgen nun eine Reihe von Übungen, die die Muskeln des Unterleibs, des unteren Rückens und des Hüftbereichs trainieren. Ein kräftiger Rücken und ein starker Unterleib sind ein Zeichen für große sexuelle Leistungskraft, und sie verhindern sowohl das vorzeitige Ejakulieren als auch Hexenschuß, Kreuzschmerzen und Beschwerden aller Art im Urogenitalbereich.

Darüber hinaus dienen diese Übungen auch dazu, die Nierenenergie zu verstärken.

Übung l

Legen Sie sich mit dem Rücken auf eine Matte oder auf den Boden, und heben Sie beide ausgestreckten Beine in einem Winkel von 80-90 Grad vom Boden in die Höhe. Senken Sie die Beine langsam zur Linken, bis sie einen Winkel von 45 Grad zum Boden bilden. Dann bringen Sie sie in die Ausgangsposition zurück, fuhren sie langsam nach rechts, bis sie wieder einen Winkel von 45 Grad zum Boden bilden, und kehren erneut zurück. Diese Übung fuhren Sie pro Sitzung mindestens 10 bis 12mal hintereinander durch.

Übung 2

Legen Sie sich flach auf den Rücken. Heben Sie beide Beine, bis sie einen Winkel von 45 Grad zum Boden bilden. Dann schlagen Sie jedes Bein über das andere, und zwar 3-4mal. Wiederholen Sie diese Übung 10-12mal.

Übung 3

Legen Sie sich auf den Rücken. Dann legen Sie die Hände auf die Hüften und heben den Oberkörper, bis er einen Winkel von 45 Grad zum Boden bildet. Halten Sie diese Stellung so lange Sie können, dann senken Sie den Oberkörper wieder. Wiederholen Sie diese Übung 10-12mal oder noch Öfter, wenn Sie wollen.

Übung 4

Legen Sie sich auf eine Matte auf den Bauch, wobei Sie beide Arme in den Ellenbogen beugen und die Hände neben die Ohren halten, um dann den Oberkörper vom Boden zu heben. Halten Sie diese Stellung, so lange Sie können, dann senken Sie den Oberkörper wieder. Wiederholen Sie diese Übung lOmal.

Übung 5

Auf dem Bauch liegend ergreifen Sie mit beiden Händen Ihr Gesäß. Heben Sie nun Ober- und Unterkörper gleichzeitig, so daß Sie den Boden nur noch mit dem Unterleib berühren. Halten Sie diese Stellung so lang wie möglich. Dann senken Sie Ober- und Unterkörper wieder und wiederholen die Übung 10-mal.

Übung 6

Auf dem Rücken Hegend heben Sie abwechselnd jeweils ein Bein und halten es so lange oben, wie Sie können. Üben Sie mit jedem Bein lOmal.

Diese Übungen sollten täglich durchgeführt werden, am besten früh am Morgen.

Die folgende Übung stammt aus dem Pa Tuan Chin (Chinesische Gesundheitsgymnastik), und auch sie ist sehr gut für die Nieren. Stehen Sie aufrecht, die Füße in Schulterbreite auseinander, die Hände an den Seiten, die Zunge an den Gaumen gedrückt. Atmen Sie ein, beugen Sie sich aus der Hüfte nach vom, und atmen Sie dabei aus, während Sie nach Möglichkeit die Handflächen auf den Boden legen. Beim Einatmen richten Sie sich wieder auf, führen die Hände mit gestreckten Armen über den Kopf und stellen sich auf die Zehenspitzen, um sich so weit emporzurecken, wie Sie nur können. Ausatmend nehmen Sie wieder die normale Stehhaltung ein und legen gleichzeitig dabei die Fäuste auf die Nieren, hinten unter den Rippen, und entspannen beide Seiten. Dann atmen Sie ein, während Sie die Fäuste in die Nieren pressen und sich so weit wie möglich zurückbeugen. Dann kehren Sie ausatmend in die Ausgangsstellung zurück und wiederholen die ganze Übung lOmal.

Vergrößerung und Verlängerung des Penis

Atmen Sie durch die Nase in den Rachenraum, und schlucken Sie die Luft hinunter in den Magen. Belassen Sie sie nicht im Brustbereich. Nun wird die Luft, die Sie vielleicht auch als Energie wahrnehmen, als Kugel imaginiert, die vorne durch den Körper hinabgerollt wird. Ist die Luft zuunterst im Unterleib angelangt, pressen Sie sie in den Penis. Diese Übung zur Vergrößerung des Penis unterscheidet sich von der Scrotum-Kom-pression. Bei letzterer wird die Luft nicht ins Glied selbst, sondern in den Hodensack gepreßt.

Während Sie die Luft in den Penis leiten, drücken Sie mit den drei mittleren Fingern der linken Hand den Hui-Yin, der sich in der Mitte zwischen After und Hodensack befindet. Dieser Druck hindert die Luftenergie daran, wieder in den Körper zurückzuströmen. Statt dessen gelangt sie in den Penis.

Atmen Sie wieder ganz normal, während die Finger der Linken nach wie vor den Punkt Hui-Yin pressen. Gleichzeitig beginnen Sie damit, den Penis zu bewegen. Ziehen Sie ihn vor und zurück, indem Sie ihn mit geschmeidigen, rhythmischen Bewegungen 36mal strecken. Dann reiben Sie mit dem Daumen die Eichel, was den Penis zur Erektion bringen sollte. Kommt es jedoch zu keiner solchen Erektion, ziehen und reiben Sie die Eichel so lange, bis das Glied aufrecht steht.

Nun drehen Sie den Penis mit der Rechten fest an seiner „Wurzel und gleiten damit etwa zweieinhalb Zentimeter vor, wobei Sie Ihren Griff jedoch nicht lockern. Auf diese Weise wird die Luftenergie im Glied selbst eingeschlossen und in die Spitze des Penis gedrückt. Spüren Sie, wie der Druck sich auf die Spitze zu ausbreitet, und halten Sie ihn auch aufrecht, doch forcieren Sie dies nicht.

Jetzt wird der Penis nach rechts gezogen und mit einer kreisenden Bewegung 36mal im und gegen den Uhrzeigersinn gedreht. Dann ziehen Sie ihn nach links und lassen ihn weitere 36mal sowohl im als auch gegen den Uhrzeigersinn rotieren. Gleichzeitig erhalten Sie den nach außen strebenden Druck der Luft aufrecht.

Diese Übung massiert den gesamten urogenitalen Trakt einschließlich des Penis, der Vorsteherdrüse (Prostata), der Venen, Arterien und der sie umgebenden Nerven; Blase und Nieren werden ebenfalls auf heilsame Weise angeregt. Die Energie zahlreicher Körperorgane fließt in den Penis, so daß ihr Tonus und ihre Funktionsfähigkeit durch diese Praktik sehr verstärkt werden.

Schließlich schlagen Sie 36mal mit dem erigierten Penis gegen den inneren rechten Oberschenkel, während Sie immer noch die Luftsperre aufrechterhalten. Dann wiederholen Sie diesen Vorgang mit dem linken Oberschenkel.

Nach dieser Penis gymnastik tauchen Sie das Glied eine Minute lang in warmes Wasser. Dadurch wird es die warme Yang-Energie leichter aufnehmen und sich vergrößern. Damit ist die Massage dieses Organs beendet, was nach ein oder zwei Monaten Übung zu einem Wachstum von gut zweieinhalb Zentimetern fuhren dürfte. Je nach individuellem Körperbau lassen sich noch weitere Wachstumserfolge erzielen.

Die Minderung der Empfindlichkeit des Penis

Seit Tausenden von Jahren haben Männer nach Methoden gesucht, die die Empfindlichkeit des männlichen Glieds herabsetzen, um damit die vorzeitige Ejakulation zu verhindern. Ich ziehe zwar die Methode des Sexual-Kung Fu den nun geschilderten vor, doch da ich niemanden davon abhalten will, es auch einmal mit anderen Techniken zu versuchen, sofern die entsprechenden Vorsichtsmaßregeln befolgt werden, stelle ich hier auch fremde Praktiken vor. (Siehe auch die Ausführungen über das Schärfen der eigenen Waffe und die Heilung der Impotenz.)

Manche Männer haben es damit versucht, rauhen, kratzigen Stoff in ihren Unterhosen zu tragen, weil dieser gegen das Glied scheuert und seine nervöse Sensitivität nach und nach mindert. Viele Ratgeber empfahlen auch, mit dem Glied täglich in Sand oder Reissäcke zu stoßen. Doch birgt dies die Gefahr, daß dabei Sand in Ihren Körper gelangt, was zu Reizungen und Infektio-nen fuhren kann, während Reis in das Glied schneiden und es wundscheuern kann.

Diese Methoden mögen dem männlichen Glied zwar ein wenig zusätzliche Reizung bescheren, doch sind sie primitiv, schmerzhaft und gefährlich. Sie berücksichtigen vor allem nicht den wichtigsten Punkt von allen: Der nackte Penis ist absolut vollkommen, wenn er im Einklang mit den ihn bestimmenden Gesetzen, mit strengem Training und der unbesiegbaren Kraft der Liebe eingesetzt wird.

Die Stärkung der Erektion

Diese Methode hilft dabei, eine kräftigere, gesündere, mehr Energie enthaltende Erektion zu erreichen. Legen Sie den Daumen oben an die Penisspitze und den Zeigefinger unten an die Wurzel des Glieds. Atmen Sie ein, halten Sie die Luft an, und drücken und pressen Sie den Stiel des Glieds in einer wellenartigen Bewegung auf die Penisspitze zu. Daumen, Zeige- und kleiner Finger drücken das Glied so, daß das Blut in die Spitze gepreßt wird. Halten Sie diesen Griff so lange, wie Sie auch die Luft anhalten können. Wiederholen Sie das ganze 9 Mal. Das treibt das Blut in den Penis, ohne daß es wieder entweicht. Während Sie die Luft anhalten, zählen Sie bis neun. Drücken Sie bei jeder Zahl den Penis, und nähern Sie sich der Eichel. Diese Technik kräftigt den Penis und stärkt dadurch den ganzen Körper.

Die Reflexzonenmassage des Penis

Auch am Penis läßt sich eine gesunde Reflexzonenmassage durchführen wie an Händen, Füßen und Ohren. So wie sich eine Entsprechung der inneren Organe auf den Fußsohlen wiederfindet, lassen sich die gleichen Muster auch am Stiel und an der Eichel des Penis nachweisen.

Diese Massage ist gleichzeitig sehr angenehm und gesund.

Das läßt sich auch daran beobachten, wie sich freudige Empfindungen durch den ganzen Körper ausbreiten, wenn der Penis gerieben wird. Die hier behandelte Massage besteht aus zwei Teilen:

Abbildung 36

DIE REFLEXZONEN DES PENIS

Bestimmte Zonen des Penis stehen mit bestimmten Organen in Verbindung.

a) Die Punktmassage mit Daumen und Fingern, beginnend an der „Wurzel und weiterführend entlang des gesamten Stiels, und zwar in beide Richtungen; dabei werden oben und unten am Stiel Kreisbewegungen bis zur Spitze und wieder zurück zur Wurzel durchgeführt.

b) «Das Reiben des Schildkrötenkopfs»: Hierbei wird die Eichel des Penis massiert, wobei Zeige- und Mittelfinger die Eichel ergreifen und der Daumen die Spitze massiert, während die Eichel sanft gepreßt wird. Wiederholen Sie diese Massagen 100-300mal in beide Richtungen. Das wirkt sich auf die Prostata aus, indem es sie energetisiert und das sexuelle Potential steigert. Mit täglichem Üben läßt sich Prostatakrebs verhindern.

Zur Beachtung: Vermeiden Sie bei dieser Übung die Ejakulation. Wenn Sie das Gefühl haben, allzusehr erregt zu werden, führen Sie entweder das Große Emporziehen durch oder verlangsamen Sie einen Augenblick das Tempo.

Die Indische Seil-Brennmassage

Bei dieser Massage reibt man die Handflächen kräftig gegeneinander, bis sie heiß geworden sind.

Halten Sie den Penis mit einer Hand hoch, während Sie die Peniswurzel mit Daumen und Zeigefinger der anderen Hand fest umschließen.

Führen Sie die Indische Seil-Brenntechnik-Drehbewegung 9-bis 36mal vor und zurück durch. Das regt die Nieren an.

Wenn Sie die gleiche Übung am mittleren Stiel des Glieds anwenden, stimuliert dies das Verdauungssystem.

Unterhalb der Eichel massieren Sie dagegen die Reflexzonen des Herzens, der Lungen und des Atmungsapparats, was diese Organe anregt.

Vier Methoden zur Erhöhung des Samenzellengehalts im Sperma

1. Hodengriff und Druckmassage

Diese Übung regt die Samenzellen- und Hormonproduktion an. Reiben Sie die Handflächen gegeneinander, bis die Hände richtig heiß geworden sind. Halten Sie das Glied mit einer Hand hoch, während Sie mit der anderen die Hoden greifen und sanft pressen. Pressen Sie sie nach und nach immer kräftiger, und zwar mit kurzen, betonten Griffen, während Sie gleichzeitig an ihnen ziehen. Führen Sie dies mindestens lOOmal durch, bevor Sie die Hände wechseln und das gleiche von der anderen Seite aus durchführen.

2. Die Hodenrassel

Wie die obige Übung regt auch diese Technik die Samen- und Hormonproduktion an. Reiben Sie sich die Hände heiß, dann halten Sie mit einer Hand den Penis hoch. Die andere Hand legen Sie schalenformig um die Hoden und schütteln sie erst sanft, dann immer kräftiger. Schütteln Sie die Hoden mindestens 3 bis 5 Minuten, bis Sie die Hände wechseln und den Vorgang wiederholen.

3. Das Hodenklopfen

Wieder reiben Sie die Hände, bis sie heiß sind. Dann halten Sie den Penis mit einer Hand empor, während sie mit der anderen die Hoden sanft tätscheln und klopfen, wobei Sie die Intensität allmählich steigern. Führen Sie dies mindestens 3 bis 5 Minuten durch, dann wechseln Sie die Hände und wiederholen das Ganze. Klopfen Sie auch die Peniswurzel am Perineum.

4. Hoden-Punktmassage

Reiben Sie die Hände, bis sie heiß sind. Halten Sie den Penis mit einer Hand hoch, während Sie die Hoden mit dem Daumen der anderen kreisförmig in beide Richtungen massieren, und zwar 3 bis 5 Minuten lang (mindestens 100 - 300mal). Dann wechseln Sie die Hände und wiederholen das Ganze in beide Richtungen 100 - 300mal. Sie können die Hoden aber auch mit Fingern und Daumen stützen und mit dem Handballen massieren.

Alle diese Übungen steigern die sexuelle Leistungskraft; und die Hormonproduktion, stimulieren die Ching-Energie und die Prostata und erhöhen die Kraft im Penis und in den unteren Energiezentren. Nach diesen Übungen sollten Sie Samen-Kung Fu praktizieren, um die Sexualenergie in die höheren Zentren zu leiten. Vergeuden Sie die Energie durch Ejakulation, erreichen Sie das genaue Gegenteil dessen, was Sie damit eigentlich bezwecken.

Die Prostata-Massage

Abgesehen von der «Massage des Schildkrötenkopfs» gibt es auch eine Technik, mit der man die Prostata oder Vorsteherdrüse direkt massieren kann. Dazu wird ein Finger in den After gesteckt, wofür man den Zeigefinger, einen Handschuh und zum Schmieren etwas Speichel, Vaseline oder Massageöl verwendet. Stoßen und massieren Sie sanft die Prostata. Sie können den Finger auch am Schließmuskel hinein- und hinausschieben und den Rhythmus variieren, um sie optimal zu stimulieren. Oder Sie können den Schließmuskel zürn Vibrieren bringen, denn dadurch werden zahlreiche örtliche Nerven zusammen mit der Prostata stimuliert. Ebenso können Sie den Punkt Hui-Yin im Perineum pressen. Wenn Sie diesen Punkt mehrere hundert Male hin und her reiben, regt das die Vorsteherdrüse ebenfalls an.

Eine weitere Möglichkeit der Stimulierung der Prostata besteht darin, Einzelpunkte um den After herum zu pressen. Waschen Sie dazu den After zunächst mit milder Seife beim Duschen oder Baden sehr sauber. Dann drücken und reiben Sie den Bereich um den Schließmuskel. Dadurch wircf nicht nur die Prostata angeregt, sondern auch alle höheren endokrinen Drü-sen einschließlich der Hirnanhang- und der Zirbeldrüse. Das ist auch die beste Methode, um den Blutkreislauf aufrechtzuhalten, zu harmonisieren und zu beleben.

Das Pressen der Afterpumpe

Atmen Sie durch die Nase ein, und halten Sie die Luft an, während Sie mit dem Afterschließmuskel pumpen und ihn hochziehen. Mit anderen Worten: Sie pressen den After ganz so, als wollten Sie Stuhl zurückhalten. Das stimuliert die Prostata. Diese Methode ist sehr einfach und wirkungsvoll und läßt sich jederzeit und überall anwenden. Wichtig ist dabei, daß Sie den Schließmuskel so fest zusammenziehen wie nur möglich, denn erst dann erzielen Sie das Optimum an Wirksamkeit. Atmen Sie langsam aus, und entspannen Sie sich wieder. Dies ist auch ein sehr einfaches Mittel, um Streß und Verspannungen zu lindern, die sexuelle Kraft zu steigern und den Körper zu energetisieren.

Nach einer Weile werden Sie Wärme im Lenden- und Afterbereich spüren. Diese Wärme kann sich über den Rücken ausbreiten bis empor zum Kopf, um dann von oben wieder zum Solarplexus und in den Nabelbereich hinabzuströmen. Durch ständiges Anspannen der Analmuskulatur werden Prostata und Cowper' Drüse belebt, das Blut strömt kräftiger im Körper, der Penis wird gestärkt, und man erzielt Kontrolle über die Ejakula-tion. Nachdem Sie diese Übung eine Weile praktiziert haben, können Sie die Kraft Ihres Rektums prüfen, indem Sie versuchen, in einer Wanne mit sauberem lauwarmem Wasser durch Zusammenziehen des Afters Wasser aufzusaugen.

Es heißt, daß der letzte Akt vor dem Tod die Entleerung ist und daß ein schlaffer Schließmuskel auf eine geschwächte Gesundheit hinweist. Wenn Sie diese Technik regelmäßig anwenden, wird Ihr Schließmuskel nie erschlaffen. Eine kräftige, gesunde Prostata ist einer der Schlüssel zu einem langen, gesunden Leben.

Drücken und reiben Sie sich also selbst, um zu Gesundheit und Glück zu gelangen!

Zungen-Kung Fu

Das wohl wichtigste strategische Mittel für den Liebesakt ist die Zunge. Lernen Sie, mit dieser erotischen Waffe par excellence möglichst geschickt zu manövrieren! Sie besitzt geradezu wunderbare Fähigkeiten der sinnlichen Stimulierung und kann ganz allein manch brillanten Liebesfeldzug bestreiten. Den Umgang mit dieser Waffe meistern Sie durch die Praxis des Zungen-Kung Fu.

Die Zunge vereinigt in sich mehr Vorzüge für das Liebesspiel als jedes andere Organ: Sie ist warm und feucht und ihre feilengleiche Rauhheit bricht jeden Widerstand. Abgesehen von dieser vollkommenen Beschaffenheit und Eignung für die erotische Erregung kann sie auch ihre Größe und Form verändern. Sie huscht schnell, kräftig und mit schier unerschöpflicher Bewegungsvielfalt umher.

Die «Descartessche Illusion» beweist die gewaltige Sensibilität der Zunge. Descartes beobachtete, daß eine stecknadelkopf-große Höhlung darin der Zungenwahrnehmung so groß wie ein Streichholzkopf erscheint, so gewaltig ist die einzigartige Fähigkeit dieses Organs, taktile Reize zu verstärken. Doch was noch wichtiger ist: Die Zunge ist das Hauptmittel, mit dem Sie vor dem eigentlichen Liebesakt Chi in Ihren Partner leiten können. Das liegt daran, daß die Zunge der Hauptschalter für den Chi-Strom im Kleinen Energiekreislauf ist. Wann immer Sie Ihre Partnerin intensiv küssen oder sie lecken, strömt Ihre Lebensenergie in sie hinein und ihre wiederum in Sie. Eine Zunge voll Kraft ist wie ein Zauberstab, der Glückseligkeit über alles ausbreitet, was er berührt und den Funken schlägt, der die beiden Lebenskräfte miteinander verbindet.

Es folgen nun die wichtigsten Übungen des Zungen-Kung Fu.

A. Die Schlangenzunge

Ziehen Sie einen Faden durch einen Apfel, und sichern Sie das eine Ende mit einem etwa 2 cm langen Stück von einem Zahnstocher. Dann hängen Sie den Apfel in Mundhöhe vor sich auf. Als nächstes stoßen Sie mit der Zunge wie eine Viper nach der Frucht. Lassen Sie die Zunge gerade hervorschnellen, sie sollte dabei sehr fest und spitz sein. Schießen Sie mit ihr in gerader Linie vor, und erhöhen Sie die Geschwindigkeit des Züngeins, wenn Sie mit der Übung etwas vertrauter geworden sind. Diese Schlangenbewegung ist sehr nützlich, um Brüste, Genitalien und Ohren zu stimulieren. Die Ohren sind ganz besonders sensibel, da jedes von ihnen Dutzende von Akupunk-ten aufweist, die mit dem gesamten Körper in Verbindung stehen. Diese werden aktiviert, wenn das Chi bei der Berührung durch die Zunge fließt.

B. Die Hakenzunge

Wiederum verwenden Sie den hängenden Apfel. Sie strecken die Zunge so weit heraus nach unten auf das Kinn wie nur möglich. Krümmen Sie die Spitze, so daß sie nach vorne zeigt. Dann versuchen Sie, den Apfel damit zu umhaken, während sie mit der Zunge an ihrer Seite emporfahren. Diese Bewegung wirkt besonders auf die Genitalien erregend: Wenn Sie so den G-Punkt Ihrer Partnerin berühren, kann dies bewirken, daß sie ihr «Mondelixir» ausstößt, das weibliche Ejakulat, dem die Taoi-sten eine mächtige Yin-Essenz zuschreiben.

C. Die Zungenpeitsche

Vor dem herabhängenden Apfel strecken Sie die Zunge sehr weit heraus und ziehen sie so weit nach links, wie es Ihnen möglich ist. Dann lassen Sie sie nach rechts schnellen und peitschen dabei den Apfel mit der steifen Zungenkante. Nun verfahren Sie auf gleiche Weise in umgekehrter Richtung, also von rechts nach links peitschend. Peitschen Sie den Apfel immer schneller und kräftiger von Seite zu Seite. Bringen Sie diese Technik auch Ihrer Liebespartnerin bei, dann kann sie sie dazu einsetzen, um den «Jadestengel», wie die Chinesen das Glied nennen, anzuregen. Außerdem wird diese Übung Ihre Zungenfertigkeit erhöhen - sehr zum Entzücken Ihrer Partnerin!

Mit etwas Übung sollte es Ihnen gelingen, den Apfel zu «dribbeln»: Fangen Sie ihn mit der Zungenspitze auf, mit Zungenkante und Zungenfläche, und halten Sie ihn mit blitzschnellen Bewegungen im Gleichgewicht. Arbeiten Sie einen Monat lang mit einem Apfel. Im zweiten Monat fuhren Sie die gleiche Übung mit einer Pampelmuse durch. Im dritten Monat verwenden Sie dann ein hängendes Einmachglas, das sie mit kleinen Stahlkugeln oder Nägeln füllen, wobei Sie zunächst eine Füllung von etwa einem Pfund Gewicht benutzen, bis Sie schließlich mit einem ganzen Pfund Ballast arbeiten können. Je weiter Sie vorankommen, um so größere Gefäße können Sie verwenden.

Vor und nach der Übung sollten Sie die Zitrusfrüchte stets waschen. Bewahren Sie sie in einer Plastikverpackung im Kühlschrank auf, dann können Sie mit einer einzigen Frucht wochenlang üben und vermeiden gleichzeitig mögliche Infektionen. Von größter Wichtigkeit ist es auch, daß der Mund sauber und frei von unangenehmen Gerüchen ist. Schon Casanova äußerte sich über die abstoßende Wirkung von Mundgeruch. Zungen-Kung Fu wird die Produktion von frischem, reinem Speichel anregen, den Sie mit einem großen Schluck in den Nabel hinabziehen sollten. Der Taoist ist der Auffassung, daß Speichel ein sehr kraftvolles Elixier ist, mit dem das eigene Chi intensiviert und zentriert werden kann. Wenn Sie regelmäßig Probleme mit Zungenbelag haben, sollten Sie weniger Fleisch und mehr Gemüse essen und die Zunge täglich mit einem Zungenschaber reinigen.

Zu den fortgeschritteneren Zungenübungen verwendet man ein Plastiklineal, das man mit der Breitseite der Zunge abwechselnd hoch- und hinunterbiegt. Dadurch wird die Zungenmuskulatur gekräftigt, und diese Übung stellt auch eine Ergänzung zum Hervorschnellenlassen der Zunge dar. Sie können aber auch andere biegsame Materialien anstelle von Plastik verwenden, etwa Holz, Metall oder Bambus. Verwenden Sie jedoch stets nur glatte Latten, weil Zungenverletzungen nur langsam heilen. Das liegt daran, daß die Zunge sich in einem Umfeld starker bakterieller Aktivität befindet. Sollten Sie, aus welchen Gründen auch immer, einmal eine Zungenverletzung erleiden, kann es hilfreich sein, wenn Sie den Mund dreimal täglich mit gekochtem Salzwasser ausspülen.

Wenn Sie diese geheime Zungengymnastik geübt haben, sind Sie bereit, diese Techniken bei Ihrer glücklichen Partnerin anzuwenden. Suchen Sie ihre empfindlichsten Punkte, und machen Sie reichlichen Gebrauch von Ihren erlernten Fähigkeiten. Oft werden Sie diese Punkte dadurch entdecken, daß Sie darauf achten, wohin die Frau ihren Blick oder ihre Hand lenkt.

Wenn Sie die Punkte herausgefunden haben, genießen Sie es, auf der ganzen Klaviatur der Zungentechniken zu spielen. Es kann sein, daß sie die eine Technik an einer bestimmten Stelle bevorzugt, an einer anderen jedoch nicht. Achten Sie also auf ihre Reaktionen; sie wird keinerlei Zweifel daran lassen, wenn Sie einen «Volltreffer» gelandet haben!

D. Der Zungenbohrer

Die Technik des Zungenbohrers dient zur Aufrichtung der Brustwarzen. Bei dieser esoterischen Praktik wird die Brustwarze mit der Zungenspitze in die Brust zurückgedrückt, wo sie mit kleinen Kreisbewegungen behandelt wird, was eine erregende Energiespirale entstehen läßt.

Wenn Sie Zungen-Kung Fu in der Vagina einsetzen wollen, befeuchten Sie vorher den rechten Daumen und Zeigfmger. Fahren Sie mit dem Daumen in die Scheide, und versiegeln Sie mit dem feuchten Zeigefinger die Afteröffnung der Partnerin, damit sie keinen Energieverlust erleidet. Wenn die Partnerin Ihre Genitalien küssen möchte, lassen Sie sie Ihren After mit einem befeuchteten Mittelfinger versiegeln, während sie mit den anderen Fingern Ihren Hodensackbereich stimuliert.

Ich möchte an dieser Stelle betonen, daß es von größter Wichtigkeit ist, nur mit Partnern den Liebesakt auszuführen, die einen annehmbaren Hygienestandard einhalten. Genitalien und After sind warm und feucht, bieten Bakterien also optimale Wachstumsbedingungen. Waschen und reinigen Sie sie also, vor allem vor dem Sex. Üble Gerüche können außerdem die Freude an der Sexualität mindern oder gar zunichte machen.

Wie die Zunge, ist auch der Zeigefinger ein sehr kraftvolles Stimulans. Sie können mit ihm die Scheide erforschen und die Clitoris sanft massieren. Achten Sie auf saubere Fingernägel, besonders am Zeigefinger, und schneiden Sie die Nägel recht kurz. Feilen Sie sie glatt, damit Sie kein empfindliches Hautgewebe damit verletzen können. Bei diesen Praktiken muß die Sanftheit oberstes Gebot sein, weil Schmerz Ihre Partnerin aus dem Konzept bringen und ihr jede Freude rauben kann.

Mit der weichen Haut des Zeigefingers lassen sich auch mühelos die Clitoris und der G-Punkt stimulieren, der sich unterhalb des Schambeins, etwa zweieinhalb Zentimeter hinter der Clitoris befindet.

Heiße und kalte Bäder zur Förderung der sexuellen Gesundheit

Diese uralten, erprobten Techniken, die uns überliefert wurden, helfen dem Körper, vermehrte Widerstandskraft gegen Erkrankungen zu entwickeln.

a) Kalte Sitzbäder

Diese Übung ist äußerst wirksam, um das Blut im Genitalbereich alkalisch zu machen. Dadurch wird der Blutstrom in den Bereich der Geschlechtsorgane gesteigert; ebenso werden Prostata und Samenproduktion beim Mann bzw. der Hormonausstoß bei der Frau angeregt, was wiederum die sexuelle Fähigkeit erhöht. Das Vorgehen ist höchst einfach: Kauern oder setzen Sie sich in eine Wanne mit kaltem Wasser, so daß Genitalien, After und Kreuzbein eingetaucht sind. Dies sollten Sie mindestens 10 bis 20 Minuten lang tun. Beginnen Sie mit kühlem Wasser, und gewöhnen Sie sich nach und nach an kältere Temperaturen.

b) Kalte und heiße Wechselbäder; Dusch- und Sitzbäder

Diese Übung ist ebenfalls uralt. Dabei springt man abwechselnd in heißes und kaltes Wasser. Dadurch wird der Blutkreislauf angeregt, der Körpertonus steigt wie auch die Widerstandsfähigkeit gegen Krankheiten, und die Hormonproduktion wird stimuliert, was die sexuelle Kraft erhöht. Sie sollten mindestens 3 Minuten lang im heißen oder kalten Bad verweilen, bevor Sie sich ins andere Temperaturextrem begeben. Insgesamt müssen Sie mindestens sechsmal wechseln, damit Sie den gewünschten Erfolg erzielen. Am besten wechseln Sie 12mal, wobei Sie jeweils 3 Minuten im heißen oder kalten Wasser bleiben. Wenn Sie dafür nicht genügend Zeit haben sollten, so beginnen Sie Ihre Morgendusche mit heißem Wasser, während Sie sich einseifen, und beenden Sie das Duschen mit einem kalten Guß.

Anstatt ins Bad zu springen, kann man sich auch ganz allmählich hineingleiten lassen, zunächst Zehen und Füße, dann die

Beine, Rumpf, Rücken, Schultern, Unterleib und schließlich der Kopf. So kann sich der Körper nach und nach an den Temperaturwechsel gewöhnen. Menschen, die unter Bluthochdruck, Herzbeschwerden, Nierenerkrankungen usw. leiden, können ebenfalls Wechselbäder versuchen, doch sollten sie dabei vorsichtig sein und langsam vorgehen.

c) Das Luftbad

Das Luftbad ist sehr gesund, da es die Haut lüftet. Auf diese Weise wird man dumpfe Gerüche los, stärkt die Widerstandskraft und unterstützt den Kreislauf. Das Luftbad sorgt ferner dafür, daß die Genitalien kühler gehalten werden als der restliche Körper, was die sexuelle Kraft steigert. Wer möchte nicht gern einmal nackt einen Strand entlang oder durch eine Wiese in den Bergen laufen? Auf diese Weise setzt man sich der frischen Luft aus und erhält eine Menge der für uns so wichtigen negativen Ionen. Das Wetter sollte dabei milde bis warm sein, etwa wie in der Zeit zwischen Spätfrühling und frühem Herbst. Sie können auch zu Hause nackt am geöffneten Fenster sitzen. Doch verwenden Sie diese Praktik nicht dazu, ihre sexuellen Phantasien anzuregen, weil Sie dadurch das Chi vergeuden würden. Denken Sie lieber darüber nach, wie gesund Sie sich doch fühlen.

Die Aufnahme harmonischer Energie für Homosexuelle

Nach der chinesischen Lehre ist der Himmel Yang oder männlich und die Erde Yin oder weiblich. Sind beide Liebenden selben Geschlechts, so gibt es zwei Pole von Yang (bei männlichen Homosexuellen) oder Yin (bei lesbischen Frauen). Solche Beziehungen haben ein inneres Ungleichgewicht, das Instabilität und Gewalttätigkeit fördert und das Erlangen höherer Stufen harmonisierter Sexualenergie behindert.

Wenn sie zu einem harmonischeren Gleichgewicht gelangen wollen, ist es wichtig, daß Menschen, die ihr eigenes Geschlecht lieben, sich eine Quelle für die polare, entgegengesetzte Energie erschließen. Geschieht dies nicht, so empfangen sie zuviel von einer einzigen Kraft.

Glücklicherweise gibt es Quellen weiblicher Energie, welche vom Mann mit großem Nutzen angezapft werden können. Ebenso gibt es auch Methoden, durch welche die Lesbierin zu zusätzlicher Yang-Energie gelangen kann. Denn Mann und Frau sind nicht die einzigen Quellen der Yin- und Yang-Energie, die die ganze Schöpfung durchströmt, sondern nur einer ihrer kleinen Speicher.

Der Schlüssel zu dieser Praktik findet sich im Einleitungssatz dieses Abschnittes: Der Himmel ist männlich, die Erde weiblich. Der Mann, der also der Yin-Energie bedarf, es aber vorzieht, sie nicht aus ihrem menschlichen Speicher zu gewinnen, kann sie statt dessen aus der Erde ziehen; umgekehrt wird die Frau sich die männliche Energie aus ihrer Quelle, dem Himmel, beschaffen.

Will der Mann Yin-Energie aufnehmen, legt er sich mit dem Bauch auf den Boden und umarmt die Erde. Ein Bein sollte gestreckt, das andere im Knie gebeugt sein. Dann zieht er Energie aus der Erde, doch sollte er dabei alle sexuellen Gedanken vermeiden. Die Geschlechtsorgane sollten den Boden nicht berühren, sondern dicht über der Erdoberfläche hängen. Entspannen und konzentrieren Sie sich, indem Sie durch die Nase tief ein- und ausatmen. Lenken Sie die Energie mit Gedankenkraft aus der Erde langsam in den Penis. Dies ist die Grundlage aller männlichen Praxis: Führen Sie die Kraft gedanklich durch das Atmen empor.

Beim Einatmen ziehen Sie die Kraft hinauf, wie eine Flüssigkeit durch einen Strohhalm: Die Kraft ist dabei die Flüssigkeit, und der Penis ist der Halm. Aus dem Penis ziehen Sie die Kraft am Hui-Yin vorbei durch den Chang-Chiang und hinauf bis zum Hinterkopf. Speichern Sie die Yin-Energie im Kopf. Nach einer Weile wird sie überfließen und vorn am Körper hinabströmen, um schließlich in den Hui-Yin zurückzukehren. Ist dies erreicht, können Sie die Energie vorne am Körper in den Nabel leiten und mit den Zentren des Nabels, des Solarplexus und des Herzens, in dieser Reihenfolge, arbeiten, wie beim «Austausch von Yin und Yang» beschrieben. Meiden Sie dabei jedoch alle hartnäckigen erotischen Gedanken, sonst wird die Energie wieder aus Ihrem Körper entweichen.

Das Aufnehmen von Sexualenergie aus der Sonne

In der gesamten zivilisierten Welt erwärmen sich immer mehr Menschen für die Nacktkörperkultur und das nackte Sonnenbaden. Tatsächlich kann unser Körper auch aus der Natur Energie aufnehmen. Manche Körperteile sind dafür allerdings empfänglicher als andere, vor allem die unteren Teile; besonders Penis und Hoden können mehr Energie aufnehmen als die ebenfalls im unteren Körper befindlichen Teile Perineum und Hui-Yin.

Im Laufe der Zivilisation ist der Mensch dazu übergegangen, die Fortpflanzungsorgane versteckt und geheim zu halten. Aus diesem Grund tragen wir auch meistens Unterhosen, um uns damit vor der Außenwelt zu schützen. Dabei verdekken wir damit ausgerechnet jenen Teil des Körpers, der besonders viel Energie aus der Natur aufnehmen kann, mit der wiederum der gesamte Organismus gekräftigt und die Energien sowie die sexuelle Ausdauer gesteigert werden können. Je mehr wir diesen Teil verstecken, um so schwächer werden diese Organe und um so mehr leidet der ganze Körper darunter.

Die Methode der Aufnahme solarer Kraft in den Penis gilt als streng geheim und wurde nur selten enthüllt.

Zum Vorgehen: Die Morgensonne zwischen 7 und 11 Uhr ist für diese Übung wesentlich geeigneter als andere Zeiten, wenngleich man auch zwischen 15 und 18 Uhr üben kann. Wenn die Sonne nicht zu kräftig strahlt, kann die Eichel des Penis ihre Energie viel leichter schrittweise aufnehmen.

Halten Sie den Stiel des Penis mit einer Hand, und reiben Sie damit die Eichel, bis er erigiert. Dann lassen Sie los, zur Sonne gewendet, und stellen sich vor, wie die Kraft in die Eichel einströmt und von ihr aufgenommen wird, so daß das Organ mit warmer Energie erfüllt wird. Wenn Sie dies konzentriert genug tun, wird das ganze Organ sich mit Kraft füllen. Erschlafft das Glied, wiederholen Sie das Ganze, Führen Sie diese Übung 3-4mal durch.

Heben Sie die Hoden hoch, und setzen Sie sie der Sonne aus, während Sie mit der Rechten den Hui-Yin reiben und imaginieren, wie die Kraft durch ihn aufgenommen wird und in den ganzen Genitalbereich strömt, vor allem in die Hoden. Reiben Sie die Hoden einige Minuten lang sanft mit beiden Händen. Als nächstes reiben Sie den Stiel des Penis sowie die Prostata, indem Sie mit einer Hand die Hoden emporhalten und mit der anderen sanft reiben. Führen Sie die Übung anfangs 5 bis 10 Minuten durch, und steigern Sie diese Zeit bis mehrere Minuten der Sonne aus.

zu maximal einer Stunde. Bis dahin können freilich Monate des Übens vergehen.

Der untere Teil unseres Körpers wird nur selten der Sonne ausgesetzt. Eine Besonnung in Maßen, wie sie hier beschrieben wurde, beugt Hauterkrankungen in diesem Bereich vor und kräftigt ihn auch. Der empfindliche Teil des Penis wird dadurch wesentlich kräftiger und verliert an Überempfindlichkeit, was das Einbehalten des Samens erleichtert.

Wenn Sie die Eichel reiben, beginnen Sie mit sanften Bewegungen, und überhitzen Sie sie nicht zu sehr. Das gleiche gilt für die Massage des Hui-Yin. Geben Sie acht, sich nicht zu verletzen, denn Verletzungen im Genitalbereich lassen sich am schwierigsten heilen.

Sorgen Sie auch dafür, daß Sie bei dieser Übung unbeobachtet sind, um keine Schwierigkeiten zu bekommen. Denn es könnte sein, daß manche Menschen diese Meditationen und Hygieneübungen als anstößig empfinden. Die hier vorgestellten Übungen sind eine große Hilfe beim Abbau vorzeitiger Erektion, Impotenz und nächtlicher Samenergüsse im Schlaf.

Weitere Stellungen, die ich Ihnen empfehle, sind der «Kopfstand», der «Schulterstand» oder das Liegen auf dem Rücken mit den Händen unter den Unterschenkeln, um After, Hui-Yin, Lassen Sie die solare Energie in den Kleinen Energiekreislauf strömen.

Scrotum und Penis der Sonne entgegenzurecken. Diese Körperteile werden so gut wie nie der Sonne ausgesetzt, obwohl doch gerade sie äußerst empfänglich und durchlässig für Energie sind und sie mit Leichtigkeit aufnehmen können.

Weder die männlichen noch die weiblichen Fortpflanzungsorgane werden jemals der solaren Energie ausgesetzt. Dennoch sind sie sehr kraftvoll und mächtig: Sie können Energie ausstoßen oder sie aus dem Universum aufnehmen. Doch weil der Mensch nicht darum weiß, trägt er Kleidung, die ihn von dieser Kraft des Universums isoliert. Die beste Stellung ist übrigens der Kopfstand, wobei beide Beine nach unten zeigen (nicht nach oben). Nehmen Sie die Kraft der Sonne gedanklich durch After und Penis auf, und leiten Sie sie von beiden gleichzeitig zunächst in die Prostata und schließlich nach vorne ins Scrotum. Halten Sie den Hodensack warm, und vermeiden Sie es am Anfang, ihn allzulange der Sonne auszusetzen; fangen Sie mit l oder 2 Minuten an. Nehmen Sie nicht zuviel Hitze auf, denn wenn das Scrotum überhitzt ist, tötet das die Samenzellen ab, was unser Ziel vereiteln würde.

16. KAPITEL

Die Heilung geschwächter Sexualenergie durch Einsatz von Akupunktur, Moxa und Krautern

Akupunktur und Moxa bei der Behandlung von Impotenz

Die Moxa-Therapie hat in China eine mehr als funftausendj ährige Tradition, um die Chi-Energie zu erhöhen und Drüsen, Organe, Nerven und Blutkreislauf anzuregen. Dabei werden die Akupunktur-Punkte mit Hitze behandelt. Moxa (auch: «Moxe» bzw. «Brennkegel») oder Moxa-Rollen erhält man in Geschäften, die sich auf Akupunkturzubehör spezialisiert haben. Zwar kann man auch eine Zigarre oder Zigarette verwenden, doch ist die Moxa-Rolle geeigneter, wenngleich beide die Wohnung einräuchern. Sie können es aber auch mit einem Aquariumsheizer versuchen, der an einer langen Glasröhre befestigt wird.

Die beste Methode, um Impotenz zu überwinden, besteht darin, sich ganz allgemein gesundheitlich fit zu halten und jede sexuelle Überreizung zu vermeiden, da diese nur das Gefühl der Impotenz immer wieder aufs neue entfachen und verstärken wird. Wenn Sie unter Impotenz leiden, sollten Sie sich für eine Weile jeglicher sexueller Aktivität enthalten und für ausreichend Schlaf und eine gesunde Ernährung sorgen, bis Gesundheit und Potenz wiederkehren. Wenn Sie Ihren Lebensstil so weit verändern, daß Sie zu einer Erneuerung Ihrer Lebensenergie finden, läßt sich der Prozeß durch Moxa und Akupunktur beschleunigen, weil dadurch das Einströmen von Chi-Energie in Ihren Hormonhaushalt und in die Fortpflanzungsorgane unterstützt wird.

Zwar kann man die meisten wichtigen Punkte selbst behandeln, doch sollten Sie sich zunächst ein gutes Buch über Akupunktur oder Moxa-Therapie beschaffen, damit Sie die hier beschriebenen Punkte leichter finden. BEHANDELN SIE NICHT WILLKÜRLICH IRGENDWELCHE BELIEBIGEN PUNKTE MIT MOXA, denn das kann sehr gefährlich sein! Ohne weitere Anleitung und Kenntnisse sollten Sie ausschließlich jene Punkte behandeln, die ich hier beschreibe.

Es ist am besten, die Moxe zusammen mit Knoblauch und Zwiebeln oder Ingwer zu verwenden. Knoblauch ist am geeignetsten. Legen Sie eine Scheibe oder eine kleine Zehe in ein dünnes Tuch, und legen Sie es auf den Akupunktur-Punkt, den Sie behandeln wollen; dann erhitzen Sie den Knoblauch mit der glühenden Moxe, der Rolle, der Zigarre oder dem Heizgerät. Achten Sie aber darauf, daß die Hitze nicht zu groß wird, weil Sie sich sonst Schaden zufügen könnten, denn Knoblauch ist ein sehr kräftiges Reizmittel. Beläßt man ihn zu lange an einem Punkt, kann er die Haut «verbrennen», und es kann sogar zu oberflächlichen Brandwunden kommen. Seien Sie also vorsichtig! Sollten Sie allergisch gegen Knoblauch sein, können Sie statt dessen Zwiebeln benutzen, und wenn auch dies nicht geht, genügt die reine Hitze, die auch allein sehr wirkungsvoll ist.

Behandeln Sie die jeweilige Stelle 3 bis 4 Minuten lang mit Moxa, doch halten Sie die Hitzerolle nur wenige Sekunden auf den Punkt selbst, wobei Sie sie ständig auf und ab bewegen und so tief drücken, bis es schmerzt. Führen Sie dies höchstens 3 bis 4 Minuten durch, und achten Sie darauf, daß das Behandlungszimmer warm ist, weil Sie in einem kalten Zimmer eine Menge Chi verlieren, vor allem dann, wenn Sie unbekleidet sind. Wenn Sie eine Zigarre, Moxa-Rollen oder eine Zigarette benutzen, wird das Zimmer nach der Behandlung verqualmt sein, weshalb Sie hinterher gut lüften sollten.

Die Moxa-Behandlung sollte zehn Tage lang einmal täglich durchgeführt werden. Danach machen Sie eine Pause von drei Tagen und beginnen daraufhin eine neue zehntägige Behand-lungsphase. Nach der Moxa-Behandlung sollten Sie zwei Stunden lang auf Wein und anderen Alkohol verzichten und nicht baden oder duschen. Während der gesamten Therapie dürfen Sie keinen Sex haben, bis Sie wieder genesen sind. Handelt es sich um einen schweren Fall, sollten Sie l bis 3 Monate auf jede sexuelle Betätigung verzichten. Nach einer Phase gründlichen Ausruhens werden Sie Ihre Kraft und Potenz wiedergewinnen. Wenn Sie sich so weit disziplinieren, auf 10 Tage der Behandlung 3 bis 4 Tage der Ruhe folgen zu lassen, werden Sie in der Regel Ihre Potenz wiedergewinnen, es sei denn, es handelt sich m Ihrem Fall um einen anatomischen Fehler, was jedoch extrem selten vorkommt.

1. Kan-Shu (BL-18) - Der Hauptleberpunkt

Beginnen Sie am Rücken mit dem Harnblasenmeridian, auch Fuß-Tai-Yang genannt. Der erste Punkt ist der Kan-Shu (BL-18). Der Kan-Shu befindet sich eineinhalb tsun neben dem unteren Ende des Dornfortsatzes des Brustwirbels T-9. Eineinhalb tsun (l tsun = l Daumenbreite) entspricht der Breite Ihres Zeige- und Mittelfingers. Der Kan-Shu gilt als der wichtigste Leberpunkt. Die Leber speichert die Energie des Körpers. Bei übermäßiger sexueller Betätigung oder Streß ist der Körper darauf angewiesen, seine Energie aus der Leber zu beziehen und diese somit auszubeuten. Aus diesem Grund hilft diese Behandlung auch bei Hepatitis.

2. Pi-Shu (BL-20) - der Hauptmilzpunkt

Der zweite Punkt ist der Pi-Shu (BL-20), der sich eineinhalb tsun neben dem unteren Ende des Dornfortsatzes des Brustwirbels T-ll befindet. Er ist der Hauptpunkt der Milz. Wird dieser Punkt behandelt, lassen sich auch Rückenschmerzen und Verdauungsstörungen beheben.

3. Shen-Shu (BL-23) - der Hauptnierenpunkt und Tzu-Liao (BL-32)

Der dritte Punkt ist der Shen-Shu (BL-23). Er befindet sich eineinhalb tsun neben dem unteren Ende des Dornfortsatzes des Lendenwirbels L-2. Er wird bei der Nierenbehandlung benutzt und hilft Infektionen zu bekämpfen, Kreuzschmerzen und Sexualbeschwerden zu lindern. Shen-Shu bedeutet «Samenpalast». Behandeln Sie alle Punkte auf beiden Seiten der Wirbelsäule.

Schließlich behandeln Sie den Punkt Tzu-Liao (BL-32) auf dem zweiten Sakralforamen zwischen dem unteren Teil des hinteren oberen Darmbeins und der Medianlinie. Dieser Punkt ist leicht zu finden: Beginnen Sie am Kreuzbein, dem großen Knochenstück oberhalb des Steißbeins. Legen Sie den Daumen auf den Punkt BL-27, den letzten Punkt zwischen den Rückenwirbeln auf dem Kreuzbein. Legen Sie nun den kleinen Finger auf das Steißbein, und spreizen Sie die Finger: Nun liegt Ihr Zeigefinger auf dem gesuchten Punkt Tzu-Liao. Der Daumen sollte sich am oberen Rand des Kreuzbeins befinden, während die Finger mit gleichem Abstand zueinander gespreizt sind.

Sie können diesen Punkt aber auch noch nach einer anderen Methode finden. Dazu machen Sie den Punkt ausfindig, an dem das Kreuzbein auf die Lendenwirbel trifft. Legen Sie den Daumen auf diese Verbindungsstelle, und spreizen Sie die Finger. Möglicherweise wird Ihnen diese Vorgehensweise leichterlallen. Den Handumriß umgeben nun acht Löcher des Kreuzbeins. Der Punkt Shang-Liao auf dem oberen Loch ist der BL-31. Der wichtigste Punkt jedoch ist der Tzu-Liao (BL-32) auf dem zweiten Loch, dann folgen der Chung-Liao (BL-33) auf dem mittleren und der Hsia-Liao (BL-34) auf dem unteren Loch.
Natürlich gibt es noch mehr Punkte. Auch die erwähnten Punkte benötigen nicht alle eine tägliche Moxa-Behandlung. Wenn Sie jemanden haben, der Ihnen dabei helfen kann, sollten Sie Ihren Rücken von ihm behandeln lassen. Das können Sie einmal alle zwei bis drei Tage tun und die Therapie dabei mit der Behandlung der Punkte vorne am Körper abwechseln.

4. Chang-Chiang (LG-1) und Chi-Hai (DG-6)

Ein weiterer Punkt, der Chang-Chiang (LG-1), liegt auf dem Lenkergefäß, am unteren Ende des Steißbeins zwischen Steißbeinspitze und After. Er ist bei Kreuzschmerzen zu behandeln. Auf dem Dienergefäß befindet sich der Chi-Hai (DG-6), eineinhalb tsun unterhalb des Nabels, man nennt ihn auch den «Energieozean». Hier lassen sich Verdauungsstörungen behandeln. Schließlich sollten Sie auch den Kuan-Yuan (DG-4), drei tsun unterhalb des Nabels, behandeln.

Abbildung 42

DIE WICHTIGSTEN MOXA-PUNKTE FÜR DIE BEHANDLUNG MÄNNLICHER IMPOTENZ

Der Daumen wird links auf die ileosakrale Linie gelegt, die drei Finger werden gleichmäßig nach rechts gespreizt und berühren dann BL-32, BL-33 und BL-34.

Die Spezialpunkte bei Impotenz:

1. Eichel, Peniswurzel, Hui-Yin

Die nun folgenden Punkte sind besonders zur Behandlung von Impotenz geeignet. Der erste Punkt ist die Eichel. Am günstigsten verfahrt man, indem man eine Scheibe Knoblauch nimmt (nicht hacken und auch nicht bei Knoblauchallergie verwenden!), die man mit einer Nadel durchbohrt. Die ersten Male sollte man den Knoblauch auf ein Stück Seide legen, um die Eichel nicht zu verbrennen, und dann die Hitzequelle ansetzen. Dann folgen die beiden Punkte an der unteren Peniswurzel. Der dritte Punkt ist der Hui-Yin, das Perineum (der Damm) zwischen After und Hodensack.

Abbildung 43

2. Fu-Liu (N-7)

Am Bein findet sich der Punkt Fu-Liu (N-7), zwei tsun oberhalb des hinteren Malleolus am inneren Fußknöchel

Abbildung 43

3. Lao-Kung (Nur Massage!)

Dieser Punkt verträgt keine Moxa-Behandlung, reagiert aber auf Massage und Reiben. Er befindet sich zwischen Mittel- und Ringfinger der Hand, wenn man die Finger krümmt, so daß ihre Spitzen auf der Handfläche in einer Linie verlaufen. Massieren Sie diesen Punkt täglich.

Abbildung 45

4. Yung-Chuan - Nierenpunkt (Nur Massage!)

Ein weiterer Punkt befindet sich auf dem Nierenmeridian, dem Fuß-Shao-Yin. Dies ist der Punkt Yung-Chuan (N-l) innen auf dem Fußballen (auf dem das Körpergewicht beim Stehen lastet), und zwar auf einer senkrechten Linie unterhalb des zweiten Zehs (wobei der große Zeh als erster gezählt wird). Dieser Punkt darf niemals mit Moxa behandelt werden! Statt dessen sollten Sie ihn täglich mit einem Finger massieren oder ihre Fußsohlen gegeneinander reiben. Das stimuliert die Nierenenergie, die eine äußerst wichtige Rolle für die Steuerung der sexuellen Aktivität spielt.

Abbildung 46

Ich wende die Moxa-Therapie schon seit vielen Jahren an und konnte vielen Patienten und Schülern dadurch helfen, die unter Impotenzproblemen litten, meistens sogar schon nach sehr kurzer Zeit. Manche Männer verlieren auch durch ungewollte nächtliche Samenergüsse zuviel Samenessenz oder Ching, was ihre sexuelle Fähigkeit mindert oder zerstört. Verbindet man die Moxa-Methode mit der Übung der Kraftsperre, wie sie im Kapitel 6 beschrieben wurde, erweist sich dies als wirkungsvollste Therapie. Schüler, die beides anwenden, gesunden am schnellsten. Der Patient sollte zusätzlich täglich morgens und abends 108 dieser Kontraktionen durchführen, bis die Erektion wieder einsetzt.

Viele Männer greifen in ihrer Verzweiflung zu anderen Methoden, um ihre Impotenz zu kurieren. Sie stimulieren sich mit gesteigertem Sex, mit Hormonen, spanischer Fliege usw., doch hat all dies nur die Wirkung, daß ihre Energie noch schneller entweicht und verlorengeht. Daher kann ich jedem Betroffenen nur raten, die taoistischen Methoden der Höherentwicklung der Sexualenergie anzuwenden. Damit sage ich nicht, daß Sie nicht so viel Sex haben sollen, wie Sie wollen, sondern daß der Liebesakt für Sie zu etwas Sinnvollem, Lebenerfüllen-dem und Frohem werden sollte.

Jede zwangsbetonte sexuelle Betätigung ist sinnlos und gesundheits gefährdend. Es ist besser, einen wirklich erfolgreichen Liebesakt auszuführen, als sich zehn- oder hundertmal unvorbereitet und ungeübt auf einen Sexualakt einzulassen. Wenn Sie jeden Liebesakt als eine ganz besondere oder heilige Handlung begreifen, ein Bad nehmen, Duftstoffe benutzen, Ihre Zähne vorher putzen, Penis und After, Haare und Ohren waschen, das Bettzeug wechseln, das Zimmer reinigen, ein paar Blumen aufstellen usw., so wird Ihre Sexualität ihre Zwanghaf-tigkeit verlieren.

Wenn Sie eine Pistole besitzen, können Sie ja auch nicht einfach auf die Straße gehen und auf jeden schießen, der Ihnen unter die Augen kommt! Damit würden Sie sich nur eine Menge Ärger einhandeln. Ähnlich bei der Sexualität: Sie ist ein mächtiges Werkzeug, das zu einer höchst gefährlichen Waffe werden kann, wenn man unvorsichtig damit umgeht und sie wahllos einsetzt. Wenn Sie Tao Yoga und Sexual-Kung Fu praktizieren, wird Ihr Geschlechtsorgan zwar stark und kräftig, doch brauchen Sie es nicht gleich bei jeder Frau auszuprobieren, die Ihnen über den Weg läuft. Setzen Sie es also sinnvoll ein! Wie mit einer Pistole, kann man mit einem Werkzeug Leben schützen oder sich selbst und andere vernichten. Der Umgang mit diesen Dingen verlangt nach äußerster Vorsicht. Wenn Sie aber erkennen, daß ein Übermaß an ejakulatorischer Sexualität Ihnen schadet, während die Entwicklung harmonischer Sexualenergie durch Liebe Ihr Leben mit Sinn erfüllt, dann können Sie sich selbst von Ihrer Impotenz kurieren und zu sexueller Erfüllung finden.

Sexuelle Vitalität durch richtige Ernährung

Nahrung lebt, und alle Arten von Nahrung haben ihre eigene Energieschwingung, die nach dem Verzehr zu einem Teil unserer eigenen wird. So wird aus der Nahrungsauswahl eine Auswahl von Schwingungen, die nicht nur im Einklang mit dem Universum stehen, sondern uns auch in eine Harmonie zu unserem Liebespartner bringen.
Nahrung läßt sich nach verschiedensten Kriterien unterscheiden: Größe, Form, Farbe, Geschmack, Nährwert, tierischer und pflanzlicher Ursprung usw. Jeder Mensch besitzt ein anderes Gleichgewicht von Chi-Energie und körperlicher Gesundheit, so daß man seine Nahrung stets nach individuellen Gesichtspunkten aussuchen muß, wie es der eigenen Gesundheit entspricht. Aus diesem Grund meidet der Taoist es, spezifische Nahrungs Vorschriften zu geben und eine bestimmte Diät vorzuschreiben, sei sie nun makrobiotisch, vegetarisch, obstorientiert oder wie auch immer. Solche Diäten mögen für einzelne gut geeignet sein, vielleicht auch für bestimmte Jahreszeiten. Das Thema «Ernährung» ist sehr umfangreich. Ich will Ihnen hier nur einen kleinen, oberflächlichen Überblick darüber geben, wie man die Yin- und Yang-Energien im Körper durch Diät ins Gleichgewicht bringen kann, indem ich eine schlichte Auflistung einiger Nahrungsmittel und ihre Zuordnung anbiete:

Stark Yin: (Drogen) Zucker, Alkohol; Obst
Yin: Gemüse, Körner, Fisch
Yang: Geflügel, Fleisch, Eier, Salz
Stark Yang; Knoblauch, Ingwer, Peperoni

Ißt der Mann Yin-Nahrung im Übermaß, wird seine sexuelle Aktivität nach einer Weile nachlassen. Ist seine Yang-Energie erschöpft, versiegt sie schließlich gänzlich. Yin sind unter anderem Nahrungsmittel, die unter der Bodenoberfläche wachsen: Wurzeln, Faserpflanzen und Knollengewächse.

Ein Mann, der von sehr yang-betonter Nahrung lebt, wird einen starken, bisweilen vielleicht sogar gewalttätigen sexuellen Appetit entwickeln, der durch Egoismus, Mangel an Sensibilität und Kurzlebigkeit gekennzeichnet ist.

Ernährt man sich aus beiden Extremen, werden sexuelle Aktivität und Verlangen stark auf und ab schwanken.

Sexualität und jahreszeitabhängige Nahrung

Der Taoist Lui Ching sagte: «Im Frühling kann der Mann es sich gestatten, einmal alle drei Tage Samen auszustoßen, im Sommer und Herbst zweimal im Monat, und im Winter sollte er seinen Samen bewahren und überhaupt nicht ejakulieren. Der Verlust der Yang-Energie durch Ejakulation im Winter gilt als hundertmal schlimmer als eine Ejakulation im Frühling.»

Ganz im Einklang mit der Natur galt den alten Tao Meistern der Winter als Jahreszeit der Energiesammlung und -speicherung. Für den Mann hieß das, daß er seinen Samen bewahren und seine «heiße» Energie durch heiße, wärmende und kräftigende Nahrung im Winter steigern sollte, während im Sommer kühlere Nahrung angezeigt war.

Diätvorschläge für Mann und Frau zur Erhaltung des Gleichgewichts von Yin und Yang

Frauen:	Männer:
wenig Salz	etwas mehr Salz-
mehr Gemüse	mehr Getreide
kürzere Kochzeiten	längere Kochzeiten
mehr grünes blattreiches Gemüse	mehr wurzelreiches Gemüse
wenig oder kein Fisch	mäßig bis wenig Fisch
wenig oder keine tierische Nahrung	mäßig bis wenig tierische Nahrung

Ein Zuviel an Yang-Nahrung (Fleisch, Eier und Milchprodukte) macht die Frau hart und gefühllos.

Ein Zuviel an Yin-Nahrung kann den Mann verweichlichen und ihm die Fähigkeit zur Erektion nehmen.

17. KAPITEL

Die Biologie der weiblichen Sexualität

Kaum etwas verwirrt den Mann mehr als der Körper der Frau und seine Monatszyklen. Weil der weibliche Körper anders ist als der männliche, sind auch Psychologie und spiritueller Entwicklungsweg der Frau von denen des Mannes verschieden. Viele spirituelle Gruppen diskutieren gar nicht erst über den weiblichen Körper, weil er eine solch geballte Ladung sexueller Energie in sich birgt, daß sie sich lieber nicht damit abgeben. Doch ist es von großer Wichtigkeit, daß der Mann die Frau und ihre Biologie wirklich versteht, wenn er über die Ebene des Gefuhlskampfs hinaus gelangen und zu einer vollkommenen Harmonie mit der weiblichen Yin-Essenz finden will. Da die taoistischen Sexualpraktiken den Mann zum intimsten Körperkontakt mit der Frau führen, den er jemals erfahren kann, will ich hier einige knappe, aber wichtige Informationen über die weiblichen Geschlechtsorgane und ihren Fortpflanzungszyklus anbieten. Im Folgeband über das Ovar-Kung Fu sollen diese Erläuterungen noch erheblich vertieft werden.

Arn besten lernen Sie etwas über dieses Thema, indem Sie eine Frau lieben und beobachten, wie ihre subtilen Energien sich zusammen mit den Mondphasen und den Jahreszeiten verändern. Wenn der Mann seine Yang-Energie höherentwickelt, kann er den Körper seiner Gehebten erheblich kräftigen und ihre Energiezyklen stabilisieren helfen. Wenn die subtilen Energien von Yin und Yang sich richtig miteinander vermählen, funktionieren Hormone und Vitalorgane auf einer verfeinerten Ebene und fuhren zu strahlender Gesundheit.

Der Uterus

Der Uterus (die Gebärmutter), ein muskulöses Organ, das kleiner als eine weibliche Faust ist, ist im Becken an großen Bändern aufgehängt, die mit den Beckenknochen verbunden sind. Von Gestalt gleicht er einer umgekehrten Birne. Der untere Teil, das Cervix oder der Gebärmutterhals, ist der einzige Teil, der in der Scheide sichtbar ist; er befindet sich am Ende des Vaginalkanals. Er ist rosafarben und rund und besitzt in der Mitte eine Öffnung (Os cervix), die durch den ca. 4 cm langen Gebärmutterhals in den eigentlichen Uterus fuhrt. Die Eileiter befinden sich rechts und links seitlich vom Uterus und bilden einen Schirm über den Eierstöcken. Die Eierstöcke sind weiß und von der Größe und Form einer geschälten Mandel.

Der Eisprung

Etwa in der Mitte des weiblichen Zyklus (der genaue Zeitpunkt kann individuell extrem variieren) lost sich ein Ei aus einem der Eierstöcke. Manche Frauen spüren diesen Eisprung als plötzlichen, kurzen Krampf, andere wiederum leiden dabei unter Schmerzen, die ein bis zwei Tage anhalten können. Bei den meisten Frauen jedoch verläuft dieser Prozeß völlig unbewußt. Wenngleich das Ei nur 12 bis 24 Stunden Überlebens fähig ist, kann die Frau während eines Zyklus bis zu fünf Tagen fruchtbar sein. Wie ist das möglich?

Der fruchtbare Schleim

Vor dem Eisprung beginnen die Drüsen im Zervikalkanal (auch: Gebärmutterhalskanal) damit, einen schlüpfrigen, zähen, klaren oder durchsichtigen Schleim zu produzieren, der durch den Gebärmutterhals in die Scheide fließt. Dies kann in solchen Mengen geschehen, daß die Frau sich dessen voll bewußt wird, es kann aber auch vorkommen, daß sie allenfalls eine gewisse schleimige Konsistenz am Scheideneingang beobachtet. Die Molekularstruktur dieses Schleims gleicht einem System aus Tunneln und Leitern, was den Samenzellen auf ihrer Reise in den Zervikalkanal die Richtung weist und sie den Weg finden läßt.

Zehn Minuten nach der Ejakulation in die Scheide finden sich bereits Spermien im Eileiter. Einige Samenzellen bahnen sich auch ihren Weg in die Vertiefungen innerhalb des Zervikalka-nals, wo sie vom Schleim ernährt werden, um nach drei bis fünf Tagen wieder freigesetzt zu werden. Wenn also ein Mann und eine Frau sich an einem Samstagabend miteinander heben und die Frau fruchtbaren Schleim absondert, aber erst am Dienstag ihren Eisprung hat, könnte sie irgendwann im Laufe des Mittwochs davon schwanger werden.

Der unfruchtbare Schleim

Während ihres restlichen Zyklus kann die Frau Phasen relativer Feuchtigkeit und Trockenheit an sich beobachten. Der Gebärmutterschleim, der während der unfruchtbaren Zeit produziert wird, kann in größeren oder geringeren Mengen auftreten; meistens ist er weiß und klebrig. Die Molekularstruktur dieses Schleims gleicht einem Gitter oder Sieb, durch welches die meisten Spermien daran gehindert werden, in den Gebärmutterhals einzudringen. Viele Frauen beobachten ihren Schleimzyklus, um ihre fruchtbaren Tage zu bestimmen.

Die Menstruation

Etwa zwei Wochen nach dem Eisprung schält sich, sofern die Frau nicht schwanger geworden ist, die Beschichtung des Uterus, die sich gebildet hatte, um einem etwaigen sich entwickelnden Embryo ein Nest zu bieten, ab, und ein neuer Zyklus setzt ein.

Als Menstruationszyklus gilt die Zeit zwischen den Perioden, wobei der erste Tag der Blutung als «Tag l» gezählt wird. Die meisten Frauen menstruieren ungefähr einmal im Monat, wenngleich nur wenige Frauen genau alle 28 Tage ihre Periode bekommen, was als «Norm» oder «Idealzyklus» gilt. Auch durchaus regelmäßige Zyklen können zwischen drei und sieben Wochen umfassen, und es gibt auch Frauen, die nur zwei- oder dreimal im Jahr menstruieren und sich oft keinerlei Zyklen bewußt sind.

Für viele Frauen ist die Periode ein Beweis für das gesunde Funktionieren ihres Körpers. Sie tritt mehr oder weniger «pünktlich» ein, dauert drei bis fünf Tage und bedarf einer gewissen Menge an Zubehör und hygienischer Vorkehrungen. Für sexuell aktive Frauen dient die Monatsblutung auch als Zeichen dafür, daß sie nicht schwanger sind. Vom taoistischen Standpunkt betrachtet, bedeutet der Blutverlust zugleich einen Verlust wertvoller Energie; dieser läßt sich auf ein Minimum beschränken oder sogar völlig vermeiden, wenn die Frau keine Kinder mehr austragen will. Die taoistische Methode läßt sich aber auch wieder rückgängig machen, falls die Frau es sich wieder anders überlegen sollte und doch noch Kinder bekommen will.

Die typische Periode beginnt oft ganz leicht mit einer kleinen Menge rosagefärbten Schleims oder wenigen Blutstropfen, aus denen am zweiten Tag ein hellroter Strom wird, der mehrere Tage anhalten kann, bis der Ausfluß gegen Ende der Periode braun und fleckig wird. Manche Frauen verlieren sehr viel Blut; einige erleben den Anfang und das Ende der Periode auf recht dramatische Weise, als würde eine Art «Wasserhahn» plötzlich auf- und schließlich wieder abgedreht. Andere wiederum bluten nicht sehr stark. Manche Frauen scheiden sehr dunkles Blut aus, das auch Klumpen von Stecknadelkopfgröße bis zur Größe einer kleinen Münze enthalten kann; andere wiederum verlieren eine Menge Schleim, der sich mit dem Blut vermengt. So wie es aus dem Zervikalkanal strömt, besitzt das Blut kaum einen Eigengeruch oder -geschmack. Das ändert sich erst, sobald es der Luft ausgesetzt wird und die Zellen sich mit der Zeit auflösen.

Viele Frauen erleben die Menstruation als etwas recht Unangenehmes. So gibt es verschiedene körperliche Begleiterscheinungen wie etwa geschwollene, schmerzende Brüste, Flüssigkeitsstau, Pickel, Kopfschmerzen, Kreuzschmerzen, Durchfall oder auch Verstopfung. Chronischer Herpes kann um die Zeit der Periode verstärkt ausbrechen, was ein Hinweis auf den «Streß» ist, dem der Körper durch die Menstruation ausgesetzt wird. Der Uterus, der ein muskulöses Organ ist, kann sich zusammenziehen, was sich manchmal wie ein gewöhnlicher Muskelkrampf anfühlt, wie er in jedem anderen Körpermuskel auch auftreten kann; manchmal wird es aber auch als Druck, schmerzendes Ziehen oder als Gefühl der Mattigkeit empfunden. Einige wenige Frauen werden durch ihre Periode völlig außer Gefecht gesetzt, etwa durch überstarke Schmerzen oder ständige Brechanfalle. Bisher sind diese leidigen Begleiterscheinungen fast völlig unerforscht geblieben, und westliche Allopathen haben den Frauen nichts Besseres anzubieten als starke und möglicherweise gefährliche Medikamente, mit denen allenfalls die Symptome beseitigt, nicht aber ihre Ursachen geheilt werden können.

Emotionale Veränderungen während der Periode

Einige Frauen durchlaufen Stimmungsschwankungen während ihrer Periode, doch haben bisherige Studien keine eindeutigen Muster solcher Veränderungen aufgezeigt, die für eine größere Zahl von Frauen zutreffen würden.

Die meisten Frauen kennen einen Teil ihres Zyklus, an dem sie sich voll Verlangen fühlen, und tatsächlich wurde von Frauen schon von jedem Abschnitt des Zyklus, einschließlich der Menstruation, behauptet, daß dies die Zeit sei, da sie ihr sexuelles Verlangen besonders stark wahrnähmen.

Die geschlechtliche Anatomie der Frau

Die weiblichen Genitalien beginnen am Venushügel (Mons veneris). Die Schambehaarufig kann variieren, von wenigen glatten Haaren bis zu einem buschigen Bewuchs, der sich den Unterleib empor oder die Oberschenkel hinabzieht. Der Venushügel ist ein Fettpolster, welches die darunterliegenden Schambeinknochen schützt, die wiederum durch ein Band verbunden sind, welches während der Schwangerschaft an Straffheit verliert, damit die Schambeinknochen sich während des Geburtsvorgangs öffnen, d. h. auseinanderklaffen können. Der Venushügel teilt sich unten in die großen Schamlippen (Labia majora).

Die kleinen Schamlippen

Innerhalb der großen befinden sich die kleinen Schamlippen (Labia minora). Diese sind von ganz anderer Farbe und Gewebebeschaffenheit und sind mit schleimbedeckten und -absondernden Flächen wie etwa den Lippen des Mundes verwandt. Im nichterregten Zustand variiert ihre Farbe zwischen rosa bis schwarz oder dunkelkastanienfarben bzw. purpur. Manchmal sind die kleinen Schamlippen recht lang und ragen aus den großen heraus. Während der sexuellen Erregung werden die an Gefäßen reichen kleinen Schamlippen mit Blut gefüllt und schwellen auf das Zwei- bis Dreifache ihrer Größe an. Kurz vor dem Orgasmus können sie einen Farbwandel durchlaufen und manchmal scharlachrot oder dunkelweinrot werden (Masters & Johnson).

Die Klitoris

Folgen wir nun den kleinen Schamlippen nach oben, wo sie sich miteinander vereinen, um die Haube zu bilden, welche die Eichel (Glans) der Klitoris (Kitzler) schützt. Meistens ruht diese Eichel im unerigierten Zustand unter der Haube, und man kann sie nur sehen, wenn man die Haube zurückzieht. Die Eichel der Klitoris steckt voller Nerven, und für die Mehrzahl der Frauen ist sie auch der empfindlichste Teil ihrer geschlechtlichen Anatomie. Bei manchen Frauen ist sie derart sensibel, daß sie jede direkte Reizung als schmerzhaft empfinden.

Der Stiel der Klitoris fühlt sich wie ein kräftiges Gummiband unter der Oberfläche zwischen Eichel und Venushügel an. Mit steigender sexueller Erregung verdickt sich der Stiel und wird kürzer, während Eichel, Stiel und Stützgewebe erigieren. Wie beim Mann auch, kommt es dabei oft zu beachtlichen Veränderungen von Größe und Form.

Der G-Punkt

Unterhalb der Eichel befindet sich die Öffnung der Harnröhre. Darunter liegt der Scheideneingang. Die Länge der weiblichen Harnröhre beträgt vom äußeren Ende bis zum Blaseneingang etwa 4 cm. Umgeben wird die Harnröhre von einem Netz aus Blutgefäßen. Da diese Blutgefäße in keinem medizinischen Werk benannt werden, hat eine Gruppe von Frauen ihr den Namen «Harnröhrenschwamm» gegeben (in dem Buch A New View of A Woman's Body). Während der sexuellen Erregung schwellen diese Blutgefäße an und können durch die Scheidenwand hindurch gefühlt werden. Diese Schwellung wurde «G-Punkt» getauft (nach Grafenberg, einem der ersten Sexolo-gen). Man kann den G-Punkt erkunden, indem man den vorderen und oberen Teil der Scheide abtastet. (Es wurde auch schon gesagt, daß sich der G-Punkt etwa einen guten Zentimeter tiefer befindet, als der längste Finger der Frau in die Scheide hineinreicht.)

Liegt man beim Liebesakt aufeinander, kann es schwierig werden, den G-Punkt direkt zu erreichen, mit Ausnahme jener Männer, deren Glied im erigierten Zustand gegen ihren Bauch drückt. Flache Stöße kommen dem G-Punkt am nächsten und können die für ihn typische unterschwellige und kitzlige Erregung auslösen.

Möchte die Frau ihren G-Punkt jedoch auf unmittelbarere Weise stimulieren lassen, kann es erforderlich werden, die Stellung zu wechseln. Finger finden oft den wirkungsvollsten und direktesten Zugang. Stimuliert die Frau sich selbst, kann sie sich dazu hinkauern oder die Beine anziehen, um ihn besser zu erreichen. Ihr Partner wird ihn möglicherweise leichter erreichen, wenn sie auf dem Bauch hegt. Liegt sie beim Koitus oben, kann die Frau leichter die richtige Stellung finden.

Manche Frauen genießen es, wenn sie ihren Mann fest umarmen und spüren, wie ein erigierter Penis ihren Unterleib direkt oberhalb des Schambeins und damit den G-Punkt von der anderen Seite aus reizt.

Wird der G-Punkt massiert, so erfährt die Frau dies oft zunächst als Reiz, Harn lassen zu müssen. Doch versichern die Sexuaiforscher, daß daraus eine sexuelle Erregung wird, wenn der Druck fortgesetzt wird. Es ist auch möglich, daß einige Frauen den sexuellen Respons auf die Stimulierung des G-Punk-tes erst noch lernen müssen, und es kann mehrere Male dauern, bis daraus ein angenehmes Gefühl wird. (Perry & Whipple)

Manche Frauen haben festgestellt, daß die Stimulierung ihres G-Punkts ihren Orgasmus auslösen kann, während andere diese Stimulierung als Teil einer allgemeinen sexuellen Stimulierung genießen.

Ob mit oder ohne Stimulierung des G-Punktes, es gibt Frauen, die beim Orgasmus ejakulieren. Dieses Ejakulat, das in recht großen Mengen ausgestoßen werden kann, gleicht in hohem Maße der Samenflüssigkeit. Es ist kein Urin, obwohl viele Frauen, die eine Ejakulation erlebt hatten, berichteten, daß sie darüber bestürzt gewesen waren, weil sie geglaubt hatten, uriniert zu haben. Aus diesem Grund haben sie sich angewöhnt, diese Reaktion zurückzuhalten. Nun, da sich die Ejakulationsfä-higkeit der Frau herumgesprochen hat, werden solche Frauen wahrscheinlich sehr erleichtert sein und den Vorgang genießen. Bisher konnte noch nicht festgestellt werden, wo diese Flüssigkeit im Körper erzeugt oder gespeichert wird.

Die Scheidenwand

Innerhalb der Scheide stützen die Wände einander und erschaffen so einen Innenraum. Die Scheidenwand ist rosa und besitzt viele Falten, was auch ihre große Elastizität erklärt. Während der sexuellen Erregung tritt Gleitflüssigkeit aus den Wänden, ähnlich wie beim Schwitzen.

Gegenüber dem Harnröhrenschwamm befindet sich eine Gruppe von Blutgefäßen, welche den After schützen; diese nennt man den Dammschwamm. Man kann* ihn durch die Vagina fühlen. Während der Plateau-Phase verdickt er sich, was den Scheideneingang weiter verengt.

Der Gebärmutterhals

Am Ende des Scheidenkanals befindet sich der Gebärmutterhals. Die meisten Sexologen sind sich darüber einig, daß die Frau jenseits des ersten (äußeren) Drittels der Scheide nur wenige Reize wahrnimmt. Doch gibt es viele Frauen, die dem heftig widersprechen und davon berichten, daß sie starke Lust empfinden bei tiefen Stößen bis in die hinterste Vagina am Gebärmutterhals, und viele Frauen erfahren auch eine sehr angenehme Kontraktion des Uterus während des Orgasmus.

Das Perineum ist das Verbindungsstück zwischen Scheideneingang und After. Für manche Frauen stellt der After eine sexuell erregende Öffnung dar, für andere wiederum ist er beim Liebesakt streng tabu. Frauen, die Analverkehr Heben, benutzen in der Regel große Mengen Gleitflüssigkeit oder spermizide Gelees, um eine Reizung und ein Schmerzen der empfindlichen Schleimhäute im Anus zu vermeiden. Aus hygienischen Gründen sollte der Mann Finger oder Penis nach dem Einfuhren in den After nicht ungereinigt in die Scheide stecken.

Der Liebesmuskel

Unterhalb der Oberfläche der sichtbaren Genitalien befindet sich die Achterschlaufe des «pubococcygealen» (P-C) oder «Liebesmuskels». Der P-C-Muskel umschlingt Harnröhre, Scheide und After. Ein gut trainierter P-C-Muskel gilt vielen Sexologen als Schlüssel zu einer gesunden, intakten Sexualität, und zwar sowohl für Frauen als auch für Männer. Ein schlechter Muskeltonus fuhrt zu sexuellen und physiologischen Beschwerden wie Geburtskomplikationen und Schwierigkeiten beim Einbehalten des Harns. Der erste Forscher, der die Bedeutung eines guten P-C-Tonus erkannte, war übrigens ein Mann, der Frauen in Schwangerschaftsgymnastik unterwies. Noch heute wird sein Name, Kegel, mit diesen Übungen in Verbindung gebracht.

Mann und Frau können ihren P-C-Muskel dadurch überprüfen, daß sie einen Harnstrahl unterbrechen und wieder einsetzen lassen. Diese Fähigkeit beruht einzig und allein auf dem P-C-Muskeltonus. Viele Frauen haben ganz instinktiv für sich entdeckt, wieviel Freude sie sich und ihren Männern bereiten können, indem sie diesen Muskel zusammenziehen.

Der Zyklus der sexuellen Reaktion

Masters und Johnson haben den Sexualrespons der Frau in vier Phasen unterteilt: Erregung, Plateau-Phase, Orgasmus und Auflösung. Diese Phasen gehen einher mit physiologischen Verän-derungen in den Sexualorganen; In der Erregungsphase erfolgt eine Schwellung bei gleichzeitigem Ausstoß von Gleitflüssigkeit in der Vagina; das breite Band, welches die Gebärmutter halt, wird emporgezogen, was wiederum den hinteren Teil der Vagina während der Plateau-Phase vergrößert; beim Orgasmus erfolgen zahllose Veränderungen, bei manchen Frauen verfärbt sich die Haut auf Rücken und Brust, und Hände sowie Füße verspüren ein Prickeln oder ziehen sich zusammen; schließlich klingt die Reizung in der letzten Phase aus. Beachtenswert ist vor allem, daß Frauen eine sehr lange Erregungsphase durchlaufen. Freilich berichtet Shere Hite, daß die meisten Frauen von sich behaupten, sehr schnell zum Orgasmus zu gelangen, sobald sie mit dem Masturbieren beginnen. Ob dies nun daran liegt, daß die Frau ihre sexuelle Lust ausdehnen kann, oder daran, daß ihre Liebhaber unfähig sind oder die Frau in der Regel zu zurückhaltend ist, um sie richtig zu unterweisen (Hite-Report), ist unklar, stellt aber durchaus eine wichtige Frage dar.

Abbildung 48

Die sieben Stufen des esoterischen Tao Yoga - eine Zusammenfassung

Der Kleine Himmelszyklus
(Kleiner Energiekreislauf)

Eingeleitet werden die sieben höheren Stufen der taoistischen Esoterik durch das Öffnen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufes, einem Prozeß der Wiedergeburt durch «Rückkehr in den Mutterleib». Die Bahn des Energiekreislaufs besteht aus dem Diener- und dem Lenkergefaß, die zuerst gereinigt und dann miteinander verbunden werden müssen, damit die Energie frei kreisen kann.

Menschliches Leben beginnt mit dem Eindringen einer Samenzelle in ein Ei. Aus diesem ursprünglichen Kung Fu-Akt entsteht ein äußerst kompliziertes menschliches Wesen, das zu echtem Genius befähigt ist. Der Fötus entwickelt sich um den Punkt herum, den man Nabel nennt. Von diesem Punkt aus werden Nährstoffe von dem heranwachsenden Lebewesen aufgenommen und Abfallstoffe ausgeschieden. Bei der Übung des warmen Energiestroms kommt dem Nabel aus diesem Grund eine überragende Bedeutung zu. Im Mutterschoß atmet das menschliche Wesen keine Luft, seine Lungen funktionieren noch nicht. Statt dessen empfangt der Fötus Energie und Sauerstoff durch die Nabelschnur. Die Energie tritt an dem Punkt in seinen Organismus ein, der später, nach der Geburt und dem Durchtrennen der Nabelschnur, zum Nabel wird. Von dort strömt sie nach unten zum Steißbein, dann die Wirbelsäule empor bis zum Scheitelpunkt des Kopfes, in der Mitte des Gesichts hinab und weiter zum Nabel, wodurch der Kreislauf geschlossen wird.

Es heißt, daß der Fötus seine Zunge instinktiv an den Gaumen lege. Dies dient dazu, die beiden Energiebahnen miteinander zu verbinden, damit die Kraft richtig fließen kann. Der Scheitel des Säuglings ist noch offen und bewegt sich auf und ab. Das beruht auf dem Anschwellen und Abebben des Kraftstroms in diesem Körperteil.

Die Zunge ist der Endpunkt des Diener-Gefäßes. Diese Energiebahn beginnt unten am Rumpf, an dem Punkt in der Mitte zwischen After und Hoden, dem Hui-Yin. Von dort strömt die Energie vorne durch den Kuan-Yuan oder Jing-Gong den Körper empor und passiert den Tan-Tien (Nabel). Sie durchströmt den Chung-Kung (Solarplexus) und fließt bis zum Shuan-Chung (Herzzentrum), von wo aus sie den Hsuan-Chi (Hals) durchzieht und in der Zungenspitze endet. Wird diese Energiebahn mit dem Lenker-Gefäß verbunden, so kehrt sich ihre Fließrichtung um, und die Energie strömt von der Zunge hinunter zum Nabel und zum Hui-Yin.

Das Lenker-Gefäß beginnt ebenfalls im Hui-Yin. Von dort strömt es durch die Rückseite des Körpers hinauf, und zwar durch den Chang-Chiang (Steißbein) zum Ming-Men, dem »Tor des Lebens«, von wo aus die Bahn zum Chi-Chung zwischen den Nebennieren weiterfuhrt, bis sie den Yu-Chen, das »Smaragdkissen« des Rückenmarks, erreicht. Von dort strömt die Energie dann zum Scheitelpunkt oder Pai-Hui, dann zum Shen-Ting und schließlich zum Yin-Tang zwischen den Augenbrauen, von wo aus sie entlang dem San-Ken (Nasenspitze) zum Gaumen strömt, wo das Lenker-Gefäß endet.

Die Zunge ist ein Energiestromschalter

Der Kreislauf läßt sich dadurch schließen, daß man die Zungenspitze, also das Ende des Diener-Gefäßes, an den Gaumenendpunkt des Lenker-Gefäßes legt. Deshalb muß unsere Zunge beim Üben auch stets den Gaumen berühren. Wenn man die Zunge gegen den Gaumen drückt, so hat dies einen beruhigenden Effekt auf die Schüler, welche die Methode des Warmen Energiestroms üben. Darüber hinaus regt dies auch die Speichelproduktion an. Speichel gilt in der taoistischen Praxis als Wasser des Lebens, als das Hauptgleitmittel aller Körperfunktionen. Die Taoisten sehen im weichen Gaumen eine direkte Verbindung zur Hirnanhangdrüse (Hypophyse).

Mit zunehmendem Alter geraten im Körper des Menschen die Energie von Yin (weiblich) und Yang (männlich) aus dem Gleichgewicht. Je mehr sich diese Disharmonie verstärkt, um so mehr leiden die Körperorgane darunter, ein Zuviel oder ein Zuwenig an Energie empfangen zu müssen. Wie anders dagegen noch die Vitalkraft des Säuglings! Er wird jeden Tag fast fünfundzwanzig Gramm schwerer. Das ist eine erstaunliche Leistung des Körpers, der solche gewaltige Energiemengen zu assimilieren versteht. Doch der Körper des Säuglings vermag diesen geradezu herkulischen Zellenaufbau nur deshalb voranzutreiben, weil in ihm sämtliche Energiebahnen noch völlig offen sind und der Energiestrom entsprechend stark ist.

Das Lenker-Gefäß beherrscht die Yang-Organe des Körpers, also die Lungen, die Milz, das Herz, die Nieren, die Geschlechtsorgane und die Leber. Das Diener-Gefäß kontrolliert dagegen die Yin-Organe, also den Dickdarm, den Magen, den Dünndarm, die Blase, den Dreifachen Erwärmer und die Gallenblase. Das Gewebe besitzt Yang-Natur, während das Blut Yin-geprägt ist.

Die sieben Formeln der sieben Bücher des Tao*

1. DIE ERSTE FORMEL:
Die Verschmelzung der fünf Elemente

Diese Formel verbindet die unterschiedlichen Energien der fünf Hauptelemente zu einem harmonischen Ganzen. Diese Meditation übt einen besonders starken Filter- und ReinigungsefTekt auf das menschliche Nervensystem aus, Die Erde ist die Mutter aller Elemente, alles Leben entspringt ihrem fruchtbaren Schoß. Dadurch werden die anderen vier Elemente der chinesischen Kosmogonie mit der gebärenden Erde verbunden. Mit anderen Worten: Metall, Holz, Wasser und Feuer werden in die Erde zurückgezogen und leicht erhitzt. So wird jedes Element zwar gereinigt, doch wird es nicht unter einer derartigen Hitze mit den anderen verschmolzen, daß es sich auflösen und zu Asche zerfallen würde. ^

Diese Formel gilt als hochgeheime Methode der taoistischen Meditation. In der chinesischen Philosophie entspricht jedes Element einem bestimmten Organ. Die Erde entspricht der Milz, Metall den Lungen, Wasser den Nieren, Holz der Leber und Feuer dem Herzen. Die fünf Elemente können auf zweifache Weise in Beziehung treten: sich aufbauend oder sich abbauend. Der Aufbauende oder Schöpfungszyklus verläuft folgendermaßen: Holz brennt, um Feuer hervorzubringen, die Asche zerfällt und sickert in die Erde ein, wo Metalle geboren und gewonnen werden, die zu Wasser (Flüssigkeit) geschmolzen werden, welches wiederum Bäume und Pflanzen nährt. Der Abbauende oder Zerstörungszyklus sieht so aus: Holz wird von Metall gehauen, Feuer wird von Wasser gelöscht, Erde wird von Holz durchdrungen, Metall wird von Feuer geschmolzen, und Wasser wird von Erde in seinem Strom unterbrochen und abgeschnitten.

Der Lebenszyklus kennt ebenfalls seine Elementbeziehungen: Geburt entspricht dem Holz, Wachstum dem Feuer, Reife der Erde, Ernte dem Metall und Speicherung dem Wasser. Klimatische Analogien sind: Wind gleich Holz, Hitze gleich Feuer, Feuchtigkeit gleich Erde, Trockenheit gleich Metall und Kälte gleich Wasser. Die ihnen entsprechenden Gefühle (Mitgefühl, Trauer, Freude, Zorn, Furcht) verschmelzen zu einem harmonischen Ganzen, wodurch sie die Moral heben und Güte, Sanftmut, Rechtschaffenheit, Respekt und Humor fordern. Die Formel der zu einer Einheit verbundenen fünf Elemente beinhaltet die Vermengung von Yin und Yang, um zu einem Zustand größerer körperlicher Harmonie und Schönheit zu gelangen. Die alte alchemistische Formel SOLVE ET COAGULA (Lose und binde) entspricht der zweiten Stufe der Meditation.

Auf dieser Stufe erkennt man den großen Nutzen der Fünf Elemente, die bereits im eigenen Körper existieren und die man vielleicht bereits studiert, aber noch nicht durch eigene Erfahrung verstanden haben mag. Die Verschmelzung der Fünf Elemente wird Ihnen eine solche Erfahrung bringen: Auf dieser Stufe wird der ganze Körper intensiv gereinigt. So werden viele Gase freigesetzt, und es kommt vielleicht zu heftigen Darmbewegungen mit sehr schwarzem, übelriechendem Stuhl.

Nun müssen noch weitere sechs Bahnen oder Kanäle freigemacht werden (die sogenannten «Besonderen Gefäße»), so daß wir schließlich acht Bahnen zur Verfügung haben. Die ersten beiden sind das Lenker- und das Diener-Gefäß. Als nächstes muß der Chung-Ma entwickelt werden.

Der Chung-Ma oder das «Aufsteigende Gefäß» entspringt im unteren Rumpfbereich im Hui-Yin und verläuft entlang zwei Linien zum Mittelpunkt zwischen den Brustwarzen, wo es sich zu den Schultern teilt und sich am Schlüsselbein wieder mit sich selbst vereint. Von dort verläuft es zum Gesicht hoch, über den Mund und zu dem Punkt zwischen den Augen, um am Scheitelpunkt zu enden.

Eine weitere Bahn des Chung-Ma beginnt im Yung-Chuan (dem Erdgrund), fuhrt an der Innenseite der Beine entlang bis zu den Oberschenkeln und vereint sich wieder im Hui-Yin. Von dort verläuft die Bahn durch die Körpermitte, passiert dabei Dick- und Dünndarm, Niere, Bauchspeicheldrüse, Leber, Magen, Herz, Lunge und Luftröhre, um schließlich ins Gehirn zu gelangen, wo sie über Hypophyse, Zirbeldrüse und Mittelhirn zum Scheitelpunkt Pai-Hui verläuft.

Das zweite Besondere Gefäß ist das Tai-Ma. Dieser Energiekanal entspringt dem Rippenbereich und schlingt sich wie ein Band kreisförmig um die Hüfte. Man nennt ihn auch das «Gürtel-Gefäß», weil er wie ein Gürtel die Yin- und Yang-Kanäle zusammenbindet. Ist er richtig geöffnet, so bewegt sich die Energie durch diesen Kanal spiralförmig um den ganzen Körper. Sieht man von oben nach unten, so erscheint das Band in einer Drehbewegung gegen den Uhrzeigersinn, also vc^i rechts nach links; gleichzeitig bewegt es sich den ganzen Körper hoch und verbindet alle Körperkanäle miteinander. Bei Frauen verläuft die Spiraldrehung im Uhrzeigersinn.

Das dritte der sechs bisher nicht behandelten Besonderen Gefäße ist das Yang-Chiao-Ma, das «Positive Bein-Gefäß». Dieses beginnt außen an den beiden Knöcheln, verläuft entlang der äußeren Schenkel die Beine hoch, um von dort zu den Hüften emporzusteigen, einem sehr starken Energieaufnahmezentrum, dann steigt es außen am Rücken hinauf über die linke und rechte Schulter, die kraftvolle Energieaufnahmezentren sind, um als nächstes den Hals entlang hinauf zu den Mundwinkeln zu verlaufen, von dort in die Augenhöhlen einzudringen und über Stirn und Schädel schließlich im Rückenmarksbereich zu enden.

Das vierte Besondere Gefäß ist das Yin-Chao-Ma oder das «Negative Bein-Gefäß». Dieser Kanal beginnt im Mittelpunkt der Fußsohlen, windet sich nach innen zu den Knöcheln und steigt von dort die Innenseite der Beine hinauf. Dann fuhrt es von der Innenseite der Oberschenkel außen an den Geschlechtsorganen vorbei und hinauf zum Brustkorb, anschließend durch Schlüsselbein und Hals über das Gesicht zu den inneren Augenwinkeln. Diese Bahn besteht eigentlich aus zwei Bahnen, eine auf jeder Seite, an denen auch getrennt gearbeitet werden kann.

Das fünfte Besondere Gefäß ist das Yang-Wei-Ma. Es beginnt vorne am äußeren Knöchel, läuft in gerader Linie an der Außenseite des Beines hoch und weiter seitlich am Körper, biegt um die Schulter zur Halsseite und läuft über Gesicht, Stirn und Schädel, um im Rückenmark (Hinterhauptloch) zu enden.

Das sechste Besondere Gefäß ist das Yin-Wei-Ma. Es beginnt an der Innenseite des Schienbeins und läuft in gerader Linie an der Vorderseite des Körpers hoch, über Knie, Oberschenkel, seitlich am Unterleib und am Brustkorb vorbei zu den Brustwarzen. Dort wendet es sich nach innen zum Hals, wo es sich mit dem Diener-Gefäß vereint.

Alle Energiebahnen des Körpers sind also durch ein Netzwerk miteinander verbunden: das Diener- und das Lenker-Gefäß, die sechs Besonderen Gefäße und die vierundzwanzig regulären Kanäle, die den Organen zu beiden Seiten des Körpers entsprechen. Diese Bahnen lassen sich jeweils mit Autobahnen, Schnellstraßen und Landstraßen vergleichen, auf denen die Energie durch den Körper strömt.

2. DIE ZWEITE FORMEL:
Die Kleine Erleuchtung von Kan und Li

Diese Formel wird im Chinesischen Siaow Kan Li genannt. Bildhaft wird mit ihr der Samen (Ching) zu Lebensenergie (Chi) gedämpft. Man könnte es auch so ausdrücken, daß hier die Übertragung der Kraft der Sexualhormone in den gesamten Organismus und in das Gehirn beginnt. Das entscheidende Geheimnis dieser Formel besteht darin, die üblichen Positionen von Yin und Yang zu vertauschen, um auf diese Weise die Samenenergie zu befreien.

Die ersten beiden Anweisungen sind eine Vorbereitung der Bahnen, damit die Energie des Samens freier strömen kann und der Körper dazu befähigt wird, den großen Einstrom gewaltiger Energie (die man mit dem Erwekken der Kundalini vergleichen kann) zu verkraften. Zu dieser Formel gehören Pflege und Entwicklung des Wurzel- (Hui-Yin) und des Herz-Chakras, wie auch die Transformation der Samenenergie zu Samenkraft im Nabel.

Diese Umkehrung stellt die Hitze des Körperfeuers unter die Kühle des Körperwassers. Wenn diese Vertauschung von Yin und Yang nicht erfolgt, lodert das Feuer einfach nur in die Höhe und verbrennt den Körper von innen. Das Wasser (Samen und Samenflüssigkeit) hat die Tendenz, in die Tiefe zu strömen und den Körper zu verlassen. Wenn es eingetrocknet ist, hat es auch sein Leben ausgehaucht. Diese Formel kehrt den normalen, energievergeudenden Vorgang um, indem mit Hilfe einer äußerst fortgeschrittenen Technik das Wasser im Körper in ein verschlossenes Gefäß (Tiegel) gegeben wird, worauf man den Samen von unten mit Feuer erhitzt und kocht. Wird das Wasser (Samenkraft) nicht versiegelt, strömt es direkt ins Feuer und löscht es, oder es wird selbst vom Feuer verzehrt. Diese Formel sorgt dafür, daß beide Elemente ihre Integrität bewahren können, wodurch der Prozeß des Dämpfens über lange Zeit ausgedehnt werden kann. Grundlegend für diese Formel ist das Prinzip, niemals Feuer emporsteigen zu lassen, ohne darüber Wasser zu haben, das von ihm erhitzt werden kann, und andererseits stets dafür zu sorgen, daß kein Wasser ins Feuer fließt. Auf diese Weise erhält man einen warmen, feuchten Dampf, der eine gewaltige Energie in sich trägt und außerordentlich gesundheitsfördernd ist.

Die Zweite Formel besteht aus folgenden Prozessen:

a) Vermischung des Wassers (Yin) und des Feuers (Yang) (oder von männ lich und weiblich), um zu gebären;

b) Transformation der Samenkraft (Zeugungskraft) in Vitalenergie (Chi), Sammeln und Reinigen des äußeren alchemischen Agens im Kleinen Energiekreislauf;

c) Öffnen der zwölf Hauptmeridiane;

d) Beginn der «Halb-Unsterblichkeit» (Vereinigung und Sublimation von Körper und Seele);

e) Kreisenlassen der Kraft im Solaren (oder Kosmischen) Kreislauf;
f) Umkehrung des Stromes der Zeugungsenergie, um Körper und Gehirn zu kräftigen und in den organischen Zustand vor der Pubertät zurückzuverset zen;
g) Stufenweises Einschränken der Nahrungsaufnahme, und ein Sichverlassen auf das innere Selbst, auf Sonne, Mond und Wasser, das Einsetzen der kosmischen Energie (Beginn der «Halb-Unsterblichkeit»).

3. DIE DRITTE FORMEL:
Die Große Erleuchtung von Kan und Li

Die Vermischung des Großen Yin und Yang (1)

Diese Formel besteht aus der taoistischen Praktik des Dah Kan Li (Ta Kan Li). Auch hierbei wird die Umkehrung von Yin und Yang angewandt, doch wird durch diese Technik die Energie, die in den Körper Hineingezogen wird, erheblich vermehrt. Auf dieser Stufe wird die Vermengung, die Transformation und die Harmonisierung der Energie im Solarplexus (was in etwa dem Manipura Chakra entsprechen könnte) durchgeführt. Die Kraftverstärkung resultiert daraus, daß die zweite Formel Yin- und Yang-Energie aus dem Körper selbst bezieht, während die dritte Formel die Kraft direkt aus dem Himmel (oben) und aus der Erde (Erdleitung - entsprechend Yang und Yin) holt und diese Elementarkräfte denen des Körpers hinzufügt. Tatsächlich läßt sich aus jeder Energiequelle Kraft beziehen, etwa vom Mond, einem Wald, aus der Erde, dem Licht usw.

Die dritte Formel besteht aus folgenden Prozessen:
a) Verlegung des Ofens und Umwandlung des Tiegels;
b) Vermischung des Größeren Wassers und Feuers (Verkehr zwischen Mann und Frau);
c) Große Transformation der Samenkraft auf die höhere Ebene;

d) Verwandlung des äußeren und des inneren chemischen Agens, um die Zeugungskraft wiederherzustellen und das Gehirn zu stärken;
e) Pflege und Entwicklung von Körper und Seele;
f) Beginn der Verfeinerung der Samenkraft (Zeugungskraft, Vitalkraft, Ching Chi);
g) Aufnehmen der Mutter-Erde-Kraft (Yin) und der Vater-Himmel-Kraft (Yang); Vermischung mit Samenkraft (Körper) und Geist; h) Aufsteigen der Seele;
i) Bewahrung der aktiven Zeugungs- (Samen-)kraft und Verhinderung ihres Abfließens;
j) Stufenweiser Verzicht auf Nahrung und Verlaß auf sich selbst und die Universale Energie.

4. DIE VIERTE FORMEL:

Die Größte Erleuchtung von Kan und Li
(Tai Kan Li)

Die Vermischung des Größten Yin und Yang (2)

Kern dieser Formel ist die Vermischung von Yin und Yang in einem höheren Zentrum im Körper. Damit wird der Altersprozeß umgekehrt und die Thymusdrüse wiederhergestellt, um die natürliche Immunität zu erhöhen. Dies beinhaltet, daß die Heilungsenergie aus einem kraftvolleren Zentrum im Körper ausgestrahlt wird und damit dem physischen und dem Ätherleib großen Nutzen bringt.
Die Vierte Formel besteht aus folgenden Prozessen:

a) Umwandeln des Tiegels und Verlegen des Ofens in ein höheres Zentrum;
b) Aufnahme der Sonnen- und der Mondkraft;
c) Die Größte Vermischung, Transformation, Verdampfung und Reinigung der Samenkraft (Zeugungsenergie), der Seele, Mutter Erde, Vater Himmel, Sonnen- und

Mond-Kraft, um das innere alchemische Agens des Kleinen Energie kreislaufs zu sammeln;
d) Vermengung der Visual- mit der Vitalkraft;
e) Vermengung (Sublimation) von Körper, Sqele und Geist. Mystische Atmung.

5. DIE FÜNFTE FORMEL:

Das Versiegeln der fiinf Sinnesorgane

Diese sehr fortgeschrittene Formel bewirkt eine echte Transmutation des Warmen Energiestroms oder des Chi in Mentaloder Seelenenergie. Dazu müssen jedoch erst die fünf Sinnesorgane versiegelt werden, da jedes von ihnen ein Tor ist, durch das Energie verlorengeht. Mit anderen Worten: Werden diese Tore nicht auf esoterische Weise versiegelt, verlieren wir Energie durch die Sinnesorgane. Sie dürfen nur dann Energie freisetzen, wenn sie spezifisch zu dem Ziel angerufen werden, um Informationen weiterzuleiten. Dies könnte man mit dem Augenbrauen-(Ajna) und dem Kehlkopf-Chakra (Vissuddha) gleichsetzen.

Ein Mißbrauch der Sinne fuhrt zu einem viel größeren Energieverlust und Zerfall, als die meisten Menschen glauben. Hier sind einige Beispiele für den Mißbrauch der Sinne und seine Folgen: Zu vieles Sehen schadet der Samenflüssigkeit; zu vieles Hören beeinträchtigt den Verstand; spricht man zuviel, schadet dies den Speicheldrüsen; weint man zuviel, schadet man dem Blut; zu häufiger Geschlechtsverkehr schädigt das Rückenmark usw.

Jedes der Elemente hat sein entsprechendes Sinnesorgan, durch das seine Elementarkraft gesammelt oder verströmt werden kann. Das Auge entspricht dem Feuer; die Zunge dem Wasser; das linke Ohr dem Metall; das rechte Ohr dem Holz; die Nase der Erde.

Die Fünfte Formel besteht aus folgenden Prozessen:

a) Versiegeln der fünf Diebe: Öhren, Augen, Nase, Zunge und Körper;

b) Meisterung des Herzens und der sieben Emotionen (Vergnügen, Zorn, Trauer, Freude, Liebe, Haß und Verlangen);
c) Vereinigung und Umwandlung des inneren alchemi-schen Agens in lebenserhaltende wahre Vitalität;
d) Reinigung des Geistes;
e) Aufsteigenlassen und Schulung des Geistes; Verhindern seines Umherwanderns auf der Suche nach Sinneseindrücken;
f) Verzicht auf kraftlose Nahrung, Ernährung durch kraftvolle Nahrung, die universale Energie.

6. DIE SECHSTE FORMEL:

Die Vermählung von Himmel und Erde / Unsterblichkeit

Die sechste, fortgeschrittenste Formel laßt sich schwer mit Worten beschreiben. Zu ihr gehört die Inkarnation einer männlichen und einer weiblichen Wesenheit im Körper des Adepten (dies könnte dem Scheitel-Chakra, dem Sahasrara, entsprechen). Diese beiden Wesenheiten haben innerhalb des Körpers Geschlechtsverkehr. Dazu gehört die Vermischung der Yin-und Yang-Kräfte auf dem und um den Scheitel; ferner muß der Adept vollkommen offen sein, um Energie von oben empfangen zu können, damit die Zirbeldrüse wieder völlig hergestellt wird. Hat die Zirbeldrüse ihre größte Fülle erreicht, so dient sie ihm als Kompaß, der ihm sagt, in welcher Richtung sein Lebensziel zu finden ist. Der Esoterische Taoismus ist eine Methode der Meisterung des Geistes, und dies findet seinen Ausdruck im Tao Yoga. Ohne den Körper kann das Tao nicht erlangt, doch mit dem Körper kann die Wahrheit niemals erkannt werden. Der praktizierende Taoist sollte seinen physischen Körper mit derselben Sorgfalt pflegen und behandeln, die er auf einen kostbaren Diamanten verwenden würde, denn durch ihn kann er die Unsterblichkeit erlangen. Wenn man den Körper aber nicht preisgibt, wenn man am Ziel angekommen ist, so wird man die Wahrheit nicht erkennen.

Die Sechste Formel besteht aus folgenden Prozessen:

a) Vermischung (Vereinigung) von Körper, Seele, Geist und Universum (Kosmischer Energiekreislauf).

b) Vollständige Entwicklung des Positiven, um das Negative völlig auszulö schen;

c) Rückkehr des Geistes ins Nichts.

7. DIE SIEBTE FORMEL:

Wiedervereinigung von Mensch und Himmel. Der wahrhaft unsterbliche Mensch

Wir können den Körper mit einem Schiff vergleichen, dessen Motor und Antriebsschraube die Seele ist. Dieses Schiff befördert einen sehr kostbaren und sehr großen Diamanten, den es an ein äußerst fernes Ufer bringen soll. Wenn Ihr Schiff beschädigt ist (= ein kranker Körper), kann Ihre Seele so intakt sein, wie sie will - sie werden nicht sehr weit kommen und möglicherweise sogar untergehen. Deshalb raten wir auch von jeglichem spirituellen Training ab, bevor alle Kanäle im Körper richtig geöffnet und darauf vorbereitet worden sind, die 10.000 oder gar 100.000 Volt an Hyperenergie aufzunehmen, die in sie hineingeleitet werden. Die taoistische Methode, die uns schon seit über fünftausend Jahren überliefert wurde, besteht aus vielen Tausenden von Methoden. Die Formeln und Praktiken, die wir in diesen Büchern beschreiben, beruhen auf solchem Geheimwissen und auf der über zehnjährigen persönlichen Erfahrung des Autors sowie auf den Erfolgen, die er bei der Unterweisung Hunderter von Schülern erzielen konnte.

Die Hauptziele eines Taoisten sind:

1. Jetzige Stufe: Überwindung der Reinkarnation;
2. Die Höhere Stufe: der unsterbliche Geist;
3. Die Höchste Stufe: der unsterbliche Geist und der unsterbliche Körper (ähnlich einem beweglichen Wohnort für Geist und Seele).

19. KAPITEL

Seminare zum Tao Yoga

Es gibt mittlerweile 9 Zentren für Esoterischen Tao Yoga in den Vereinigten Staaten, die Kurse und Seminare aus den unterschiedlichsten Gebieten der Praxis anbieten, vom Kleinen Energiekreislauf bis zu Tai Chi Chuan, Pa Kua und Hsing I.

Diese auch als «Meditation des Warmen Stroms» bekannten Praktiken erwecken die schöpferische Lebenskraft Chi durch die Hauptakupunkturpunkte im Körper, bringen sie zum Kreisen, lenken und erhalten sie. Auf den fortgeschrittenen Stufen kann dieses uralte esoterische System dabei helfen, Streß und nervöse Verspannungen zu beheben, die inneren Organe zu massieren und zerstörtes Gewebe wiederherzustellen.

Dieses System ist auch von besonderem Interesse für Thera-peuten, die mit Polarity, Shiatsu, Kundalini Yoga, Schwedischer Massage und anderen Heilmethoden arbeiten, bei denen ein Austausch und Kreislauf von Lebensenergie (Ki, Prana, Chi) aufrechterhalten werden muß. Die ersten beiden Anweisungen des Tao Yoga sollen im folgenden beschrieben werden. Die anderen Anweisungen werden beschrieben, sobald sie ins Angebot aufgenommen wurden.

Das Herstellen des kleinen Energiekreislaufes ist die erste Stufe der esoterisch-taoistischen Meditation des Warmen Stroms. Durch einzigartige Entspannungs- und Konzentrationstechniken sorgt es für eine Reinigung der beiden wichtigsten Akupunktur-Meridiane des menschlichen Körpers, nämlich des Diener- und des Lenker-Gefäßes. Meister Chia unterstützt die Schüler bei der Meisterung dieser Technik, indem er ihnen mit den eigenen Händen Energie in ihre Energie-Kanäle leitet. (Kurs Nr.l)

Die vollständige Herstellung des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs ist die Grundvoraussetzung für jeden, der sich den höheren Stufen des Tao Yoga widmen will, zu denen verschiedene Formen des Chi Kung, des Samen- und Ovar-Kung Fu und der langen und kurzen Form des Tai Chi Chuan gehören.

Die Verschmelzung derßinf Elemente und das Reinigen der Organe ist die zweite Stufe der esoterisch-taoistischen Meditation des Warmen Stroms. Auf dieser Stufe lernt der Schüler, wie die fünf Elemente (Erde, Metall, Feuer, Holz, Wasser) auf zweifache Weise mit den ihnen entsprechenden Organen (Milz, Lungen, Herz, Leber, Nieren) zusammenarbeiten: aufbauend und abbauend. Diese Formel verbindet die ungleichartigen Energien der fünf Hauptelemente (und der ihnen entsprechenden Emotionen Mitgefühl, Trauer, Freude, Zorn und Furcht) zu einem harmonischen Ganzen. Diese miteinander verbundenen Energien zirkulieren im Kleinen Energiekreislauf und durch die Sechs Besonderen Meridiane. Sie filtern dadurch auf höchst wirkungsvolle Weise das gesamte psychische und physische System. (Kurs Nr. 9)

Die Zweite Formel wird in drei Teilen unterrichtet:

TEIL I: Die zwölf Stufen der Sammlung, Verschmelzung, Harmonisierung und Reinigung der Organe;

TEIL II: Das Öffnen der drei Chung-Ma (Aufsteigende Gefäße) und der neun Tai-Ma (Gürtel-Gefäße); TEIL III: Das Öffnen der Positiven und Negativen Bein- und Armkanäle.

Die sechs Heilenden Laute

Bei dieser Methode der Selbstheilung werden einfache Armbewegungen und Stimmübungen dazu benutzt, die inneren Organe zu kühlen. Die Sechs Heilenden Laute beseitigen schnell jeden Streß, verbessern die Verdauungs vor gange, lindern Schlafstörungen, Kopfschmerzen und Mattigkeit. Diese Methode ist sowohl für Meditierende als auch für Athleten und

Kampfsportler nützlich, die mit Systemen arbeiten, bei denen ein Übermaß an Hitze im Körper erzeugt wird- (Kurs Nr. 2)

Chi Massage - Taoistische Verjüngungspraxis

Mit Hilfe von innerer Chi-Kraft und sanfter äußerer Stimulierung läßt sich mit dieser einfachen und doch äußerst wirkungsvollen Selbstmassage Chi sammeln und zu Heilungszwecken in die Sinnesorgane und andere Körperteile lenken.
Die taoistische Verjüngungstechnik beruht auf dem fünftausend Jahre alten klassischen Taoismus-Text des Gelben Kaisers über Innere Medizin. (Kurs Nr. 3)

Eisenhemd Chi Kung
Die Höchste Stufe des Chi Kung

Durch das Sammeln und Kreisenlassen der inneren Kraft Chi in den lebenswichtigen Organen wird der physische Körper in seiner Gesamtheit erhalten und geschützt. Diese Energie wird in den Faszien gespeichert, einer Gewebeschicht, welche die Muskeln und die inneren Organe bedeckt, stützt oder miteinander verbindet. Praktiziert man es über längere Zeit, so stärkt Eisenhemd Chi Kung sowohl die inneren Organe als auch die Sehnen, die Muskeln, das Knochenmark und die Knochen.

Historisch betrachtet, war Eisenhemd Chi Kung die Grundvoraussetzung für das erfolgreiche Studium und das schließliche Meistern der verschiedenen Kampfstile des Kung Fu. Doch dient es nur in zweiter Linie dem Kampfund der Selbstverteidigung: Sein Hauptziel ist, eine ausgezeichnete Gesundheit und erhöhte Widerstandskraft zu erhalten und die Abwehr des Körpers gegen Krankheiten und plötzliche Verletzungen zu stärken. (Kurs Nr. 4)

Eisenhemd Chi Kung wird in drei Ausbildungsstufen unterrichtet. (Vgl. die detaillierte Beschreibung weiter unten.)

Tai Chi Chi Kung -
Die Grundlage des Tai Chi Chuan

Wird das Chi nicht durch die Meridiane, Muskeln und Sehnen des Körpers gelenkt, so sind die Bewegungsabläufe des Tai Chi Chuan nur Gymnastik. Die Praktik des Tai Chi Chi Kung hingegen weckt die Chi-Energie und laßt sie im Körper kreisen - weshalb sie auch die Voraussetzung für die Beherrschung des Tai Chi Chuan ist. Durch den Kiemen Energiekreislauf lernen wir das Strömen dieser Energie kennen und erschließen uns damit unser eigenes Potential der Selbstheilung. Dieser Kreislauf wird durch die Praxis des Tai Chi Chi Kung unterstützt und verstärkt. Auch wirkt sich dabei gesundheitsfördernd aus, daß auf korrekte Körperhaltung und - bewegungen geachtet und der Geist beruhigt wird. Die in diesem Kurs gelehrte Variante besteht aus einem Zyklus von 13 Bewegungen. (Kurs Nr. 6)

Dah Uh Gong Nei Kung
Fünf finger Kung Fu

Das System des Dah Uh Gong Nei Kung vereint sowohl statische als auch dynamische Übungen, um das Chi zu entwik-keln und zu nähren, das sich in den Organen sammelt, die Faszien, Sehnen und Muskeln durchdringt und schließlich in die Hände und Finger strömt. Ausübende von Körpertherapien wie Chiropraxis, Polarity, Shiatsu und Schwedischer Massage können von dieser Technik viel profitieren. Übt man sie regelmäßig, so erweitert sie das Atemvolumen und beruhigt Atmung und Geist; außerdem korrigiert sie die Körperhaltung. Diese Technik läßt sich leichter erlernen als Tai Chi Chuan und ist einfacher in der Durchführung als Yoga. Durch Dah Uh Gong lernt der Schüler:

- das Atemvolumen zu steigern;
- die inneren Organe zu kräftigen;
- die Muskulatur anzuregen und zu strecken;

- den unteren Wirbelsäulenbereich und die Unterleibs mus-keln zu stärken;
- das Körpergewicht zu normalisieren;
- die Konzentrationsfähigkeit für die Selbstheilung zu steigern. Vorausgesetzt wird die Teilnahme am Kurs Nr. 1. (Kurs Nr. 5)

Samen- und Ovar-Kung Fu

Diese uralte Methode des Tao Yoga sublimiert und transformiert die Sexualenergie, indem sie in den Kleinen Energiekreislauf eingebracht wird. Die Bewahrung dieser kostbaren biochemischen Kraft wurde von den Weisen unterschiedlichster Geheim-traditionen stets sowohl als wichtiger Faktor für die körperliche Gesundheit als auch für die geistige Entwicklung von Mann wie Frau anerkannt. Indem diese Zeugungskraft zurückgelenkt und in die höheren Energiezentren befördert wird, kräftigt und verjüngt sie alle lebenswichtigen Körperorgane. Wirkliche sexuelle Erfüllung besteht darin, die achtlose Vergeudung dieses Lebensstroms zu verhin-dern und zu einer höheren, intensiveren Stufe des Orgasmus vorzustoßen. Diese Technik läßt sich für die persönliche Transformation anwenden - die physische wie die geistige. (Kurs Nr. 7)

Tai Chi Chuan - Lange und Kurze Form

Will man aus den stillen, langsamen und sanften Bewegungen des Tai Chi Chuan wirklich Nutzen ziehen, muß man zuvor das Chi-Bewußtsein und innere Kraft durch das Eröffnen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs und durch Tai Chi Chi Kung erlangt haben. Tai Chi Chuan erzieht den Körper darüber hinaus dazu, durch Entspannung und Kräftigung dem Geist zu dienen. Außerdem kann Tai Chi Chuan als Technik der Selbstverteidigung verwendet werden, doch nur, wenn man die innere Chi-Energie so kreisen lassen und einsetzen kann, daß jede Bewegung des Körpers von ihr gelenkt wird.

Bevor das Studium des Tai Chi Chuan begonnen werden kann, muß der Schüler folgende Disziplinen gemeistert haben:

1. Eröffnen des Kleinen Energiekreislaufs;
2. Tai Chi Chi Kung (13 Bewegungsabläufe);
3. Eisenhemd Chi Kung, Stufe I;
4. Samen- und Ovar-Kung Fu, Stufe I.
   (Kurse Nr. 11 und 12)

Zum Seminarstab gehören westliche Ärzte, Ernährungswissenschaftler usw. Meister Chia stattet jedem der Zentren regelmäßige Besuche ab, um dort Vorträge zu halten und Einzelberatungen durchzuführen. Er unterstützt seine Schüler auch beim Kreisenlassen des Chi, indem er ihnen «Energie überträgt», insbesondere jenen, die, aus welchen Gründen auch immer, Blockaden in sich verspüren. Doch hat dies nichts mit «Blitz-Erleuchtung» zu tun! Es dient der Erfahrung eines stärkeren Chi-Stromes, damit der Schüler besser lernt, wie er ihn selbst erzeugen kann. In den folgenden Bänden der Enzyklopädie des Esoterischen Tao Yoga werden auch die uralten Disziplinen, deren Techniken dem westlichen Menschen bisher weitgehend vorenthalten wurden, gründlich abgehandelt.

Samen-Kung Fu: Das Taoistische Geheimnis der Lebensenergie

In über fünf Jahrtausenden chinesischer Geschichte wurde die Technik des «Zurückhaltens der Samenflüssigkeit» während des Liebesakts streng geheimgehalten. Zunächst durften nur der Kaiser und sein innerster Kreis sie praktizieren. Später wurde das Geheimnis dann nur vom Vater an den Sohn weitergegeben, wobei Ehefrauen, Töchter und alle anderen weiblichen Familienmitglieder von der Überlieferung ausgeklammert blieben. Diese Methode gestattet es dem Mann, seine Körpersäfte einzubehalten, da diese eine unschätzbare Energiequelle sind, wenn sie gespeichert werden und man sie in den Lebenszentren kreisen läßt.

Zu allen Zeiten haben Weise überall auf der Welt gewußt, daß die Bewahrung der kostbaren Samen- und Ovar-Energien das Leben des Menschen zutiefst beeinflussen kann. Wer seinen lebenspendenden Samen einbehält, wird feststellen, daß er ganz instinktiv damit beginnt, alles Lebende vor Zerfall, Vergeudung und Schaden zu bewahren. Wer dagegen den Lebenssaft und seine Energie achtlos und im Übermaß vergeudet, wird um jeden Preis nach neuen äußeren Reizen suchen, um dadurch die eigenen, verlorengegangenen Energien wieder zu ersetzen.

Man vermeidet den Verlust dieser biochemischen Energie, indem man die Ejakulation verhindert. Doch darf man das Vermeiden des Samenergusses nicht mit einer Verhinderung des Orgasmus verwechseln! Im Gegenteil: Die Methode des Einbehaltens erschließt uns eine völlig neuartige und höhere Form des Orgasmus!

Durch diese Praxis werden sämtliche Lebensprozesse vitali-siert, weil man die Lebensenergie nicht mehr durch die Genitalien entläßt. Wahre sexuelle Erfüllung besteht nicht darin zu fühlen, wie die Lebenskraft aus dem Organismus austritt, sondern vielmehr darin, die Aufmerksamkeit für den Energiestrom im Genitalbereich zu steigern. Darüber hinaus wird der Körper durch eine Methode der «Dämpfung» gestärkt, bei der die Vitalkraft von den Sexualzentren ins Gehirn und in die inneren Organe hochgeleitet wird. Dieser lebensbereichernde Prozeß wird dadurch vollendet, daß man in Augenblicken großer Erregung mit dem Partner Energie austauscht.

Die Weisen meinten, daß die Vitalkraft eines einzigen Samentropfens der von hundert Tropfen Blut entspräche. Die Inder sprechen wiederholt vom Lebenselixier «Amrita», einer verjüngenden Substanz, die aus der Sexualenergie gewonnen wird. Die Produktion dieses Elixiers, das Westliche eine erhöhte hormonelle Sekretion nennen würden, erlaubt es dem Körper, immer höhere Energiestufen zu erreichen.

In unserer Konsumgesellschaft geben die meisten Menschen mehr aus, als sie verdienen. Sie borgen sich so lange Geld, bis sie tief verschuldet sind. Das gilt auch für ihr Innenleben: Durch schlechte Angewohnheiten vergeuden sie mehr Lebensenergie, als sie aufnehmen.

Stellen wir uns einmal vor, daß ein Mensch durch Atmen, Essen und Ruhen 100 Einheiten Lebenskraft zu sich nimmt, durch Völlerei, Überarbeitung, Streß, konstitutionelle Schwächen und häufigen Verlust der vitalen Flüssigkeit jedoch 125 Einheiten Lebenskraft ausgibt. Dies fuhrt dazu, daß dieser Mensch sich ständig vom Gehirn und anderen lebenswichtigen Organen Vitalität «ausleihen» muß. Dieses Leben von der Substanz, von den eigenen Energiereserven, fuhrt zu geistiger und körperlicher Erkrankung und zu vorzeitigem Altern. Wir möchten Ihnen dagegen beibringen, wie Sie durch Überwindung weltlicher Sexualgelüste in Verbindung mit unserer Methode 125 Einheiten aufnehmen können, aber nur 100 oder noch weniger Einheiten auszugeben brauchen. Das eigene Ungleichgewicht im persönlichen Energiehaushalt wird zunächst dadurch ausgeglichen, daß die katastrophal verschwenderische Praxis der Ejakulation unterbunden wird, während man zugleich mit dem eigenen Sexualpartner einen aufbauenden, ausgleichenden Energieaustausch erlebt.

Eisenhemd Kung Fu

Bevor in China die Feuerwaffen eingeführt wurden, verließ man sich weitgehend auf Kung Fu. Damals praktizierte etwa ein Zehntel aller Chinesen diese Kampfart, die uns bis heute überliefert wurde. Zuerst mußte man für das Kung Fu die innere Kraft entwickeln - der Warme Energiestrom mußte freigesetzt werden, der Kleine Energiekreislauf mußte eröffnet werden, und die sechs Besonderen Meridiane mußten zusammen mit den 24 normalen Meridianen durchströmt werden, damit die innere Kraft ungehindert im Körper fließen konnte. Erst danach lernte der angehende Kung Fu-Schüler, wie er seine Vitalorgane kräftigen und durch die Praxis des «Eisenhemds» vor äußeren Schäden schützen konnte. Erst dann ging es an die eigentliche Kampfpraxis, da die verschiedenen Kampfstile nur dann wirkungsvoll eingesetzt werden konnten, wenn die innere Kraft voll entwickelt worden war.

Die Schriften weisen daraufhin, daß es viele Jahre dauerte, bis die innere Kraft voll entwickelt werden korinte. So mußte man beispielsweise drei bis fünf Jahre lang zweitausend Mal am Tag einen gerade Stoß mit der Faust üben; oder man mußte über tausend Mal täglich auf die Wasseroberfläche eines Brunnens einschlagen, und dies bis zu zehn Jahre lang, bis das Wasser durch die Wucht des Stoßes verdrängt wurde und aus dem Brunnen spritzte.

Hauptziel der Eisenhemd Praxis ist jedoch nicht die Kampfkunst, sondern die Vervollkommung des Körpers, dessen Gesundheit damit gefordert wird, so daß die inneren Organe gegen Krankheiten und Verletzungen gefeit sind. Die wichtigsten Übungen beim Eisenhemd Kung Fu sind die der «Verwandlung der Sehnen und Reinigung des Marks» sowie die der «Sich selbst erneuernden Hormone».

Stufe I:

- Eisenhemd Kung Fu Atmungstechnik;
- Erwecken und Kreisenlassen der inneren Chi-Energie und die Verwurzelung durch Übungen;
- Lenken der inneren Kraft zur Stärkung der Organe;
- Füllen der 12 Sehnen-Kanäle mit Chi;
- Trainieren und Öffnen der Faszien und ihr Anfüllen mit Chi.

Stufe II:

- Reinigen des Marks;
- Verwandlung der Sehnen und Reinigen des Marks;
- Trainieren und Öffnen der Faszien und Anfüllen mit Chi;

- Selbststimulierung der lebenswichtigen Organe;
- Kräftigung der Sehnen und Verschmelzung von Faszien, Sehnen, Knochen und Muskeln zu einer Einheit.

Stufe III:
- Regeneration der Sexualhormone;
- Speicherung der Sexualhormone in Faszien und Sehnen;
- Lenkung der inneren Kraft in die höheren Energiezentren.

Hat man diese drei Stufen des Eisenhemd Chi Kung gemeistert, geht es an die wirkungsvolle Anwendung der durch sie hervorgerufenen Energie. Diese lernt der Schüler in der Technik der «Heilenden Hand».

Die Heilende Hand

a. Buddha-Hand;
b. Pa Kua Hand;
c. Überprüfung der Aura auf schwache Energiefelder;
d. Korrektur und Harmonisierung des Blutkreislaufs, des Lymphsystems, des Nervensystems, des Chi-Strom-Systems;
e. Punktgerichtetes Energie-Übertragen zur Befreiung von Schmerz und Streß.

Übertragung der Kraft zur Öffnung der Energiebahnen

a. Sammeln der Kraft in Handfläche und Finger;
b. Wiederherstellung der Kraft;
c. Entzug der feuchten Krankheit und der kalten Energie.

Das einzigartige Lehrbuch des Tao der Liebe für die Frau!

Mantak und Maneewan Chia
TAO YOGA DER HEILENDEN LIEBE
Der geheime Weg zur weiblichen Liebesenergie
336 Seiten, mit 120 Illustrationen, gebunden, Schutzumsdilag
ISBN 3-7157-0100-5

Das bekannte Tao-Meisterpaar Mantak und Maneewan Chia weiht hier die moderne, westliche Frau erstmals in die jahrtausendealten Lehren und Praktiken des berühmten Tao der Liebe ein. In minutiös geschilderten Einzelschritten und mit bisher noch nirgends zugänglidi gemachten, jedoch leicht nachvollziehbaren Übungen, lehrt das erfahrene Autorenpaar absolut neuartige Formen des Umgangs mit der weiblichen Sexualenergie.

Einfühlsam beschriebene taoistisdie Techniken, illustriert mit fundiertem, medizinischen Wissen, fuhren die Frau zu bisher unbekannten Fähigkeiten. Es werden Übungen zur Kräftigung des Genitalbereichs, insbesondere des Chi-Muskels gezeigt. Sie lernt, wie die lebendige und heilende Ovar-Energie die prämenstruellen Symptome mildern, die Periode regulieren, verkürzen und beschwerdefrei machen kann. Äußerst subtile Übungen wandeln die Ovar-und Sexualkraft in eine verfeinerte Erregungsenergie um. Den ganzen Körper erfüllend, bewirkt sie eine tiefgreifende Harmonisierung im ganzen Energiehaushalt, auf der emotionalen und spirituellen Ebene, und verleiht der Frau eine ungewöhnliche, energetische Ausstrahlung und Anziehungskraft.

Im zweiten Teil macht das Autorenpaar die Frau mit den bisher bestgehüteten und intimsten Details ihres eigenen heilenden, ekstatischen und spirituellen Potentials im Liebesakt bekannt, das weit über alles bisher Erlebbare hinausreicht. Genaue Anleitungen bringen nicht nur die wichtigsten Heilpositionen, sie zeigen auch, wie sich die Frau - im innigen Austausch mit der Yang-Energie des Mannes - in die erregenden, zeit- und grenzenlosen Höhen des Ganzkörper-Orgasmus tragen, sowie in die alles-verschmelzenden Tiefen des «Tal-Erlebnisses» gleiten lassen kann.

Dieses einzigartige Lehrbuch schenkt der Frau einen tiefen Einblick in bisher unbekannte Aspekte ihrer Weiblichkeit, und geleitet sie sicher auf ihrem natürlichen und harmonischen Weg zur totalen Erfahrung der Dreiheit, Körper-Seele-Geist.

Es ist ein Buch, das sicherlich für viele Frauen die Offenbarung uralter weiblicher Erinnerungen darstellt. Es erleichtert aber auch den Männern das Verstehen der weiblichen Energie. Sie werden es deshalb ebenfalls mit Begeisterung studieren wollen.

Schutz und Stärkung der Organe
Neue Ausrichtung der Körperstruktur
Verwurzelung mit der Erde

ISBN 3-7157-0122-6

In der Zeit vor der Erfindung des Schießpulvers und damit der Feuerwaffen gehörte das «Eisenhemd Chi Kung» zu den grundlegenden Kampfkünsten in China. Dank diesem Übungssystem erwarb man sich einen überaus kraftvollen Körper, der in jedem Mann-zu-Mann-Kampf standhielt und der von äußeren und inneren Verletzungen wie durch ein schützendes «Eisenhemd» verschont blieb. Aber schon damals war seine Anwendung in den Kampfkünsten nur einer der Aspekte des Eisenhemd Chi Kung. Die ehemals geheimen Übungen zur Entwicklung eines kraftvollen und unverletzlichen Körpers wurden ebenfalls als äußerst wirksames Schutz- und Gesundheitssystem erkannt und geschätzt.

Der Wiederbelebung dieses gerade heute lebenswichtigen Aspektes im Tao Yoga System dient das vorliegende Lehrbuch des bekannten Tao Meisters Mantak Chia. Er zeigt, wie durch den Einsatz von einfach erlernbaren, aber hochwirksamen Übungen und Techniken aus dem erprobten Wissensschatz der alten Tao Meister sowohl der Körper als auch die Seele und der Geist des Menschen in eine bessere Verfassung gebracht werden können, und wie sie für mehr Energie und Tatkraft im Alltag und für eine widerstandsfähige Gesundheit eingesetzt werden können.

Mantak Chia lehrt hier anhand genau illustrierter Übungsabläufe, wie mit einzigartigen Atemübungen das Kreislauf-, Lymph- und Nervensystem sowie die Hormondrüsen angeregt werden, und wie die Bindegewebe, die Schutzhüllen um jeden Muskel und um jedes innere Organ, gewissermaßen wie ein «Eisenhemd» verstärkt werden können. Die Übungen des Eisenhemd Chi Kung umfassen jedoch nicht nur die körperliche, sondern auch die seelische und geistige Ebene, und bilden eine der wichtigsten Grundlagen zur Erreichung höherer Stufen im spirituellen Bereich.

Im einzelnen wird unter anderem gelehrt, wie eine schwache Körperstruktur gestärkt und neu ausgerichtet werden kann, so daß Chi wieder ungehindert fließen kann. Ferner wird ein Chi-Gürtel als Hauptverbindung zwischen den oberen und unteren Energiekanälen entwickelt. In weiteren, fortgeschrittenen Übungen wird Chi als gesammelte Kraft verdichtet und gezielt im Körper eingesetzt sowie ein leuchtender Energiekörper aufgebaut. Später werden die Grundlagen für eine spirituelle Verwurzelung geschaffen, welche dazu dienen sollen, den Geist bei seiner Reise durch die höheren Welten zu leiten.

Chi Nei Tsang III

Concept

Chi Nei Tsang III is the fourth section of the Chi Nei Tsang series following Chi Nei Tsang I (Organ Massage), Chi Nei Tsang II (Channel Massage) and Karsai Nei Kung (Genital Massage) with Chi Nei Tsang III (Muscle, Tendon & Meridian Massage) as the last section. This is the final chapter of the Chi Nei Tsang Internal Massage moving the energy (chi) throughout the body while releasing and opening up its passages. Throughout this massage section in this booklet you will use the hand techniques (finger presser, twisting & spiraling, hand scooping & wave techniques) used in Chi Nei Tsang I to open up and release the brockages in the Abdominal, Arteries, Muscles, Tendons, Vertebras, Shoulder Blades, Coccyx, Arms, Legs, Feet, Joints, Hands, Neck and Meridian Lines layout in the following pages.
This booklet is an introduction to the forth coming book Chi Nei Tsang III by Mantak Chia with co-author Chong-Mi Mueller which will go into greater detail and explaination for opening up the muscles, tendons and meridian lines in the body.

Displacement of Vertebras and its Consequences

Every cell of the body is controlled by nerves. The normal function of these nerves is disturbed when verlebras are displaced in the spinal column, and of this the following diseases can result.

Spinal Column	Organ Field	Verlebra	Consequenses
	Blood Supply to the Brain Inner and Middle Ear.	1 Cervical	Headache, Insomnia Hypophysephic Disease High Blood Pressure Tiredness, Dizziness

Pain is the Cry from our Tissue for Flowing Energy to release the Pressure

The nerve system is the supply network in the complicated computer of our body. An essential bundle of nerve system which supplies every cell in the body with nerve impulse, moves from the brain through the spinal cord. This pass is full of critical points. Through an accident the vertebras can easily come out of positioning. Though this, part of the supply ending network experiences higher pressure and the final station of the respective supply network our body organs, loses a lot of resistence against disease. The physical and mental strength goes down rapidly without you being aware of it. If this misalignment in the spine is not corrected in sufficient time chronic disease can develop.

1. Sen Sumana

Sen Sumana starts at the tip of the tongue, travels down the throat and chest to the solar plexus. Its path is quite similar to Sushumna Nadi in the Yoga Tradition and also the Ren Mai Meridian in Chinese acupuncture.

Therapy: Asthma, Bronchitis, Chest Pain, Heart Diseases, Spasm of the Diaphragm, Nausea, Cold, Cough, Throat Problems, Diseases of the Digestive System, Abdominal Pain.

Fig. 25 Sen Sumana

2. Sen Ittha

Sen Ittha starts at the left nostril, travels up to the head and down the neck. It becomes Line I on the back, crosses the buttocks and moves down the third outside line on the thigh. It changes then to the front of the body and becomes the first inside line on the thigh. It goes up to the abdomen and stops one thumb distance left from the navel. It is similar to Ida Nadi in Yoga and to the urinary bladder meridian in acupuncture.

Therapy: Headache, Stiff Neck, Shoulder Pain, Common Cold, Cough, Nasal Obstruction, Throat Ache, Eye Pain, Chill and Fever, Abdominal Pain, Intestinal Diseases, Back Pain, Diseases of the Urinary Tract, Dizziness.

Fig. 26 Sen Ittha

3. Sen Pingkhala

Sen Pingkhala takes the same course as Sen lttha, yet on the right side of the body. It is similarity to Pingala Nadi in Yoga.

Therapy: Same as Sen lttha. Additional Indications: Diseases of the Liver and the Gall Bladder.

Fig. 27 Sen Pingkhala

4. Sen Kalathari

Sen Kalathari starts at the navel and divides into branches, two on the right, two on the left. From the navel up through the chest and shoulder down the middle line of the arm to the hand. From there to the tips of all the fingers on both the left and right side of the body. From the navel down the mid-line of the inside of the leg (the second inside line) to the foot. From there to all the toes on both the left and right side of the body.

Therapy: Diseases of the Digestive System, Indigestion, Hernia, Paralysis of Arms and Legs, Knee Pain, Jaundice, Whooping Cough, Arthritis of the Fingers, Chest Pain, Shock, Rheumatic Heart Disease and Cardiac Arrhythmia, Sinusitis, Pain in Arms and Legs, Angina Pectoris, Epilepsy, Schizophrenia, Hysteria, Various Psychic Diseases and Mental Disorders.

5. Sen Sahatsarangsi

Sen Sahatsarangsi starts in the left eye and travels down the head, throat, left side of the chest and abdomen, then changes to the outside of the let coinciding with the first line on the outer leg. It changes again at the foot to the inside of the leg and forms the first inside line. This line continues across the groin and stops directly below the navel. It is quite similar to the stomach meridian in Chinese acupuncture.

Therapy: Facial Paralysis, Toothache, Throat Ache, Redness and Swelling of the Eye, Fever, Chest Pain, Mania Depressive Psychosis, Gastrointestinal Diseases, Diseases of the Urogenital System, Leg Paralysis, Arthritis of the Knee Joint, Numbness of Lower Extremity, Hernia.

Fig. 29 Sen Sahatsarangsi

6. Senthawari

Sen Thawari takes the same course as Sen Sahatsarangsi, but on the right side of the body.

Therapy: Same as Sen Sahatsarangsi. Additional indications: Jaundice and Appendicitis.

Fig. 30 Senthawari

7. Sen Lawusang

Sen Lawusang starts in the left ear, travels down the left side of the throat, then towards the nipple. It makes a slight turn thereafter towards the navel and ends at the solar plexus.

Therapy: Deafness, Ear Diseases, Cough, Facial Paralysis, Toothache, Throat Ache, Chest Pain, Gastrointestinal Diseases.

Fig. 31 Sen Lawusang

8. Sen Ulangka (Also called Sen Rucham)

Sen Ulangka takes the same course as Sen Lawusang, yet on the right-side of the body.

Therapy: Same as Sen Lawusang.

Fig. 32 Sen Ulangka

9. Sen Nanthakrawat

Sen Nanthakrawat comprises two lines:

- Starts at the navel and runs as Sen Sikhini to the urethra or urinary passage.
- Starts at the navel as well and runs as Sen Sukhumang to the anus or fecal passage.

Therapy: Sen Nanthakrawat is generally worked on by giving an Abdominal Massage. Indications are: Hernia, Freuent Urination, Female Infertility, Impotence, Precox Ejaculation, Irregular Menstruation, Uterine Bleeding, Retension of Urine, Diarrhoea, Abdominal Pain.

Fig. 33 Sen Nanthathakraawat

10. Sen Khitchanna

Sen Khitchanna is broadly similar to Sen Nanthakrawat. It runs from the navel to the penis as Sen Pitakun (male) and from the navel to the vagina as Sen Kitcha (in women).

Therapy: Therapy on Sen Khitchannais done with abdominal massage as well. Same indications as with Sen Nanthakrawat.

Muscle-Tendon Meridians

There are 12 muscle-tendon meridians in the body. These exist along the surfaces of the muscles and tendons, running from joint to joint. Unlike the other meridians, these do not connect with any internal organs.

They seem to be primarily involved in the gross utilization of energy with which the musculature is associated. Here, however, there is far greater efficiency (that is, minimized effort with increased energy output) than is ordinarily presumed to be normal.

Muscle-tendon meridians originate in the extremities, meet at major joints and end at points ranging throughout the torso and head.

Knowing the Tendon Routes well and energizing them will greatly increase the Muscle-Tendon-Fascia Tone and improve the range of movement or radius.

1. Lung Muscle-Tendon Meridian

This meridian has its origin at the end of the thumb. Looking at a person standing and facing you with his arms at the sides of his body and the palms facing forward; the meridian would be seen as a line that extends up along the outer side of the bones of the thumb to the outer side of the wrist. It then ascends up the outer side of the forearm to the crook of the arm and, rising up the biceps, crosses over to and enters the chest, coming out again at the sterno-clavicular joint. From there, it extends across the collar bone to the front deltoid, while another branch extends downward into the chest, sending still other branches down to the diaphragm.

Fig. 35 Lung Muscle-Tendon Meridian

2. Large Intestine Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Again, picture a person who is standing and facing you. Now his arms are at his sides with the palms facing inward to the torso. Beginning at the end of the index finger, this meridian travels up along what is then the outer side of the forearm to the outer portion of the crook in the arm. There it continues to ascend along the outer side of the upper arm to the side deltoid and then splits into two branches. One goes back over the trapezius muscle, descending down between the spinal column and scapula and extending up along the backbone to about midway of the length of the neck. The other travels across the lower surface of the trapezius and then to the sternocleidomastoid muscle on its way to the face, where it splits again at the jaw line. One short branch runs to the corner of the nose, the other travels up along the side of the face, passing through the side of the forehead on its way over the top of the head and down a similar route to the opposite jaw, where it finally anchors.

Fig. 36 Large Intestine Muscle-Tendon Meridian

3. Stomach Muscle-Tendon Meridian

This meridian is somewhat more elaborate, starting at the third toe and sometimes the second and fourth, too. The meridian runs up the lower surface of the foot to about the level of the ankle. From there it splits into two branches.

One goes up the middle of the lower leg to the outer side of the knee. The other, running laterally to the first, continues to the hip joint and then up over the ilial crest (upper part of the pelvis) to continue on around to the back where it crosses the lower ribs and joins within extension of the meridian that runs along the backbone from the sacrum to about the level of the collar bone.

Returning to the more medially located branch, we see that it continues up to the top of the thigh and veers in towards the pubic bone. There it enters the abdomen and emerges again above the cavity of the collar bone. Next, it travels up the side of the neck and jaw, where it splits in two. One branch veers forward towards the corner of the mouth, ascending up along the side of the nose to the corner of the eye. The other goes up along the jaw line to a point in front of the ear at the temple.

Fig. 37 Stomach Muscle-Tendon Meridian

4. Spleen Muscle-Tendon Meridian

With the figure standing and facing you, this meridian is seen as originating at the middle and end of the big toe. It then runs along the middle of the foot and ascends to the internal malleolus (hammershaped bone on each side of the ankle).

From there it continues upward along the middle of the shin, passing the middle of the knee.

Then it travels upward, beginning at the middle of the thigh and sweeping across it to end at a point on the groin. It then turns in toward the pubic bone and rises straight up to the navel. Veering off laterally, it crosses the abdomen, ending at a point just below the nipple, where it then enters into the chest.

Another branch runs through a point located at the pubic bone, to the coccygeal region where it ascends the mid-line of the back-bone to about the level of the tops of the scapulae.

Fig. 38 Spleen Muscle-Tendon Meridian

5. Heart Muscle-Tendon Meridian

With the person standing with his arms at the sides of his body and the palms facing forward, this meridian begins at the lateral tip of the pinky finger. From there, it ascends to the middle of the wrist, continuing upward along the middle of the forearm to the crook of the arm. Traveling upward and medially, it runs to the armpit and then crosses the pectoral muscle at about the level of the nipple, joins at the mediastinum (the partition between the two pleural sacs of the chest, extending from the sternum to the thoracic vertebrae and downward to the diaphragm) and runs straight down to the navel.

Fig. 39 Heart Muscle-Tendon Meridian

6. Small Intestine Muscle-Tendon Meridian

With the person standing and facing away from you with his arms at the sides of his body and the palms facing forward, this meridian begins at the tip of the little finger. Ascending up along the back of that finger to a point on the wrist just above it, it continues up along the middle of the forearm, joining its upper arm extension in the middle of the elbow.

Proceeding up the middle of the upper arm, it unites with its neck and ear extension behind the armpit. Ascending and descending, tracing out a pattern like a Z on its side, it continues up and over the trapezius, crossing the neck and connecting at the mastoid process with a small branch entering the ear.

Another branch loops up and over the ear and then dips down to end at a point on the jaw below that is slightly behind the level of the outer corner of the eye. It then ascends, passing very close to the outer corner of the eye as it travels to the forehead, uniting with the muscle-tendon meridian extension of the mastoid process at the temple.

Still another branch issues out of the point at the mastoid process, ascending the previously described branch that crosses the forehead on its way to the temple.

Fig. 40 Small Intestine Muscle-Tendon Meridian

7. Bladder Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Looking at a standing figure faced away from you, the bladder meridian begins in the small toe. Running along the outer side of the foot, it rises and joins with the external malleolus.

It then ascends to and joins the lateral corner of the popliteal fossa (or cavity behind the knee), while a branch extends downward from the external malleolus to join at the heel. Then it runs up along the calf and joins at the back of the knee.

From there, it ascends to the middle of the buttocks, while at the same time extending downward along the middle of the calf to the heel. From the buttocks it ascends along the mid-line of the backbone to the nape of the neck, continuing upward to join with the occiput (the lower back part of the skull). It continues upward across the crown of the head to unite with a point at the side of the nose near the inner corner of the eye.

A branch arches along the line of the eyebrow and swoops down to the cheekbone. Then, continuing downward, it extends to the lower jaw, the throat and onto the chest, passing under the armpit to angle up to and join with the line that ascends the back bone.

A small branch extends up out of this extension' to the backbone, rising at an angle out of the region of the scapula to unite in the shoulder. There is also a branch that extends out of the nape of the neck to unite with the root of the tongue. Finally, a short branch extends from the line coming up and out from under the armpit to join at the mastoid process.

Fig. 41 Bladder Muscle-Tendon Meridian

8. Kidney Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Looking at the back of a standing figure with the left heel lifted, the meridian is seen to start under his little toe. From there it travels along the spleen meridian and curves up at the arch of the foot, passing the underside of the ankle and uniting with the calf extension of the muscle-tendon meridian at the Achilles tendon. Continuing to ascend the middle of the calf, it unites again at the middle of the popliteal fossa (cavity behind the knee) joining with the bladder meridian. Viewing the same standing figure from the front, the kidney meridian is seen to continue up along the inner side of the thigh along with the spleen muscle meridian. It unites at the pubic bone, continuing a short way up to the navel. From the pubic bone it goes through to the coccyx, where it ascends the backbone to connect with the occiput and join with the bladder meridian.

Fig. 42 Kidney Muscle-Tendon Meridian

9. Pericardium Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Facing a standing figure with his arms at his sides and the palms of the hands facing forward, the meridian begins at the middle fingers. It then rises up the mid-line of the forearm and upper arm, passing through the middle of the palm, the crook of the arm. the point of attachment of the front deltoid and then into the armpit. From there it spreads out into the chest both ventrally and dorsally.

Fig. 43 Pericardium Muscle-Tendon Meridian

10. Triple Warmer Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Observing a standing figure from the rear with his arms at his sides and the palms of the hands facing forward, the meridian is seen to begin at the end of the fourth finger. It rises to a point directly above it at the wrist and goes up the forearm to the elbow. Then, it travels up the middle of the upper arm, over the trapezius to the neck, where it joins the small intestine meridian. One branch goes to the jaw and connects with the root of the tongue, while the extension of the main meridian rises past the teeth to the ear. There it shifts forward to the outer corner of the eye and continues up past the temple to the upper part of the hairline.

Fig. 44 Triple Warmer Muscle-Tendon Meridian

11. Gall Bladder Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Here, when we view the figure from the side, we find that the meridian begins at the outer side of the end of the fourth toe. From there it angles up along the lower leg, sending out a branch to the outer side of the knee.

Continuing up the thigh, it disperses another branch at S-32 and, continuing upward, sends out yet another branch that runs to the anus. It then ascends along the side of the body and rises in front of the shoulder, uniting with the muscle-tendon meridian extension that leads to the breast at the supraclavicular fossa.

A slightly divergent point just below this bulges forward, where it links with the breast. The main meridian continues upward, rising up behind the ear to the crown of the head.

It also descends in front of the ear to the side of the jaw from where it ascends again to the corner of the nose, while another branch travels up to the outside corner of the eye.

Fig. 45 Gall Bladder Muscle-Tendon Meridian

12. Liver Muscle-Tendon Meridian

Here we view the standing figure facing us. The meridian starts at the big toe and connects in front of the internal malleolus. It then rises up the lower leg along the tibia (the inner and larger of the two bones of the lower leg) and joins on the inner side of the knee. Finally it sweeps up the thigh and unites at the pubic bone, thereby connecting with all the other muscle meridians.

Master Mantak Chia is the creator of Universal Tao System, Healing Tao, Tao Yoga and is the director of the Universal Tao Master School at Tao Garden Wellness Retreat in the beautiful northern countryside of Chiangmai, Thailand. Since childhood he has been studying the Taoist approach to life. His mastery of this ancient knowledge, enhanced by his study of other disciplines, has resulted in the development of the Universal Tao System which is now being taught throughout the world.

Chi Nei Tsang III
Muscle, Tendon and Meridian Massage

Chi Nei Tsang III is the fourth section of the Chi Nei Tsang series following Chi Nei Tsang I (Organ Massage), Chi Nei Tsang II (Channel Massage) and Karsai Nei Kung (Genital Massage) with Chi Nei Tsang III (Muscle, Tendon & Meridian Massage) as the last section. This is the final chapter of the Chi Nei Tsang Internal Massage moving the energy (chi) throughout the body while releasing and opening up its passages. Through this massage section in this booklet you will use the hand techniques (finger presser, twisting & spiraling, hand scooping & wave techniques) used in Chi Nei Tsang I to open up and release the brockages in the Abdominal, Arteries, Muscles, Tendons, Vertebras, Shoulder Blades, Coccyx, Arms, Legs, Feet, Joints, Hands, Neck and Meridian Lines layout in this booklet.

This booklet is an introduction to the forth coming book Chi Nei Tsang III by Mantak Chia with co-author Chong-Mi Mueller which will go into greater detail and explaination for opening up the muscles, tendons and meridian lines in the body.

The Proof Is in Your Pants

You may already have experienced multiple orgasms. Surprising as this may sound, many men are multi-orgasmic before they enter adolescence and begin to ejaculate. Kinsey's research suggested that more than half of all preadolescent boys were able to reach a second orgasm within a short period of time and nearly a third were able to achieve five or more orgasms one after the other. This led Kinsey to argue that "climax is clearly possible without ejaculation."

But multiple orgasms are not just limited to prepubescent boys. Kinsey continues: "There are older males, even in their thirties and older, who are able to equal this performance." In Fundamentals of Human Sexuality, Dr. Herant Katchadourian adds: "Some men are able to inhibit the emission of semen while they experience the orgasmic contractions: in other words they have nonejaculatory orgasms. Such orgasms do not seem to be followed by a refractory period [loss of erection], thereby allowing these men to have consecutive or multiple orgasms like women.

Why do most men lose their ability to be multi-orgasmic. It is possible that for many men the experience of ejaculating, when it happens, is so overwhelming that it eclipses the experience of orgasm and causes men to lose the ability to distinguish between the two. One multi-orgasmic man described the first time he ejaculated: "I still remember it clearly. There I was orgasming as usual, but this time a white liquid came spurting out. I thought I was dying. I swore to God that I would never masturbate again – which of course lasted about a day." Since orgasm and ejaculation generally occur within seconds of one another, it is easy to confuse them.' To become multi-orgasmic, you must learn (or possibly relearn) the ability to separate the different sensations of arousal and to revel in orgasm without cresting over into ejaculation. Understanding how orgasm and ejaculation are different will help you distinguish the two in your own body.

Brain Waves and Reflexes

Orgasm is one of the most intense and satisfying human experiences, and if you have ever had an orgasm – and almost all men have – you will not need to have it defined. All orgasms, however, are not created equal. Orgasm is slightly different for each person and even different for the same person at different times. Nonetheless, men's orgasms share certain characteristics, including rhythmic body movements, increased heart rate, muscle tension, and then a sudden release of tension, including pelvic contractions. They feel good, too. After noting that "orgasm is the least understood of the sexual processes," the thirteenth edition of Smith's General Urology explains that orgasm includes "involuntary rhythmic contractions of the anal sphincter, hyperventilation [increased breathing rate], tachycardia [increased heart rate], and elevation of blood pressure."

These definitions include changes that occur throughout your entire body. However, for a long time orgasm was seen – and for many men is still seen – as strictly a genital affair. In the West, William Reich, in his controversial book The Function of Orgasm, was the first to argue that orgasm involved the whole body and not just the genitals. In the East, the Taoists have long known that orgasm could be a whole-body experience and developed techniques for expanding orgasmic pleasure.

Many sex researchers are now arguing that orgasm really has more to do with our brain than our brawn. Brain-wave research is beginning to reveal that orgasm may occur primarily in the brain. That you can have an orgasm in your sleep – without any bodily touch – seems to confirm this theory. Further support comes from neurologist Robert J. Heath of Tulane University, who discovered that when certain parts of the brain are stimulated with electrodes they produce sexual pleasure identical to that produced by physical stimulation. Many sex therapists are fond of saying that sex takes place in the brain. There is some truth to this statement – especially when it comes to orgasm.

Unlike orgasm, which is a peak emotional and physical experience, ejaculation is simply a reflex that occurs at the base of the spine and results in the ejection of semen. Michael Winn, senior Healing Tao instructor and coauthor of Taoist Secrets of Lowe: Cultivating Male Sexual Energy, explains: "A lot of men are freaked out by the very idea of nonejaculatory orgasm because they've been having ejaculatory sex for such a long time, often decades. So the first thing to do is demystify ejaculation, which is just an involuntary muscle spasm."

With practice, you can learn to experience the peak feeling of orgasm without triggering the reflex of ejaculation. In the next two chapters we will explain, step-by-step, exactly how to separate orgasm from ejaculation and how to expand your orgasms throughout your body. But first let's look at the evidence that men, like women, can have multiple orgasms.

Prove It

Probably the most extensive laboratory investigation of male multiple orgasms was made by sex researchers William Hartman and Marilyn Fithian. They tested thirty-three men who claimed to be multi-orgasmic – that is, to be able to have two or more orgasms without losing their erection.

While these men had sex with their partners in the laboratory, Hartman and Fithian monitored their heart rates, which the researchers had chosen as the clearest method of identifying orgasms. At rest, the average heart rate is around 70 beats per minute; during orgasm it almost doubles, rising to about 120. After orgasm, the heart returns to its resting rate (see figure 1). They also measured pelvic contractions (most obvious in the involuntary squeezing of the anus), which coincided with the peaking of heart rate at orgasm. What they found was pretty surprising: the arousal charts for these men were identical to those of multi-orgasmic women.

Male and female sexuality may be more similar than is usually thought. Developmentally, this similarity makes sense, since male and female genitals come from the same fetal tissue. In their famous book The G Spot and Other Recent Discoveries About Human Sexuality, Alice Ladas, Beverly Whipple, and John Perry argued that male and female sexuality were almost identical. In addition to their much-reported discovery of the female "G spot" (which we will discuss more in chapter 4), they also suggested that men can experience multiple orgasms just like women.

During Hartman and Fithian's research, the average number of orgasms a multi-orgasmic man had was four. Some men had the minimum of two, and one had as many as sixteen! In a study by clarion Dunn and Jan Trost, most men reported having from two to nine orgasms per session.

It is important to mention here that Taoist sexuality is not about numbers and keeping score, it is about satisfaction and cultivation. You can feel satisfied with one orgasm, with three orgasms, or with sixteen orgasms. You cultivate your sexuality as you deepen your an awareness of your body's pleasure and increase your ability for intimacy with your partner. Each person and each sexual experience will be different, and the "right" number of orgasms will depend on your and your partner's desires at the time. When you become multi-orgasmic, you will never have to worry about how long you can last or how many orgasms your partner has, because you will both be able to have all the orgasms you could ever want.

The Little Death

As doctors, the Taoist masters were interested in sexuality as part of a larger concern for the health of the entire body. They practiced Sexual Kung Fu because they discovered that ejaculation drains a man's energy. You have probably also noticed this loss of energy and general feeling of fatigue after ejaculating. Even though you would like to be attentive to your partner's sexual and emotional needs, all your body wants to do is sleep. As one multi-orgasmic man put it, "Once I ejaculate, the pillow looks better than my girlfriend does."

The image of the unsatisfied woman whose lover ejaculates, grunts, and collapses on top of her is so common that it has become a cultural joke, but the exhaustion that men feel after ejaculating is as old as the first coital groan. Peng-Tze, a sex adviser to the famed Yellow Emperor, reported almost five thousand years ago: "After ejaculating, a man is tired, his ears buzz, his eyes are heavy, and he longs for sleep. He is thirsty and his limbs feel weak and stiff. In ejaculating he enjoys a brief moment of sensation but then suffers long hours of exhaustion."

Western folk wisdom agrees with the Taoists regarding the importance of conserving sexual energy. Athletes have long known the weakness and lethargy that follow ejaculation, abstaining from sex the night before the "big game." Artists have also felt the lingering effects on their work. Jazz musician Miles Davis explained in a Playboy magazine interview:

> Davis: You can't come, then fight or play. You can't do it. When I get ready to come, I come. But I do not come and play.
>
> Playboy: Explain that in layman's terms.
>
> Davis: Ask Muhammad Ali. If he comes, he can't fight two minutes. Shit, he couldn't even whip me.
>
> Playboy: Would you fight Muhammad Ali under those conditions, to prove your point.
> Davis: You're goddamn right I'd fight him. But he's got to promise to fuck first. If he ain't going to fuck, I ain't going to fight. You give up all your energy when you come. I mean, you give up all of it! So, if you're going to fuck before a gig, how are you going to give something when it's time to hit?

Miles wasn't exactly a romantic, but he didn't mince words, either. As one of the world's greatest trumpet players, he knew how ejaculating decreased his stamina and depleted his art. Unfortunately, like most men, he didn't know that he could have had sex all he wanted, even have orgasmed, before any gig – as long as he didn't ejaculate. It might have even improved his "hitting."

Although the effects of ejaculating may be more obvious to professional musicians and prizefighters, all men eventually experience the same depletion from coming – which might more appropriately be called going. According to one multi-orgasmic man, "I really notice it in the morning if I ejaculate. I get up dragging my feet and I am tired by noon. When I have multiple orgasms without ejaculating, I wake up refreshed and I need less sleep." Another man who was recovering from a chronic illness explained: "My sexual desire has always been strong, so I ejaculated often, once or twice a day. And with every ejaculation my health got worse and worse because I was losing a lot of energy." Many men, especially young men, may not notice this feeling of depletion at first unless they ejaculate when they are sick or working hard.

In the West, we assume that ejaculation is an inevitable culmination of male arousal and the end of lovemaking. In China, however, doctors long ago saw what the French call le petit mort – "the little death" of ejaculation – as an avoidable betrayal of male pleasure and a dangerous depletion of male vitality.

DON JUANS, MONKS, AND MULTI-ORGASMIC WORMS

In a front-page story on December 3, 1992, the New York Times reported startling scientific research that seems to confirm the ancient Taoist insight about the toll that sperm production takes on a man's body. "These results are the last thing I had expected when I started doing the experiment," said Wayne Van Voorhies of the University of Arizona. "They were so startling that I did the work over four times to make sure I got it right. They basically say a lot of our preconceived notions [about male sexuality] just do not hold."

Dr. Van Voorhies was studying simple but revealing worms called nematodes. What, you may ask, do worms have to do with your sexuality'. Well, these nematodes are not just your everyday, garden-variety worms. "The genes and biochemical processes nematodes use," explains Dr. Philip Anderson of the University of Wisconsin, "are the same as those that humans and other mammals use." In scientific studies, nematodes are frequently used in place of human subjects.

Dr. Van Voorhies tested three kinds of male worms. The first group of worms was allowed to mate at will, which required frequent sperm production. On average, these Don Juan worms lived only 8.1 days. (Nematodes, in general, don't live very long.) The second group of worms was not allowed to mate at all. These, shall we say, monastic worms lived an average of 11.1 days. But even more startling, the third group, the multi-orgasmic worms that did not constantly have to produce sperm but were allowed to mate at will, lived close to 14 days – over 50 percent longer than the worms that needed to continually produce sperm!

The Times concluded: "The new work suggests that ceaseless sperm production takes its toll on a male, perhaps requiring the use of complex enzymes or biochemical processes that have harmful metabolic byproducts." The Times goes so far as to suggest that "the difference in life span between men and women just may be linked to sperm production. Women on average live about six years longer than men." There are other theories to explain the disparity in life expectancy between men and women, including differences in lifestyle and in hormones. Whether or not the production of sperm actually shortens your life, it certainly saps your strength.

Over two thousand years ago – long before experiments on nematodes – the Taoists described the importance of not ejaculating in the Discourse on the Highest Tao Under Heaven: "If a man has intercourse without spilling his seed, his vital essence is strengthened. If he does this twice, his hearing and vision are made clear. If three times, all his physical illness will disappear. The fourth time he will begin to feel inner peace. The fifth time his blood will circulate powerfully. The sixth time his genitals will gain new prowess. By the seventh his thighs and buttocks will become firm. The eighth time his body will radiate good health. The ninth time his life span will be increased." Ancient texts exaggerate to make their point, and it is unlikely that the above benefits occur in this exact order or at the exact specified time. However, it is clear that Taoists have long known the importance of conserving semen.

PROGENY AND PLEASURE

Looking at the simple arithmetic of sperm production helps explain the reason that ejaculation can be so taxing on your body. An average ejaculation contains 50 to 250 million sperm cells. (Theoretically speaking, if each sperm fertilized an egg, one to five ejaculations could repopulate the United States!) Every single one of those sperm cells is capable of creating half of an entire new human being. Any factory that produces 50 to 250 million products needs raw material, and in this case the raw material is you. Although your body produces a large amount of sperm each day, the value of this sperm should not be underrated. If your body does not need to replenish this sperm, according to the Tao, it is able to use this energy to strengthen your body and your mind. In the Taoist practice, this energy is used to improve your health, creativity, and spiritual growth.

Every time you ejaculate, your body assumes that it is getting ready to create a new life. According to the Tao, all of the organs and glands in your body give their best energy, what is called orgasmic energy. In many species, once this energy has been given, once the seed has been lost, the body of the animal starts to deteriorate. Salmon, for example, die soon after they spawn. Anyone who has spent time gardening knows that plants die or become dormant once they give their seed. Plants that are kept from going to seed live longer than those that are not. Though, luckily for us, we do not die after ejaculating, Taoists know that we are part of nature and that we must understand nature's laws.

According to Sexual Behavior in the Human Male (popularly known as the Kinsey Report), an average man ejaculates about five thousand times during his lifetime; some men ejaculate many, many more times. During the course of an average man's sex life (and this includes time spent locked in the bathroom), a man ejaculates 1 trillion sperm. Assuming that some of this ejaculation happens with a partner, the chances of his passing on his genetic code are pretty good. Most of the time, however, when we make love – not for progeny, but for pleasure – there is no need to spill our seed and deplete our bodies. So, if you make love only when you want to conceive a child, you will not need to practice Sexual Kung Fu. If, however, you want to have a multi-orgasmic and healthy sex life, read on.

Know Thyself

Exploring your body and understanding your arousal rate are essential to becoming multi-orgasmic. The best lovers are aware of both their own and their partner's desires. In the chapter "Know Your Partner", we discuss how to satisfy your partner's desires, but first you must learn how to satisfy your own. In this chapter, we begin by briefly describing the basic facts about your sexual anatomy, your energy, your arousal, your ejaculation, and your orgasms. Then we offer some ideas for exploring your full potential for pleasure.

Your Body

PENIS

When most men think about their sexuality, they think about their penis. This is a logical place to start, since it is the most obvious part of our sexual anatomy. Strangely, there is still a lot of mystery and misinformation about this seemingly simple organ. To begin with, there are no bones or muscles, you cannot enlarge it like your biceps – sorry. However, two or three inches of the penis is rooted inside the body in the pubococcygeus (pronounced PEW-bo-cox-uh-GEE-us) muscle – often just called the PC muscle – and it is possible, as we explain in the next chapter, to strengthen this muscle for stronger erections, stronger orgasms, and better ejaculatory control.

Since many men are concerned with the size of their penis and some are now even having penis-enlargement operations, we should take a moment to discuss the subject. Throughout human history, men have made many attempts to expand their so-called manhood – even the Taoists had their method, which we describe in chapter 8. But the truth is that the size of your erection is much less important than its strength and what you do with it. If you practice Sexual Kung Fu, you will have ample confirmation that your are "man enough" for any woman. If you are still concerned about the size of your penis, take a moment before running out to a plastic surgeon and read the section in chapter 8 called "Please Sir, May I Have Some More: Enlarging Your Penis."

TESTICLES

Most men know that their sperm is produced in their testicles and may also know that normal body temperature is too hot for sperm production. (This is why tight underwear that keeps your testicles close to your body can lower your sperm count.) Your testicles, however, are pulled into the body as they prepare to ejaculate. Pulling the testicles down away from the body, which we describe below, is one age-old technique for postponing ejaculation.

The vas deferens is a firm tube that extends from the testes to the prostate gland (see figure 2). Sperm move through this tube to the upper end, where they mix with secretions from the seminal vesicles and the prostate just before ejaculation. The secretions from the prostate constitute about one-third of your ejaculate and are responsible for its whitish color. The sperm are only a small part of the ejaculate, which is why a man who has had a vasectomy ejaculates about the same amount of fluid as he did before the operation.

PROSTATE

The prostate is a gland that lies at the center of your pelvis, just behind the pubic bone, and just above the perineum (pronounced pear-ah-NEE-um). Most men have heard about the prostate only in connection with the dreaded and widespread prostate cancer, which occurs in approximately one in eleven American men. A healthy prostate is important for avoiding prostate cancer and for your long-term sexual well-being. You can help keep your prostate healthy and possibly reduce your risk of prostate cancer by doing the pelvic Sexual Kung Fu exercises suggested here and by massaging your prostate regularly. If you have prostate trouble or want to avoid having prostate trouble in the future, see the section called "My What? Preventing and Helping Prostate Problems".

The prostate, like the G spot for women, is often highly sensitive to sexual stimulation. It has in fact been called "the male G spot." The authors of The G Spot concluded; "In men there is an orgasm triggered by the penis and one by the prostate." Men report that prostate orgasms are quite different from penile orgasms, emotionally as well physically. The authors of The G Spot suggest that this is equivalent to the difference women experience between clitoral and vaginal orgasms.

Like a woman's G spot, the prostate becomes increasingly sensitive to erotic stimulation as the man becomes aroused and approaches orgasm. This is why a prostate checkup at the doctor is quite different from prostate stimulation in bed with your lover. (You and your partner should remember that the body becomes engorged from front to back, so partners should wait until a man is highly aroused before attempting prostate stimulation.)

You can stimulate your prostate externally through your perineum at your Million-Dollar Point (more about this spot later in the chapter) or more directly through your anus. It is not always easy to reach by yourself if you are not very limber. Generally, the best position is lying on your back, either with your knees bent and your feet on the bed, or with your knees against your chest. In this position, you can insert a (well-lubricated) finger, curl it forward, and touch your prostate. You should feel something the size of a walnut an inch or two inside on the anterior (front) wall of your rectum. Gently rub the prostate back and forth. You can also thrust in and out at different speeds, which will also stimulate the highly sensitive nerves around your anus. If your partner is willing, she can do the same, but from a slightly easier angle. (Make sure your or your partner's nails are short.) If either you or your partner is not interested in venturing inside your anus, you can stimulate the anal sphincter and/or the perineum, which will also stimulate the prostate.

When prostate stimulation brings you to ejaculation, the fluid generally comes flowing out instead of spurting out. Keep in mind that this stimulation is very deep and very intense; as a result, it is even more difficult to control your arousal rate with prostate stimulation than it is with genital stimulation. So go slowly, and try not to push yourself over the edge.

PERINEUM

The perineum is an essential sexual landmark and was called 'he Gate of Life and Death" by the Taoists. Its role in preventing ejaculation was a closely guarded secret. On the perineum just in front of the anus is the Million-Dollar Point, named to suggest its value to Sexual Kung Fu (see figure 2). This spot was originally called the Million-Gold-Piece Point (they didn't have dollars back in ancient China), because that is supposedly what it cost you to have a Taoist master teach you its exact location. (The ancient Taoist masters were holy men, but they also had to make a living.) In the next chapter, we discuss the role of the Million-Dollar Point in helping you control your ejaculation.

SEX MUSCLES

The pubococcygeus, or PC muscle, is a group of important pelvic muscles that run from your pubic bone ("pubo") in the front to your tailbone or coccyx ("coccygeus") in the back. These muscles form the basis of your sexual health and are essential for your becoming multi-orgasmic. In the following chapter we will describe exercises to strengthen these muscles.

If you have ever been forced to stay in bed for an extended period of time or to wear a cast, you know how your muscles atrophy and become weak when they are not used. This is equally true of your sex muscles. The penis actually withdraws into the body if it is not used regularly, as many older men who are not sexually active have witnessed. The Taoists knew that it is as important to exercise your sexual organs as any other part of your body.

ANUS

Its proximity to the prostate and its own high concentration of sensitive nerve endings make the anus a highly erogenous zone, as many men – both gay and straight – have discovered. Many people worry about the anus being "dirty" and consider it "unnatural" to stimulate the anus sexually. You should make sure that your anus is clean before you touch it and that you wash anything (such as a finger) that you use for anal stimulation before using it for vaginal stimulation to avoid spreading bacteria. Yet it is difficult to explain why the anus would be so sexually sensitive if stimulating it were "unnatural." Many heterosexual men also worry that they are gay or "will become gay" if they enjoy having their anuses stimulated, put there is no evidence to suggest a relationship between anal sensitivity and homosexuality. Homosexuality is a sexual orientation, not simply a sexual practice. Many gay men enjoy having their anuses stimulated, but many straight men do as well.

NIPPLES

Many men are surprised to find that their nipples are sensitive. Other men may require some regular stimulation to awaken their nerve endings. Nipple stimulation is one of the underrated and under-explored pleasures of male sexuality.

Your Energy

Understanding how the energy in your body works will allow you to expand genital orgasms into whole-body orgasms and to use your sexual energy to improve your creativity and health. As we mentioned in the introduction, Sexual Kung Fu developed as a branch of Chinese medicine. One of the world's oldest and most effective healing systems, Chinese medicine is responsible for the discovery of such successfully proven therapies as acupuncture and acupressure. According to Chinese medicine, in addition to the physical structures of your body, you also have physical energy that is constantly circulating through every cell of your body.

THE BODY ELECTRIC

As Western chemistry has become more refined, it is now able to demonstrate that our bodies are indeed filled with energy and electric charges. In the February 1984 issue of Discover magazine, K. C. Cole explained the comparison: "Electricity is almost certainly the most elusive of everyday things: It lives in the walls of our houses, and regulates the lives of our cells.... It runs electric trains and human brains.... Your entire body is a giant electric machine: body chemistry (like all chemistry) is based on electrical bonds."

Chinese medicine is based on a person's ability to maintain the proper circulation of this bioelectric energy through the body. If you have ever had acupuncture, you have experienced the circulation of this bioelectric energy, which the Chinese call chi (pronounced CHEE), in your own body. However, if you have not had this opportunity, there is a simple experiment you can do to feel your body's chi. Rub your hands together for ten seconds and then hold the palms about an inch apart. If you concentrate, you should be able to feel a flow of energy passing between them.

The idea of chi is not unique to China. Dr. John Mann and Larry Short, authors of The Body of Light, count forty-nine cultures around the world that have a word for chi; the words vary from prana in Sanskrit to neyayoneyah in Lakota Sioux to num, which means "boiling point," in the language of the kalahari !Kung. The West is perhaps unique in its lack of an equivalent term. In the West, we speak about feeling energized or having low energy, but with a few notable exceptions, we tend to ignore this important part of our physical body.

The concept of chi is gaining increasing acceptance in the medical establishment. A major transition occurred when President Richard Nixon reestablished diplomatic relations with China in 1972. In Beijing, Chinese doctors performed emergency surgery on New York Times correspondent James Reston, using only acupuncture for anesthesia. Since then many delegations of Western physicians to China have witnessed similar events.

Chi is just beginning to be understood in the terminology of Western science. Currently, several Western physicians are exploring the phenomenon, such as Robert Becker, a Syracuse University orthopedist and author of The Body Electric, who is trying to explain chi in relation to his work in bioelectricity and healing. It was Dr. Becker's research into electricity and its role in regenerating bones that led to the current method of using low-level electrical currents to stimulate the mending of fractures.

YOUR MICROCOSMIC ORBIT

You have bioelectric energy in every cell of your body. This energy also travels along certain well-defined circuits, called meridians, which acupuncture utilizes to regulate the amount of chi in any particular part of your body. The main circuit in the body is called the Microcosmic Orbit (see figure 3) and is made up of two channels, the Back Channel and the Front Channel (in Chinese medicine traditionally called the Governor Channel and the Functional Channel, respectively).

These channels are part of our earliest development. In utero, our body first resembles a flat disk. As the embryo develops, the disk folds over, leaving two seams, one along the midline of the back of our body and one along the front. The back seam can be seen in our spine, but the front line is more subtle. We rarely notice the front seam unless it does not close completely, as is the case with a child who is born with a harelip.

One multi-orgasmic man explained his understanding of the Microcosmic Orbit: "I think of the Microcosmic Orbit as a channel or meridian or route that has been discovered and tested over thousands of years to transform the raw biological energy used to create children into a lighter and more refined energy that can be used to improve one's health and one's lovemaking."

THE BACK CHANNEL

The Back Channel begins at the perineum and runs along the back of the body from the tip of the tailbone, up the spine and neck, to the crown of the head, and finally down the forehead to where it ends between the bottom of the nose and the upper lip, where there is an indentation.

THE FRONT CHANNEL

The Front Channel runs from the tip of your tongue to your throat and along the midline of your body down to your pubis and perineum. Touching your tongue to your palate closes the Microcosmic Orbit. The Front Channel is sometimes translated from the Chinese as the Conception Channel, and if you look very closely at the belly of a woman who is pregnant, you will generally see a dark line (which doctors call the linea nigra) that extends along part of this channel.

WHAT DOES ENERGY FEEL LIKE WHEN IT IS MOVING IN YOUR BODY?

The fact is that you already have energy, or chi, moving through every part of your body. Without it, you would not be alive. Generally we just are not aware of this current of energy moving through our bodies. When we first become aware of chi, we may experience many different sensations. Some of the most common that people report are warmth, tingling, prickling (like the feeling of static electricity), pulsating, humming, bubbling, and buzzing. Some people feel it move slowly, while others feel a fast "rush." Though some people feel it move in a straight line along the Microcosmic Orbit, most people feel it more at some points along the orbit than at others.

HOW DOES CHI MOVE?

There is a Taoist saying: "The mind moves and the chi follows." Wherever you focus your attention, the chi tends to gather and increase. As biofeedback experiments have now confirmed, focusing your attention on an area of the body can cause increased activity in the nerves and muscles in that area. The stronger the focus, the greater the movement of the chi. Keep in mind that you are not pushing or pulling the chi, you are simply shifting your focus to another point. Understanding this is crucial to developing an effective practice. However, you will not just be moving your attention over your skin, you will be experiencing a palpable flow of warm, tingling energy.

SEXUAL ENERGY

Sexual energy, or ching-chi (pronounced JING-CHEE) in Chinese, is one of the most obvious and powerful types of bioelectric energy. What we in the West call getting aroused, or getting horny, the Taoists thought of as the generating of sexual energy. Sexual Kung Fu practices are based on cultivating this sexual energy and using it to increase your overall energy and health. You must learn to draw your sexual energy out of your genitals and to circulate it through the rest of your body to truly master the Taoist techniques for experiencing multiple and whole-body orgasms and for improving your health.

As we mentioned in the previous chapter, according to the Taoists all the parts of your body (including the brain, glands, organs, and senses) give their best energy during orgasm to create a new life. This is the power that goes into creating a child, but when procreation is not the goal, the Taoists believe, it is best to conserve this energy and channel it throughout your body for pleasure and health. Since we are conceived through orgasm and orgasmic energy permeates every cell of our body, to stay healthy and active we need to feel this rejuvenating, orgasmic energy regularly – ideally, every day.

Once you develop the ability to circulate sexual energy through amour body, you will be able to feel this sensation throughout your body anywhere and at any time. Senior Healing Tao instructor Michael Winn explains: "Sexual energy is available to men twenty-four hours a day, but most men starve themselves because they believe they can satisfy themselves sexually only during a few minutes of intercourse. The most liberating thing for men is to discover that they have total access to and control over their sexual energy at any time." You may be wondering whether all of this sexual energy will result in your feeling constantly aroused and in need of having sex, "an itch that needs to be scratched." On the contrary, men (and women) have sexual urges that need to be acted on or channeled in some way. In the West, we have tried to suppress or sublimate these desires, but according to the Tao this leads to physical and psychological imbalances.

When you practice self-cultivation, this feeling of arousal will result not in uncontrollable sexual urges but in an energetic, calm sense of well-being. One multi-orgasmic man explains the difference: "Before I started practicing Sexual Kung Fu, if I had not ejaculated in a while, my sexual urge would get stronger and stronger. I would look at pornography, look for one-night stands, or go to prostitutes. After ejaculating, this urge would disappear almost instantly and I couldn't understand why I had spent so much time and money trying to satisfy it. I would tell myself that I wouldn't do it next time, but I knew that after a while the sexual urge would return and I would do it all over again. When I finally started practicing Sexual Kung Fu, my sexual energy was still strong, but balanced. It was the first time in my life I was happy to be a man sexually, because I finally had control over my sexual energy."

As you practice, you may have more sexual energy than you are used to, and you will need to learn to channel this excess energy. As one multi-orgasmic man explained, "When I started the practice, all of my relationships became sexualized. I needed to learn to circulate and balance the energy." If this happens to you, the Cool Draw exercise described in the following chapter will help you transform this sexual energy into more neutral and less volatile physical energy, referred to earlier as chi. You can also take up Tai-chi or chi-kung (pronounced CHEE-GUNG) or other practices to help you ground and channel this additional energy. Exercise in general will help you to manage this additional energy.

Your Arousal

According to Taoism, we need to feel aroused, to feel the life-giving force of sexual energy, every day, because when we feel aroused, our bodies produce more sexual hormones, which in Taoism were considered the fountain of youth. (This need for arousal is why sex sells: we are drawn to images that stimulate this sexual energy and these sexual hormones.) When you learn how to circulate your sexual energy, you can feel this rejuvenating polymer at any time.

BECOMING AWARE OF YOUR AROUSAL

To learn to become multi-orgasmic, you will need to become increasingly aware of the speed at which you get aroused. This sounds pretty straightforward, but most men pay little attention to their arousal rate. Often men go from erection to ejaculation like race cars, without taking the time to notice, let alone enjoy, the sights along the way.

When you start to get sexually aroused, your penis increases in length and width as its spongy tissue fills with blood. As you become erect, valves close down in the veins, stopping the blood from returning to the body. Erection occurs spontaneously in newborn boys and in most men at least several times each night while dreaming.

Almost all men at some time in their lives experience the awkward situation in which they are unable to get an erection with a partner. The occasional inability to gain an erection may be caused by what psychologist Bernie Zilbergeld calls the "wisdom of the penis," telling you that there is something that needs to be addressed in your relationship, or it may simply be a sign that you are distracted by work or other pressures.

If a man repeatedly does not get an erection, he is called impotent, a word that also carries the suggestion of being weak and powerless. In Sexual Kung Fu, there is no such thing as "impotence," and by using the solo exercises to strengthen your erections and the Soft Entry technique in lovemaking, you should never have to worry about it again. If you are unable to get an erection when you want or if you want to know what to do when the situation arises (or doesn't), see "Snake Charming: Overcoming Impotence" in chapter 8.

THE STAGES OF ERECTION

Most men believe they are either horny or they're not, that they either have an erection or they don't. When we are young, we get directions so often and so quickly that it is hard to distinguish levels of arousal. The Taoists, however, noticed that there are actually four stages of erection – four attainments, as they called them.

The first is firmness (also referred to as lengthening).
The second is swelling.
The third is hardness.
The fourth is heat.

Your erection is not then just a static appendage, but undergoes a process that reflects your level of arousal. Western physicians have recently confirmed these four stages of erection, although describing them in somewhat more technical terms.

Healing Tao instructor Walter Beckley described the four stages like this: "In the first stage, your penis starts to move and become erect. In the second stage, it's firm, but not bard – not really hard enough to penetrate (unless you use the Soft Entry technique). In the third stage, it is erect and hard. In the fourth stage, it is stiff and really hot. This last stage is also when your testicles draw into your body. It is much easier to avoid ejaculating when you can remain in the erect and hard third stage. Pulling the sexual energy up helps keep the penis from getting to the final, stiff and hot stage. Relaxing is also essential, as is trying to be aware of when you move into that anxious, explosive fourth stage when ejaculation is imminent.

THE SECRET OF MALE SEXUALITY

As we mature as lovers, we are able to gain some control of our arousal in an attempt to please our partners. Generally called our staying power, this ability is often achieved by learning to distract ourselves from our arousal (thinking about baseball statistics, for example) rather than by learning to sensitize ourselves to it. True ejaculatory control comes from knowing your individual arousal rate, not ignoring it. As you learn to feel your rising pleasure more, it will become easier for you to take the multi-orgasmic path.

BUT ISN'T SEX SUPPOSED TO BE ABOUT RELAXING AND LETTING GO? To experience sexual pleasure, men must certainly relax and let go, but if we relax and let go too much, we ejaculate and then most, if not all, of the pleasure is gone. Knowing when to let go of our sexuality and when to control it is the essence of Sexual Kung Fu, and the secret to male sexuality.

Your Ejaculation

The ejection of semen from your body actually occurs in two parts. In the contractile (sometimes called "emission") phase, the prostate contracts and empties semen into the urethra. In the expulsion phase, the semen is propelled down the urethra and out the penis. When you become multi-orgasmic you will experience the pleasurable pelvic contractions – what we will call contractile-phase orgasm, which is felt as a popping or fluttering sensation in your prostate – without actually ejaculating. Though some men have multiple ejaculations during one love-making session (this is easiest for teenage boys), it should be clear by now that this is quite different from multiple – nonejaculatory – orgasms.

As you are becoming highly aroused, a few drops of clear fluid may trickle out of your penis. This preseminal fluid comes from the prostate and other glands, such as the Cowper's glands, which produce an alkaline fluid used to lubricate the urethra and pave the way for the sperm. The Taoists called this liquid water, which they distinguished from milk, or semen. This fluid is perfectly natural and signals the approach of contractile-phase orgasm. It may, however, have a number of sperm in it. This is the "pre-ejaculate" that they warn you about in sex-education classes, so you will need to make sure that you continue to use birth control even if you don't ejaculate. However, if you have nonejaculatory orgasms, the chances of you and your partner having an unplanned pregnancy are much lower.

WHERE DOES THE SEMEN GO WHEN I DON'T EJACULATE? The semen is broken down and reabsorbed by the body, just as the sperm are reabsorbed in a man who has had a vasectomy. However, the effects of the Taoist techniques on the body are very different from those of a vasectomy. With a vasectomy, the vas deferens is cut just above the testicles and the sperm have nowhere to go. They are eventually reabsorbed, but many men complain about feeling congestion in the testicles and pelvis. If you have had a vasectomy, it is additionally important for you to practice the Testicle Massage exercise (see chapter 8) and to circulate your sexual energy. Both of these techniques help the body absorb the sperm and reduce any feeling of fullness or congestion. The involuntary contractions of the contractile-phase orgasms that you will learn to experience without ejaculation also massage the prostate, which helps to relieve congestion and keep the prostate healthy.

CAN NOT EJACULATING HURT ME? The Taoists have been practicing the techniques given in this book for thousands of years without negative side effects, and in fact with great improvement to their health and longevity. From their study of multi-orgasmic men in the West, Dunn and Trost concur: "None of our subjects has yet developed erectile or ejaculatory difficulties. Our older multiple orgasmic men maintain firm erections after one or more orgasms. In our clinical experience we have not seen men who become sexually dysfunctional following experimentation with multiple orgasms."

FINDING THE WAY

Where Did It Go?

I didn't ejaculate, but I lost my erection. What happened? There is one other thing that can happen to your semen besides its being ejaculated or reabsorbed by your body. Occasionally, as you are practicing the Taoist techniques, you may experience an orgasm without ejaculating but lose your erection. If this is not simply due to a decrease in your arousal, you probably have experienced a retrograde, or backward, ejaculation. When this occurs, the semen goes into your bladder and passes harmlessly out of your body the next time you urinate. Since you lose your erection and eventually your sperm (when you urinate), you have not done the practice correctly, but you should also know that you have not done yourself any harm. Hartman and Fithian explain: "What's important to know is that there is no apparent harm to the body when a retrograde ejaculation takes place. All that happens is that if the ejaculation is complete the penis becomes flaccid, as it usually does after ordinary ejaculations." If you lose your erection and are curious, you can urinate into a cup. If it's clouds; you had a retrograde ejaculation. You may not want to do this urine test except when you are practicing by yourself, since it might seem a bit clinical during a candlelit night of lovemaking.

Your Orgasm

The male orgasm lies on the precipice of ejaculation. If you rush forward to experience it, you will fall over the edge and down into the ravine of postejaculatory stupor. Though many men continue to feel pleasure after they have ejaculated, most find themselves at the bottom of their arousal slope, having to climb slowly back up. The five to ten strong ejaculatory contractions are quite pleasurable; otherwise, most men would not see them as the goal of their desire. Ejaculatory orgasm may seem like a thrilling ride, but after you experience the prolonged and ecstatic sexual aerobatics of multiple orgasms, this ejaculatory descent will seem pretty tame and, by comparison, pretty disappointing. "After I have a 'squirt' orgasm," as one multi-orgasmic man described ejaculation, "I feel like I've been on a six-second roller coaster – after standing in line for two hours!"

HOW CAN I EXPERIENCE MULTIPLE ORGASMS? As with any orgasm you have had, you begin by getting sexually aroused, whether from a thought, the sight of your lover, your lover's voice, or your lover's touch. (In the case of adolescent boys, the blowing of the wind can suffice.) This arousal generally leads to an erection, and with increasing stimulation you pass through an excitement phase until you reach your contractile phase. The contractile phase is a crucial fork in the road, one direction leading to ejaculation and the other to multiple orgasms (see figure 4).

Instead of the ordinary "Big Bang" ejaculatory orgasm (A), with Sexual Kung Fu you can draw your sexual energy up during your contractile phase (before ejaculation) and have multiple whole-body orgasms. If you ejaculate, you can use the Finger Lock, which will prolong your orgasm and conserve energy (B). If you avoid ejaculation, you can use the Big Draw to finish lovemaking with energy radiating through your body (C).

During the contractile phase, you will feel a series of prostate contractions lasting three to five seconds. These pleasurable pelvic orgasms are what we have been calling contractile-phase orgasms. Though the intensity of these orgasms varies and they can often be as intense as regular ejaculatory orgasms, at first they may be quite mild. Now is the moment of truth. Instead of continuing to the point of no return, past which you must ejaculate, you will stop or otherwise decrease your stimulation momentarily – long enough for you to gain control of your arousal rate.

You can also squeeze your PC muscle around your fluttering prostate, which will help you maintain some control over these spasms. Drawing the energy away from your genitals and up your spine as we describe in the next chapter will help relieve the pressure and the urge to ejaculate. Your level of excitement will decrease slightly in preparation for another genital orgasm. With multiple orgasms, your arousal is like a wave that rises to a peak and then, instead of cresting over and crashing, is swept up by a larger wave and on to an even higher peak.

One important point: if you strive for contractile-phase orgasms, there is a good chance you will crest over into ejaculation. Most men find that they must stop their arousal just before reaching contractile-phase orgasm and let themselves relax into it. Many multi-orgasmic men describe themselves as mentally falling backward into nonejaculatory orgasms instead of falling forward into ejaculation. The idea is to stay as close as possible to the point of ejaculatory inevitability – reveling in the contractile-phase orgasm – without cresting over into ejaculation. You will feel the pleasure and release of the prostate contractions, the PC contractions, and the anal-sphincter contractions.

How close together you experience these multiple contractile-phase orgasms depends on you. You will experience waves of satisfying pleasure, which, if your partner is multi-orgasmic, will help you harmonize your sexual desire. You will not have to worry about giving your partner "her orgasm(s)" and then getting "your orgasm." Rather, you both have the potential for multiple peaks of orgasmic pleasure.

FINDING THE WAY

Oops!

If you are having difficulty separating your orgasm from your ejaculation, you can begin drawing the sexual energy up your spine before you orgasm. According to the Tao, the real key to whole-body pleasure and healing is the circulation of this sexual energy through the Microcosmic Orbit. Once you start drawing sexual energy up, you may discover that you have "orgasmic" feelings in your brain or in other parts of your body or in your entire body.

Voluntarily squeezing your PC muscle around your prostate will also help you develop sensitivity in your pelvis and control the contractile-phase orgasms that cause your prostate to contract in pleasurable involuntary spasms.

When you do crest over into ejaculation, which you will do many times while you are learning – and even occasionally afterward – don't get frustrated or disappointed. Enjoy the pleasurable contractions of your penis that accompany ejaculation and realize that there is always another opportunity to experience more peaks later. Remember, the practice takes time and intimacy, with yourself and with your partner.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MULTIPLE ORGASMS AND WHOLE-BODY MULTIPLE ORGASMS? Each genital orgasm helps release the tension that results from the built-up sexual energy and the increased flow of blood into your pelvis. Several pelvic – non-ejaculatory – orgasms are extremely satisfying (and energizing), but as you develop your orgasmic capacity, you will no doubt want to expand these pelvic orgasms throughout the rest of your body, which is the real secret of the Tao.

Whole-body multiple orgasms also begin with the contractile-phase release of pelvic orgasms, but instead of keeping the sexual energy (and the pleasure) in your pelvis, you draw your sexual energy up your spine, into your brain, and throughout your entire body, as we will show you step by step in the next chapter.

Most men do not even realize they can reach these sexual peaks. Not only do they experience only one orgasm (which, for them, is the same as ejaculation), but they experience this orgasm almost exclusively in their genitals. In Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex (But Were Afraid to Ask), Dr. David Reuben describes orgasm as it is typically understood by Western sexologists; "For orgasm to occur, the full force of the body's entire nervous system must be concentrated on the sexual organs. Successful orgasm requires that every microvolt of electrical energy be mobilized and directed toward the penis and clitoris-vagina." Reuben, however, goes no further than a discussion of what the Taoists knew was just the first level of orgasm, or genital orgasm.

As represented in the illustration of your orgasmic potential (see figure 4), you can learn not only to experience multiple orgasms, but also to expand your orgasms from your genitals to your brain to your entire body. In the words of one multi-orgasmic man, "A whole-body orgasm is unbelievable. Once you experience it you never go back to a genital orgasm."

WHAT EXACTLY DO WHOLE-BODY ORGASMS FEEL LIKE? Everyone experiences this orgasmic high slightly differently, which makes it difficult to describe in general terms. The experience is often so intense that people resort to mystical language (using phrases like "oneness with the universe") that is difficult to understand if you have not experienced what is being described. However, people frequently have more concrete sensations such as warmth, tingling, vibrating, or pulsating throughout their body. The best way to know what you might feel is through the descriptions of men who have had whole-body multiple orgasms.

One multi-orgasmic man described his first experience of a whole-body orgasm: "We were making love and I thought I was going to come and I started doing my deep breathing, and as I was doing my deep breathing my head started to kind of electrify – to tingle. Like little sparks going on inside, tingly little things that went up the back of my neck a little bit. It started rushing back and forth in my head. And I almost thought I was going to get dizzy – it was so good. And I thought, 'If this goes any further, I might just lift off!' It lasted for – it's hard to know what time is like in bed – but at least a minute. It was a long orgasm. Just tingling, tingling, tingling. It would go away and then come back. Sly body was ringing like a bell."

Another man described his first experience of a multiple orgasm like this: "It was not localized in my genitals. My whole body started vibrating. And I thought, 'Well, I don't know what is going on here.' And so at first I was a little alarmed, but it felt good, so I just relaxed and let it happen."

Another multi-orgasmic man described his experience this way: "My growing sexual arousal is less active, less hot, less wild than an ejaculatory orgasm. It is more balanced and controlled. As the pleasure and pressure build up, they can flow into the Microcosmic Orbit and through my whole body. The goal is not to shoot the sperm, but to feel this vibrating energy throughout my whole body, to activate love and tenderness, and to expand my spirit. The whole body is much more relaxed, especially at the moment of orgasm."

Finally, one multi-orgasmic man compared the experience to an ejaculatory orgasm like this: "The feeling of the whole-body orgasm is more subtle, complete, satisfying. The whole process is not a feeling of a short explosion but of a longer and slower implosion. I don't feel empty afterward, which is easy to understand because with an explosion something leaves your body, but with an implosion you still have it in you. There remains a deep satisfaction on the physical, emotional, and spiritual levels, which stays sometimes for hours, sometimes for days."

In the West, we have limited our definition of an orgasm to pulsations that take place in our pelvis (prostate) and genitals (penis), but the ancient Taoists understood that an orgasm is any pulsation (contraction and expansion) and can take place in any part of your body. Michael Winn explains: "You can have an orgasmic pulsation in the whole body or in any part of the body. One of your organs can have an orgasm. Your brain can have an orgasm. You wouldn't know you are having an orgasm in your penis or in your prostate unless your brain was having an orgasm, too."

DISCRETE AND CONTINUOUS MULTIPLE ORGASMS

It is important to point out that whole-body orgasms are so intense that it is often hard to know where one ends and another begins. The waves of pleasure that you experience make any attempt to keep score" truly irrelevant. Hartman and Fithian's laboratory research (see chapter 1) suggests that men (and women) can in fact have both discrete (separate) multiple orgasms and continuous multiple orgasms.

With discrete multiple orgasms, you have a peak orgasmic experience and then the orgasm subsides, but it is then followed by another discrete orgasm. With continuous multiple orgasms, you have a peak orgasmic experience that may grow more or less intense, but you never leave the orgasmic state entirely. Hartman and Fithian recorded these two different types of orgasms by looking at heart rate, which in discrete multiple orgasms would return to its baseline figure (around seventy beats per minute) between orgasms. In continuous multiple orgasms the heart rate reached a number of peaks without returning to the baseline in between (see figure 19, page 98). Finally, these discrete and continuous orgasms can combine to make countless combinations of pleasurable peaks. The possibilities are really endless. It's a far cry from the six-second orgasm most men have learned to settle for as the "normal" male orgasm.

SEX AND SPIRITUALITY

If you are practicing the duo practice (that is, with a partner), you may also feel your sexual energy circulate through her and her sexual energy circulate through you. Eventually you may feel as if the physical boundaries between the two of you dissolve. Many men have experienced this oneness with a partner, or even a feeling of oneness with the universe, during extraordinarily intimate lovemaking. With Sexual Kung Fu, you will learn how to return to this place regularly with your partner and even by yourself. This kind of sexual union with another person and between yourself and the universe can actually result in a transformation of consciousness. It is for this reason that sexuality in the East has often been seen as part of the spiritual path, and not as something opposed to it. (We discuss the connection between sexuality and spirituality more in chapter 5, in the section called "Sexing the Spirit.")

Becoming a Multi-Orgasmic Man

Now that you have a better understanding of your sexuality and its true potential, it is time to become multi-orgasmic. This ability requires developing both your sexual strength and your sexual sensitivity. Most men who practice these exercises will begin to experience multiple orgasms within a week or two and will master the technique within three to six months. Some with strong sexual energy and sexual sensitivity may experience them the first time they try, while others with weaker energy or less sensitivity may take longer than six months to become regularly multi-orgasmic. It also depends on your dedication to the practice. We give you these time frames as an estimate, but the most important thing is not to get discouraged. If you persevere, you will get it.

Breathing Basics

Strange as it may seem, learning to control your ejaculation and to become multiply orgasmic begins with strengthening and deepening your breathing. As is true in all martial arts and meditative practices your breath is the gate through which you can gain control of your body. Breathing is both involuntary and voluntary. In other words, we breathe regularly without thinking about it, but we can also choose to change the rhythm or depth of our breathing. This use of the mind to cultivate the body is the very basis of Sexual Kung Fu.

Your breathing is also related to your heart rate. If you are breathing quickly and shallow, as after running, your heart rate increases. If you are breathing slowly and deeply, your heart rate decreases. Increased heart rate is part of orgasm and breathing quickly is one sign of orgasm's approach. So the first step in controlling your arousal rate and therefore your ejaculation, is deep and slow breathing.

BELLY BREATHING

Most of us breathe very shallowly, generally into our chest and shoulders, which allows only a small amount of oxygen to be absorbed by our lungs. Belly breathing, breathing deeply into the bottom of our lungs is the way a newborn child breathes. If you watch a sleeping newborn, you will see the child's entire belly rise and fall with each breath. Belly breathing allows us to replace stagnant air at the bottom of our lungs with fresh, oxygen-filled air. This is the healthiest way to breathe, but we lose this natural ability as stress and anxiety cause us to cut our breathing short. This anxious breathing is confined to our upper chest. When we are happy and laughing, we are able once again to breathe into our belly. In this exercise, you will learn to belly breathe as you did when you were young.

FINDING THE WAY

Inhale Through Your Nose

When practicing any of these exercises, always inhale through your nose, which filters and warms the air. When you inhale through your mouth, you breathe unfiltered unwarmed air, which is harder for your body to assimilate.

EXERCISE 1

BELLY BREATHING

1. Sit on a chair with your back straight and your feet touching the floor about shoulder width apart.
2. Place your hands over your navel and relax your shoulders.
3. Inhale through your nose and feel your lower abdomen expand at the navel area (below and around it) so that it bulges outward. Your diaphragm will also descend (see figure 5).
4. Keeping your chest relaxed, exhale with some force to pull the lower abdomen back in, as if you were pulling your navel back toward your spine. Also feel your penis and testicles pull up.
5. Repeat steps 3 and 4 eighteen to thirty-six times.

A few minutes of belly breathing each day will teach your body to breathe deeply on its own, even when you are asleep. When you are in the heat of passion, this ability to control your breathing will be essential to stopping yourself from ejaculating and to expanding the feeling of orgasm throughout your whole body.

Once you learn not to ejaculate, it is very important to do this deep-breathing exercise or eventually just to breathe deeply on your own. It will help circulate your sexual energy through your body and absorb it into your organs. Belly breathing also massages the organs and prostate and can relieve the full feeling many men experience when they first stop ejaculating.

Although it is not as important to exhale through your nose as it is to inhale, it is still preferable. Some people, however, find it easier to exhale through their mouth when breathing deeply. See what works best for you.

FINDING THE WAY

Belly Laughing

If you are having a hard time with belly breathing, as many Westerners do, you can practice belly laughing instead. A belly laugh is the kind of laugh that makes your whole abdomen shake. It is not the fake salesman's laugh; it is the genuine laugh you have with your close friends. It is the kind of laugh that can make your stomach ache, since most of us do not use these muscles very often.

To belly laugh, sit in a chair with your back straight and your feet on the floor about shoulder width apart. Place your hands over your belly and start to laugh (from your belly). Feel your stomach vibrate. This belly laughing will help relax your diaphragm and let you breathe from your belly. It also will help you generate a lot of energy, which you will later learn to circulate through your body for better orgasms and better health.

EXERCISE 2

CENTURY COUNT

1. Slowly inhale (expanding your belly) and exhale (flattening your belly). Count each complete inhalation and exhalation as one breath.
2. Continue breathing from the belly and counting from one to one hundred, thinking only about your breathing.
3. If you notice that your mind has strayed, start again.
4. Practice this exercise twice a day until you can count to one hundred with ease.

Increasing Your Concentration

This exercise builds on the belly breathing you just learned and will help you improve your concentration. In this exercise you count one hundred breaths without letting your mind wander. (A complete inhalation and exhalation is one breath.) This is very simple, but not easy. Most people have difficulty counting to ten, let alone one hundred, without letting their mind wander. One multi-orgasmic man explained his practice: "I go the gym and I'll sit in the sauna and count my breath in and out as one, in and out as two, all the way to one hundred. Sometimes I'll be breathing and counting and suddenly around fifty or sixty I realize I'm thinking about stocks or something and I can't remember what number I'm at, so I go back to one and I just start counting again until I get to one hundred."

Strengthening Your Sex Muscles

Now it is time to develop your sexual strength. The pubococcygeus muscle, or PC muscle is the muscular sling that stretches from the pubic bone in the front to the tailbone in the back (see figure 6). Most men feel their PC muscle at their perineum, just behind their testicles and in front of their anus. This is the muscle you use to stop yourself from urinating when you can't find a toilet. The PC muscle is also responsible for the rhythmic contractions in your pelvis and anus during orgasm. In The G Spot, Ladas, Whipple, and Perry describe the importance of the PC muscle: "If men increase the strength of their pubococcygeus muscle, they too can learn to become multiply orgasmic and separate between orgasm and ejaculation." Your orgasm builds from your prostate, so learning how to squeeze on the prostate with your pelvic muscles is essential. In addition to having more and better orgasms, you will by this squeezing prevent hardening and swelling of the prostate and help avoid or heal prostate problems.

The PC muscle (which surrounds the prostate gland) serves as a valve around the genitals that you will learn to open and close. You can feel this muscle working when you are trying to push out those last few drops urine. Women feel it most when they are trying to push out a baby. Women who have developed strong PC muscles can hold a man's penis in their vagina more tightly, increasing sensation for both partners.

The PC muscle is also what allows animals to way their tails. Strangely, the word penis literally means "tail" in Latin. So what you are going to do with these exercises is learn to "wag your tail" to strengthen your erections, intensify your orgasms, and separate your orgasms from ejaculation.

EXERCISE 3

STOPPING THE STREAM

1. When you are about to urinate, stand on your toes and the balls of your feet. If necessary, you can use the wall for support.
2. Inhale deeply.
3. Exhale slowly, forcefully push out the urine while pulling up on your perineum and clenching your teeth.
4. Inhale and contract your PC muscle to stop the flow or urine midstream.
5. Exhale and start urinating again.
6. Repeat steps 4 and 5 three to six times or until you have finished urinating.

Stopping the Stream

The easist way to find your PC muscle is to stop the flow of urine by clamping down the muscles in your pelvis that next time you are going to the bathroom. Stopping yourself from peeing was one of the first acts of control you learned to have over your body. Using your ability to control your urine flow can now help you control your ejaculation, because the urinary duct, the ejaculatory duct, and the seminal-vesicle duct all pass through the prostate. (This is why when a man's prostate is enlarged, he has problems urinating and ejaculating.)

FINDING THE WAY

Emptying Your Bladder

Because the bladder and the prostate are so close, you should also urinate before self-pleasuring or lovemaking whenever your bladder feels full. A full bladder will make you feel like you need to ejaculate and can actually make it more difficult for you to stop yourself from ejaculating.

If you have a strong PC muscle, you should be able to stop the flow or urine midstream and then start it again. If this is difficult for you, your PC muscle is weak. Stopping the flow of urine may sting at first. This is perfectly normal and should stop within a few weeks, unless for some reason you have an infection, in which case you should wait until you have seen a doctor and cleared it up before continuing with the practice. If your muscle becomes sore, you just need practice. Pulling up on your perineum as you push out the urine will help you urinate with more force and will help strengthen your kidneys, prostate gland, and bladder in addition to your PC muscle.

Although standing on your toes and clenching your teeth will help intensify your practice, the most important part of the practice is simply to stop and start urinating as many times as you can. Once multi-orgasmic man described his "peeing practice" this way: "Whenever I go to the bathroom now, I tray to stop and go at least three times. And if I am in a fun mood and I am not in a rush, I will try to just stop, go, stop, go, sometimes maybe five or six or seven times."

PC PULL-UPS

The importance of the PC muscle was discovered in the West during the 1940s by Arnold Kegel, a gynecologist. He developed the famous Kegel (pronounced KAY-gul) exercises, which help many pregnant women control their bladders and which can ease childbirth. Women found that these exercises could also increase their sexual desire, intensify their orgasms, and help them become multi-orgasmic. Strengthening this muscle is equally important for a man's pelvic health and sexual pleasure.

There are many different exercises for strengthening your PC muscle that have been taught in the West, most of them adaptations of Kegel's original technique. All of them teach you to contract and relax the muscle, although the number of repetitions and the amount of time suggested for holding the contractions vary. The following exercise is based on the Taoist awareness that the circular muscles of the body (including the muscles around the eyes, mouth, perineum, and anus) are connected. By squeezing the muscles around your eyes and mouth, you can increase the force of your PC Pull-Ups. It is easiest to begin practicing this exercise while sitting, but later on you can do this exercise while standing or lying down.

EXERCISE 4

PC PULL-UPS

1. Inhale and concentrate on your prostate, perineum, and anus.
2. As you exhale, contract your PC muscle around your prostate and around your anus while at the same time contracting the muscles around your eyes and mouth.
3. Inhale and relax, releasing your PC, eye, and mouth muscles.
4. Repeat steps 2 and 3, contracting your muscles as you exhale and releasing them as you inhale, nine to thirty-six times.

Although contracting your eyes and your lips will help you squeeze your PC muscle around your prostate and anus, the most important part of the practice is simply contracting and releasing your PC muscle as often as you can, which you can do practically anywhere - while driving, while watching TV, while sending a fax, while in a boring meeting. You can see how many contractions you can do during a red light, or you can hold a single contraction until the light turns green.

Try to do the exercise at least two or three times a day, although you can do it as many times as you like. Your muscles may get sore, just as they do after doing regular pull-ups. Don't push yourself too far; increase the number and frequency gradually. Consistency is more important the quantity. One way to help develop a daily routine is to connect your practice to daily events, like getting up in the morning, taking a shower, or lying in bed at night.

According to the authors of The G Spot, a man with a healthy PC muscle should be able to raise and lower a towel on his erect penis by contracting this muscle. (In the more advanced Taoist practice, you can even learn to use weights to strengthen your pelvic muscles.) For now, you may want to try raising and lowering a towel, but you probably should avoid having an audience. As the authors of The G Spot correctly point out, "'performance anxiety' is the archenemy of male erection."

Self-Pleasuring and Self-Cultivation

Next, you need to cultivate your sexual sensitivity. The easiest way to develop this awareness is through self-pleasuring. Unfortunately, most of us in the West did not grow up with an understanding of sex and sexual energy as natural and essential parts of our overall health. From the first time you started touching your "privates," your parents may have subtly, or not so subtly, told you to keep your hands out of your pants. Though this probably did not stop you from locking yourself in your bedroom or in the bathroom, you probably have some guilt and embarrassment about masturbating. You are not alone.

Christianity's ambivalence toward sex, especially sex that is not procreative, still influences Western society and sexual mores. For example, in 1994 Dr. Joycelyn Elders, the U.S. surgeon general, was forced to resign for stating publicly that masturbation "is a part of human sexuality." Therefore, it is worth mentioning that Christianity's prohibition of masturbation, which at one time was called onanism, is based on a misreading of the biblical story of Onan. Onan was punished for refusing to impregnate the wife of his dead brother, as was the custom at the time. His "sin" had nothing to do with masturbation.

PLAYING WITH YOURSELF

Taoist sexuality was developed as a branch of medicine, not morality. It therefore does not prohibit any form of human sexual activity but simply tries to teach people how to stay healthy while engaging in it. The Taoist masters saw masturbation, which they called solo cultivation or genital exercise, as an essential way of developing ejaculatory control and of learning to circulate sexual energy to revitalize the body. (Remember, solo cultivation, which we will refer to as both self-cultivation and self-pleasuring, does not include ejaculation.)

According to the Tao, play is one of the best ways to learn, and "playing with ourselves" is an excellent way to strengthen our genitals and our sexual energy. Many people worry about masturbating "too much," but the Taoists knew that there is no such thing, as long as one learns to control ejaculation. Too much ejaculation is the problem: it drains men of their strength, but this can happen with intercourse as well as self-pleasuring.

According to Kinsey and more recent surveys, almost all boys and most men masturbate. Prohibiting or discouraging a natural part of child sexuality turns boys into sexual thieves, forcing them to steal their pleasure. It is quite possible that most men ejaculate so quickly because they grew up trying to "get off" before they "got caught." Dr. Wardell Pomeroy, in his book Boys and Sex, explains that since almost all boys masturbate, they should learn to do so slowly and for extended periods of time so that they will be able to make love longer when they eventually become sexually active.

The Taoists would add that boys should learn to pleasure themselves without ejaculating. Young boys or teenagers who ejaculate too much can find that their energy and motivation for other activities decreases significantly. When one of the authors was growing up in Thailand, he sat next to a boy in school who had repeated the fourth grade four times. The boy masturbated each day in class four or five times and ejaculated into a bottle. Obviously, his was an extreme case, but according to Taoism, his failure in school was quite understandable. He was literally draining himself and his brain. The expression "screwing your brains out" is an accurate description of the stupor that occurs after repeated ejaculation.

Many men (and women) who are married or in relationships continue to pleasure themselves. In 1972, the American Medical Association advised physicians in a book entitled Human Sexuality, "Masturbation is practiced by men and women of all ages, often as a supplement to marital coitus, and women tend to masturbate more as they grow older." (Estimates suggest that about 70 percent of married men and married women pleasure themselves.) Self-pleasuring does not take the place of sex with a partner, but it can serve as a valuable complement. A recent national sex study sponsored by the University of Chicago found that people who are having sex regularly with a partner actually pleasure themselves more than people who are not.

Pleasuring yourself can help relieve built-up tension when you need a sexual release more than intimacy. It also can help when your partnet is tired, distracted, or does not have the same sexual appetite. If for whatever reason you feel that you just can't pleasure yourself, you can learn to become multi-orgasmic with your partner instead. It may take a little longer, that's all. You can do the exercises you have already learned: Belly Breathing, Century Count, Stopping the Stream, and PC Pull-Ups.

Pleasureing ourselves is not something we are taught to do. Considering the outcry that occurred when Surgeon General Elders suggested that masturbation "perhaps should be taught," it is unlikely that it will be introduced into the curriculum anytime soon. Most of us learn how to masturbate in a hurry, by ourselves, or with orther, equally inexperienced boys. None of these circumstances are conducive to developing real sensitivity or much skill, so we offer a few pointers.

EXPERIENCE YOUR OWN PLEASURE. If you choose to use pornography or erotica to get aroused, try, once you are aroused, to shift your focus to the sensations in your body. Pornography, though it can increase your sexual energy, is also distracting and can make it difficult for you to focus on your own sensations as you approach orgasm. Many men learn to self-pleasure with pornography, and although this is not the place to discuss the pros and cons of the First Amendment or the sex industry, it is important to recognize that pornography succeeds when it takes you away from yourself. In this practice you need to go inward and experience your own pleasure, not someone else's idea of pleasure.

STIMULATE YOUR ENTIRE PENIS. It is important to try to stimulate your entire penis. Most men focus primarily on the head of their penis, which is the most erogenous part. However, according to Chinese medicine, the different parts of the penis correspond to different parts of the body (see figure 7). To avoid overstimulating one part of your body, try to rub your entire penis, the shaft as well as the head.

TOUCH YOUR BALLS. If touching your scrotum is not part of your regular routine, you may want to try it. The testicles can be especially sensitive to light touch, although many men also enjoy pulling on their scrotum. Rubbing your testicles actually increases production of testosterone, which adds to your potency both by raising your sperm count and by improving your overall health. In the next section we describe the Scrotal Tug, which can help delay ejaculation, but for now you should learn to touch your scrotum just for pleasure.

EXPLORE THE MILLION-DOLLAR POINT. As you masturbate, you should explore your perineum and the Million-Dollar Point (just in front of your anus). Pushing on this spot when you are about to ejaculate can help stop the ejaculatory reflex, but again, for now you are just exploring it for its pleasure. Pushing on this spot can squeeze more blood into your penis, which will make it throb pleasurably. Strong rhythmic pressure here also imitates the prostate contractions that accompany contractile-phase orgasm.

The Million-Dollar Point is best stimulated after you have an erection and are highly aroused, since once again the body gets aroused and swells from front to back. If you do not feel any sensation or it feels uncomfortable, stop until you are more fully aroused. If you don't warm to this point as a place of sexual stimulation, you can return to focusing on your penis and scrotum.

TAKE TIME. It is important to take as much time as you have to enjoy and learn to prolong ejaculation. "In our work with over a thousand cases," Hartman and Fithian report, "we've found that if a man can learn to go for fifteen to twenty minutes during masturbation or pleasuring, he can go as long as he wants to during intercourse. That period (fifteen to twenty minutes) seems to be critical. Once you've passed it, you have control. It's that simple."

This may seem like a long time, and it is, especially if you have been used to two- or three-minute masturbatory quickies. One multi-orgasmic man explained the difference: "When I used to play with myself, I would jack off in three to five minutes just to release tension or because I was bored or whatever. Self-cultivation is different. I try to play with myself as long as I can and not come. After a while, I could play with myself for twenty minutes." Once you become multi-orgasmic, you will be able to peak many times (without ejaculating) during these twenty or so minutes and you will be able to circulate rejuvenating, healing energy through your body. As another multi-orgasmic man described self-cultivation, "It's somewhere between masturbation and meditation."

The last thing we want to do is make pleasuring yourself mechanical or turn it into a burden, and as with lovemaking there is no one right amount of time or number of orgasms. Both depend on the situation, your free time, and your level of arousal. If you start to feel bored, ask yourself what is causing the boredom. Are you falling back into old patterns? Is you touch becoming mechanical? Are you focusing too much on your genitals? Are you distracted?

Sensitizing our bodies and pampering ourselves is not something we generally consider very manly, but pleasure is just as manly as pain and a lot more fun. It will help your practice to begin by taking a hot bath (maybe with a little soothing sesame or olive oil) and even massaging your body. Lowering the lights and lighting a candle can help you focus. You can also sit in front of a mirror (with or without a candle) and notice what your body looks like. Try to find its sensuality.

Touch and feel your hands and arms, your feet (if you can reach them), calves, and thighs. Touch your chest and even your nipples. When you pleasure yourself, try massaging your thighs and stomach before you zero in on your genitals.

CULTIVATE LOVE. While most men do self pleasure (feeling guilty or not), few are really able to do it lovingly, to cultivate love—make love to themselves—while they are doing it. Cultivating self-love is essential to being a loving partner. Sexual energy simply magnifies the energy in your body, positive and negative. If you are feeling love, love will be increased by your sexual desire. If it's hate you're feeling, then hate will be increased. It is essential that you understand the way sexual energy amplifies your emotions for both your solo and your duo practice. Cultivating your sexual energy into loving-kindness will also help you not to ejaculate, it is much more difficult to maintain control when you are feeling anger or impatience.

In Taoist sexuality you cannot separate your genitals from your heart because the sexual energy circulates throughout your entire body. As one multi-orgasmic man explained, "I used to actually want to keep sex and emotions separate, but as I practiced Taoist sexuality, my genitals became more connected to my heart and I discovered real, profound love for my partner and even other people."

The Taoists have a simple exercise for connecting your heart and your genitals (love and sex). Try it if you find that your are feeling irritable, frustrated, or distracted when you start being sexual with yourself or your partner; put your right hand on your groin and your left hand on your heart, connecting sexual energy with love. If you often feel anger, hatred, or other negative emotions, you must transform these feelings before cultivating your sexual energy. The Inner Smile and the Sex Healing Sounds—techniques described in Mantak Chia's Taoist Ways to Transform Stress into Vitality can help, as can psychological counseling.

Self-love, which is quite different from egotism or narcissism, is the basis for any solo or duo practice. In The G Spot, the authors caution that they have not written a book about love. Our book is also not about love; it is primarily about sex. But the Taoists knew that if you are to stay healthy you can never really separate the two.

Now try a self-pleasuring exercise that will help you expand your sensual focus and extend pleasure to your entire body. In the next section, you will learn more demanding exercises for controlling your arousal and becoming multi-orgasmic. But they are based on your being highly aware of your pleasure, so we begin here is self-pleasuring.

If you are able to experience the involuntary PC contractions that occur at contractile-phase orgasm without ejaculating, you have already taken the right road to becoming a multi-orgasmic man. If you actually have two of these mini-orgasms, you already are! These will not be earth-shattering orgasms at first, but eventually they will spread throughout your body. For now just enjoy the shivering feeling of these mini-orgasms. One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "Just as I am about to reach the point of ejaculation, I stop and relax and breathe. It's almost as if I asm letting myself go or fall back into a non-ejaculatory orgasm. Sometimes it feels like a pleasurable twitch in my prostate. Other times I can feel it throughout my whole genitals and it's as intense—more intense than an ejaculatory orgasm. My wife often can't tell whether I have ejaculated or not until I tell her."

If you have not yet started to feel the contractile-phase orgasm, and if the pressure in your pelvis feels uncomfortable, you can try the Pelvic Massage exercise described later or you can just ejaculate. Drawing the sexual energy away from your pelvis and massaging your pelvis will help decrease the pressure that all men feel when they begin. Also, if you crest over accidentally, don't give yourself a hard time. You are just beginning to learn the practice and to gain control of your arousal rate.

EXERCISE 5

SELF-PLEASURING

1. Start by lubricating your penis. Lubricant will increase your sensations. Oil is generally better than lotion, which dries up more quickly.

2. Pleasure yourself however you like, remembering to massage and stimulate your entire penis, your scrotum, and your perineum, including the Million-Dollar Point.

3. Try to notice your increasing levels of arousal: notice the tingling at the root of your penis, notice the stages of erection, notice your heartbeat rise.

4. When you are getting near ejaculation, stop and rest. Try to notice the contraction of your PC muscle and anus that occurs at contractile-phase orgasm, although don't be surprised if it takes some time to experience this without ejaculating. You can also try to squeeze your PC muscle around your prostate if the prostate starts contracting and you are afraid you might fall over the edge.

5. After you regain control, you can start again as many times as you like and continue for as long as you like.

Learning to Control Ejaculation

Now that you have started learning how to control your breath and your sex muscles, you are ready to learn some specific techniques for controlling ejaculation when you are highly aroused. The more you practice the exercises you've learned so far, the easier it will be to practice the ones given later and stop yourself from going pas the "point of no return."

STOPPING

First, and most important, you need to stay aware of your arousal rate and stop a few strokes (or thrusts, if you're with your partner) before you think you will ejaculate. Many sexologists call this the stop/start technique, but it is just common sense. Better to stop too soon than too late. In the beginning, you will probably need to stop stimulating yourself for ten or twenty seconds to allow the urge to ejaculate to subside.

BREATHING

The deep breathing we described earlier is extremely important in controlling your arousal rate and in delaying ejaculation when you are highly aroused. One technique that has proved especially effective is to breathe in deeply and hold your breath for several moments until the urge to ejaculate subsides. Some multi-orgasmic men, however, breathe rapidly to delay ejaculation. (This quick, shallow breathing is call the breath of fire in the yoga tradition.) Deep, slow breathing helps control your sexual energy, whereas shallow, rapid breathing helps disperse the energy. You can experiment and see what works for you.

CONTRACTING THE PC MUSCLE

As already mentioned, the PC muscle surrounds the prostate, through which your semen must pass during the expulsion phase of orgasm. By learning to squeeze your prostate during contractile-phase orgasm (when it is contracting involuntarily), you can help yourself avoid moving from contraction to expulsion. (Between contraction and expulsion lies the infamous "point of no return.") One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "I hold back the ejaculation simply by contracting the PC muscle at precisely the right time. It took quite some time to master this process, but the results are definitely worth the effort."

SQUEEZING THE PENIS

Many sexologists recommend squeezing the penis, a technique that was originally developed for men who ejaculate "prematurely."

It is simple. Just place the first two fingers of either hand on the underside of your penis, place your thumb on the top, and squeeze (see figure 8a). Some men also find that gripping their penis like the handlebar of a bicycle and pressing down on the tip or underside with their thumb helps them reduce their arousal (see figure 8b). Although these techniques can be effective in solo practice, they are awkward when having intercourse because your must withdraw. To prepare for this situation, you can try using your mind to help squeeze the tip of your penis. Eventually, you will be able to squeeze the tip of your penis with just your mind and will avoid the clumsiness of having to use your hands. Another good technique is squeezing at the base of your penis (remembering to also squeeze with your mind). This will help you control your arousal and will also expand and strengthen your erections (see figure 8c).

PRESSING THE MILLION-DOLLAR POINT

One of the oldest Taoist techniques is pressing the Million-Dollar Point while contracting your PC muscle. This helps delay ejaculation both by focusing your attention and by interrupting the ejaculatory reflex. It is simple and effective. First locate your Million-Dollar Point, which is just in front of your anus. There should be an indentation when you push at the correct spot. You will need to push your finger in up to your first joint. One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "Pressing on the Million-Dollar Point for a while decreases my erection slightly and the danger of ejaculating greatly." You will also be able to use this technique during intercourse without withdrawing.

SCROTAL TUGGING

Since your testicles have to pull up close to the body in order to propel the semen out of the testes, pulling them away from your body can delay ejaculation. Circle the top of your sac with your thumb and forefinger (see figure 9). Pull down firmly.

DRAWING AWAY SEXUAL ENERGY

More than any mechanical technique, the secret to stopping yourself from ejaculating is learning to pump your sexual energy away from your genitals and up through your spine to the rest of your body. If the sexual energy continues to build up in your groin, it will eventually be too great to control and will shoot out in the most direct way it can, through your penis. However, if you draw this energy away, it will be much easier to stop yourself from ejaculating. This is also the secret to learning how be have whole-body orgasms. In the next section we will give step-by-step instructions to show you how to circulate your sexual energy through your body. In the meantime, simply imagine drawing your sexual energy out of your penis, past your perineum, and up your spine. Contracting your perineum will help pump the energy up and will prepare you for the Big Draw exercise we describe later.

EXERCISE 6

SEPARATING ORGASM FROM EJACULATION

1. Start by lubricating your penis, as you did in the Self-Pleasuring exercise.
2. Before focusing on your genitals, remember to touch and massage the rest of your body, especially your belly, thighs, and nipples.
3. Self-pleasure however you like, remembering to stimulate your entire penis, your scrotum, and your perineum.
4. Pay close attention to your arousal rate. Once again, try to notice your increasing levels of arousal; notice the tingling at the root of your penis, notice the stages of erection, notice your breathing change and your heartbeat rise.
5. As you feel yourself getting close to the point of no return, stop, breathe, and lightly contract your PC muscle around your prostate. In addition, you also can delay your ejaculation by pressing on the Million-Dollar Point, by using the scrotal tug, by pressing on the tip of your penis. You can experiment and see which of these techniques works best for you. Most important of all, however, is paying close attention to your arousal and stopping in time, at least a few strokes before the point of no return.
6. If you feel that your sexual energy is getting too wild and difficult to control, try to draw this energy up your spine with your mine, and squeeze and release your PC muscle several times. If you are still feeling too hot and out of control, stop for ten or twenty seconds and focus on deep breathing.
7. Try to notice the contraction of your PC muscle and anus that occurs at contractile-phase orgasm.
8. After you have peaked several times without ejaculating, stop. You will feel peaceful and/or energized afterward. Try to notice your sexual energy circulating in your body, which you will feel as a tingling, itching, or prickling.

In exercise 6, you will use these techniques to help cool you down as you start to get highly aroused. Again, you will try to experience the pleasurable involuntary pumping of the prostate and anus (contractile-phase orgasms) without ejaculating. One multi-orgasmic man described how he is able to orgasm without ejaculating: "I do a number or things. [1] Variation seems to help, not doing the same over and over again, varying the depth of the thrust when I am making love, or suing different strokes when it's just me and my hand. [2] Slowing down when I feel close to the edge. [3] Deep-breathing exercises. And [4] moving the accumulated chi up my spine and through the Microcosmic Orbit."

Whatever techniques you use to heat yourself up and cool yourself down, the most important parts of the practice are breathing, squeezing your PC muscle, and learning to relax into a non-ejaculatory orgasm.

FINDING THE WAY

Pelvic Pressure

Pressure in your pelvic area is a natural result of the increased blood and chi that have been pumped to the area and your increased sexual energy. If the pressure feels uncomfortable, go on and ejaculate or use deep breathing, PC Pull-Ups, and perineum massage (which we describe later in the section called "The Finger Lock") to relieve the tension. As you learn to feel your prostate pulsate and draw your sexual energy up, you will be far less likely to experience pressure in your genitals (often called blue balls). One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "When I stop, my penis will often stay hard for a couple more minutes, but I am not tense or uncomfortable. I don't get blue balls, because I do deep breathing and draw the energy up. I just feel relaxed."

Learning to Control Your Sexual Energy

In the next section you are going to learn the Cool Draw, the Taoist technique for drawing your sexual energy out of your testicles and circulating it through the body before you get hot and bothered. In the following section, you will learn the Big Draw, which you can do once you are already hot and bothered. However, it is much easier for you to work with your sexual energy when it is still "cool," and we therefore strongly encourage you to learn this exercise before attempting the Big Draw. If you learn to do the Cool Draw successfully, you will rarely need to use the Big Draw. The earlier you are able to draw the sexual energy away from your genitals, the easier it will be for you to multiply and experience whole-body orgasms and, eventually, use your sexual energy for health and healing.

When you're being sexual with yourself or a partner, the Cool Draw will allow you to decrease the urge to ejaculate. When you are feeling sexual but are not interested in being sexual or not able to be, the Cool Draw will allow you to relieve the sexual "pressure" of arousal and transform this energy into greater creativity and vitality. Michael Winn explains: "I have taught this technique to thousands of Western men and found that it is the quickest and safest way for men to relieve feelings of sexual frustration and horniness as well as to increase the flow of creative energy to their heart and brain. This technique lets a man cultivate his sexual energy anytime and anyplace, standing in line at the bank, sitting in his office, or even when he wakes up in the middle of the night from a sexual dream with an erection."

The Cool Draw

The Cool Draw is also called testicle breathing, because the technique causes your testicles to rise and fall as if they were breathing. In actual fact, you are using your mind and muscles to raise and lower your testicles and to draw sexual energy out of your genitals and up to your brain. For Taoists, non-ejaculatory orgasm allows men not only to avoid the loss of semen (and the hormones, proteins, minerals, vitamins, and amino acids it contains), but also to avoid losing the bioelectric energy (the ching-chi) generated by the sperm. Your testicles are the factories of your sexual hormones and sexual energy, and it is from here that you draw the energy up your spine to your brain (see figure 10). This will allow you to decrease the sexual energy in your genitals and eventually to draw a refreshing, revitalizing wave of energy up your spine, stimulating all the nerves of the body along the way. You will be able to feel this orgasmic wave of pleasure at any time without even having to be sexually aroused. That could certainly make your day, maybe even your week, your month, or your life!

EXERCISE 7

THE COOL DRAW

1. Touch or cup your testicles with one hand to warm them up until you feel a slight tingling or the first stirring of your sexual energy. (If you are in a public place, you can simply think a sexual thought or fantasy.)

2. Inhale and gently pull up on the muscles around the testicles, the perineum, and the anus. As you inhale and pull your muscles up, imagine the you are sipping this sexual energy and drawing it from your testicles to your perineum and on to your anus and tailbone.

3. Exhale and relax your muscles, but keep your attention on your rising sexual energy.

4. Continue to inhale and pull up and then exhale and relax several more times until you can feel a warm or tingling sensation at your perineum. Once your are able to move this sexual energy, you can simply begin using the spine like a straw, sipping the energy from your testicles and perineum right up the entire length of your spine to the base of your skull. (Gently tucking your chin in will help the energy move from your spine into your head.) Do this for five to ten minutes or until you become aware of a light or tingling feeling in your head. With your mind, try to circle the energy in your head.

5. Finally, touch your tongue to the roof of your mouth half and inch behind your front teeth where the palate curves down (see figure 11). Your tongue works like a light switch that connects your font and back channels, allowing the energy to flow down the front of your body to your navel.

DRAWING YOUR ENERGY UP

Learning to circulate this energy may take some time, so don't get discouraged, especially if you have not had much experience with meditation or other internal arts. You also may find that you feel the energy at certain points along your spine but not at others. As long as you feel the energy reach your brain, you will know that you have successfully performed the exercise.

You may be surprised to find that you are able to move this energy almost immediately. As we mentioned earlier, much will depend on your sexual strength and sensitivity. One multi-orgasmic man explained his experience: "Ever since I was a teenager I have had really intense sexual energy, which has led to a lot of sexual frustration. I thought you had to be some yogi living in a cave for thirty years before you could learn to control your sexual energy. After I learned this simple exercise, I was astounded to discover that within ten minutes I was experiencing tingling in my spine and head. Within a couple of months I was able to control my continual horniness and to eliminate the feelings of frustration I had felt for so many years."

FINDING THE WAY

Loosening Up

If your back or pelvis is tight, it will be difficult for you to draw sexual energy up through your spine. It is important for you to loosen up your pelvic area, spinal column, and neck. Imagine that you are sitting on a galloping horse, and rock your pelvis back and forth, letting your chin bob up and down. Your spinal cord should rock like a wave.

DRAWING YOUR ENERGY DOWN

In addition to drawing sexual energy from the genitals up to the brain along the Back Channel, it is also essential for you to bring the energy down along the Front Channel to your belly, where it can be safely stored. This is much more difficult for men than drawing the energy up. Michael Winn explains: "A lot of men find it is easy to bring energy up their spine. There is a connection between the balls and the brain. Some even discover this pathway naturally, but most men have a harder time bringing the energy down the front where their organs are and where they unconsciously hold a lot of their emotional energy. Women who do the practice usually have an easier time drawing the energy down the front and may have more difficulty drawing it up the spine. In a few cases I have encountered men who find it easier to draw the sexual energy up the Front Channel, in which case I recommend that they simply circulate in the reverse direction."

Although each step helps move the energy up, contracting your anus is the most important part of the practice because it is this squeezing action that literally pumps the energy up your spine. Eventually, you will be able to rely on your mind and a quick squeeze of your anus alone to bring the energy to your head.

At first you will be working on drawing the energy up to your head, which will help you experience a "brain" or whole-body orgasm and feel energized. However, it is equally important that you draw the energy down to your navel to keep yourself balanced and to allow your body to store the energy for later use (see figure 12). The Taoists knew the truth of the expression "What goes up must come down."

Westerners often joke about yogis who sit and contemplate their navels. Most people think the navel is simply the vestigial scar of the umbilical cord, but the navel is in fact our physical and energetic center. The navel was our first connection with the outside world; all oxygen, blood, and nutrients flowed into our fetal body through this abdominal gateway. There is an energetic reservoir at your navel where you can safely store the energy you have generated through your practice. The body can then "digest" this energy as it is needed. Also, if you are not able to raise the sexual energy all the way to the head first, you can raise it up along your spine to your abdomen and channel it directly into this reservoir at your navel. With a little practice you should be able to draw the energy all the way up very soon.

FINDING THE WAY

What You Might Experience

I DON'T FEEL MY SEXUAL ENERGY

Unaroused sexual energy is easy to draw up and easy for your body to digest because it is not too hot. However, if you cannot feel enough sexual energy by simply touching your testicles or thinking a sexual thought, you can stimulate your genitals more directly.

I CAN'T RAISE THE ENERGY UP MY SPINE

If you are having problems drawing the energy up your spine, you can help the energy rise by using your spine's natural pumps. Your cerebrospinal fluid bathes the brain and spine. Pumps at your sacrum (the back of your pelvis) and the base of your skull help this fluid circulate and can also help you draw energy up your spine (see figure 13). These pumps, which are utilized by osteopathic physicians today, were well known to the ancient Taoists several thousand years ago. You can do the following exercise standing or sitting.

1. Activate your sacral pump by squeezing your anus up toward the tailbone and rocking your pelvis back and forth.

2. Activate your cranial pump (at the base of your skull) by drawing your chin in and up and then back out in a soft gentle circle. Keep the jaw and neck muscles relaxed.

3. After activating the sacral and cranial pumps, rest and begin drawing the energy up your spine into your brain. Looking up with your eyes toward the top of your head will also help direct the energy up to the crown of your head. Repeatedly activate these pumps until you feel the energy move up.

I CAN'T BRING THE ENERGY DOWN

As we mentioned earlier, many men and some women have difficulty bringing the energy down. With your hands you can stroke the Front Channel along the midline of your body from your forehead down your throat and chest and to your belly. You can also try "swallowing" the energy using your saliva. (If this doesn't work, you may have a blockage in your Front Channel. See "Finding the Way: Opening Blocks in Your Front Channel.")

1. Swirl your tongue around your mouth, which will activate your salivary glands.

2. Once you have a large pool of saliva, draw the sexual energy now in your brain into the saliva by focusing on the saliva. (Remember, the energy follows your mind.)

3. Swallow this pool of saliva in one gulp and follow it with your mind as it flows down your esophagus and into your stomach. Repeat this swallowing and imagine the energy collecting in a pool at your stomach.

4. Finally, with both hands stroke the front of your body from your throat straight down to your belly.

Most people today carry around a great deal of physical and emotional tension. As you are trying to circulate energy, you may notice tightness or congestion in your back or chest. Men in particular are prone to holding in their emotions, which often can lead to energetic blockages in the Front Channel, along which emotions are stored, that is, in your heart, solar plexus, stomach, and intestines. It is essential that you open these blockages before attempting the Big Draw. (If you are still having a problem bringing the energy down, even after opening any blocks in your Front Channel, try the powerful Venting exercise described in the next section.)

Help the energy rise up your spine by rocking your sacrum and drawing your chin in and up.

FINDING THE WAY

Opening Blocks in Your Front Channel

If you are having difficulty drawing the energy down and suspect you might have a blockage, try the following:

1. Put your left hand on your belly and put your right hand at the base of your throat just above your heart center.

2. Imagine as you inhale that you are drawing energy up the Front Channel to your right hand and from there up your throat to the top of your tongue.

3. As you exhale, imagine your are reversing the flow so it descends back down past your heart to your belly. This will help open any energy blocks in your Front Channel.

The Big Draw

Now that you have learned to circulate your sexual energy when it is not too aroused, you need to learn how to circulate and control this energy when it is aroused. Here the energy will be hotter, more explosive, and harder to keep from shooting out your penis. However, before attempting the Big Draw, you must make sure you are able to circulate your energy as described in the last exercise. Stopping aroused sexual energy is like trying to stop a team of horses who are speeding toward a cliff. Before you attempt this with the Big Draw, your must make sure you know how to ride, which is what the Cool Draw exercise teaches you.

Ejaculation is simply an involuntary muscle spasm, which you are learning to make voluntary so that you can choose if and when you want to ejaculate. Michael Winn explains how the Big Draw works: "Ejaculation can happen only if there is enough energy in the local nerves and enough blood in the local muscles to trigger the muscle spasm. There's nothing mystical about the Big Draw technique for stopping the ejaculatory spasm. You squeeze the PC muscles around the sperm ducts and then progressively pump the big muscles in the buttocks (and, if necessary, the foot, fist, and jaw muscles). These big muscles draw the blood away from the genitals. At the same time, you draw the energy away from the genital nerves by shifting your mental focus into a wave of nerve sensations traveling up your spine into your brain. The combination of these actions simply removes the blood and energy the genital muscles need in order to involuntarily spasm. It is as simple as that. All the squeezing and clenching is a bit crude, but it works. If any man practices properly and regularly, eventually he'll get it. I have hundreds of students who have proved this."

When you begin learning the Big Draw, you will need to use the various techniques described in this section. Eventually, when doing the Big Draw you will be able to use just your mind and maybe a quick squeeze of your PC muscle. According to one multi-orgasmic man, "In the beginning, I had to contract my muscles, especially the perineum and the anus, while concentrating on drawing the energy up with my mind. How the energy moves up almost by itself."

FINDING THE WAY

Cautions

The Big Draw is a very powerful practice, and you need to make sure you follow a few safety tips.

NEVER LEAVE SEXUAL ENERGY IN THE BRAIN FOR LONG PERIODS OF TIME

Remember to touch your tongue to your palate to allow this energy to come down through the Front Channel to the navel, where it can be safely stored. In the past, many teachers of Eastern sexuality taught students how to draw energy up to their brain without teaching them how to bring it back down again. This resulted in what has been call the Kundalini syndrome. The Taoists knew the importance of completing the circle. Anytime you feel like you have too much energy, inhale to your abdomen, and as your exhale, bring the energy all the way down to your toes and the soles of your feet (see figure 14).

MAKE SURE YOU ARE FEELING BALANCED

Remember that the sexual energy you will be circulating through your body will amplify any emotions you are feeling. Michael Winn explains: "The most important thing is to first try to clear out your emotional extremes and avoid practicing when your are feeling extreme anger or extreme anything." You should also avoid practicing if you are too tired. If you have a medical condition, you should speak with a Healing Tao instructor before you begin this practice.

TAKE IT EASY

Although it may not seem very important, your attitude toward the practice is in fact essential. As Healing Tao instructor Walter Beckley explains, "A lot of men to into the practice gung ho, which is good, but they need to be careful not to jam the energy up their spine or they can hurt themselves. Your attitude needs to be playful and joyful. You need to be soft with your body. It is better for you to lose the energy, to ejaculate, than to try to force the energy up your spine."

PREPARE YOURSELF

Practice on an empty, but not hungry, stomach whenever possible. Always wait at least one hour after eating. The body needs energy to digest the food you have just eaten, which means there will be less energy for you to circulate. Also, wear loose clothes. Although there should be a gentle flow of clean air in the room, avoid drafts or wind. And remember to always breathe through your nose.

POSITION YOURSELF

In the beginning, do not lie on your back during these exercises, since the rising energy may stick in your chest and cause pain. At first, sit, stand, or lie on your side. If you lie on your side, always do so on your right side. (Lying on the left side puts too much strain on your heart.) Once you master these exercises, you can do them in any position. Also, never place any objects (such as a pillow) under you while lying on your right side, since this will bend the channel of energy and can cause back pain.

WARNING

If you have an active herpes sore, do not do this practice until you have healed. If you have herpes but in is in remission (that is, if you have no visible sore), you can do this practice.

At first you will use your big muscles to help draw the energy upward. Soon you will use these muscles less and learn to rely more on your PC muscle. Eventually you will be able to concentrate your attention at the top of your head and draw the energy up effortlessly. It may take you some time to learn to do this, but eventually you will be able to direct an invigorating streak of energy up your spine just by thinking about it.

Once you have mastered the Big Draw, you will be able to draw the energy up in any situation: while you are walking, standing inline, driving your car, or lying in bed. In the beginning, however choose a quiet time when you will not be interrupted so that you can concentrate on directing this subtle and life-giving flow of energy through your body.

Do not be concerned if you feel little effect after the first few days or even weeks of practice. Each person needs a different amount of time to learn to circulate energy in the body. If you have practiced other mental exercises such as meditation, yoga, or martial arts, you will find it easier to do these exercises. If this is your first attempt at the internal arts, don't get frustrated. It takes time to learn concentration. Though this may seem difficult, you will be amazed at how quickly you begin to notice the energy moving in your body. Since the energy flows along natural circuits, the energy guides your mind even as your mind guides the energy. And as we mentioned earlier, you will soon be able to forget about most of the steps in the exercise and just guide the energy up with your mind. But, as with driving a car, before you can forget the individual steps, you must learn them.

Pumping energy up your spine through the Big Draw works on the same principle as a water pump. By pumping your muscles, you are creating the pressure and suctions to draw the energy up, but it is while you are relaxing that the energy will be easiest to guide up your spine. During the resting periods, your mind should stay focused on the flow of energy.

EXERCISE 8

THE BIG DRAW

1. Stand and pleasure yourself until you have a strong erection but well before you reach the point of no return (thirty seconds to a minute before you would otherwise ejaculate).

2. Stop stimulating yourself and rest for a moment to regain control. Then simultaneously contract your PC muscle firmly around your prostate gland and clamp your toes down on the floor.

3. Inhale and draw your sexual energy away from the perineum toward your anus and spine by squeezing your buttocks tightly.

4. As if you were pumping the brakes on a car, contract in waves the muscles from your anus up your spine, each time taking a short inhalation. Rocking your spine back and forth as if you were riding a horse will also help the energy to move up the spine.

5. As the energy reaches the base of your skull, make sure your shin is tucked in gently to help the energy move from the spine into your head.

6. Roll your eyes up as if you were looking at the top of your head, which will help bring the energy all the way up to the crown of your head.

7. When you have pumped the energy up to the crown of your head, you have done one Big Draw. The state of your erection is a measure of how successfully you have been doing the Big Draw: as you draw the energy out of your genitals and up your spine, your erection should decrease.

8. Repeat steps 3 through 6 eight more times.

9. After you have pumped the energy up to the crown of your head nine times, use your mind, your eyes, and all your senses to spiral this creative sexual energy in your brain nine, eighteen, or thirty-six times, first in one direction, and then the other. When you have finished spiraling, rest for a while and experience the sensational feeling of energy in your brain, often felt as warmth and tingling, like a mini-orgasm.

10. When you feel that your brain is full, touch your tongue to your palate and let the energy flow down the Front Channel from your brain first to between your eyebrows, then to your nose, throat, heart, and solar plexus, and finally to your navel, where it can be stored.

It is best to practice in the morning or afternoon, since at night the increased energy you will have after doing the Big Draw may make it difficult for you to sleep. If this happens or if you find you have too much "nervous" energy, simply touch your tongue to your palate (which will connect the Back and Front Channels) and draw the energy down from your head to your navel, where it can be stored. You can also spiral the energy in your head, as we mentioned earlier, and use the techniques you learned in the Cool Draw. If the problem of increased energy still persists, you can use the Venting exercise described later.

FINDING THE WAY

What You Might Experience

I DON'T FEEL ANYTHING

We have suggested that you do the Big Draw when your sexual energy is not too aroused. The hotter it is, the more difficult it is to control and the more likely you are to ejaculate, losing the energy you are trying to draw up. However, if you do not feel enough sexual energy, arouse yourself 95 to 99 percent of the way to orgasm. Once you are able to orgasm without ejaculating, you can arouse yourself all the way to orgasm and still draw the energy up to your brain. When you are about to orgasm or are orgasming, stop, and practice the Big Draw three to nine times, or until the orgasmic feeling moves upward.

EXERCISE 9

VENTING

1. Lie down on your back. Elevate your knees with a pillow if you feel any pain in the small of your back or lumbar area.

2. Place your hands in front of your mouth so that the tips of your fingers touch and so that your palms are facing toward your feet.

3. Close your eyes and take a deep breath. Feel your stomach and chest expand gently.

4. Smile and exhale quietly, making the sound heeeeee. As you are exhaling, push your hands towards your feet and image that your body is a hollow tube that you are emptying with your hands.

5. Repeat this sound and movement three, six, or nine times, each time imagining that you are pushing this excess energy from your head, past your heart and belly, though your legs, and out your feet. You can also try the exercise while standing or sitting. If you are still having a problem venting your energy, contact a Healing Tao instructor or an acupuncturist.

IT'S TOO HOT

You may find that your energy is too hot, too explosive, and you are either ejaculating or having a hard time drawing the energy up your spine. If that is the case, arouse yourself less. You need to have enough energy that you can draw it up, but at first, at least, you don't want to have too much energy.

I KEEP EJACULATING

If you get too close to the point of no return, you should try continuously contracting your PC muscle so as to firmly grasp your prostate and stop yourself from ejaculating. You can keep your PC muscle clenched while you are pumping your buttock muscles. If you are close to ejaculation and need additional force to redirect the energy up, at the same time that you squeeze your buttocks, also tighten your hands into fists and clench your jaw muscles and teeth. This will increase the pressure of your pumping action. However, this last technique should be avoided by men who store tension in their neck and jaw.

MY BACK HURTS

It is sometimes a little difficult to draw the energy into the base of the spine, and some people experience a little pain, tingling, or "pins and needles" when this energy first enters the sacrum. If this happens to you, do not be alarmed. You can help pass the energy through by gently massaging the area with your fingers.

MY EYES HURT

When you roll your eyes up or around, you may find that your eye muscles ache or your head aches. This is a typical sign of sore muscles and is nothing to worry about. It this problem persists, go easy on this part of the practice or contact a Healing Tao instructor.

MY HEAD HURTS

If your head hurts, you feel "wired," or you are having difficulty sleeping, you may be leaving too much stagnant energy in your head. The energy can overheat if it stays in one place, a problem that can be easily solved by keeping the energy moving. Make sure to circulate the energy in your head nine, eighteen, or thirty-six times in one direction and then the other. (Like in cooking, you need to stir the pot so no part of the stew overcooks.) Once you have circled the energy in your heat, let it flow down the front of your body through the Front Channel. If you are having a problem bringing the energy down the Front Channel, you can let it descend back down your spine.

I AM FEELING IRRITABLE AND ANGRY

In addition to amplifying anger that you may already have, the new energy can also cause you to overheat and develop negative emotions, such as anger, if you are not circulating the energy enough. In this case try to focus on recycling this anger and other negative emotions into loving-kindness. Also see the section called "When to Ejaculate".

OTHER SIDE EFFECTS

A small percentage of men who try these techniques experience excess energy stuck in their upper body. Symptoms of this vary from person to person but may include insomnia, a ringing in the ears, heart palpitations, or tension headaches that persist for several days. If you have any of these symptoms, immediately stop the practice and do the Venting exercise described later in this section. If they persist, contact a Healing Tao instructor or acupuncturist. Most Western doctors will not be able to correctly diagnose or treat the problem, since they are not trained to understand the movement of energy in the body and its physical effects. It is worth mentioning that the problems are not caused by the circulation of your sexual energy but by preexisting emotional and physical tensions trapped in the upper body. The sexual energy simply amplifies these problems, which is why it is essential for you to address these underlying issues before advancing further with your sexual practice.

As already mentioned, if you are having a problem drawing the energy down, you may have a block in your Front Channel. The Taoists use sounds to open up blocked energy channels and to heal the body. This technique is call the Six Healing Sounds. The sound that will open up your Front Channel and help you vent excess energy is known as the triple warmer or triple heater sound.

After each practice session of the Big Draw, be sure to massage your genitals. This will disperse any energy that did not get drawn up and will alleviate any feelings of congestion or fullness. Also massage your perineum, your coccyx, and your sacrum as described in the Pelvic Massage exercise given later.

The Finger Lock

Now we are going to show you how to stop the semen once you are passing what Masters and Johnson call ejaculatory inevitability, in other words, when you are going past the point of no return. It is best to use the Big Draw whenever possible, and increasingly to use your mind to stop yourself from ejaculating rather then your fingers, which can be awkward. Use this technique when you need to conserve your energy, such as when you are sick or working hard, but have been unable to stop yourself from ejaculating. When you use the Finger Lock to block the semen from coming out once you have passed the point of no return, you will lose your erection. However you may find that it returns more quickly. One multi-orgasmic man explained: "After using the Finger Lock I could get an erection and have sex again very soon."

EXERCISE 10

THE FINGER LOCK

1. When you feel that ejaculation is inevitable, press the three middle fingers (in other words, not your pinkie or thumb) of your dominant hand into the Million-Dollar Point just hard enough to stop the flow of semen.

2. Your fingers should be curbed slightly and your middle finger should push directly against the urethral tube. This tube expands when you near ejaculation, so it should be easy to find. Your other two fingers should press on each side of the tube to hold it in place.

3. Contract your PC muscle, which encircles the prostate, and pull up your perineum. Draw the orgasmic energy up to the spine and to your brain.

4. Hold your fingers in place before, during, and after the contractions.

5. When the pumping has stopped completely, remove your fingers.

In the last section we discussed the Million-Dollar Point as a place where you could press to delay ejaculation. The Million-Dollar Point is also the place where you can actually block the semen from leaving your body once you have passed the point of no return. Once multi-orgasmic man described when it was that he found the Finger Lock most helpful: "In the beginning I used the Finger Lock during self-cultivation. I could train myself to go closer and closer to the point of no return because I could use it if I went over. I would recommend practicing it first in self-cultivation so it is not awkward during lovemaking."

Basically, the Finger Lock involves pressing the Million-Dollar Point, the indentation directly in front of your anus, with the three middle fingers of your right hand (see figure 15). If you're a lefty, use your left hand, you will need the strength of your dominant hand to use this technique. (Also, make sure your fingernails are cut short and filed so you don't hurt yourself.) You need to press here just as you feel yourself passing the point of no return, but before you actually start ejaculating, and to continue pressing until the ejaculatory contractions stop.

You will be pushing down on the spot where the ejaculatory duct and the membranous urethra meet. One multi-orgasmic man suggests: "You should realize that the concentration and pressure that you need during your orgasm will reduce your enjoyment of the orgasmic contractions in the beginning. Knowing this, you will better be able to continue applying the pressure to the end." Not to worry: this will get easier and less distracting with time.

If you're applying pressure to the right place, no semen will come out. If semen does come out, you have not yet found your Million-Dollar Point. Try moving your fingers slightly closer to the anus next time, and make sure you are pushing firmly into the indentation.

If you are curious to see whether you did the exercise correctly, you can urinate into a cup. If the urine is clear, you are doing it right. If the urine is very cloudy, the semen went into your bladder in a retrograde ejaculation. If this happened, the next time try moving your three fingers back slightly toward your anus.

When you block the semen with your fingers, most of the fluid returns to the epididymis and the seminal vesicles. The tissues in this region are extremely elastic and are not harmed by this technique, but it is very important after this exercise to massage the pelvic areas (see the Pelvic Massage exercise), to do PC Pull-Ups, and, ideally, to circulate your sexual energy through your body as described in the previous section. You may feel some pressure or even pain when you begin using the Finger Lock, which will mean it is all the more important to help your body reabsorb the semen. One multi-orgasmic man explained his experience: "You have to be careful with the Finger Lock not to push too hard. One night my pumpers were starting to pump and I really pressed hard, but it hurt afterward for a while."

You can relieve much of the pressure you may feel in your pelvis after using the Finger Lock or Big Draw by massaging several key points in your pelvic area. First and most important is to massage your perineum (the s[pot between the root of your penis and your anus) and testicles. This will relieve a lot of the pressure and help your body reabsorb the semen.

Six Healing Sounds of Chinese Medicine

Sun Si Miao was most probably a Taoist Monk who lived circa. 690 A.D. in the Tang Dynasty. A man of many talents, he was responsible for the invention of gun powder, which is considered as one of the four greatest inventions of ancient China. The other three are the compass, paper, and typeprint to speed the produciton of books. He also organized a method of sound therapy. Although the Chinese people had been using sound as a tool for healing for many thousands of years, Sun distilled the core of the art into six healing sounds, and created a system for using them.

Sound therapy is a form of vibrational medicine and a health practice. The vibration stems from sounds created by different positions of the mouth and tongue. These various sounds affect different parts of the body, organs, and meridians. The sounds are also related to the seasons. Sun was the first to record these different sound-body-season combinations.

The following will give an overview of the six healing sounds and an approximation of what they sound like. If the reader is interested in practicing this art, it would be best to have someone who knows, personally demonstrate the sounds.

1. Su - Sounds like "shhh"
Season - Spring
Organ - Liver (also relates to the eyes)

2. He - Sounds like "huh"
Season - Summer
Organ - Heart and Circulatory System
(Also relates to tongue)

3. Hu - Sounds like "who"
Season - Occurs between all seasons
Organ - Spleen and systems of digestion

4. SI - Sounds like "ssss"
Season - Fall
Organ - Lung and Respiritory System
(Also Relates to the nose)

5. Chui - Sounds like "chewee"
Season - Winter
Organ - Kidney and Systems of Elimination and Hormones
(Also relates to the ears)

6. Xi - Sounds like "ssea"
Season - Occurs between all seasons
Organ - Triple Burner System - For absorbing energy from food

To use the system effectively, practice Wu Chi first and then the healing sounds. Repeat the first sound six times and then go on to the next and repeat it six times. Do this for all the sounds. For additional benefit, repeat the one sound that refers to the current season six more times at the end of the set. It is important to follow the exact order of the sounds as they are listed here. When first learning the sounds, it will be necessary to whisper the sounds, to insure correct mouth/tongue placement. Once the placement is correct, the sounds are created with just the breath - no audible sound is heard. This practice can be used for a particular health issue, but may also be used to maintain good health.

It is also important to massage your tailbone, specifically, where there is an indentation between your anus and your tailbone (see figure 16) and the eight holes of your sacrum (see figure 17). This will help your body absorb the sexual energy you have generated.

EXERCISE 11

PELVIC MASSAGE

1. Using your fingers, massage your Million-Dollar Point in a circle, first in one direction and then the other.
2. Repeat this massage between your anus and tailbone.
3. Repeat this massage at each of the eight holes of the sacrum. If you can't find the individual holes, massage the general area in several different places, circling first in one direction and then the other.

FINDING THE WAY

Pain

If you have intense pain, you are probably pushing too far forward or too late. When this happens, the urethra, which is like a hose that has been pinched, swells up with fluid and can hurt. You need to turn off the faucet before the water (or, in this case, semen) enters the hose. Make sure you push farther back and/or sooner next time. Also make sure you are not pushing too hard. Some discomfort is common, especially during the first few weeks, from the pressure you apply with your fingers and the fluid pressure in your pelvis, but it shouldn't hurt for long. If you are experiencing pain, try to refine the technique or forget this stopgap measure and learn the more important Big Draw.

A small amount of semen will leak out once you lose your erection, so this is not a method of birth control or safe sex. Using it with other forms of contraception, however, will improve their effectiveness. Since you still lose some of your energy with this technique, the sooner you are able to learn the Big Draw, the better off you will be. Although at first you may feel fatigued, your energy will return sooner than if you had ejaculated.

This is a powerful practice, which you should not use more than once every two or three days when you start. If you are elderly or ill, you should not use this practice more than twice a week when you begin. The retained sexual energy may cause you to feel hot or thirsty. If so, try drinking more water. After you have practiced this technique for one to three months, and sometimes sooner, you will notice your sex drive increase and your erections become more frequent. Increase your sexual activities (solo and duo) moderately; try not to overdo it.

FINDING THE WAY

Pressure in Your Head

After a month or more of practice, you may find that you feel pressure in your head, a result of the increased energy in your body. This is a sign of progress, that your body has more energy than before. For some this can be experienced as a pleasurable tingling, like static electricity without the shock. (This is the same Kundalini energy popularized by Tantric teachers in the West.) However, if this power grows uncomfortable, it once again can be circulated to the rest of the body by pressing your tongue to the roof of your mouth and letting the energy flow down.

If you have high blood pressure, you should keep your tongue in your lower jaw (rather than touching your palate) and also bring the energy all the way down to the soles of your feet (see figure 14). Physical exercise, massaging your feet, and a heavy grain diet will also help you ground the energy. If you are not ready to learn how to circulate your sexual energy, you can simply ejaculate once or twice to release the extra energy.

When to Stop

Most men stop masturbating or having sex when they ejaculate, but after you learn the Big Draw and become multi-orgasmic, you may be faced with the very real question of when to stop. There will be days when you want to self-pleasure or make love for a long time, and there will be other days when you want a satisfying multi-orgasmic quickie. The choice is really yours and will depend on what is happening in your life. Your and your partner's desire and satisfaction should guide you.

It is important, however, not to overdo it, especially at first. As senior Healing Tao instructor Masahiro Ouchi explains, "Men feel very powerful when they start practicing Sexual Kung Fu, and often they don't know when to stop. Take it slow, and let your body and your partner adjust." You will also need to make sure your partner has enough sexual strength to keep up with the new intensity in your lovemaking. You can always practice on your own.

Many people worry about masturbating too much or think that they will neglect other parts of their life if they let themselves experience too much pleasure. According to the Tao, if you are able to pleasure and satisfy yourself, you will not need to constantly run after superficial sex or other unsatisfying stimulation.

FINDING THE WAY

Let Your Erection Decrease Every Twenty Minutes

If you regularly pleasure yourself or make love for more than twenty minutes, which you very well may do after you become multi-orgasmic, it is important to let your erection decrease somewhat about every twenty minutes to allow the blood to recirculate through the body. It is worth mentioning again that Sexual Kung Fu is not an endurance test. Pleasure and cultivate yourself as long as you have the time and the desire.

When to Ejaculate

Every time you orgasm, you draw more sexual energy into your body, therefore, if you eventually ejaculate, you lose less energy than you would have had you not had multiple orgasms beforehand. For example:

1. If you have half a dozen orgasms (each time circulating the energy to your brain and the rest of your body) and then ejaculate, you will lose about 50 percent of your sexual energy.

2. If you have half a dozen orgasms and then use the Finger Lock, you will lose about a quarter of your sexual energy.

3. If you have half a dozen orgasms and then use the Big Draw (and don't ejaculate), you will not lose any of your sexual energy.

The final option will give you the greatest opportunity to cultivate the ecstatic orgasms that you feel in your brain and throughout your body. It will also allow you to cultivate this energy for your overall health. However, by generating and containing this much energy, you risk overheating unless you are able to circulate the energy through the Microcosmic Orbit.

FINDING THE WAY

Preventing Overheating

According to the Tao, erection energy is wood (or liver) energy. So when you don't ejaculate and you pull up the orgasmic energy, you will increase this energy in your liver. If this increasing energy is not transformed into love and kindness, it will transform into anger and hatred. So when you have a lot of energy, practice being especially kind and loving to your partner or, if you do not have a partner, to other people in your life.

Other techniques for preventing yourself from overheating include drinking a lot of water and even swallowing your own saliva, which has a cooling effect on the body. Your emotional state can also affect the energy in your body. If you feel calm and loving, the body can much more easily absorb the energy. If you feel anger or disdain for yourself or your partner, you run a greater risk of overheating. If you are overheating or feel you have more energy than you can absorb, you should probably ejaculate. If the problem persists, try practicing the Inner Smile or the Six Healing Sounds described in Taoist Ways to Transform Stress into Vitality, or contact a Healing Tao Instructor.

The Taoist ideal is to ejaculate as infrequently as you can, but every man can and should refrain from ejaculating for a period of time suited to him. In the words of Su Nü, "One must measure one's own strength and ejaculate accordingly. Anything else is simply force and foolishness." Your strength depends on your age, your health, your state of mind, and your willpower.

Sun Ssu-miao, one of the leading physicians of ancient China recommended that men attain good health and longevity by ejaculating twice a month, as long as they ate healthily and exercised. He also offered the following more specific guidelines.

A man at twenty can ejaculate once every four days.
A man at thirty can ejaculate once every eight days.
A man at forty can ejaculate once every ten days.
A man at fifty can ejaculate once every twenty days.
A man at sixty should no long ejaculate.

It goes without saying that his prescription did not limit the number of times a man of any age could have sex and non-ejaculatory orgasms. This restriction on ejaculation may sound like a disappointment, but once you have had multiple non-ejaculatory orgasms, you won't miss ejaculating at all. In the words of one multi-orgasmic man, "Once you have multi's [non-ejaculatory orgasms], you never want to go back to squirt [ejaculatory] orgasms. Squirt orgasms are just in your genitals, multi's are whole-body orgasms."

Sun Ssu-miao, who lived to 101, ejaculated only after making love one hundred times. But rather than adhering to any rigid numerical formula, you should try to pay attention to your body. If you are exhausted or sick, drunk or stuffed with food, you should avoid ejaculating. If you are working hard you will want to conserve your semen, but if you are on vacation you may wish to ejaculate a little more often. The ancient Taoists, who lived close to nature, also believed that just as plants and animals conserve their energy in winter, so should people. Besides the seasons, there are other rhythms that will determine the number of times you ejaculate. If you are trying to conceive a child, you will need to ejaculate whenever your partner is ovulating.

In general, when you ejaculate you should feel refreshed and energetic. If ejaculating leaves you feeling empty, depressed, or exhausted, you need to increase the amount of time between ejaculations or avoid ejaculating altogether until you build up your sexual energy. When you do ejaculate, you can conserve some semen and sexual energy by approaching the point of no return slowly rather than thrusting vigorously to a climax. After you ejaculate, you can also practice PC contractions to tighten your pelvic muscles and reduce the amount of energy that typically leaks out after ejaculation.

At the same time it is important not to become obsessive about non-ejaculation and not to give yourself a hard time when you do ejaculate. As Michael Winn explains, "It is very important not to be fanatical about non-ejaculation. A lot of men who learn about Sexual Kung Fu think, 'Wow, this is great. It makes sense. I want to do it.' And then they have a problem controlling their ejaculation. And then they start passing judgment on themselves and feeling guilty. They are missing the point, which is not even whether you ejaculate or not, but whether you are able to recycle some of the sexual energy up through your body before you ejaculate. Obviously, the longer you can delay your ejaculation, the greater your opportunity to cultivate this energy for creative and spiritual growth. If you need to ejaculate and it's coming and you can't stop it, just go for it. Don't beat yourself up. Because what is really important ultimately is not just the energy in the sperm, but the overall love between you and your partner."

Remember that the energy is more than just the sperm; if you are able to draw any energy out of the sperm, you are far ahead of where you were before you started, in terms both of the level of pleasure you will be able to experience and of the energy you will be able to circulate for your health. True sexual satisfaction comes from both pleasure and health.

POWER AND SEXUALITY

The practices that you are learning are very powerful, and once you learn them it is natural for you to be proud of your ability to master your sexual energy and of your newfound skill in bed. However, it is essential that you avoid the bravado and machismo that accompany so much male sexuality. As Senior Healing Tao instruction Masahiro Ouchi explains, "Sexual Kung Fu is quite easy to learn, and many men start feeling very powerful in bed, but it must not become a power trip. Power is about conquest, which is the opposite of love and any real spiritual practice." Ouchi, who holds a black belt in karate, compares Sexual Kung Fu to what he has observed in karate: "Most people who have black belts use this power incorrectly. They become more rigid and egotistical and lose the sensitivity and gentleness that are the real source of this power."

To practice Sexual Kung Fu correctly, you need to open your heart and practice with a spirit of humility and loving-kindness, not arrogance and self-centeredness. Egotism is just an expression of insecurity, and as you learn real sexual confidence, you will be able to let go of pretension and posturing. Remember that this practice and your new sexual energy will magnify your emotions. So it is essential that you cultivate them. If arrogance and egotism are problems for you, try to practice the Six Healing Sounds (see Taoist Ways to Transform Stress into Vitality). If you do not address these emotions, they will limit your practice, your pleasure and your partnership.

THE ART OF LOVEMAKING

Many men who begin practicing Sexual Kung Fu get so involved with their own practice that they lose touch with their partner and with the spontaneous and ecstatic process of lovemaking. You can practice as of as you want on your own, but when you are with your partner, it is extremely important to remember that it is not just your practice. The point of lovemaking is to make love, and from this love comes pleasure and health, it is not about generating sexual energy for yourself or demonstrating your skill. As Masahiro Ouchi explains, "The technique is just that, technique. It is not the real art. You need to learn the technique well enough that you can forget about it. Just like playing a musical instrument, at first you need to learn the scales, but then you need to forget about them and just play from the heart."

Know Your Partner

"Among the skills possessed by men, a knowledge of women is indispensable," explains Discourse on the Highest Tao Under Heaven. "When one does have a woman, only the skillful are equal to the task." The union of man and woman has been the foundation of Sexual Kung Fu, for through this primal bond, it was believed, infinite pleasure and priceless health could be attained. With this incentive, the Taoists refined lovemaking into a high art of intimacy and ecstasy.

A harmonious love life was considered essential to conjugal happiness, and newlyweds were given "pillow hooks" that graphically demonstrated how they could achieve this bliss. We wou1d never think of 1earning to cook without some guidance or a cookbook or two, but in lovemaking, which is certainly as complex as cooking, Western men and women are forced to discover for themselves the mysterious world of sex with only a few hopelessly romanticized images from the movies and television to guide them.

Hollywood sex is not good sex; it is just fast sex. The passionate, urgent embrace portrayed in most films in which the woman is instantly lubricated and immediately satisfied by a few minutes of coital writhing would he laughable if it did not leave so many viewers are trying to imitate this unrealistic model of lovemaking. It is worth remembering that the director's imperative of keeping the plot moving, and the public's intolerance for watching the body in pleasure, make it impossible to explore on-screen the subtle nuances of lovemaking. Candace Bergen described her formula for cinematic orgasm' in Esquire magazine: "Ten seconds of heavy breathing, roll your head from side to side, simulate a slight asthma attack, and die a little." So much for foreplay.

Porn films, in which the "plot" is generally just celluloid glue between the sex scenes, should offer the opportunity to learn a richer sexual repertoire. However, the frantic, nonstop thrusting in most pornography is timed more to the masturbatory stroke of a man's hand than to the subtle and profound sensations of real flesh-and-blood lovemaking.

It is no wonder that Western men, weaned on movies, television and porn, ejaculate so quickly. Almost 80 percent of the men Kinsey studied ejaculated less than two minutes after entering their partner. Both men and women may lose out in this rapid-fire coitus. Hartman and Fithian speculate that this quick intercourse does not allow enough time for the natural chemicals that accompany touch and sexual arousal to be released into the bloodstream, short-circuiting the general sense of well-being that usually accompanies lovemaking. The Taoists would say that in such hasty sex the man and woman are not able to exchange sexual energy and to harmonize with one another, and may even drain each other of energy. This does not mean that quickies are not sometimes just what the doctor ordered, especially if you and your partner have a practice of ecstatic lovemaking that allows you to harmonize and satisfy each other quickly.

Almost a quarter century after Kinsey published his findings – in the wake of the sexual revolution and women's liberation – Morton Hunt found in a follow-up study that men were lasting ten minutes instead of two. Though still rather short by Taoist standards, this increase is a 400 percent improvement nonetheless. Although men are generally portrayed as insensitive lovers, guided in bed exclusively by their own self-interest, clearly a major motivation for men learning to last longer in bed in recent years has g been their desire to pleasure their partners, who were beginning to discover that they could be orgasmic or even multi-orgasmic. In interviews with four thousand men, Anthony Pietropinto found that a surprising 80 percent judged their own sexual satisfaction by whether they had been able to give their partner one or more orgasms. Once you are multi-orgasmic, you will be able to satisfy your partner no matter how long she takes to orgasm.

In learning to satisfy your partner, however, the first thing you must do is remove your ego. You are not "giving" her an orgasm. You are not trying to he the best lover she has ever had. Too many men get caught up with sexual performance. If you are able to replace performance with pleasure – hers and yours – you will be able to satisfy even the lustiest of lovers. Remember, the best lovers are men who are completely relaxed and aware of what is going on in both their own and their partner's bodies. You began learning how to understand what happens in your body, and in this chapter you will learn how to recognize what is happening in your lovers.

There is one last point worth keeping in mind. It is much easier to practice Sexual Kung Fu with a regular partner with whom you have a deep emotional as well as physical bond. In their study of multi-orgasmic men, Dunn and Trost found that it was much easier for men to become multi-orgasmic with a familiar partner with whom there was emotional closeness and the opportunity for leisurely sex. Each man they interviewed mentioned that the goal was not to have multiple orgasms but to have pleasurable and satisfying lovemaking. Multiple orgasms are just one of the many treasures you will discover along the path to intimate and ever more ecstatic lovemaking,

Her Body

Women's sexuality has been the source of much mystery and mystification throughout Western history. Women's largely internal (as opposed to men's largely external) sex organs have made them the subject of much study and even more confusion. Every man (and woman) needs to know a few basic facts about women's bodies (see figure 18), Bear in mind that these are generic descriptions and that sexual anatomy, women's and men's, varies as much from person to person as does the rest of our anatomy.

MONS VENERIS

Descending down from a woman's belly, you will first see her mons veneris, which in Latin means "mount of Venus." Venus, of course, was the goddess of love. The mons (for short) is the layer of padded, generally hair-covered skin on top of the pubic bone. As a teenager you probably felt this part of your girlfriend's body if you ever "bumped and grinded" with your clothes on. The mons is just above the clitoris; some women find this area to be sensitive to touch and pressure, while others will want you to focus farther down.

OUTER LIPS

The mons as it descends between a woman's thighs separates into two large outer lips. Although these are called "lips," when a woman is not aroused they are relatively flat and don't look very liplike.

INNER LIPS

Unlike the outer lips, the inner lips are hairless and are related to other mucous membranes like the lips of the mouth. When unaroused, they vary in color from pink to maroon or purple. During sexual arousal, they become engorged, darken, and thicken. They can sometimes swell as much as two to three times their normal size and change in color to bright red. These changes are also a sign of great arousal and approaching orgasm.

CLITORIS

Follow the inner lips up to where they meet just below the mons. There they form the hood that protects the sensitive glans of the clitoris, which is similar to the glans (head) of a man's penis in its abundance of sensitive nerves. Usually the glans is nestled under the hood, but it can be seen by pulling the hood gently back. The glans is so sensitive that quite a few women find direct stimulation painful. These women often prefer stimulation of the shaft of the clitoris, which stretches up toward the mons and can be felt under the skin as a movable cord. After orgasm, many women find that their clitoris is too sensitive to be touched directly for up to several minutes. This hypersensitivity is similar to what many men experience after ejaculating.

Like the penis, the clitoris is made of erectile tissue, and the glans engorges with blood when excited. Many people compare the clitoris to the head of the penis, and developmentally they originate from the same embryonic tissue. The clitoris, however, is unique in being the only organ in either sex that exists exclusively for sexual pleasure. So much for the belief that women are less lusty than men: they are the ones who have a part of their body wholly dedicated to getting them hot and bothered.

URETHRA

Down from the clitoris is the opening to the urethra, which leads to the bladder. Unlike men, whose urethra is relatively long (extending through their penis), women have a relatively short tube to the bladder, which is a major reason women tend to get more urinary-tract and bladder infections than men. The in-out thrusting of intercourse can push bacteria up a woman's urethra. If your partner gets infections frequently, encourage her to urinate after lovemaking. This will help flush out bacteria.

VAGINA

Down from the clitoris and urethra is the entrance to the vagina. The walls of the vagina rest against one another, creating a potential space rather than an actual one. The walls of the vagina have many folds, which explains the vagina's ability to accommodate almost any size penis, not to mention a baby during childbirth. This ability to expand and contract, even to fit snugly around a finger, is the reason differences in penis size are not usually a problem.

At rest, the back wall of the vagina is about three inches long and the front wall is about two and a half inches long. As a woman is aroused, her vagina widens and lengthens. The inner two-thirds of the vagina balloons out, which often reduces the stimulation in the back, but the outer third actually tightens as it becomes engorged, which is one reason a woman can hold on to even a small penis. As we mentioned in the last chapter, the stronger your partner's PC muscles, the more she can contract her vagina around your penis and increase stimulation for both of you. If your partner enjoys deep penetration and you have difficulty stimulating the back of her vagina, especially once it has expanded, you will be pleased to hear that there are positions that shorten her vagina and make deep thrusting easier (see the section called "Positions for Pleasure and Health" in the next chapter).

Many women report that they are most sensitive near the opening of the vagina, but other women report sensitivity at other places throughout the vagina, including the back walls and even the cervix (see the following section, "The G Spot and Other Sensitive Spots"). There are no universals about sexual stimulation, even with the best efforts of researchers like Masters and Johnson to find them. So explore with your partner, and let her tell you what feels best.

THE G SPOT AND OTHER SENSITIVE SPOTS

You may have heard about a place in a woman's vagina that when touched can drive her wild. This spot is often called the G spot, named for physician Ernest Gräfenberg, who first described it in 1950. Although not new, the idea of the G spot is still controversial, some women finding it and others not. The current theory is that the G spot is a collection of glands, ducts, blood vessels, and nerve endings that surround a woman's urethra.

So where exactly is it? Most women who report finding the G spot locate it one and a half to two inches from the opening of the vagina on the upper front wall, just behind the pubic bone. (Some women, however, find their G spot farther back.) If you look at your partner s vagina and imagine a clock with the clitoris as twelve o'clock, the G spot is usually somewhere between eleven and one.

When a woman is not aroused, the G spot is more difficult to find, but you may be able to feel some bumpy or ridged skin. When stimulated it can swell to the size of a dime or larger, standing out from the wall of the vagina. Alan and Donna Brauer suggest that the best time to find it is just after a woman orgasms: "It is already somewhat enlarged and sensitive." They recommend stroking it at a rate of about once a second and experimenting with both lighter and heavier pressure. Another good time to stimulate the G spot is when your partner is just approaching orgasm. Either way, your partner is more likely to enjoy this stroking if you do it once she is already highly aroused. Try licking her clitoris with your tongue while touching her G spot with your finger and see how she responds!

You should know that some women feel initial discomfort or the urge to urinate when their G spot is stroked, so you should probably discuss your exploratory plans with your partner first and explain that this reaction, if it happens, is normal. The Brauers also suggest lightening your touch. It may take as much as a minute for the discomfort or seeming need to urinate to be replaced with pleasurable sensations. If she is uncomfortable or too concerned about urinating to enjoy your stroking, you might suggest that she try to find the G spot on her own at first. It is easiest for her to find it while sitting or squatting. (If she is concerned about feeling the need to urinate, have your partner sit on the toilet or urinate before lovemaking, which will convince her that her bladder is empty.)

Intercourse in the common face-to-face "missionary" position often misses the G spot completely. It is easier to stimulate this area with your penis if your partner lies on her stomach and you enter her from behind, or if she is on top, where she can position herself for her pleasure. Shallow thrusting is also best for stimulating her G spot. Fingers, however, are usually the most direct and effective way to stimulate her G spot at first.

Some women report that their most sensitive spots are located at the four o'clock and eight o'clock positions, about midway back along the walls of the vagina. There are nerve bundles at these locations, which may explain their sensitivity to pressure. Through stroking her vagina or thrusting in different directions, you may already have discovered that your partner has additional spots all her own.

Remember, though, that not all women have a G spot or any other particular "spot," and if your partner doesn't, the last thing you want to do is pressure her or make her feel inadequate. This whole exploration is for her pleasure and is not an attempt to find buttons or knobs that turn her on. Make G-spot stimulation a part of the smorgasbord of pleasure you offer her.

EJACULATION

Female ejaculation? A number of sexologists have in fact described the G spot's ability to "ejaculate" a clear liquid when highly aroused. This has led some to conclude that the G spot may be analogous to a man's prostate gland. (As we mentioned earlier, men's and women's sex organs develop out of the same tissue in the embryo.) Many women who ejaculate worry that they are urinating and, as we mentioned above, may feel an initial need to urinate when their G spot is touched. However, the liquid is definitely not urine, and the urge to urinate usually subsides quickly with increased arousal.

You may at some point feel a "spray" against your penis when making love. Occasionally this spray is even visible. A small number of women ejaculate a teaspoon or less of liquid out of their urethra when they orgasm. (Women who ejaculate should also try to draw their sexual energy up, since they will lose some energy through ejaculating – though less than a man does.) According to researcher Lonnie Barbach, "recent chemical analysis of the [female] ejaculatory fluid suggests that it is unlike either urine or vaginal lubrication, but rather is like male ejaculatory fluid in its high levels of glucose and acid phosphatase. It is believed that the source of the fluid is a system of glands and ducts called the paraurethral glands. These surround the female urethra and develop from the same embryological tissue that develops into the prostate in the male." Explainable or not, this female ejaculate can be quite startling if you are unfamiliar with it. One man described getting hit in the face the first time he went down on his girlfriend. This propulsive force is probably a rare occurrence, but don't be shocked if you find that with some women you need oral-sex goggles.

ANUS

For some women the anus is an erogenous zone, and for others it is off-limits. You should ask how your partner feels. If you and she are interested in anal intercourse or anal sex play (touching and entering her anus with your finger), it is always best to start slowly and sensitively and to make sure you have plenty of lubricant. If her anus constricts while you are stimulating it, you need to apply less stimulation. If her anus is relaxed, you can apply more stimulation.

BREASTS

Compared with the rest of a woman's sexual anatomy, breasts are relatively simple. The nipples rest on top of the dark circles of the areolae and become erect when aroused. For all their erotic significance, the breasts are really quite similar to sweat glands, and their primary role, as any breast-feeding mother will attest, is as a source of warm milk for babies. One could come up with interesting theories as to why in our bottle-fed, nurture-starved Western culture, large breasts have become such a powerful symbol of desire. Whatever the reason is, this flood of images has led many men (and women) to the mistaken belief that size reflects sexual appetite: the larger the breasts, the more sexually desirous a woman is. In actual fact, a woman's sexual sensitivity, experience, and self-perception determine the responsiveness of her breasts, as they do with her sexuality in general. Size has nothing to do with it.

In the "buttons and knobs" view of arousal, men often zero in on their partner's nipples. Though some women enjoy immediate nipple stimulation, many prefer a lighter, more indirect touch to begin with. Generally, try to circle around your partner's breasts to increase her anticipation and desire before actually touching the nipples themselves. Some women, however, experience very little sensation when their breasts or nipples are touched, so don't be disappointed. Rubbing your fingers together to warm them before touching her nipples will increase the amount of chi, or energy, and can help stimulate her. As you touch her nipples lightly, you may be able to feel a current of electricity flowing between your finger and her nipple. Licking her nipples with your tongue is often very effective since your tongue has a lot of chi. Sometimes, as with many men, the nerve pathways to the nipples need activating, which can occur with gentle, gradual stimulation over time. But your partner needs to be open to this slow awakening.

FERTILITY

The cycles of a woman's fertility and menstruation are especially bewildering for most men and have resulted in much fear and confusion. This is not the place for a biology lesson, but there are a few biological facts that every man should know about his lover's body. For example, did you know that although a woman's egg lives for only twelve to twenty-four hours, she can actually get pregnant as long as five days after intercourse?

How is this possible? Before a woman's ovary releases an egg, her cervical glands release "fertile" mucus. This mucus helps the semen reach the egg, and within ten minutes after ejaculation sperm are already in the fallopian tubes "breathlessly" flapping their tails toward the egg. Other sperm, however, stay in the lining of the cervical canal, where they are nourished and released over a period of three to five days. So if you have intercourse on Saturday night and she has fertile mucus but doesn't ovulate until Tuesday, you could still become a father on Wednesday. (This is a public-service announcement from your local chapter of Planned Parenthood.)

Many women complain that their partners do not take an active role in thinking about, planning, and participating in contraception. With the increased use of condoms, this situation is changing, but not enough. It's good to know the difference between fertile and nonfertile mucus, since condoms do break and no birth control is flawless. Fertile mucus is clear, slick, and stretchy. If you place some between your thumb and forefinger, it will stretch as you separate your fingers, connecting them by a thin, clear thread of mucus. If her mucus is not fertile, it will be white, sticky, and less abundant. Most noticeably, it does not stretch like fertile mucus.

If a woman does not become pregnant, the blood and cells that were prepared to nourish the fertilized egg slough off, beginning her menstruation. The menstrual cycle varies tremendously. Few women have an exact twenty-eight-day cycle. Regular cycles can range from three to seven weeks, and some women menstruate only two or three times a year. Although menstruation is different for every woman, the typical pattern of bleeding starts with a light flow of pink-tinged mucus or drops of blood, increasing to a heavy flow of red blood, and then decreasing to brownish "spotting" before stopping altogether. Some women bleed a lot, others a little, but most stop bleeding within a week.

During menstruation many women experience symptoms such as sore breasts, bloatedness, pimples, headaches, lower-back pain, diarrhea, and constipation. (Women with chronic herpes may break out around this time as well,) As you can imagine, given all of these discomforts, not to mention the stigma that still surrounds menstruation, many women do not feel very sexual during this time. Others, however, find that menstruation is the time of their greatest arousal, and indeed every part of the cycle is experienced by some women as the time of their most intense desire. For a number of women intercourse during menstruation can even relieve cramping. The more you understand about your partner's cycle and the more understanding you can be, the more you can harmonize with her through the rhythmic flow of living as well as the rhythmic flow of lovemaking.

Her Orgasm

The female orgasm has been the source of centuries, if not millennia, of curiosity and controversy, with widespread acceptance by the medical establishment of its existence occurring only in the last hundred years. Even with its existence acknowledged, the female orgasm has endured much ignorance and confusion during this century. The main debate was waged over the differences between, and the relative "maturity" of, clitoral orgasms and vaginal orgasms.' We now know that some women have orgasms more easily when their clitoris is stimulated and others have orgasms more easily when their vagina is stimulated. It is as simple as that. The one is no better than the other.

CLITORAL AND VAGINAL ORGASMS

A current theory suggests that there are actually two distinct nerves that are responsible for the two different orgasms. The pudendal nerve goes to the clitoris, among other places, and the pelvic nerve goes to the vagina and uterus – vaginal orgasms often actually involve contractions of the uterus as well (see figure 30). Of the two nerves, the pudendal has more nerve endings, which may be the reason more women have clitoral orgasms than have vaginal orgasms. The fact that the two nerves overlap in the spinal cord also might explain why some women have "blended" orgasms, which arise from both the clitoris and deep inside the vagina. Two factors seem to influence whether women have vaginal orgasms: the strength of their PC muscles and the sensitivity of their G spots or other internal spots.

Women who have both orgasms often notice a difference. Shere Hite, in her famous report on female sexuality, quotes a woman who explains her experience: “During masturbation I experience a clitoral orgasm that approximates my idea of male orgasm – a buildup of overall sensation in the general area of my clitoris, and a ‘muscle spasm’ feeling. A vaginal orgasm is a more pervasive sensation through the whole body, less concrete to describe – wider waves of feeling.” As we described, men can be said to have two different orgasms as well: a genital (or penis) orgasm and a pelvic (or prostate) orgasm. According to Taoist sexuality, there are actually numerous kinds of orgasms, which can take place in different parts and, believe it or not, different organs of the body, such as your heart and liver. If you are able to circulate your sexual energy to your brain, you may experience a “brain orgasm.” Remember, an orgasm is simply the contraction and expansion, or “pulsation,” and this pulsation can happen throughout your entire body.

TOUCHING HER CLITORIS DURING LOVEMAKING

Shere Hite reports that about 70 percent of the women she surveyed required at least some stimulation of their clitoris in order to have an orgasm. As already mentioned, your partner’s clitoris is equivalent to the head of your penis. For the majority of men, the head is the most sensitive part of their sexual anatomy – as is the clitoris for most women. Asking a woman to have an orgasm without stimulating her clitoris is like asking a man to have an orgasm without stimulating the head of his penis. It can be done, but it takes a lot longer,

It is not surprising then that in the missionary position many women are not able to have an orgasm, since the most sensitive part of their anatomy – the clitoris – is only indirectly being stimulated. Sometimes the man’s pubic bone will rub against the clitoris or the hood of the clitoris will be pulled against it during intercourse, but these are clearly no substitute for direct stimulation by your penis, fingers, or mouth, It s not surprising that Kinsey, Hunt, and Hite have all found that nearly half of American women never or rarely experience orgasm during intercourse.

Many women are much more easily orgasmic during intercourse if they, or their partners, also stimulate their clitoris. Men usually can orgasm much more quickly than women during intercourse (two or three minutes versus twenty), but women seem to be able to orgasm just as quickly as men when they masturbate – presumably because they are directly stimulating their clitoris and because they know what they like. One multi-orgasmic man recounted his experience of stroking his partner's clitoris while making love: “When I’m behind or she’s on top, my hands are free to play with her clitoris. It really drives her wild. She starts moaning so loud that once we had to stop and close the windows.”

Some men and women may complain that using hands to stimulate your partner’s clitoris during intercourse is unnatural or overly mechanical. As one multi-orgasmic man remembered, “For a long time I thought it was a sign of weakness for a man to have to use his fingers. But I’ve found that there are some times when a woman really enjoys or would even rather have your fingers or tongue, because it is a whole different feeling.” Surely this kind of stimulation cannot be considered unnatural or a sign of a man’s weakness if almost three-quarters of all women require it to be sexually satisfied. Men who are not used to using their hands when they have intercourse may find that they need a little time to coordinate their strokes and their thrusts. With practice, this coordination becomes increasingly easy, especially if you slow your thrusting down and allow your partner (and yourself) to savor every thrust and every stroke. You need to be careful not to become overly focused on your partner’s clitoris and lose the connection of lovemaking. Also be careful not to lose track of what your hand is doing, or your partner may start to feel like it is becoming mechanical. If you can walk and chew gum at the same time; you should be able to simultaneously thrust and stroke.

If your partner is willing to touch herself, all the better. One man told his girlfriend that because she was involved in bringing herself to orgasm, he felt like she was using him to “masturbate.” This reaction might be understandable if a man feels that it is his responsibility (and his right) to "give” his partner orgasms. This mind-set no doubt underlies women’s faking orgasm to please their partners or to show their partners they have been pleased. Since, as we explained orgasm takes place primarily in the brain, you cannot “give" your partner an orgasm. She must experience it in her own mind (and body).

As more and more women have discovered their ability to orgasm once or multiple times, men have felt increasing pressure to satisfy this ever higher orgasmic potential. Men’s desire to satisfy women is noble and necessary, but the accompanying pressure is not and can increase already too common feelings of performance anxiety among men. You will have a more realistic approach, and feel much less pressure, if you realize that you are simply helping your partner reach her own orgasmic potential.

ORGASMIC FINGERPRINTING

Clitoral, vaginal, and blended orgasms are just three categories that sexologists use to describe genital orgasms in women. Sexologists also make distinctions between brief, discrete orgasms and longer, continuous orgasms (see figure 19). Some women have discrete orgasms, others have continuous orgasms, and still others have a combination. Hartman, Fithian, and coauthor Berry Campbell suggest that each woman’s pattern of orgasm is so individual that it should be called an “orgasmic fingerprint." As Lonnie Barbach has pointed out, physiology as well as personal and cultural expectations influence how your partner (and you) experience orgasm, which is probably one of the reasons people tend to have a "standard” orgasmic pattern. Some women have one powerful orgasm, some have one gentle orgasm, and some have one continuous orgasm. Women who are multi-orgasmic can have any combination of the above. It is important to remember that your partner’s orgasm (like your own) will be somewhat different each time.

According to Sexual Kung Fu, women can also direct their energy out of their pelvis and up to their brain, and expand their orgasms throughout their entire body. This circulation of chi will energize your partner just as it energizes you. Women in general are less genitally focused than men and, as a result, have an easier time experiencing and expanding their orgasms throughout their bodies. Perhaps as a result of this diffusion, many women are genitally “preorgasmic” (that is, have never had a genital orgasm). In a later chapter we offer techniques for preorgasmic women to become orgasmic as well as techniques for orgasmic women to become multi-orgasmic.

It will be much easier for you to become a multi-orgasmic man if your partner enjoys long periods of lovemaking. More couples suffer from the man's not being able to last long enough than from the woman's growing tired before the man. However, the latter can he the case if you become multi-orgasmic and she does not. Although it is important not to pressure her and to accept her desires for more or less pleasure, you should encourage her to explore her potential through the chapter written for her. We also offer suggestions for couples for whom there is a serious imbalance in sexual appetite. Most women, however, will want to help their partners become multi-orgasmic, and the most important thing your partner can do to help is to explore her own pleasure and cultivate her own sexual satisfaction.

Her Arousal

Most women take longer to become aroused than most men, but once women are aroused, their desire can generally outlast that of their partners. (As a Sexual Kung Fu practitioner, you will be an exception to the second part of this rule.) According to Taoism, men are like fire and women are like water. Fire ignites quickly but can easily be quenched by water. To satisfy your lover, you need to bring her desire to a boil, which requires that you keep your fire burning long enough to do so. The secret to satisfying your partner is to understand the stages of her arousal and to learn how to synchronize your arousal with hers.

HOW DO I KNOW WHEN A WOMAN'S DESIRE IS BOILING? Taoist physicians recorded the stages of arousal they noticed in women. Many of their observations have been confirmed by Western research, especially by Kinsey in a chapter of his Sexual Behavior in the Human Female entitled "Physiology of Sexual Response and Orgasm." We note the stages here not to make women feel self-conscious but to help men understand how to better satisfy their partner's desires. As you are reading about these general stages, it is important to keep in mind Kinseys conclusion about the uniqueness of each person's sexuality: "There is nothing more characteristic of the sexual response than the fact that it is not the same in any two individuals."

With this said, we could not have a better guide to a general description of women's arousal than Su Nü, one of the Yellow Emperor's trusted female advisers. The Yellow Emperor once asked her, "How can I tell if the woman is experiencing pleasure?" Su Nü replied that there are Five Signs, Five Desires, and Ten Movements that demonstrate a woman's growing arousal. The Five Signs and Five Desires describe what happens to a woman's body as she becomes aroused, while the Ten Movements describe how her actions convey what she wants you to do next.

Before describing these secrets of women's arousal, it is worth mentioning that we live in more open and direct times than did Su Nü, and you do not have to limit yourself to reading the tea leaves of your partner's body. You can also ask her what she wants; better still, she may tell you. However, the throes of lovemaking are not always conducive to speech, let alone a clear statement of preferences. Passion overwhelms language, and it is at this time that it will help if you have learned to recognize a woman's mounting pleasure. Before or after lovemaking, you can discuss with your partner whether Su Nü understood her individual desires. It should go without saying that consent is essential in any sexual encounter, and the fact that you notice that the body of the woman you are dating is becoming aroused means nothing unless her mind wants to act on it. "No" means no, regardless of what her body says.

The Taoist texts were at times extremely direct and at other times quite vague. Some of the stages of arousal will seem clear, even obvious, while others may seem too subtle to detect. The Signs, Desires, and Movements overlap somewhat and are difficult to keep straight, so we will try to simplify them below. Remember that these are general signposts and not an exact road map. Don't expect to notice each stage each time you make love, and do not wait to check on each one before proceeding. Above all, lovemaking should be fluid and spontaneous, and these signposts will simply help you stay on the right course.

THE SIGNS OF DESIRE

As ejaculatory control begins with breathing, so too does passion, and the first signal you will have of your lover's desire is a change in her breathing, which will become increasingly rapid and shallow. According to Su Nü, if her nostrils flare and her mouth widens and she embraces you with both arms, she wants your and her genitals to touch. When her body quivers, she wants you to touch her genitals gently, If her face becomes flushed, she wants you to play with the head of your penis around her mons, and when she stretches out her legs, she wants you to rub the head of your penis against her clitoris and the entrance to her vagina.

Su Nü continues: If her nipples harden and she pushes out her belly, slowly and shallowly enter her. If her throat is dry and she swallows saliva, slowly begin to move inside her. If she starts to move her bottom, she is experiencing great pleasure. If her vagina is well lubricated or if she raises her legs to encircle you, enter her more deeply. If she presses her thighs together, her pleasure is becoming overwhelming. If she moves from side to side, she wants you to thrust deeply from side to side. If she is perspiring enough to dampen the sheets or she straightens her body and closes her eyes, she wants to orgasm. If she arches her body against yours, her pleasure has peaked. If she stretches out and relaxes, pleasure fills her entire body. If her vaginal secretions spread down her thighs and over her buttocks, she is fully satisfied and you should slowly withdraw.

Now that we have discussed what signs to recognize in your partner's mounting desire, we must discuss how to satisfy that desire, which we do in the following chapter.

Becoming a Multi-Orgasmic Couple

Controlling your ejaculation while self-pleasuring is one thing, but controlling it during the throes of lovemaking is quite another. The control you have developed over your breathing, your concentration, your PC muscles, and, most important, your sexual energy will help you immeasurably in becoming multi-orgasmic with your partner, but you also need to know the duo practice for lovemaking.

Pleasuring Your Partner

Unlike men's arousal, women's has no precipice. True, many women will have orgasms that they find so fully satisfying (and climactic) that they do not need to continue making love. And as we discussed earlier, some women even ejaculate. But since women do not have to worry about losing an erection or spilling their seed, they can generally surrender themselves to pleasure in a way that men cannot. Nevertheless, women do not fall into bliss without effort. Reaching orgasm, multiple orgasms, and expanded orgasms requires knowledge, skill, and effort of women just as it does of men. Here's how you can help.

In Sexual Kung Fu all aspects of touch are seen as part of the union between man and woman. Touching hands or lips is as much a part of harmonizing with one another as is intercourse. As with self-pleasuring, you probably have your own way of pleasuring your partner, and though most women have the same general erogenous zones, each woman, of course, has different sensitivities at different times. Try out these Taoist techniques, but let your partner's preferences be your guide.

"The essence of foreplay is slowness," states the Discourse on the Highest Tao Under Heaven. "If one proceeds slowly and patiently, the woman will be exceedingly joyful. She will adore you like a brother and love you like a parent. One who has mastered this Tao deserves to be called a heavenly gentleman." Because anticipation and growing intensity are important in bringing your partner's desire to a boil, you should begin with passionate kissing. Begin at her extremities rather than her genitals. Caress, massage, and kiss her hands and wrists as well as her feet and ankles. Move up her arms and legs to her abdomen. Stimulating points along the meridians of her body (energy channels) will help increase her sexual excitement: there are many points along or near her spine (the Back Channel), such as the small of her back, her neck, and her ears. The underside of the arms and the inside of the thighs are also very sensitive on most women. By caress, we mean that your touch should generally be featherweight, although it can be heavier when you are stimulating larger muscles such as her buttocks.

HER BREASTS

As we mentioned earlier, when you approach her breasts, spiral around them in ever narrower circles until you slowly reach her nipples. Most men go for the nipples too soon. (Old breast-feeding instincts, perhaps.) Circling them slowly will draw her sexual energy to her nipples. Also, remember to rub your thumbs and forefingers together to generate more chi. Finally, touch her nipples lightly, and try rolling them between your thumbs and index fingers. (You can touch both breasts or just focus on one at a time.) Some women enjoy harder squeezing and fondling, but let your partner's responses guide you. As we already mentioned, your tongue is highly charged with chi, and using it to lick, spiral around, and suck on her nipple is often an excellent way to arouse her. If her nipples become engorged and erect, you are doing something right.

HER GENITALS

In approaching your partner's genitals, it is best to stimulate her inner thighs, mons, and vaginal lips before approaching the clitoris. Imagine that you are moving through concentric circles of increasing pleasure and intensity. When you finally approach her clitoris, her sexual energy and excitement will be enormous.

Each woman likes to have her clitoris touched differently, and you need to become the expert in her particular pleasure. Even more important than where to touch is how to touch. Using your finger, stroke or spiral evenly – not too fast, not too slow. Avoid big movements: the clitoris's sensitivity is far more concentrated than that of the penis, and you are better off with more focused, subtler movements than with the kind of vigorous stimulation that most men enjoy.

As for where to touch, you are best off starting with the less sensitive parts of this very sensitive sex organ. Try stroking the base and sides of the clitoris. Then try stroking the hood and rolling the clitoris between your thumb and index finger – gently! Remember to touch the hood first, before touching the extremely sensitive glans. Experiment with different strokes and varying degrees of pressure. If your partner likes it, she will push her genitals slightly toward you for more stimulation. Moans, sighs, pants, jerking muscles, curling toes, and sweat, as well as smiles and other facial expressions, are all good signs. If your touch is too heavy or uncomfortable, she will pull her pelvis slightly away. Lighten up or try another stroke.

TONGUE KUNG FU

Although effective, fingers are not ideal, because they are not nearly as sensitive as your partner's clitoris. The hardness of the bones in your fingers and the sharpness of your nails can be painful. (Always make sure your nails are short and smooth.) For this reason, your tongue is much better suited to the task.

There have been many jokes about oral sex and its attendant smells and tastes. There are men who grimace at the thought and men who smile with fond memories. One multi-orgasmic man described his conversion to an oral-sex fan: "In the past, I definitely didn't like to use my tongue because it felt like I wasn't getting anything out of it. I was kind of selfish, really – I was a getter. And now my partner will be having these incredible orgasms because of what I am doing with my tongue, and it feels great to watch. I even start tingling in my body. It's true what the Tao says about when you are in tune. I get by giving. This is something a lot of guys miss. I know I did for a long time." Whatever your personal feelings are about oral sex, you should know that it is probably the fastest way to get a woman's vaginal juices flowing in preparation for lovemaking. As we discussed earlier, it is also the easiest, and for some women the only, way in which they have an orgasm.

If you are not a cunnilingus fan, you do not have to dive in headfirst. If you use your tongue on your partner's clitoris, your nose and face will be nearest her mons and lower abdomen. If it is the odor that you object to, you and she can try bathing together or using scented oils. (We should mention that many men are turned on by, or overtime come to be turned on by, the smell of their partner's vagina.) Best, of course, is not to focus initially or exclusively on her clitoris: use your tongue to touch her inner lips, the sensitive spot at the base of her vagina, and her perineum as well.

It is also important not to get overly fixated on her genitals to the exclusion of the rest of her body. Some women feel disconnected during oral sex, and this feeling can be lessened by using your hands to continue caressing her legs, belly, breasts, hands, and face. Many women find that having their nipples stimulated during oral sex can heighten their pleasure immensely. Other women find that this distracts them from the intensity of clitoral stimulation. As for clitoral techniques, you probably will want to try a combination of brushing with your lips, flicking with your tongue, and sucking with your mouth. Alternating between using your tongue and gently sucking her clitoris into your mouth can be extremely pleasurable. Again, be careful of too much pressure. Light, consistent, and rhythmic pressure is generally best.

Many men mistakenly think that oral sex involves inserting their tongue into their partner's vagina. This is not generally the case, since the tongue is usually too short and too soft to stimulate a woman's vagina successfully, although Taoists do recommend a technique for stimulating the G spot by hooking your tongue and pulling back. It's worth a try – especially if you have a strong tongue!

(You actually can strengthen your tongue by sticking it out and then pulling it in like a snake as fast as you can for a minute or two. Practice as often as you can.)

ENTERING HER

Generally, your fingers are more effective than your tongue for stimulating the inside of your partner's vagina. You can use one finger (or, if she's very aroused, two fingers) to enter her. Circle around the wall of her vagina to find where she is most sensitive. Don't forget to try the G spot about an inch or two behind her clitoris. You may also wish to thrust your fingers in and out (slowly at first), simulating the action of your penis.

At this point, your partner's desire is probably close to boiling and she is eager for you to enter her. But do not enter her quite yet. Hold your penis in your hand as if you were about to guide it into her vagina. But before entering, rub the head of your penis against her clitoris. This will help bring her passion to a rapid boil. Then enter her gradually, first about an inch, then two, and then pull back a little so that your penis is just inside the entrance to her vagina. This slow, lingering approach will help you control your own desire and will allow you to begin a thrusting pattern, which will bring both of you to the peak of pleasure many times.

If she is multi-orgasmic, you may want to help bring her to orgasm before you enter her, or you may want to wait until you have entered her. If she has already orgasmed at least once, she may be more patient with your need to stop momentarily during lovemaking as you approach the point of no return. Also, when you are making love her orgasms actually will help you control your ejaculation. As the Taoists understand it, water (vaginal fluid) cools down fire. As you gain greater mastery over your urge to ejaculate, this will be less of a concern because you will be able to use your breath and your mind more effectively to control this urge and will need to interrupt the rhythm of lovemaking less often.

CHARGING HER EROTIC CIRCUITS

While pleasuring your partner, you should try to avoid sexual Scripts or patterns of lovemaking that can become routine. The sequence for pleasuring your partner described in the previous section is not the only one. It generally follows the pattern of arousal for most women, but not necessarily all women and certainly not at all times. During a "quickie," for example, you might want to jump right to oral sex. Mix and match. See what your partner wants and what the mood of the moment is. Although techniques can help you satisfy your partner, it is worth bearing in mind Herant Katchadourian's advice in his Fundamentals of Human Sexuality: "A simplistic search for bodily levers and push-buttons, leads to mechanical sex since the energy that charges the erotic circuits is emotion." Knowledge of your partner's body is essential, but there is no substitute for sincere affection.

Thrusting Techniques

Most porn movies portray men thrusting in and out, sawing away until they ejaculate. It is no surprise that this is therefore what most men think they should do. In fact, this thrusting rhythm is a recipe for fast ejaculation and little satisfaction for either the man or the woman. The Taoists recognized that proper thrusting was essential for coital pleasure, ejaculatory control, and sexual health. Yet even more important than any particular technique is making sure your partner is already highly aroused. Thrusting in too soon (before she is highly lubricated) should be avoided at all costs. Even if she is eager for you to enter her, a slow hand and pelvis will raise her anticipation and help you control your ejaculation.

FINDING YOUR RHYTHM

The Taoists developed numerous different thrusting patterns, most of which involved varying between shallow thrusts and deep thrusts (see figure 20). All of these patterns encouraged the man to thrust shallowly a number of times before thrusting deeply, the most common involving nine shallow and one deep. (As you learn to control your ejaculation, you can lessen the ratio to six or even three shallow to one deep.)

Alternating between shallow and deep thrusts will not only help you last longer; it will also thrill your partner. The deep thrust pushes all of the air out of her vagina, creating a vacuum, which the shallow thrusts intensify. You want to avoid withdrawing completely, which breaks the seal of the vacuum; instead, pull back so that you are about an inch or so inside her. One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "When I read about this Taoist thrusting technique I really didn't believe it would work, but women just go crazy: they love the shallow and deep. They orgasm a lot quicker and can have two or three before I get to one. In the past, I couldn't last long enough to get a woman to that point."

More important than any particular number of shallow and deep thrusts is practicing a basic rhythm that you can maintain and that both you and your partner can enjoy for prolonged periods of time. Don't allow your thrusting to become mechanical by getting lost in counting off numbers.

DEEP THRUSTS

When most men thrust deeply, they pull back all the way, which rubs the head of their penis – their most sensitive spot – against the full length of their partner's vagina. If you have difficulty getting or maintaining an erection, this in-out deep thrust is especially valuable (see the Soft Entry exercise). However, as you can imagine, this thrust is also highly arousing and ordinarily leads to quick ejaculation.

For this reason, the Taoist masters developed the up-down deep thrust. This thrust uses the base of your penis, which is your least sensitive spot, to stimulate your partner's clitoris, which is her most sensitive spot (see figure 21). The benefits for postponing ejaculation are obvious. Instead of pulling back, you can stay deep inside your partner and thrust up and down repeatedly. This is especially important when she is in the midst of orgasming and wants you deep inside her but you are close to the edge.

Keep in mind that women's clitorises differ in their proximity to the vagina, which may be one reason that some women are more easily orgasmic during intercourse than others. You will be able to stimulate some women clitorally just by using the up-down deep thrust, while others will need the help of your fingers. Either way, this thrust will help you immeasurably during the most intense throes of lovemaking.

DIFFERENT DIRECTIONS

In addition to depth, you can also vary the direction in which you thrust. According to Chinese medicine, the parts of the vagina, like the parts of the penis, correspond to the organs and glands of the body (see figure 22). To truly satisfy and energize your partner, you will need to stimulate her entire vagina during lovemaking. This may seem like a lot of work, and you will not be able to do it every time you make love, but the more of her vagina you can massage with your penis, the better.

Begin by thrusting shallow – left and right, top and bottom. Then thrust deep and, while staying deep, use the base of your shaft to rub up and down against your partner's clitoris and the head of your penis to rub gently against her cervix. Now pull back at an angle, which stimulates the walls of her vagina. (Once you have learned to differentiate between shallow and deep, you can also explore the middle depth.) Remember, women have different spots of greatest sensitivity, so thrusting in different directions has the greatest chance of satisfying your partner.

In addition to depth and direction, you can also vary the speed at which you thrust. The seventh-century physician Li Tung-hsüan Tzu waxed poetic about nine different kinds of thrusts that offer your partner a range of depths, directions, and speeds:

1. Strike left and right as a brave general breaking through the enemy's ranks. [The battle-of-the-sexes imagery was not completely absent from Taoist sexuality.]

2. Rise and suddenly plunge like a wild horse bucking through a mountain stream.

3. Push in and pull out like a flock of seagulls playing on the waves.

4. Use deep thrusts and shallow teasing strokes, like a sparrow plucking pieces of rice.

5. Make shallow and then deeper thrusts in steady succession [to the left and right], like a large stone sinking into the sea.

6. Push in slowly as a snake entering its hole.

7. Charge quickly like a frightened mouse running into its hole.

8. Hover and then strike like an eagle catching an elusive hare.

9. Rise up and then plunge down low like a great sailboat in a wild wind.

In the end you will put the various thrusts you have learned together in your own special pelvic rhythm depending on the time and place – and the pleasure desired.

The Advanced Art of Screwing

When most men thrust, they stimulate only a small part of their partner's entire vagina. This is why advanced Sexual Kung Fu involves "screwing" rather than "thrusting." Although the word screw has come to have vulgar connotations in our culture, it is actually quite accurate to describe the spiraling action the Tao suggests for truly pleasuring your partner (and yourself). Instead of thrusting forward and pulling back, you should "screw" your hips or ideally your sacrum in half circles, first on one side and then the other. One multi-orgasmic man explained his technique: "I will go in circling and come out circling. Play with one side and then play with the other side. I go shallow and then I go deeper, playing with one side and then the other. And then I do a lot more circles. And I've found that a lot of women really love this, especially when having their later orgasms."

More experienced lovers the world over have discovered the effectiveness of moving their hips during lovemaking, and many men find that rocking their shoulders initially helps them to rotate their sacrum or their hips. Your hips, however, are not nearly as subtle and effective as your sacrum, which sits at the center of the pelvis (see figure 23), According to the Tao, it is the sacrum that controls the penis.

FINDING THE WAY

Rotating Your Sacrum

At first your rotations will probably come from your hips or pelvis, since, unless you do a lot of Latin or African dance, you are probably not used to rotating your sacrum. Give it time, hut eventually you will be able to spiral, to “screw,” with subtle movements of your sacrum. To isolate your sacrum, put one hand on your pubis and one hand on your sacrum and try to spiral left and then right. Next, try tilting your penis up as you push your tailbone (the base of your sacrum) forward (curving your back out slightly), and then try tilting your penis down as you push your tailbone back (arching your spine slightly). Once you have isolated your sacrum, you can really screw.

According to the Tao, a nail (thrusting straight in) comes out easily, but a screw (circling) stays in a long time. Elvis Presley used these pelvic (actually, sacral) gyrations onstage to great effect and great popularity, and you will find that you are met with similar applause in the headroom once you master this technique.

There is even a time and a place for the old bedspring-squeaking hard thrusting, especially if' your partner likes very deep penetration and you have a lot at' control. One multi-orgasmic man explained: “Women usually like the hard thrusting later on after they are relaxed. If it's too soon, it can be a bit painful. So as the night goes on I find myself thrusting harder because their passion is ready for it. If it gets to be too much for me, I really need to breathe and if absolutely necessary sometimes to pull out and use my tongue and fingers.” One of the benefits of using a condom – one that we discuss in the section called "When to Start: A Few Words About Safer Sex” later in this chapter – is that by desensitizing your penis you can make your lovemaking last longer, especially if your partner wants you to thrust hard and deep. But you need to make sure you stay connected to your groin and monitor your rising arousal rate.

The more you practice, the more control you will develop and the less you will need to pull out. One multi-orgasmic man explained what he does when he approaches the point of no return: “When I am making love and start feeling like I am going to come, I really try to listen to my body, and share with my partner where I am and how close I am getting. And if I get real close, I’ll stop and do the deep breathing, which will get my body to relax.”

You are almost always better off starting with slow thrusts or spirals. (The Taoist practice is the opposite of the hurried, short, and selfish sentiment expressed in the popular description of male sexuality "Wham, barn, thank you, "ma’am.”) Like all physical and spiritual practices, lovemaking requires both discipline and innovation. You are interested in both: a general pattern of pleasurable thrusting/screwing and a variety of spontaneous changes in depth, speed, and direction.

The Big Draw for Two

We introduced the Big Draw technique before but will discuss it here for you to practice with your partner. In the Big Draw during lovemaking, you will both be trying to multiply and expand your orgasms within yourselves. In the Soul-Mating exercise described later in this chapter, you will also learn to exchange sexual energy with your partner, but for now simply learn to circulate your sexual energy within your own body.

We have divided this practice into its sequential stages so that you can learn it more easily, but when you use it with your partner, it should blend together into a fluid and graceful experience.

It may seem difficult at first to stop yourself from ejaculating given all the pleasurable sensations and expansive desire you feel with your partner. You should keep in mind that you are training your body in this practice and that each time you succeed it becomes easier the next time.

The time between when you start to experience arousal and when an orgasm is imminent is the time you should draw the energy up. If you wait too long, you may not be able to stop it from pouring out. As you become able to separate orgasm from ejaculation, you can draw the energy up as you are experiencing the contractile-phase genital contractions, expanding the orgasm throughout your body.

If you have trouble drawing the energy up to your head, first draw it up to your tailbone and feel it entering your sacrum and the point on your spine opposite your navel from where you can pour the energy into the navel. Once it has pooled there, try to draw it the rest of the way to your head.

TALKING WITH YOUR PARTNER

At first the Sexual Kung Fu practice may seem a little awkward and an interruption in your lovemaking, but it will quickly become increasingly natural and part of a less frenetic, but much more meaningful and pleasurable, style of lovemaking. However, in the meantime it will require support and patience from your partner, which is why it is important to explain to your partner what you are doing. One multi-orgasmic man remembered: “My girlfriend responded in a very open and positive way. Her reaction was certainly influenced by the fact that our sex quickly became more beautiful. It was also quite important that I practiced often by myself so I rarely had to interrupt our lovemaking to control ejaculation. Of course, it was certainly necessary to explain to my partner what I was doing so she could understand the process.”

You can encourage your partner to read, but if timing and passion do not afford you this opportunity, you will want to tell her in a few breathless words what you are doing. One multi-orgasmic man described how he explains his practice: “I tell the woman I am with that my sexual philosophy now is this Taoist philosophy. And I ask her for help. Usually I wait until after we’ve been in bed for a while, and I’ll say, ‘There’s going to come a time where I may need you to help me to stop. You know, I might need to withdraw, I might need to have a little bit of slowing down.’ So I let them know why I might want to do that, and what my thinking is. I find that women really respect it and they love hearing about it and it is exciting to them.”

EXERCISE 12

THE BIG DRAW DURING LOVEMAKING

EMBRACE When you are both highly aroused, stop and hold each other. Look deeply into each other's eyes. Truly see your partner's inner goodness, and express the depth of your love for her with your eyes. Keeping your eyes open also helps bring the energy up. Send each other energy through your gaze, your lips, the palms of your hands, and the surface of your skin.

THRUST/SCREW When your partner is highly aroused, use the head of your penis to rub her inner vaginal lips and especially her clitoris. When she is ready, you will be able to tell by her swollen lips and clitoris and the abundance of her vaginal juices. Enter your partner slowly. You may want to start with a pattern of nine shallow thrusts and one deep thrust. (Remember, these are general guidelines, not rules.)

CONTRACT While still inside your partner, lightly contract the head and base of your penis and your PC muscle. You will be using your mind as well as your pelvic muscles to squeeze these "round" muscles. If necessary, use your fingers to squeeze the base of your penis.

PAUSE When you feel you are near orgasm, pull back so that only about an inch or two of your penis (the head, mostly) is inside your partner's vagina. Make sure you communicate to your partner that you are close to the edge and that she needs to avoid pushing you over the edge. (Pull out all the way only if absolutely necessary.)

DRAW Squeeze your anus and use your mind to draw the energy up from the tip of your penis, through your perineum and tailbone, and up your spine to your head (see the Cool Draw and the Big Draw). This will help spread the orgasmic energy from your genitals, decreasing the urge to ejaculate while expanding your orgasm from a genital orgasm to a whole-body orgasm.

RELAX Relaxing allows the blood vessels in your penis to dilate and allows you to exchange more of your sexual energy with your partner. Your erection may decrease somewhat, which will let the hormone-filled blood return to fortify the rest of your body and allow new blood to flow into your penis when you get hard again. Continue holding each other, kissing, and circulating energy. When ready, you can continue thrusting/screwing and repeat the Big Draw until both of you are completely satisfied.

It is essential that you tell your partner enough so that she can support your practice. As one multi-orgasmic man explained, “When I am really starting to feel my pumpers wanting to start to pump, I have to slow down more often and sort of just breathe and do the practice. And that’s when I start explaining to them what I am doing and why I am doing it, why it is important to me and I think it is important to both of us. Before I explain what I am doing, a lot of women, when I say I am about to come, will say, 'Well, come, come. I like it when you come.' That's when I say, 'I really appreciate that you want to do that for me, but I don't want to come because I don't want to fall asleep right away. I want to have fun. I want to keep my energy up.' And they just understand why, every once in a while, I will need to pull back and take some deep breaths."

Positions for Pleasure and Health

The Taoists were highly inventive in coming up with new and interesting sexual positions, However, for the Taoists these positions were not just for variety; each had a different energetic and healing function. They believed that love expressed through sexuality was the most potent medicine, and a Taoist physician might prescribe several weeks of dedicated lovemaking in a specific position for a particular ailment. If you want to explore these various positions with your partner and use them for self-healing, they are described in Healing Lowe Through the Tao: Cultivating Female Sexual Energy (see appendix). Here we will give the basic and most important positions;, as well as some general advice for whatever position you choose. These positions can help enormously in accommodating different body sizes and genital sizes, as well as stimulating different sexual sensitivities. As you and your partner refine your understanding of your sexual pleasures, you will be able to select positions that match these preferences.

FINDING THE WAY

Basic Guidelines

Before we discuss specific positions, there are two basic guidelines that will help you select the correct position for the mood and moment.

1. For relaxing and harmonizing with your partner, place similar body parts together: lips to lips, hands to hands, genitals to genitals. For stimulating and exciting one another, place dissimilar body parts together: lips to ear, mouth to genitals, genitals to anus.

2. The person who moves (generally the person on top) gives the most energy to the other partner. The person underneath can move as well to complement the movement of the person on top. This will help expand, circulate, and exchange the chi more quickly. In the West we assume that the person on top is dominant. How different is the Taoist understanding that the person on top is actually serving the other by sending the most healing energy to him or her. Passion and health, not power, are the main concerns of the skilled Taoist. Your lovemaking should observe these guidelines so that you and your partner both harmonize and excite, heal and are healed.

MAN ON TOP

Even before missionaries made their way to China, the Taoists were well acquainted with the position in which the man lies on top of the woman, usually supporting himself on his hands or elbows. One of the primary benefits of this position is that you and your partner can gaze into each other's eyes and kiss passionately. The face-to-face position is deeply satisfying to your emotions and sense organs, all five of which (eyes, tongue, ear, nose, and skin) come into direct contact. These organs, especially your tongue and eyes, are major carriers of life-force energy (see "Sexing the Spirit" later in this chapter).

In this position your partner can run her hand along your spine to help you draw your energy up to your head. Also in this position many parts of your body – legs, belly, chest, and so on – are in contact with hers, and your weight on your partner's pubic bone and breasts can help her become aroused quickly. This position also allows you to use your thrusting and screwing techniques, both to satisfy your partner and to maintain control of your arousal.

The main drawbacks of the position are that your hands are usually involved in holding yourself up and that your partner's G spot is bypassed almost entirely unless you tilt your sacrum and angle your penis up. You can address this problem by having your partner place a pillow under her buttocks so that her pelvis is tilted back. She can also drape her legs over your arms or shoulders, which has the same effect as the pillow and also allows you to penetrate more deeply. The higher her legs, the deeper the penetration. This is especially helpful if your partner has a relatively large vagina and you have a relatively small penis.

Remember that according to Taoism, man is like fire and woman is like water. Since women take longer to boil, it is often good for the man to begin on top. When the woman's desire is boiling and risks quenching the man's fire (causing him to ejaculate), you may wish to switch to the woman-on-top position, which allows the man to concentrate more easily. In this position, however, the woman must be willing to stop as the man draws close to the point of no return.

WOMAN ON TOP

In this position, the man lies on his back and the woman straddles him. Most men find that this is the easiest position in which to learn to control their ejaculations and to become multi-orgasmic. The reason for this is that you can relax your pelvic muscles in this position and pay close attention to your arousal rate. Gravity also assists in ejaculatory control, and the man can focus on directing the energy up his spine.

Your partner, in this position, can also direct your penis to the most sensitive places in her vagina, including her G spot, which is one reason that for many women this is the easiest position in which to be (multi-)orgasmic. Your partner can also keep the head of your penis in the most sensitive outer two inches of her vagina. It is difficult for a man to remain in only the first two inches when he is on top, since he tends to want to plunge deeper into the tighter area – which, of course, also finishes him off faster. In this position your partner can spiral her sacrum so that your penis rubs against the walls of her vagina at any depth and in any direction.

In this position, you can also use your fingers to stimulate her clitoris and help her to climax. Another benefit of this position is that you can suck or fondle your partner's breasts while making love. According to the ancient Taoists, you can drink in your partner's sexual energy from her lips, her vagina, and her breasts.

This position is also especially good when the man is significantly larger than the woman or tends to ejaculate quickly, or when the woman is in the later months of pregnancy (her growing belly does not get squeezed). Older men and men with heart problems also find this position of great value, since they are not required to exert a lot of energy.

SIDE BY SIDE

This position requires relatively little exertion from either partner and is therefore good for later stages of lovemaking. It does require some skill to achieve and some coordination to maintain, so it is best for lovers who know each other well. It may be easiest to begin with you on top and for you to roll to the right or left into the side-by-side position. In addition to not requiring a great deal of strenuous effort, the position has the benefit of face-to-face and Whole-body contact, both of which allow for greater exchange of energy. However, it can be uncomfortable or awkward unless your partner's body movements and your own are well synchronized. And in this position the penetration of the penis is also quite shallow.

MAN FROM BEHIND

This is the way animals, whose main motivation is impregnation, do it, and with good reason. In this position, as you may have noticed, your partner's vagina feels especially tight, which makes ejaculatory control more difficult. This position is therefore best when you are feeling less aroused or have developed your skill at ejaculatory control. The reason your partner feels especially tight is that in this position you enter her deeply, which is the reason women who like especially deep penetration tend to favor this position. The depth can be controlled by your partner's angle: the more forward she bends, the deeper the penetration. This position is especially good for men with smaller penises or women with larger vaginas. This position also allows direct stimulation of your partner's G spot, although her clitoris receives relatively indirect stimulation – a situation you can remedy with your fingers.

SOUL-MATING (Exchanging Sexual Energy)

EXPANDING The pleasuring and thrusting and screwing techniques described earlier in this chapter will expand your and your partner's sexual energy to a point where it is ready to circulate. The more lubricated a woman is, the more yin energy she has. As we alluded to before, you can even drink her yin directly through oral sex or from the nipples of her breasts. It will help if you (and, ideally, your partner) have drawn the energy up and are circulating it through your own bodies (that is, through your Microcosmic Orbits).

EMBRACING Embrace your partner in a face-to-face position with most of your bodies in contact. If the woman is significantly lighter or weaker, she should be on top. Otherwise, it doesn't matter which person is on top. Remember to look deeply into each other's eyes: eye contact, as mentioned above, is extremely important. Send each other love and energy through your gaze.

BREATHING Coordinating your breathing is essential for exchanging chi. Now that you have stopped thrusting or screwing and are holding your partner close, place your nose next to your partner's ear and your ear next to your partner's nose. This will help you hear one another's breathing. Then synchronize your breathing: you can both inhale and exhale simultaneously, or one of you can inhale while the other exhales. Keep your thoughts focused on one another and be conscious of your chests rising and falling in rhythm with one another.

CIRCULATING To harmonize, both you and your partner must be able to circulate energy through your own Microcosmic Orbit as the first step toward balancing the Back Channel, which runs up your spine and is more yang, and the Front Channel, which runs down the front midline of your body and is more yin. Remember to draw energy up by contracting your anus and/or using your mind, and then to guide energy down the front of your body through your tongue.

EXCHANGING

1. After you have been breathing with one another for a while, you should each draw your energy from your genitals up to the crown of your head.

2. Then, while you are both inhaling, you should envision drawing her cool yin energy in from her vagina to your penis. (She should envision drawing your hot yang energy from your penis into her vagina.)

3. You should both continue drawing this energy back to your perineum and then up to your tailbone and finally up your spine to the crown of your head.

4. Then exhale and let the energy descend from the crown of your head through the midline between your eyebrows down your face and through your tongue – which, if your tongue is touching your partner's, will allow you to exchange energy through your mouths. From your tongue, the energy should be brought down the rest of your Front Channel to your navel. (You can also exchange energy from your heart through your chest to her breasts and from there down her Front Channel. She can do the same for you.)

5. Continue breathing and exchanging energy nine to eighteen times, or as long as you like.

Sexing the Spirit

It is no secret that most people experience transcendence more intensely in their bedrooms than they do in their churches, synagogues, temples, or mosques, Lovemaking allows us to transcend the limits of our physical body, to fuse with another human being, and occasionally even to feel at one with the universe.

According to the Tao, heaven and earth are constantly in sexual union, balancing and harmonizing one another. When we make love we can connect with this universal energy. Healing Tao instructor Stefan Siegrist explained: "With Taoist sexuality one can re-experience the lost harmony (or spiritual oneness) with nature and the universe that is often talked about in philosophy and religion." Unlike some religions, however, Taoism views sexuality and spirituality as inseparable. Spirituality is "embodied," and spirit is seen as permeating the entire physical world, including our own bodies.

According to the Tao, each of us has three overlapping types of energy. In this book, we have been working primarily with the most physical of these three, our ching-chi, or sexual energy. But as we cultivate this sexual energy, it is refined into chi, or bioelectric energy, which then spreads throughout our entire body. And this in turn is refined into shen, or spiritual energy. All three are interrelated and are connected to the body. In this section you will learn to circulate and refine your sexual energy with your partner. This technique will help you expand your orgasm from a purely physical experience to a spiritual one: this is the true nature of soul-mating.

YIN AND YANG

Most people who know anything about Taoism have heard about yin and yang and their complementary and cyclical positions in the symbol of the Tao. Most people know that yin is the feminine energy in the universe and that yang is its masculine counterpart. These two primordial energies are the electron and proton that allow all creation to occur and allow you and your partner to harmonize and refine your sexual energy. In the words of the I Ching, “The interaction of one yin and one yang is called Tao, and the resulting constant generative process is called 'change.'"

According to Su Nü, "Yang can function only with the cooperation of yin, yin can grow only in the presence of yang.” We have both masculine and feminine energies inside each of us, and yin and yang are dynamic forces that actually can change into one another. Many people in the West now argue that male and female are simply socially constructed gender terms. According to the Tao, however, although there is much variability from individual to individual, men generally have more yang (masculine) energy and women generally have more yin (feminine) energy. The Tao has always recognized that men are also partly feminine and women also partly masculine and that any binary opposition is clearly false. This idea is represented in the symbol of the Tao by a small circle representing the masculine within the feminine symbol and a small circle representing the feminine within the masculine symbol. Each contains a part of the other.

Though we should avoid binary opposition, we must be aware of our different needs, especially in the bedroom, or suffer the consequences. For example, yang is more quickly aroused and also more quickly extinguished; yin is more slowly aroused and more slowly extinguished. Because men tend to be more yang and women more yin, they also can help bring each other into better balance through the exchange of their energy during lovemaking. It is ideal if both partners are consciously aware of how this exchange takes place, and in the next chapter we explain what your partner will need to know about channeling her own energy. It is possible to feel the exchange of energy with a loving partner even if she does not know about Taoist sexuality, but it will be difficult to do exercise 13 without her active and informed participation. The more you can share with her, the easier and more powerful the exchange will be.

If you are having difficulty drawing your partner's energy up, you should contract your penis, your perineum, and your anus. Pumping these muscles lightly several times will help you draw the energy up. (You can also rhythmically sip up her energy with short breaths as in the Cool Draw exercise.) Once you have good control over your sexual energy and are not worried about ejaculating, you can send your hot yang energy out your penis and into your partner. She in turn should imagine sending her cool yin energy from her vagina to your penis. You cannot receive her yin energy without giving her your yang energy. Allowing her to absorb your excess yang energy will also help you avoid building up too much energy in your genitals and ejaculating. If you ejaculate, it is difficult to exchange energy, because you lose most of yours. Remember, it is the exchange that is important.

You will probably not be able to open all the points along the spine during your first exchange of sexual energy. It may take many times – it may even take months – but eventually you will feel the warm current between your mouths and between your genitals. "Sometimes," described one multi-orgasmic man, "when we are both orgasming we will be kissing passionately and will feel the energy going right through the both of us. Just driving through our tongues, down my body, through my penis, into her vagina, and up through her body back to our tongues, It is incredible."

At first the energy may seem so explosive that you have a hard time distinguishing between your and your partner's energy. However, eventually you will be able to distinguish between your partner's cool yin energy and your hot yang energy. If your partner does not know how to circulate her own energy, you can help her by a guiding the energy from your penis to her vagina, up her spine to her crown, down to her tongue and yours, and then back down her front to her vagina.

FINDING THE WAY

Spontaneous Energy Movements

Don't be surprised if at first the energy moves spontaneously and unpredictably. You may experience energy rising up the front midline of your bodies between you and your partner. Some couples experience energy shooting to the top of their heads and showering down over them, while others report feeling surrounded by a cocoon of energy. If you experience any of these, don't get worried. Just relax and enjoy the movement of these subtle energies through or around your bodies.

CULTIVATING YOUR ENERGY

After considerable practice, you will be able to open ever higher centers of energy, called tan-tien (or reservoirs; pronounced DON TYEN) by the Chinese. According to Taoism, one of these reservoirs exists at the level of your navel, another at your heart, and a third at your head (see figure 3). Michael Winn explains: "While in actual fact the entire body is one large interconnected tan tien, or field of energy, it is easiest to try to open each center sequentially. You must open the lower centers first to provide a strong platform for the higher ones."

Some yoga-trained Westerners confuse these reservoirs with the Hindu chakras, which have become popular synonyms for energy centers in the body. The seven or twelve chakras are generally more local and separated than the tan-tien, which are part of one large energy circuit, the Microcosmic Orbit, that envelops the entire body. Although Hindu Tantric philosophy is similar in many ways to Taoism, especially in its emphasis on conserving and transforming the power of sperm, the specific methods used in Tantra are different.

BECOMING ONE

This mutual opening of the Microcosmic Orbits of two lovers is the true fusion of sexual and spiritual energy. It can eventually result, after refining your sexual energy through elevated lovemaking and through meditation, in a prolonged orgasm and even an altered state of consciousness. According to Taoism, this orgasmic fusion of lovers occurs when yin and yang are in complete harmony. The more you learn to relax and to surrender yourself completely to your partner, the more likely it is that you will experience this extraordinary connection. According to one multi-orgasmic man, "Sex with my girlfriend is not the mechanical battle of bodies groping for momentary pleasure that it was, but a real exchange and a real union of our two bodies – almost as if our two bodies were merging into one.

This form of harmonizing is very powerful. When you can open and receive the loving energy of your partner, and in turn have your partner open to receive your energy, you will experience a blending and intimacy unlike anything else. Both of your energies, yin and yang, are part of the same universal energy; they are just charged differently. This is how you and your partner can truly become one flesh. When this flow of sexual energy between you reaches the right intensity and balance, your individual bodies will seem to dissolve into the ecstatic vibration of your circulating and pulsating energies. This is a true orgasm of body and soul. Assuming that other channels of communication and sharing are open in your relationship, this exchange of energy will help your love grow, and your mutual love will enrich those around you.

We often call healthy sexual union making love, and this is exactly what you are doing. Sexual energy expands and intensifies our emotions and attitudes. This is why sexual pleasure is popularly considered the highest bliss, and why the feeling of being in love is so intense and all-encompassing. On the negative side, it is also why lovers' quarrels are the most intense. So it is of paramount importance that you and your partner try to resolve emotional conflicts before you attempt to circulate sexual energy. Put another way, sexual energy is like fire: it can cook your food, and it can also burn your house down. It all depends on how it is used. If negative emotions arise while you are making love, stop or try to transform them into positive emotions by smiling and thinking about the positive qualities of your partner.

A genuine smile transmits loving energy, which has the power to warm and to heal. Recall a time when you were upset or physically ill and someone gave you a big smile; suddenly you felt better. Norman Cousins, a former editor of the Saturday Review, writes in Anatomy of an Illness that he cured himself of a rare connective tissue disease by watching old Marx Brothers movies. Smiling and laughter have the ability to transform negative energy into positive energy and to heal our bodies and minds. If you have a lot of negativity in general, you should try practicing the Inner Smile and the Six Healing Sounds.

When to Stop

As we mentioned most couples stop making love when the man ejaculates. There may be some cuddling or, during new hot and steamy relationships, another round of lovemaking after a refractory period (the time it takes to get another erection once you have ejaculated). But most people call it a night (or a morning or an afternoon) once the man ejaculates. As you may have guessed, with non-ejaculatory, multi-orgasmic sex, this ordinary end marker no longer exists. You and your partner can make love as long as you want.

Though, as we mentioned earlier, Taoist sexuality should not be an endurance test, when time allows, you may wish to spend an hour or two or more in a passionate and harmonizing embrace. (Don't forget to let your erection decrease some around every twenty minutes so the blood can recirculate.) The classic Taoist texts suggest that it takes one thousand loving thrusts to fully satisfy a woman. This may seem to involve man awful lot of effort and to demand great physical strength, but as Jolan Chang points out in his Tao of Love and Sex, if half an hour's run requires at least two-thousand steps, why shouldn't prolonged lovemaking involve a thousand or more thrusts? Of course, for most of us, our lives do not afford the time for this kind of intense session every night, and no couple will want such intensity all the time. However, to reach the higher levels of orgasmic and energizing lovemaking, it is important to set aside times when the phone is off the hook so that you and you partner can discover your true potential for pleasure. It's certainly better than going to the movies!

If your partner generally has more desire than you, Sexual Kung Fu may help save your love life. It will increase your sexual energy significantly and allow you to satisfy your partner's desire with ease. Though for most women one thousand loving thrusts will be paradise, for others with less sexual desire it may be purgatory. If your partner generally has less desire than you, she should definitely read the next chapter and try to expand her passion and her pleasure. Of course, if there are deeper psychological reasons that prevent either of you from expressing your sexual selves fully, you should seek help from a professional therapist. The ability of both partners to have multiple orgasms is a powerful aphrodisiac, but real, lasting satisfaction comes from a relationship based on sexual and emotional harmony.

How you end lovemaking is as important as how you start. As we explained in chapter 1, the loss of energy that most men experience after ejaculating makes it difficult for them to remain attentive and affectionate toward their partners. Since female sexuality is less precipitous, most women want to disengage more gradually, with tender words and caresses. As you master Sexual Kung Fu, you will no longer fall off the ejaculatory cliff and will be able to conclude lovemaking more gradually.

One multi-orgasmic man explained his experience: "Before, I didn't understand or want the kind of caressing and love talk after sex that my girlfriend did. Once I had had my ejaculation, I had no desire to caress my partner, to talk to her, or even to kiss her. But now during and even after lovemaking I have a deep desire to caress her body and to be tender to her. Her skin often feels like it is tingling with an electrical charge, which makes it soft like silk."

If your partner is (or becomes) multi-orgasmic, you will find that you can ride the waves of orgasm together for as long as you like, tuning your passion and your pleasure. If your partner is not multi-orgasmic, or even orgasmic, one thousand loving thrusts will give her the best possible chance of becoming so. More important, Taoist sexuality allows you to experience a profound intimacy that is difficult to describe in words and impossible to count in orgasms.

When to Start: A Few Words About Safer Sex

In his stand-up routine about sexually transmitted diseases, comedian Eddie Murphy echoed the general cultural anxiety around sex today: "AIDS, that ain't like the good old days when venereal disease was simple. In the good old days ya got gonorrhea, your dick hurt, you go get a shot – clear it right up. Then they came out with herpes. You keep that shit forever – like luggage. Now they got AIDS, that just kills motherfuckers. I say, What's next? I guess you just put your dick in and it explodes."

It is difficult to focus on the greater pleasure, intimacy, and spiritual growth possible through sexuality when you are worried about the health of your and your partner's physical body. For this reason, it is worth discussing the realities and logistics of safer sex. You may also be relieved to know that according to the Tao, when you practice Sexual Kung Fu and don't ejaculate, you greatly strengthen your immune system. You also obviously reduce the risk of exchanging a sexually transmitted disease through bodily fluids.

AIDS – acquired immune deficiency syndrome – is the disease that results from infection by the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). Although AIDS is not the only sexually transmitted disease you need to be concerned about, it is certainly the most dangerous. AIDS is currently thought to be universally fatal, although it is not clear whether all people who are living with HIV will eventually develop AIDS. Those who die from AIDS usually do so because their immune system is so compromised that they cannot fight the opportunistic infections that often accompany AIDS. HIV is spread through bodily fluids – specifically, blood and semen. There is no evidence so far to suggest that HIV can be transmitted through saliva. Sexual practices that are safe or very low risk include hugging, massage, dry kissing (without exchanging saliva), and mutual masturbation. Sexual practices that are probably safe include French kissing, fellatio (without ejaculation), cunnilingus, and vaginal and anal intercourse with a condom.

Though the two main groups at risk are homosexual or bisexual men and intravenous drug users, heterosexual men and women are also at risk. This fact has created an atmosphere of panic that, although valuable in mobilizing the medical community and helping raise awareness about the importance of sexual education, has left most people with bedroom jitters.

Asking potential partners whether they have had an AIDS test or inquiring about their sexual history is as much a part of dating these days as asking about their employment or relatives. Many couples are getting tested for AIDS together. Although not yet considered a romantic date, getting tested is one way for couples to express their love and concern for one another's health and well-being.

Safer sex is recommended for any couple in which one partner could have been exposed to HIV. Couples interested in getting sexually involved should first have an HIV test, then use safer-sex techniques for six months, and then get a confirming HIV test. (It may take up to six months after infection for a person to test positive.) If both tests are negative, chances are very, very low that there is any more reason for concern, so long as the couple remains monogamous.

In the six months during which couples are waiting to take a second HIV test, they can engage in safer-sex techniques such as intercourse with a condom and mutual masturbation. In addition, they can each practice solo-cultivation techniques to develop their individual sexual and spiritual potential. Not only can using your hands to satisfy one another, a technique we mentioned earlier, allow you to have safer sex during the six-month waiting period, but it can also allow each of you to learn the subtle nuances of your individual arousal and pleasure that will help you become multi-orgasmic. Interrupting the routine also can allow you to explore new sensual and sexual pleasures while avoiding old coital scripts. Most important, harmonizing with your partner, according to the Tao, occurs at an energetic level that does not require intercourse. Caressing and even mutual meditation when gazing into one another's eyes can be profoundly intimate and satisfying experiences.

SAFER SAFER SEX

By not ejaculating, the man does not transfer as much bodily fluid (and, potentially, as many bacteria and viruses) to the woman. Also, by not ejaculating he does not draw in as much fluid (and, potentially, as many bacteria and viruses) from the woman. If you can excuse the comparison, your penis is a little like a turkey baster. When you ejaculate, you squeeze out your semen, creating a low-pressure vacuum, which then draws in liquid from your partner. By not creating this vacuum, you have less chance of transferring bacteria or viruses to or from your partner.

During nonejaculatory sex, bodily fluids can still be transferred (which is also the reason nonejaculatory sex alone is not a reliable birth-control technique). Still, nonejaculatory sex is safer than ejaculatory sex, especially if the condom breaks. (It also makes whatever birth-control method you use all the more effective.)

FINDING THE WAY

The Art and Science of Using Condoms

The good news about condoms is that the decreased sensitivity that most men experience can help a man control his ejaculation. The bad news about condoms is that they do decrease a man's sensitivity. Some men actually have difficulty keeping an erection while wearing a condom. If this is your situation, you or your partner should keep stroking your genitals while you put on the condom. Putting a small amount of lubricant on your penis before putting on the condom will also increase your sensitivity without causing the condom to slip off. Following are a few other things to keep in mind when using condoms.

1. Always use a condom before vaginal or anal intercourse. Also, try to use a condom with spermicide that contains nonoxyno1-9, which is effective in killing a variety of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV. (If you develop a bright red inflammation on your penis or vulva as a reaction to nonoxyno1-9, switch to a brand without this germicide, but be extra careful.)

2. Always use a condom before your partner performs oral sex. In this case, your partner will probably want you to use a "dry" condom that is not lubricated and does not have nonoxyno1-9, which has a medicinal taste.

3. Leave half an inch of space at the top of plain-tip condoms. Reservoir-tip condoms are designed to create this space. Make sure that the condom covers your entire penis, and smooth the condom to squeeze out any air bubbles. If you are uncircumcised, pull back your foreskin before putting on the condom. If the condom starts to slip off, you can hold it on with your fingers.

4. Apply plenty of lubricant to the outside of the condom. (Not putting on enough lubricant is one of the major reasons that condoms break.) Use only water-based lubricants such as K-Y jelly or Astroglide. Petroleum-based lubricants such as Vaseline can cause latex condoms, dams, or gloves to disintegrate.

5. After intercourse, withdraw while you are still erect and hold the base of the condom to make sure it does not slip off. Throw away the condom and, especially if you have ejaculated, wash off your penis or put on a new condom before continuing to caress one another.

6. A condom generally slips off or breaks because it wasn't put on correctly, because sex was "too" vigorous, or because the condom was not held during withdrawal. If the condom breaks or comes off and you have not ejaculated or if the tear is near the base of the condom, you probably don't need to worry. Just remove the broken condom and put on a new one. If the condom breaks and you have ejaculated, safer-sex experts recommend that your partner urinate and insert spermicidal foam or jelly into her vagina to help destroy the sperm, viruses, and bacteria. She should leave the spermicide there for at least an hour. If you and your partner are concerned that she will get pregnant, your partner may wish to take the "morning after" pill, which she can obtain from her physician.

THE POWER TO CREATE AND DESTROY

The ease with which AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases spread is the pathological reminder of an essential Taoist insight into the nature of sexual intimacy: lovemaking is a physical and energetic exchange that can profoundly influence the health and well-being of both partners. In our Western emphasis on individuality and independence we have forgotten about this interdependence and interpenetration. The sexual revolution did not fully take into account the significance of this exchange. As sexually transmitted diseases such as herpes and AIDS will not let us forget, we are deeply affected by our sexual histories.

Although Western medicine recognizes that bacteria and viruses can be transmitted during intercourse, it has yet to recognize the rest of the biochemical and energetic exchange that takes place during sex. According to the Taoists, every time you and your partner make love you exchange hormones, enzymes, vitamins, and so on through your sexual secretions. This seems straightforward enough. Through the entwining of your bodies and your engorged genitals, the Taoists also believe, you exchange much more – physically, emotionally, and spiritually. It may be some time before Western science can distill and quantify the various components of this exchange, but if you practice Sexual Kung Fu, you will have the proof of this exchange in your own body.

Caution is an important response to the AIDS epidemic, but the fear that stalks our bedrooms misses the point. Sexuality has always been powerful; intercourse has always had the potential for miraculous creation or tragic destruction. Sex can heal us or hurt us. Respect and even awe, rather than fear, are the appropriate components of a healthy attitude toward sexuality, which the Taoists have always known was the true alchemy, the source of our life and health.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

For Women

This chapter is written for you as the female partner of a man who is practicing Sexual Kung Fu. (Kung fu literally means “practice," so Sexual Kung Fu simply means “sexual practice.”) This chapter will give you a brief explanation of what Taoist sexuality is and how it can help you and your partner have a more pleasurable, healthier, and more intimate love life.

Multiple Orgasms for Men?

The fact that men can have multiple orgasms is still so shocking to most of us, women and men alike, that you may find it hard to believe. As we mentioned in the introduction, it is worth remembering that only in the last forty years have female multiple orgasms been recognized and accepted as normal. Even more incredible is the number of women who have become multi-orgasmic – once they realized it was possible. Since the fifties, when Alfred Kinsey was conducting his famous studies of human sexuality, the percentage of women who experience multiple orgasms has tripled, from 14 percent to over 50 percent.

In the 1980s, sexologists William Hartman and Marilyn Fithian found that about 12 percent of the men they studied were multi-orgasmic. As your partner begins to recognize that he also has this potential and as you help him learn some simple techniques, he too will experience multiple orgasms. One partner of a multi-orgasmic man recalled: “The first time my boyfriend had an orgasm without ejaculating I couldn’t believe it. He was clearly experiencing as much pleasure as usual and I could feel his penis pulsating, but much to my surprise there was no semen and moments later we were able to continue making love. It’s still amazing to me that he can have such intense orgasms without ejaculating. Now I am surprised when he does ejaculate.” Another partner of a multi-orgasmic man described what she experiences when her partner has an orgasm without ejaculating: “My partner stops moving for a moment and moans and trembles. I can feel the strong throbbing of his penis deep inside me. Ordinarily that would be it, but not now.”

Yet multiple orgasms are just the beginning. In the West, we tend to see the "big 0" as the be-all and end-all of sexuality, and many women spend a great deal of time worrying about whether they are orgasmic, when they are orgasmic, and how they are orgasmic. In Taoist sexuality, experiencing an orgasm, one or many, is not the goal. These peaks of pleasure are just part of an ecstatic process of lovemaking. Once you and your partner learn to circulate sexual energy through your bodies, you can experience orgasmic waves of pleasure as often as you like. When you make love, you will experience a depth of intimacy – a physical, emotional, and even spiritual bond – that you may have rarely, if ever, felt before.

Why Me? Why Him? Why This?

Any kind of self-improvement, sexual as much as any other, requires some effort, and this book is written to teach your partner and you in clear, simple terms how to deepen your sexual lives and your relationship to one another.

If your partner has given you this chapter to read, you may be somewhat skeptical about this newfangled sexual practice x and wonder why you (and he) need it. You should know that the Tao (pronounced DOW) of sexuality is anything but new. It is at least a three-thousand-year-old tradition of accumulated wisdom recording how people can make love most pleasurably and most healthfully. Even the most seasoned lover can probably learn something from this treasure trove of experience. Interestingly, in the Taoist tradition most of the sex advisers (including the emperor’s own consultants) were women. How different from the West, where until recently almost all sex advice was given by men – if given at all.

Especially if your sexual relationship is already rich and satisfying, you may be wondering why you need to read a book about "doing what comes naturally.” Though all people have instinctual sexual desire, what we do with this desire and how we maintain and cultivate it over a lifetime are anything but obvious. In the West, we take for granted that couples will lose their passion for one another over the years, but according to the Tao this is not a law of nature and in fact this attraction never needs to wither. (We talk more about this in the final chapter, “Making Love for a Lifetime.”)

If you bought this book for your partner or to learn more about male sexuality, you may be very eager to help your lover become multi-orgasmic. Nonetheless, you may feel that you spend too much time trying to please your partner, and certainly there are many women who do just that. This book, however, is not about your pleasing him. One of the main benefits of Taoist sexuality is that it teaches your partner how he can cultivate his sexual skill and how he can better please you. Though this book is entitled The Multi-Orgasmic Man, it could just as well have been called The Multi-Orgasmic Couple. In the words of one partner of a multi-orgasmic man, "When my husband started practicing Sexual Kung Fu, I began experiencing multiple orgasms much more often. This is a very special gift."

LASTING PLEASURE

In our society, women are told that they need to please their men sexually. In Taoist sexuality, a great many of the techniques were developed to help men please women. In the end, however, one partner's pleasure is inseparable from the other's, according to the Tao. The stereotype of marital relations in our society is of the frigid wife and the ever-desirous husband, but the truth is that there are many women who are more interested in making love than their partners, especially if their partners are being exhausted by sex that focuses on ejaculation.

The image of the unsatisfied woman whose lover ejaculates, grunts, and collapses on top of her is so common it has become a cultural joke. It is no wonder that many women lose interest in sex that is frenetic and lacks real connection, physical and emotional. This, too, is a stereotype, and all surveys show that in recent years men have been trying harder to please their partners and to last longer in bed.

Your lover probably does not grunt or collapse on top of you if he is interested enough in his and your sexuality to read this book, but Taoist masters have long known that it is difficult for men to maintain an interest in satisfying their partners or in being intimate once they have ejaculated. One multi-orgasmic man explained his experience: "After I ejaculated I didn't want to and didn't understand her need to caress and talk after sex. Now that I don't ejaculate, after lovemaking I love for us to lie together and caress each other slowly, almost in sort of a meditation."

BEYOND THE BIG BANG

Fortunately, the Taoists also discovered almost three thousand years ago that orgasm and ejaculation are not the same thing and that men can have orgasms (in fact, multiple orgasms) without ejaculating. This is possible because orgasm and ejaculation are two distinct physical processes, as has more recently been confirmed by Western medical science. The partner of a multi-orgasmic man explained how her husband changed once he learned to orgasm without ejaculating: "My husband used to get tired quickly after he ejaculated. And sometimes he would want to drink alcohol and he would tend to get impatient or annoyed easily. Now he is so energetic and loving.

Male sexuality in the West remains incorrectly focused on the inevitably disappointing goal of ejaculation ("getting off") instead of on the orgasmic process of lovemaking. The Multi-Orgasmic Man teaches your partner how to separate orgasm and ejaculation in his own body, allowing him to move beyond focusing on the momentary release of' ejaculation and to cultivate longer-lasting and more profound levels of sexual pleasure with you. Taoist sexuality will allow your partner to be more sensitive to your body as he becomes more sensitive to his own. By moving beyond the Big Bang theory of sexuality, which has often left women unsatisfied, it also allows men and women to harmonize their sexuality for ever-higher levels of intimacy and ecstasy.

SEXUAL HEALING

Sexual pleasure is, however, just one part of feeling good. Taoist sexuality can also help you and your partner stay healthier and possibly even, believe it or not, live longer. Sexual Kung Fu began as a branch of Chinese medicine, and the ancient Taoists were themselves doctors. As physicians they were concerned as much with the body's physical well-being as they were with its sexual satisfaction. Sexuality was seen as the most potent medicine, both curative and preventive. If you were sick, a Taoist doctor might very well prescribe – in addition to herbs and acupuncture – a two-week regimen of' lovemaking in certain positions. Now that's (to quote Aretha Franklin) Dr. Feel Good in the Morning.

There are other, more obvious benefits. With nonejaculatory lovemaking – in which the man orgasms but does not ejaculate – whatever birth control you use will be even more effective. Equally as important in these days of sexually transmitted diseases and concern over the transfer of bodily fluids, nonejaculatory sex is also safer sex. Whatever other safer-sex precautions you take (using a condom, to take an obvious example) will be all the safer if your partner is not ejaculating. An added benefit is that nonejaculatory sex is less messy – no more wet spots or arguing over who has to sleep on them. Many Women also appreciate not having their partner's semen dripping out of their vagina, As one partner of a multi-orgasmic man put it, "My vagina felt like it was sparkling with my own secretions. I liked not having his sperm dripping out of me all night."

The kind of profound sexual intimacy that Taoist sexuality allows is not a relationship cure-all, or a replacement for other forms of communication, but it can deepen your love. Open and honest communication is an essential part of this practice, and it won't work if you just grin and bear it. There will be moments, as your partner is learning to control his ejaculation, when he asks you to stop moving or to help in some other way, but in general this momentary sacrifice will be rewarded with many, many more moments, minutes, hours of pleasure. However, sex should never be a sacrifice one partner makes for the other, and if necessary, he can always practice the techniques in this book on his own. This solo cultivation" is an important part of the practice and is not regarded with the same stigma that is associated with masturbation in the West. The most important factor in your partner's ability to become multi-orgasmic and in your and his ability to become a multi-orgasmic couple is your support and your sincere desire.

Helping Your Partner Become Multi-Orgasmic

The first thing you need to do before you can help your partner is overcome any resistance you may have to wanting him to become multi-orgasmic or to his doing the Sexual Kung Fu practice.

WILL OUR LOVEMAKING BECOME MECHANICAL? At first many women worry that lovemaking with their partner will become mechanical. As Dr. Barbara Keesling points out in her recent book, How to Make Love All Night (And Drive a Woman Wild), many women fear that the techniques for becoming multi-orgasmic that their partners learn will "turn their stud into a mechanical bull." She testifies that the experience takes a man "into his body, not away from it." As a sex therapist and former sex surrogate who has trained over one hundred men to become multi-orgasmic, she speaks from personal as well as professional experience.

Like learning to play a musical instrument, learning Sexual Kung Fu will take some time and effort and may be a little awkward at first. The best approach is to relax and have fun with it. One multi-orgasmic man described how Taoist sexuality can relax the tension that often exists around sexuality: "It is fun to talk about it; it is fun to laugh about it. It can relax the whole bedroom tension. Because I am talking frankly about my body, women will talk about theirs. I was with one woman who I was telling about my practice and all of a sudden she pulled out her vibrator, and she said, 'I was never going to show this to anyone because I've been so uptight about my sexuality. But I feel I can share anything with you because you were able to share this with me.'And that was really cool."

Most men learn about sex through masturbation and pornography. For whatever reasons – guilt, inexperience, fear of getting caught – most men learn to masturbate quickly. Pornography also generally takes men away from their bodies. It is no surprise then that most men are not very connected to their bodies or aware of their arousal rates. Taoist sexuality teaches men to learn their body's true potential to experience pleasure and to pleasure their partners. Although at first your partner will need to concentrate on learning to control his arousal rate and his urge to ejaculate, once he has this control he will be much better able to concentrate on you and on the profound process of lovemaking you are both engaged in.

DOESN'T A MAN NEED TO EJACULATE TO BE TRULY SATISFIED? Some women feel that pleasing their man means helping him ejaculate. This feeling is not surprising since most men do ejaculate at the end of lovemaking and many women hear from their first partners during the fever of adolescent petting that they will have pain in their genitals (often called blue balls or lover's nuts) if they don't ejaculate. This may be true for the bumping and grinding that often occurs during adolescence, but when your partner practices Sexual Kung Fu, he will no longer have the same need to ejaculate. One multi-orgasmic man explained: "Sometimes during lovemaking, especially if it was long and beautiful, my girlfriend wanted me to ejaculate. Still, I usually didn't ejaculate, and later she would see that there was no need for me to ejaculate and that I could much more deeply satisfy her and myself if I didn't."

After years of' having lovemaking concluded by your partner's ejaculating, however, you may have feelings about his no longer ejaculating every time. At first some women feel that they are less sexy or less capable lovers. Although this feeling is understandable, it is certainly not the case that they are any less sexy or capable, and it won't take long for you to see that your real success as a lover is dependent not on your partner's ejaculation but on his – and your – pleasure.

GETTING HIM HOT

Before you begin learning specific techniques to help your partner, there are a few basics you should know about male sexuality, if you don't already. This section is meant as a brief overview. A longer discussion of the subject appears in a previous chapter. (Also, you will find figure 2 useful in figuring out where everything is.) We tend to think of male sexuality as the penis – and what could be complex or hidden about this most obvious of organs? But the penis is really just the beginning.

Although most men can learn to experience sensation throughout their entire bodies through the whole-body orgasms described in this book, most of a man's sexual sensitivity remains, at least initially, in his groin. As Dr. Alex Comfort writes in his The New Joy of Sex, "Genital approach is how men get into the mood." Lampoon it, rail against it, or excuse it, but the truth is, that's the way it is for most men. The genitals are of central importance to most male sexuality, but the genitals are not simply the penis.

Besides the penis itself, and especially the head of the penis, which has the most nerve endings, the testicles are often very sensitive for a man (although they must be treated more gently than the penis). It is important to keep in mind that your partner may not get an erection or may even lose his erection when his testicles are being stimulated. This does not mean he is not experiencing intense pleasure, but the lack or loss of an erection can often cause him or you to worry. Your conveying to him that you know this is a normal part of his arousal will help him lay these fears to rest.

It is worth keeping in mind that when a man lies on his back, a gravity draws blood away from his erection. If your partner is having trouble getting or maintaining an erection, it is best for him not to be on his back. You can also help him get an erection by encircling the base of his penis with your thumb and forefinger. By squeezing these together in a snug ring, you can help prevent the blood from leaving his erection as you stimulate him with your other hand or mouth.

The perineum, the area between the testicles and anus, is also highly sensitive. The anus, too, is very sensitive, but for many men – as for many women – it is taboo, so approach slowly or ask first. The inner thighs can also be very responsive. Many men also enjoy nipple stimulation and experience nipple erections just like women. Some require persistent, regular stimulation to awaken these nerves, while others never warm to this touch no matter how much they (or you) try.

It is also worth remembering that a man's erection is directly connected to his self-esteem. The famous fragile male ego is all the more fragile in bed. Most men know very little about the bedroom arts and not only worry about what they don't know but feel they are supposed to know everything. As a result, it is best to try not to criticize. If your partner is doing something you don't like, tell him what you would like him to do rather than criticize what he is doing wrong. (Later, away from the heat of passion, you can for future reference tell him what you don't like. Developing an open channel of communication about sex away from the bedroom is very important for a healthy sex life.) Finally, the sound of a woman's genuine pleasure is the greatest aphrodisiac. The more you can share your enjoyment with him, the more he'll know what you like and the more excited he will become. Your sexual pleasure will expand his, as his will yours.

COOLING HIM OFF

Now that we've discussed how to get your partner all hot and bothered, it's time to learn how to cool him off. This is the real challenge for most men, and anything you can do to help will be much appreciated. You can tell when he is approaching the point of no return ("ejaculatory inevitability") by reading his bodily signs. Before your partner can ejaculate, his scrotum will have to draw in close to his body. (This happens less as men get older.) The muscles in his thighs and stomach may also become tense and his body rigid, and his voice or breathing may change.

STOPPING The most important thing you can do to help him keep from going beyond the point of no return is to stop moving when he signals with his voice or body that he is getting too close. Male orgasm takes place just before the precipice of ejaculation. For your partner to become multi-orgasmic, he must learn to experience an orgasm without falling over the edge of ejaculation.

Imagine that your partner is in a hang glider. He is running toward a cliff, and he must learn to take off and soar into nonejaculatory orgasms just before he falls down the steep slope of ejaculation. If you move when he is close to the edge, you may push him over and down into the ravine of postejaculatory stupor. If you are able to stop for a moment while he regains control of his arousal, you will be able to soar together. If he goes over the cliff, he will be lying on the rocks below just as you are ready to take off.

ASKING Helping your partner to be aware of his arousal and his proximity to the point of no return will also help him at first. This does not mean you have to be detached or act as an observer, but simply that you let him know if you notice he is getting too close to the edge. One multi-orgasmic man described how his partner helps: "My girlfriend will ask whether I am close if she sees that I am. And that really helps remind me to be aware of my arousal. You might think that talking about how close I am would interrupt lovemaking, but it never does. It makes it fuller because there is more sharing, there is better communication, which is the key to any relationship whether you are in the bedroom or not."

ENCOURAGING It is better to focus on the process of lovemaking than on not ejaculating. As one multi-orgasmic man explained, "My wife would say, 'Don't come yet.' Well, that would (make me ejaculate more quickly because I would be focusing on ejaculating. What we found is that when she says, 'I feel good' or 'This is great!' this stroking, if you will, of the male ego helps me regain my control and not ejaculate." Any successful coach tells her team what they should do, not what they shouldn't, since the body is more likely to do what the mind is thinking about.

BREATHING Your partner will also be using his breathing to help him control his arousal. When he gets close to ejaculating, he may breathe deeply and slowly or shallowly and quickly. The first helps him control his sexual energy and the second helps him disperse it. Whichever he finds works for him, it is very helpful if you remind him to breathe or breathe with him. Harmonizing your and his breathing is also part of the couples practice which can help the two of you connect with one another more deeply.

CIRCULATING The most important technique your partner will be using to delay ejaculation is the pumping of his sexual energy away from his genitals and up through his spine to the rest of his body. If the sexual energy continues to build up in his groin, it will eventually he too great to control and will shoot out in the most direct way it can – through his penis. However, if he draws this energy away, it will be much easier for him to stop his urge to ejaculate.

Learning to circulate energy through the body is the secret to whole-body orgasms for both of you. You can help your partner circulate his sexual energy by running your hands up his spine from his tailbone to his head, helping him to draw the energy up. In general, as Senior Healing Tao instructor Michael Winn explains, "The more a woman can touch and stroke a man's whole body and help him be less penis oriented, the easier it will be for him to move the energy out of his penis and to other parts of his body." Circulating energy yourself can help intensify your own orgasms and energize you. It will also help you to experience greater intimacy and ecstasy together.

The techniques we have described are essential for helping your partner keep his cool when you are in the throes of passionate lovemaking. You or your partner can also use a number of more mechanical techniques to help him avoid ejaculating as well.

SQUEEZING The squeeze technique was originally developed for men who ejaculate "prematurely." (If your partner ejaculates quickly, be sure you and he read the section called "It's Not Over Till It's Over: Ending Premature Ejaculation".) The squeeze technique is quite simple: when your partner is getting close to ejaculating, you can place your thumb on the underside of his penis and squeeze. Another method is for one of you to grip his penis as you would the handlebar of a bicycle and to press your thumb down on the tip (see figure 8b). You or he can also squeeze the base of his penis between your thumb and first two fingers. Any of these methods will help your partner stop the urge to ejaculate and draw his sexual energy out of his penis and away from his genitals.

The obvious problem with the squeeze technique is that you need to stop intercourse and your partner will need to pull out. In the past, women who practiced the Tao were able to use their vaginal (what we now call the PC) muscle to squeeze the head of their partner's penis, which would also help prevent him from ejaculating. You may want to experiment with this technique as well after reading the section later in this chapter called "Strengthening Your Sex Muscle."

PRESSING The Taoist sages discovered a spot on the perineum, called the Million-Dollar Point, that they found was extremely helpful in stopping men from ejaculating. It was originally called the Million-Gold-Piece Point because that is what it cost a man to have a Taoist master show him where it was. (The Taoist sages were not too holy to get paid.) Your partner's Million-Dollar Point is located just in front of his anus (see figure 2). There should he an indentation at the correct spot. If your partner presses his finger into this spot and contracts his PC muscle, he can help delay ejaculation by focusing his attention and interrupting his ejaculatory reflex. It is important for you to know what he is doing if he starts pushing on his perineum during lovemaking. If you and your partner know each other's bodies well and have a lot of experience in bed together, you can help him delay ejaculation by pressing on this spot during intercourse. You will need to push your finger in up to about your first joint. It is necessary to apply firm (although not too hard), consistent pressure for a moment or two.

Once he has passed the point of no return, your partner can also press on this spot while squeezing his PC muscle to stop the semen from leaving his body and thus avoid losing all of the hormones and nutrients in his semen. This more complex manipulation, which we call the Finger Lock and described is probably best left up to him, but you should know what he is up to. If he uses the Finger Lock to conserve his semen, he will still lose his erection, but many men report that it returns more quickly. Keep in mind that the Finger Lock should not be used as a form of birth control or safer sex, since some semen may leak out.

You can also press your finger rhythmically at the Million-Dollar Point, an action that mimics the prostate contractions he experiences during orgasm and that can be very pleasurable for your partner. However, this rhythmic pressure should not be used when he is close to the edge, for it will very likely push him over into ejaculation.

PULLING Because your partner's testicles have to pull up close to his body in order for the semen to be propelled out of the testes, pulling them away from the body can delay his ejaculating. You can help him by gently pulling down on his testicles. Circle your thumb and forefinger just as you did earlier to help him maintain his erection. Instead of circling the base of his penis, however, this time you will circle the top of his testicles (see figure 9 on page 51). Then you will pull down firmly. (Remember, a man's testicles are extremely sensitive and should be handled with care.)

The more you support your partner's practice, the easier it will be for him and the better your lovemaking will become. As a woman, your sexual ability is naturally stronger than your partner's. The Taoists compare a man's sexual arousal to fire and a woman's to water. Fire is easily ignited but easily extinguished. Water is slow to boil but able to maintain its heat for a long time. Water is always stronger than fire and can easily quench it. The Taoists strive to v teach men how they can last long enough to bring their partner's desire to the boiling point. This ability, they know, is the basis for sexual satisfaction for both partners. In addition to helping your partner control his fire, you can also learn to help bring yourself to the boiling point. Whether you are currently preorgasmic, orgasmic, or multi-orgasmic, the most important thing you can do to help your partner and yourself is to cultivate your own sexuality and to realize your own potential for pleasure.

Helping Yourself Become Multi-Orgasmic

Unlike the male orgasm, which has received very little scrutiny, the female orgasm has been the subject of countless volumes over the last century – most written by men, of course. (We discuss this research and its most important findings in the section called "Her Orgasm".) In the West, much controversy has surrounded the exact nature of the female orgasm – vaginal, clitoral, or a blend of the two. Unfortunately, much of this investigation has really been an attempt to create an "ideal" female orgasm. We believe, along with sexologists Hartman, Fithian, and Campbell, that each woman has an orgasmic pattern that is so individual it can be called her orgasmic fingerprint. We also recognize that, even for the same woman, each orgasm has its own specific characteristics, sensations, and levels of satisfaction. (As men move beyond the Big Bang ejaculatory orgasm, they discover that they can have a variety of orgasms, too.)

As far as women's genital orgasms go, the most recent research suggests that there are actually two different nerves involved: the pudendal nerve, which goes to the clitoris; and the pelvic nerve, which goes to the vagina and uterus (see figure 30). The fact that there are two nerves might explain why many women experience clitoral and vaginal orgasms differently. The fact that the two nerves overlap in the spine may also explain why some women experience "blended" orgasms. According to the Tao, genital orgasms – clitoral, vaginal, or blended – are just the beginning. The Taoists have known all along that you can feel orgasmic pulsations and pleasure in any part of your body – your clitoris, your vagina, your brain, even your internal organs.

YOUR CLITORIS

About 70 percent of all women require some clitoral stimulation to have an orgasm, perhaps because the pudendal nerve, which goes to the clitoris, has more nerve endings than the pelvic nerve to the vagina. In most lovemaking positions, the man directly stimulates the most sensitive part of his penis, the head, while the woman only indirectly stimulates the most sensitive part of her sexual anatomy, the clitoris.

Encouraging your partner, as we do in this book, to stimulate your clitoris during lovemaking is a clear way to help yourself become more orgasmic. Though it may seem a little awkward at first as he is learning to coordinate the rhythm of his fingers with the rhythm of his hips, it will soon become a smooth and satisfying part of your lovemaking. You can also help him by guiding his hand to where you would like it to be and even using your fingers to press his fingers into your clitoris, which will show him the place and the amount of pressure you like. If you are vaginally orgasmic you may not need or want clitoral stimulation all the time when you are making love. Your hand can guide your partner's, depending on what your pleasure calls for.

Some women are bashful about asking for what they want, but many studies have shown that women who are able to ask for or show their partners what they want will much more often get it. Female sexual passivity and reticence are an outdated holdover from Victorian attitudes. There are few things as arousing to a man as an active and excited partner. Passive and active, according to the Tao, are complementary parts of all sexuality, both male and female.

Sometimes it may be easiest for you to help yourself have an orgasm by squeezing your thighs or directly touching your clitoris during lovemaking. You may be interested to know that although we often think of men as able to reach orgasm much faster than women during intercourse, women have actually been shown to be able to orgasm just as quickly as men when they pleasure themselves. According to a study of multi-orgasmic women conducted by sex researchers at the University of Wisconsin, multi-orgasmic women were more likely to "enhance clitoral stimulation during intercourse by thigh pressure or masturbation."' The multi-orgasmic women were also more likely to enjoy having their breasts fondled and their nipples kissed, to give and receive oral sex, to use erotic fantasies, literature, and films, and to have a sensitive partner to whom they could communicate their needs. The study concluded that women don't become multi-orgasmic by accident. They choose the techniques that maximize their pleasure and tell their partners about them.

Many women are ashamed to self-pleasure with their partner or even by themselves. With the amount of stigma surrounding masturbation, this anxiety is quite understandable. If this is an issue for you, please read the section called "Self-Pleasuring and Self-Cultivation". Here let us just say that self-pleasuring is a healthy and important way of cultivating your sexuality that complements lovemaking and does not replace it. Human Sexuality, a book published by the American Medical Association states that women tend to self-pleasure more as they grow older. The more you take an active role in your pleasure, the more likely you are to reach your full sexual potential. In the wise words of one businesswoman in her late fifties, "In life, everyone is responsible for their own orgasm."

There are two factors that generally influence whether a woman is able to have vaginal or blended orgasms as well as clitoral orgasms: the sensitivity of her G spot or other internal spots, and the strength of her PC muscle.

YOUR G SPOT AND OTHER SENSITIVE SPOTS

You may have heard about a place in your vagina that when touched is supposed to drive you wild. This place is often called the G spot, named for physician Ernest Gräfenberg, who first described it in 1950. More recently, it has also been called the inner trigger point and the urethral sponge. Although the idea of the G spot is not new, it is still controversial, some women finding the G spot and others not. The current theory is that the G spot is a collection of glands, ducts, blood vessels, and nerve endings that surround a woman's urethra.

So where exactly is it? Most women who report finding their G spot describe it as located one and a half to two inches from the opening of their vagina. You can feel it through the upper front wall, just behind your pubic bone (see figure 18). If you imagine a clock with your clitoris as twelve o'clock, the G spot is usually somewhere between eleven and one.

When you are not aroused, your G spot is difficult to find. When stimulated, it can swell to the size of a dime or larger, standing out from the wall of the vagina. Alan and Donna Brauer suggest that the best time to find it is just after you have orgasmed: "It is already somewhat enlarged and sensitive. It often feels like little ridges or tiny bumps." They recommend stroking it (or having your partner stroke it) at the rate of about once a second and experimenting with both lighter and heavier pressure. Another good time to stimulate the G spot is when you are just approaching orgasm, since you are more likely to enjoy G-spot stimulation once you are already highly aroused.

You should be aware that some women feel initial discomfort or the urge to urinate when their G spot is stimulated. This is normal. If it happens to you, the Brauers suggest lightening your touch or telling your partner to lighten his. It may take as much as a minute for the discomfort or seeming need to urinate to be replaced with pleasurable sensations. If you are concerned about urinating, you might urinate before lovemaking or try finding the G spot while sitting on the toilet, which will allow you to feel confident that your bladder is empty.

In the common face-to-face or missionary position, your partner's penis often misses your G spot completely. It is easier for your partner to stimulate it if you lie on your stomach and your partner enters you from behind, or if you are on top, where you can position yourself for maximum pleasure. Shallow thrusting is also best for stimulating the G spot. However, fingers (yours or his) are usually the most direct and effective way to get to the G spot at first.

Some women report that their most sensitive spots are located at the four o'clock and eight o'clock positions about midway back along the walls of the vagina. There are nerve bundles at these locations, which may explain their sensitivity to pressure. Other women find that they are most sensitive at the back of their vagina. As your partner learns shallow and deep thrusting in different directions (what we call screwing), he will be able to stimulate these spots and others that are all your own.

Most women are able to rotate their pelvis when they are on top to direct their partner's penis to their most sensitive spots. As we discussed, there are many benefits to this woman-on-top position, and not only for the woman, since many men have an easier time learning to be multi-orgasmic when they are on the bottom. However, this position also has its disadvantages: the angle of penetration in this position can make your partner's penis seem as much as an inch shorter than in other positions, and it is more difficult for your partner to maintain an erection for an extended period of time, since gravity tends to draw blood out of his penis. When women are on the bottom, they often do not realize that they can actively rotate their pelvis, and especially their sacrum, to guide their partner's penis to their most sensitive spots. Once you and your partner learn to rock 'n' roll your pelvises, you will really be "dirty" dancing. (For a longer discussion about various lovemaking positions, see the section called "Positions for Pleasure and Health".)

YOUR SEX MUSCLE

Your sex muscle, or pubococcygeus muscle (often simply called the PC muscle), is the muscular sling that stretches from your pubic bone in front to your tailbone in back (see figure 31), encircling your urethra, vagina, and anus. It forms a sling that supports not only your uterus, fallopian tubes, and ovaries, but all of your internal organs. If your PC muscle isn't strong, you have no foundation for your organs and they can begin to sag.

Most women will recognize the PC as the muscle they use to stop themselves from urinating when they can't find a toilet. It is also the perineal muscle that must be strong and flexible to avoid tearing during childbirth. Still, the strain of childbirth can weaken your PC muscle. As Senior Healing Tao instructor and acupuncturist Dr. Angela Shen explains, "Especially after a woman has a baby, she has a tendency to get tired more easily and not to enjoy sex as much. Not all women, but many." For these women, Sexual Kung Fu can help them regain their energy and sexual strength.

The importance of the PC muscle was discovered in the West during the 1940s by Arnold Kegel, a gynecologist. He developed the famous Kegel (pronounced KAY-gul) exercises, which helped many women control their bladders and ease childbirth. Later, women began to use these exercises to increase their sexual desire, intensify their orgasms, and become multi-orgasmic. Dr. Shen points out: "All women can experience more orgasms and expand the ones they have by doing these practices."

FINDING YOUR PC MUSCLE

The easiest way to find your PC muscle is to stop the flow of urine by clamping down the muscles in your pelvis the next time you are urinating. Make sure you keep your stomach and legs relaxed. You want to try to isolate your PC muscle. If you have a strong PC muscle, you should be able to stop the flow of urine midstream and then start it again. If this is difficult for you and some urine dribbles out during your contraction, your PC muscle is weak, Not to worry: it will quickly strengthen with practice. If you find it easy to stop and start your urine flow, your PC muscle is strong. Nonetheless, you will still expand your sexual pleasure and your overall health by practicing PC exercises.

Strengthening this muscle will not only improve your sex life, but will also help you avoid bladder problems in the future (or improve bladder problems that you may already have). Stopping the flow of urine may sting at first. This is a perfectly normal reaction and should stop within a few weeks, unless for some reason you have an infection, in which case you should wait until you have seen a doctor and cleared it up before continuing with the practice. If your muscles become sore, you just need practice.

PARTNER EXERCISE 1

STOPPING THE STREAM

1. Exhale slowly and forcefully, pushing out the urine.
2. Inhale and contract your PC muscle to stop the flow of urine midstream. (Make sure your stomach and legs are relaxed.)
3. Exhale and start urinating again.
4. Repeat steps 2 and 3 four or five times or until you have finished urinating.

PARTNER EXERCISE 2

PC PULL-UPS

1. Inhale and concentrate on your vagina.
2. As you exhale, contract your PC muscle and the muscles around your eyes and mouth.
3. Inhale and relax, releasing your PC, eye, and mouth muscles.
4. Repeat, contracting your muscles as you exhale and releasing them as you inhale, nine to thirty-six times.

STRENGTHENING YOUR SEX MUSCLE

There are many different exercises for strengthening your PC muscle that have been taught in the West, most of them adaptations of Kegel's original technique. All of these teach you to contract and relax the PC muscle, although the number of repetitions and the amount of time they suggest you hold the contractions vary widely. The PC Pull-Ups exercise is based on a traditional Taoist technique. It also uses the Taoist awareness that the circular muscles of the body (those in your eyes, mouth, perineum, and anus) are connected. By squeezing the muscles around your eyes and mouth, you can increase the force of your PC Pull-Ups.

Although contracting your eyes and lips will help you squeeze your PC muscle around your vagina, the most important part of the practice is simply contracting and releasing your PC muscle as often as you can, which you can do practically anywhere – while driving, while watching TV, while sending a fax, while in a boring meeting. You can see how many contractions you can do during a red light, or you can hold a single contraction until the light turns green.

Eventually you will be able to do the contractions with less effort and without contracting your eyes and lips. Try to do the exercise at least two or three times a day, although you can do it is as many times as you like. Your muscles may get sore, just as they do after you do any exercise. Don't push yourself too far; just increase the repetitions gradually. Consistency is more important than quantity. One way to develop a daily routine is to connect your practice to daily events, like getting up in the morning, taking a shower, or lying in bed at night.

Another, even more effective way to strengthen your PC muscle is to squeeze the muscle against something – your finger, your partner's finger, a vibrator, a dildo, or your partner's penis. The resistance will help you better squeeze the muscle. Try squeezing your fist. You can tighten it only so much, but if you try squeezing your fist around a finger or two of your other hand, you will be able to tighten it even more. The same concept applies to your PC muscle. If you are practicing with a partner, you can squeeze on your partner's finger or penis and he can tell you how strong your PC muscle is. If you are having intercourse, each of you can alternate squeezing your PC muscles. When you contract yours, you will tighten around his penis and increase sensations for both of you. When he squeezes his, he will raise his erection toward his belly and possibly stimulate your G spot. Another highly enjoyable practice is for you to relax your PC muscle when you thrust together and then tighten your PC muscle when you separate. This will increase the feeling of suction during intercourse and can be very arousing for both of you.

STRENGTHENING YOUR ENTIRE VAGINA

In China, women used a special egg-shaped stone to strengthen their PC and other vaginal muscles. We have found jade stone, shaped like an egg, to be best. Doing PC Pull-Ups will certainly strengthen your PC muscle considerably, but you can accelerate the process dramatically by using a stone egg for resistance. In the West, physicians are now prescribing exercises with stainless-steel weights, called weighted tampons, to strengthen women's pelvic muscles, especially for women who have trouble controlling their bladder, often after childbirth.' But childbirth and pelvic health are not the only reasons to do the egg practice. Women who are knowledgeable in the Tao have used this practice for millennia to increase their vaginal-muscle control for increasing their and their partner's sexual pleasure.

PARTNER EXERCISE 3

STRENGTHENING YOUR ENTIRE VAGINA

1. Insert a stone egg while standing or sitting. (If you do not feel sufficiently lubricated, you can moisten the egg with water, saliva, or a water-soluble lubricant (for example, K-Y jelly).
2. Contract your PC muscle to pull the egg into your vagina and then bear down slightly and push the egg out toward the opening of your vagina.
3. Repeat this in-and-out movement nine, eighteen, or thirty-six times.
4. When you are done, bear down more forcefully and expel your egg.

The egg practice is quite simple. You insert a lubricated egg into your vagina (as you would a tampon) and then use your vaginal muscles to move it up and down. Once the egg is deeper inside, you may not feel it at all, but you can continue moving the egg up and down by squeezing your perineum and vagina to move the egg up and then bearing down slightly (as you would to have a bowel movement) to move the egg back down (see figure 32). Then you can squeeze your perineum and vagina to push it up once again and then push it back down. You can do this exercise for two minutes and then, bearing down more forcefully, expel the egg.

Senior Healing Tao instructor Marcia Kerwit explains how to prepare and take care of your stone egg: “When you get your egg home, you first want to sterilize it, which you can do by boiling it for ten minutes or soaking it in a solution of one part household bleach to ten parts of water for ten minutes. Rinse it well. You need to sterilize your egg only the first time you use it. After that, you can rinse it off with soap and water after each use, or just soak it in a vinegar solution.”

You can order a drilled jade egg from the Healing Tao Center, which will allow you to loop dental floss through your egg and leave the floss hanging outside your vagina, so that after practicing you can pull it out easily, just like a tampon. One advantage of using the drilled egg with the dental-floss tail is that as you move your egg up and down in your vagina, you can feel the string moving as well, so you will feel that it is actually moving and how far. (You will find more details about the egg exercise and other Sexual Kung Fu exercises for women in Healing Love Through the Tao: (cultivating Female Sexual Energy)

FINDING THE WAY

What If...

MY EGG IS STUCK

If you use an egg without a string, it may occasionally feel like it’s stuck. If this happens, the most important thing is not to panic. Remember, the egg can’t go very far. Calmly, see if your vagina feels dry inside. If so, you can use your finger to put some more (water-based) lubricant in your vagina and around the opening. Try squatting down or sitting on the toilet and bearing down to push the egg out. If the egg still does not come out, you can try jumping up and down and laughing. Then try squatting and bearing down again. If the egg still has not come out, go do something else.

During this time, your muscles will relax and the egg will most likely move on its own and be easier to expel. Finally, you can insert your finger (or, more easily, a friend or partner can insert one) and direct the egg out. This should allow you to get the egg out, but if you are still having a problem, call a Healing Tao instructor. If you use a drilled egg that has string looped through it, you will never have this problem.

MY EGG SMELLS FUNNY WHEN I TAKE IT OUT

An unusual smell to your secretions could indicate a vaginal infection. This has nothing to do with using the egg, but you should not do the egg exercises (or the Big Draw) until the infection is gone. There are many simple home remedies for vaginal infections. Speak to someone at a women’s clinic or to a health practitioner.

You may find that doing these exercises and strengthening your PC muscle in general can cause you to become sexually aroused. The reason to develop your PC muscle in the first place is to reach your orgasmic potential, and if your partner is a multi-orgasmic man, you should have no problem satisfying your increased desire. If you do not have a partner or your partner is not around, you can either pleasure yourself or use the Big Draw exercise described later in this chapter to move your sexual energy away from your genitals and to the rest of your body, where it will energize and rejuvenate you.

DEEP VAGINAL AND UTERINE ORGASMS

As we mentioned earlier, women have two different genital nerves: the pudendal, which connects to the clitoris and surrounding skin; and the pelvic, which connects to the vagina and the uterus. With some awareness and a little practice women can experience deep vaginal and uterine contractions. One multi-orgasmic woman described her experience: “First, I practiced by myself. I would tighten and release my vaginal muscles and then move these contractions up toward my uterus. Soon, the contractions would begin involuntarily during lovemaking. They were truly incredible."

These extremely pleasurable and powerful orgasms were well known in China to women who practiced the Tao and who were able to control their vaginal and uterine muscles through the egg practice. In the 1980s the Brauers studied these deep pelvic “push-out” contractions, which they called “extended sexual response." They even noticed from electrical brain recordings (EEGs) that a woman’s brain waves during these uterine orgasms seemed to resemble those observed in people who are in deep meditation. The Taoists have always taught women that they can help themselves experience these profound orgasms by developing their awareness of and connection to their deep vaginal and uterine muscles.

PARTNER EXERCISE 4

DEEPENING YOUR ORGASMS

1. Picture what your uterus looks like (see figure 33). When you are able to envision a part of your body, you are able to make a stronger connection to it, linking your mind and your body.

2. Next find out where your uterus is located. Stand and place your thumbs together at your navel and make a triangle with your index fingers (see figure 34). Where your index fingers touch is approximately the level of your uterus. Your uterus is the size of a small plum. (Where your little fingers naturally fall is approximately where your ovaries are.)

3. Inhale, and as you exhale contract your eyes and your mouth lightly and feel the back of your vagina deep inside you contracting (where your cervix is). When you do this correctly, you will have a light orgasmic feeling deep inside you.

CIRCULATING SEXUAL ENERGY

If you learn to circulate energy yourself, you will be able to expand your orgasms throughout your body. Dr. Angela Shen explains: "If you draw energy up before and during your orgasm it will be more intense and last longer. You will also be less tired afterward." Circulating sexual energy brings healing energy to your entire body and allows you and your partner to have truly ecstatic lovemaking. This ability to circulate sexual energy is the basis for both transcendent sexuality and vibrant health. (If you ejaculate it is even more important that you practice conserving and circulating this energy, because otherwise you will become drained.)

The Big Draw for Women exercise will help you circulate your sexual energy through your body. Many women are able to start drawing the energy up without much practice. As one multi-orgasmic man recalls, "Without having had any meditation practice or experience, my girlfriend was able to draw up the energy in her body instinctively, as apparently many women are."

Overcoming Difficulty

As we discuss in the section called “Brain Waves and Reflexes”, Western science has recently confirmed that orgasm is as much a state of mind as a state of body. And the state of your mind has much to do with what you learn. Back in 1939, anthropologist Margaret Mead demonstrated how much orgasm is dependent on cultural expectations. She compared two neighboring peoples living on the Pacific island of New Guinea. The Mundugumor believed that women have orgasms, whereas their neighbors the Arapash did not. Not surprisingly, most Mundugumor women were orgasmic, whereas most Arapash women were not. Given the importance of cultural permission for pleasure, many women around the globe and throughout history have had their orgasmic potential limited by societal expectations.

Women generally have one of two kinds of orgasmic problems. If you have never had an orgasm, you are preorgasmic. If you orgasm on some occasions but not others, by yourself but not with a partner, or with some partners but not others, you are situationally orgasmic. Almost all women who are preorgasmic can learn to have orgasms fairly easily. The most important factor is a willingness to learn to pleasure yourself and to take charge of your pleasure during lovemaking. First, of course, you must be willing to stimulate yourself'. (If this is difficult for you, see the discussion earlier in this chapter and in the section called “Self-Pleasuring and Self-Cultivation".)

First, you need to begin by getting acquainted with your body and your sexuality. Negative feelings about your body or how you look during lovemaking can distract you and short-circuit your ability to experience pleasure and have an orgasm. Start by taking a non-critical look at yourself in the mirror. Appreciate your body for its beauty and its ability to give you pleasure. Then start to explore your body. Be sure to stroke your entire body before focusing on your genitals. You may want to use oil, which can magnify the stimulation. Sex therapists are fond of pointing out that your brain is your most important sex organ, so be sure to put yourself into an erotic frame of mind. You may wish to remember a particularly satisfying experience of lovemaking, to read erotica, or to create a fantasy out of your own imagination’s rich storehouse of fantasies and desires.

PARTNER EXERCISE 5

THE BIG DRAW FOR WOMEN

1. Picture your vagina and clitoris. If you don't know what they look like, use a mirror and have a look.
2. Lightly touch the lips of your vagina and your clitoris until you are starting to get aroused.
3. Inhale, and as you exhale, lightly contract your vagina, squeezing around your clitoris.
4. Inhale and release, imagining your vagina expanding like a flower blossoming.
5. Repeat exhaling and contracting, then inhaling and releasing, nine to thirty-six times.
6. Imagine your uterus and ovaries also opening and closing like flowers blossoming.
7. When you feel your sexual energy expanding, relax and bring the energy to your tailbone and sacrum and then up your spine to your brain (see figure 35). Or if you are having difficulty bringing the energy up, try contracting your vagina and your anus as you direct the orgasmic feeling back to your tailbone and sacrum and then up the spine to your brain. (If you still do not feel your energy moving up, you may want to try activating your sacral and cranial pumps.)
8. Let the orgasmic energy flow down through the rest of your body or direct it to any part of your body that needs healing or strengthening.

According to both Kinsey and Hite, four out of five women who self-pleasure rely on clitoral stimulation to experience an orgasm. The type of clitoral stroke depends on you: hard or soft, stimulation of the shaft or head, up and down, side to side, or circular touch. Experiment and see what you find pleasurable. You may also find that a vibrator can help you reach orgasm. Find one that you like. Almost all women can learn to orgasm through self-pleasuring. Remember that all orgasms are not the same. Many orgasmic women think they are not so because they expect their orgasm to match someone else's pattern or to involve the earth moving and the stars tumbling down. According to Lonnie Barbach, "Most women's initial experience of orgasm is mild, while their expectations reflect the proverbial fireworks." She adds that vaginal orgasms can be very diffuse and tame while clitoral orgasms tend to be more discrete and recognizable.

When you are ready to "go public," let your partner stimulate you in the ways you have found you enjoy. Make sure to tell him what you like or to show him. When you are ready, try intercourse. Remember that you can take responsibility for your own pleasure. Position yourself where you find the best stimulation and continue to touch yourself or guide your partner's hand to your clitoris. During intercourse, guide your partner's penis with your pelvis to where you feel the greatest stimulation.

If you have had orgasms at some point in your life but no longer do, you need to determine what has changed. Is your health different? Are you suffering from an infection or taking medication that might decrease your arousal? Many women experience reduced arousal during pregnancy or while breast-feeding, although others do not. If you think the problem is physical, consult a physician. Certain drugs and certain conditions, such as diabetes, can inhibit orgasm. Has your partner changed? Or has your relationship changed in some way? Do you have feelings of anger or resentment that you are not expressing? Are you distracted by children or work? It is important to address any or all of these situations before you work on expanding your pleasure.

If you are orgasmic when self-pleasuring but not when making love, you may need to determine what you are not getting with your partner. Are you too focused on his pleasure Are you too self-conscious? Are you not getting fully aroused? Try extending foreplay and making sure that you are totally aroused before intercourse, or forget about intercourse for the time being and focus on pleasuring each other with your hands and mouths. Orgasming before you have intercourse also will make it easier for you to orgasm when you are having intercourse.

If you are able to experience orgasm through manual or oral loving but not through intercourse, are you experiencing pain during intercourse? If so, are you lubricated enough? Are you able to choose the angle and amount of thrusting? If not, try another position. If pain is not the problem but you are still not orgasmic during intercourse, have your partner use his hands or mouth to bring you to orgasm before you engage in a coital embrace. Also explore or let your partner explore your G spot or other sensitive spots. Try the positions – you on top, rear entry, sitting in his lap – that tend to stimulate the G spot most. And remember to use your trusty fingers, with or without his, to reach orgasm.

If you are still unable to have an orgasm, do not despair. There are lots of resources for preorgasmic women, including books, groups, and counseling. In addition, you should know that with Taoist sexuality you can experience extremely high levels of pleasure throughout your entire body whether you have orgasms or not. Learning to circulate sexual energy and pleasure throughout your body will allow you to experience a fusion of energy with yourself and your partner that makes the "Did you or didn't you?" question largely irrelevant. More important than reaching orgasm or becoming multi-orgasmic is learning to experience the heights of pleasure and intimacy that come from the true union of body, heart, mind, and spirit.

Yang and Yang For Gay Men

China, like all civilizations, has long acknowledged the practice of homosexuality. Historically it was called lung-yang, after the name of a fourth-century B.c. prince's male lover, or tuan-hsiu, "the cut sleeve," recalling an emperor who was said to have cut off his sleeve to avoid waking his sleeping lover. Although sexual relationships between men were at times condoned and at other times discouraged by the imperial court – no doubt depending on who was sleeping in the royal bed – Taoism has never condemned homosexuality. Taoism avoids condemning any part of human sexual experience, since it is all considered a part of the Tao. Rather, Taoism tries to teach people how to stay healthy, whatever their sexual preferences. Gay men simply need to know the practices that will help them have satisfying and healthy sexual relationships.

Can't Stop Till I Get Enough

A gay writer and activist was doing a radio interview about his book on life in the pre-AIDS bathhouses, where gay men often would have numerous sexual encounters per night. When asked about whether the desire for multiple sexual experiences is characteristic of gay men in general, the author shot back that it is characteristic of all male sexuality, but that straight men are usually constrained by female sexuality. If, he continued, we really want to see what male sexuality is like, uninfluenced by female sexuality, we just need to look at gay men.

The Taoist understands this characteristic of male sexuality in terms of the properties of masculine energy, or yang (see chapter 5 for an explanation of yin and yang). Yang is active, volatile, and expansive. During heterosexual sex, the woman's yin receives and balances the man's yang. (As we mentioned in chapter 5, yin and yang are variable qualities that exist in both men and women. There are some men who are more yin and some women who are more yang. According to the Taoists the universe always seeks balance in relationships as in nature.)

In general, when two gay men make love, each man's yang charges the other's, increasing rather than diminishing their sexual desire. Gay Healing Tao instructor B. J. Santerre explains the value of multiple orgasms for gay men: "Gay men really need multiple orgasms. Most straight men are going to do it once or twice in an evening. For gay men it's really common that they need more than that in a night. With this practice you are going to be able to fully satisfy this desire whether you have a partner or not."
The expansiveness of yang energy is hard to contain and often will want to escape through the most direct route – the penis. It is no surprise that the object of much gay male sexuality, according to gay sex educator and healer Joseph Kramer, is "to get it up and off." This emphasis on ejaculation is understandable because it allows you to satisfy your sexual desire; once a man ejaculates he becomes more yin – in other words, stable, internal, and contractive.

To avoid this endless cycle of ejaculation, which is extremely depleting to your body and your immune system, you need to cultivate your own yin energy and to spread your expanding yang energy throughout your body. Channeling this energy and containing it is also, as we explained earlier, the way to become multi-orgasmic and to experience whole-body orgasms that will be more satisfying than the genital "getting off" that most men are accustomed to. As B. J. Santerre explains, "If you conserve your semen, you are going to be able to go back to the heydays when people would go to the bathhouses and have orgasms all night long. When you learn this practice, you are able to do the same thing, but you won't exhaust yourself and you won't even need to leave home!"

Cultivating Your Sexual Energy

Gay men, like all men, need to learn to circulate their sexual energy though their body both to expand their orgasms and to benefit from the power and healing potential of their sexual energy. During nonejaculatory sex, it is even more important for men to draw this energy up in order to satisfy their desire and transform the volatile sexual energy (ching-chi) into the more refined and stable chi. We discussed the techniques for circulating your sexual energy and for separating orgasm from ejaculation. Here we just want to describe the importance of these practices for gay men and gay male couples.

One multi-orgasmic gay man described his experience: "I had a lover in New York, and I was so much into the Tao, I said, 'You have to get into it.' I didn't give him a choice. When we felt like fooling around, we'd start playing with one another. When each of us would feel ready we would do the Big Draw at our own speed. When we did it together, even if we didn't circulate the energy at the same time, we would be satisfied at the same point. We would fall asleep in two minutes. That sharing of energy keeps going on as you sleep in one another's arms, because you are both charged with sexual energy."

As we said these practices can be done on your own or even if your partner is not "into the Tao." As one multi-orgasmic gay man explained, "After pleasing myself or making love and doing the Big Draw four or five times, I am done. After that if the most gorgeous guy is right in front of me and he says, 'Let me suck you off,' I'll say, 'Please, leave me alone.' I'm satisfied even though I haven't ejaculated."

If you find you are having difficulty controlling your yang sexual energy, you may be in need of some balancing and calming yin energy. Fortunately, there are many sources of yin energy, since both yin and yang exist in all of nature, from the cosmic (earth and heaven) to the microcosmic (your body). Since each of us has both yin and yang, you can cultivate within yourself the qualities of yin such as gentleness, kindness, and self-respect. (For a fuller discussion of learning how to cultivate these qualities and how to deal with emotional imbalances, see Mantak Chia's Taoist Ways to Transform Stress into Vitality.) From the environment, you can balance your energy by eating yin foods such as vegetables and fish or by absorbing yin energy directly from the earth. According to Taoism (as well as many other traditions), the earth is feminine (that is, yin). Men can absorb yin energy from the earth simply through spending time in nature and gardening or can absorb it in a more concentrated form by drawing energy up from the earth when practicing the Cool Draw.

Being Versatile

Most gay men are aware of the pleasure potential of their prostate and their anus (if you are not, see "Prostate" in chapter 2). Yet some gay men still disparage men who are "bottoms." This attitude is not surprising given the negative stigma associated with "getting fucked" and the links in Western society between power and being on top. As we mentioned in chapter 5 in regard to heterosexual couples, Taoism sees the person on top not as dominating but as healing his or her partner. The person on top (or the more active partner) gives more sexual energy (and healing) to the person on the bottom (or the more passive partner).
According to the Tao, everything that is active must also be passive, and therefore it is recommended that gay men be versatile – both "tops" and "bottoms." As one multi-orgasmic man explained, the sexual benefits are obvious: "A guy who has been both a top and a bottom is a great lover because he knows what it is like to satisfy his partner and to be satisfied. If you are only a top, you know only one version. The same if you are a bottom."

When you are the bottom, you also have the benefit of having your prostate massaged during anal intercourse. According to Stephen T. Chang in his book The Tao of Sexology, gay men who generally are bottoms have far fewer prostate problems than tops and heterosexual men.' Nevertheless, most men have their preference and may not want to experiment.

If you are a top who is not willing to be a bottom, you can still benefit from having your anus stimulated and from exercising your anal-sphincter muscle. B. J. Santerre explains: "When people think about penetration, everybody just thinks about a big ten-inch dick or a dildo, but it can be a small finger. Being penetrated needs some practice, like everything else. You need the proper partner to take it easy, and you need to relax those muscles. It's not on the first day that you are going to get fucked. And if you don't like to be penetrated, you can still play with your anus. Even stimulating the outside of the anus is very important because you can strengthen your butt muscles, which are essential for circulating the sexual energy.

It is also worth mentioning that bottoms can be active as well as passive. The more you exercise your PC muscle and your anal sphincter, the more you can massage your partner's penis and pleasure both of you. B. J. Santerre continues: "If your anus is really strong, you are going to be a great fuck for your partner. You are going to massage his penis as he is penetrating you. You are not totally passive and just waiting for it to happen. You take part in it by contracting and releasing the lower part or the higher part. You can contract it really fast two or three times in a row or just let your partner get a little bit deeper and surprise him by squeezing it."

Gay and straight men who are just beginning to experiment with anal stimulation sometimes worry that they may tear the skin of the anus or the colon. The solution here is simply to use enough lubrication and to have a gentle partner. Other gay men worry whether repeated anal sex will weaken their anal sphincter. There is no evidence to suggest that this is the case, and anal sex may in fact strengthen the muscles of your anus. Nonetheless, if you are concerned or feel that your anal muscles are weak, you can try the sphincter exercise to strengthen them.

Monogamy and Multiple Partners

The age of AIDS has fostered a new ethic of monogamy for gay men ca (as well as heterosexuals). Assuming you are using safer-sex techniques, however, there is nothing inherently wrong with multiple partners. The Taoist texts actually instructed heterosexual men about the benefits of a number of partners. But there is a challenge with multiple partners: the practices given in this book require a profound connection of body, heart, mind, and spirit, which is difficult to achieve with even one partner, let alone many. According to the Tao, one profound sexual union, gay or straight, is better than countless superficial ones.

The anonymous sex that has characterized much Western sexuality is diametrically opposed to the kind of physical, emotional, and spiritual connection that Sexual Kung Fu facilitates and requires. Whether you are exchanging bodily fluids or not, you are always exchanging energy. So choose a partner (or partners) wisely.

Safer Sex

Most gay men are highly aware of the need for safer sex and are well informed about the specifics of safer-sex techniques, so we will not discuss the subject at length here. (Should you want more detail about the art and science of condom use and other tricks of the safer-sex trade, see the section called "When to Start: A Few Words About Safer Sex".) Suffice it to say that we strongly recommend safer sex and that in fact the kind of nonejaculatory sex advocated by the Tao has obvious benefits for reducing the exchange of bodily fluids.

With nonejaculation, not only do you decrease the outflow, you also decrease the inflow. As we mentioned when you pump out your semen, you create a low-pressure vacuum that draws in liquid or anything else in the environment, such as bacteria or viruses (just as a turkey baster draws up gravy when you squeeze out the air). So when you don't ejaculate, you run less of a risk of drawing in bacteria or viruses. (As you can imagine, this is especially important for anal sex, since the colon naturally has a great many bacteria.)

Bear in mind that even when you practice Sexual Kung Fu, a small amount of ejaculate is often emitted, so you should not forgo other safer-sex precautions.

Sexual Healing

Most people do not understand the healing potential of sexuality. The Taoists have always recognized that sex can both hurt and heal us. Genital sexuality that culminates in ejaculation is draining to the body. As Joseph Kramer has pointed out, we build up life-giving sexual energy in our groin, but instead of bringing this energy up to our brain and heart, where it can begin to help heal us, we clamp down by tightening our chest muscles and holding our breath. With nowhere to go, this energy is stuck in our groin and eventually becomes too great to be contained and forces its way out of our penis as we ejaculate.

In Sexual kung Fu, you stay very close to the point of no return and even feel the orgasmic contractions, but you do not ejaculate. You do this by learning about your arousal rate, using the techniques described in chapter 3, and, most important, drawing the energy away from your genitals up through your spine and the rest of your body.

Once you have built up this energy, you can also exchange it with your partner. This energy exchange profoundly affects the health and well-being of both partners and takes place even through the walls of latex that we now must necessarily put between us. It is only our Western isolation and individualism that wrongly lead us to believe we can engage in sex without this intimacy and interpenetration. But if we look at the very definition of the word intercourse, we find its meaning to be very close to the Taoist understanding: "connection," "exchange," "communion."

Unfortunately, instead of using the appropriate yardstick for sex, which is health, we in the West have used a moral measure. This approach has led us to size up sex according to criteria such as pleasure/pain and purity/perversity, depending on the censors' own predilections. Over the centuries, gay sex, along with much other sexuality, including self-pleasuring, has been defined as perverse, sinful, sick, and unnatural. Saint Augustine and Thomas Aquinas went so far as to call all sexuality that does not lead to conception unnatural.

Because the Taoists were able to see in sex a powerful source of the body's life-sustaining energy, chi, they were able to recognize its importance to the overall health of our body, our emotions, our mind, and our spirit. Since the 1980s, we have been tragically reminded of sex's ability to bring illness, but in our frenzy of fear we z have forgotten sex's ability to make us well.

Cultivating your sexual energy is therefore especially important if you are living with HIV or AIDS, Many people who are confronting life-threatening illnesses lose their appetite for sex. But this is the very time when they need their sexual energy the most. B. J. Santerre, who has been living with HIV for eleven years, explains: "Sexual energy is so important for the flow of energy in the body that you cannot afford to not use it. Waking up with an erection is an important sign of vitality that many men who are sick no longer experience. When you wake up with a hard-on, you will know your health is improving."

For men (and women) who are sick with AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases, there are often two additional resistances to utilizing the healing power of sexuality: guilt ("I got it through sex") and fear ("I don't want to get others sick"). These feelings are understandable but misguided. Similarly, having gotten sick through sex doesn't mean you don't need the healing power of your sexuality. People who get sick through the air or from food do not stop breathing or eating. If you are afraid of getting others sick, you can take comfort in the fact that nonejaculatory sex, as we mentioned earlier, makes safer sex even safer. If you remain concerned, you can still do the solo Sexual Kung Fu.

It goes without saying that according to the Tao, it is all the more important to conserve your semen when you are confronting a life-threatening disease or any serious sexual illness. As B. J. Santerre explained, "We don't have a cure for AIDS yet, but we do know that some people die right away and others live a long time. When your body is having to make new sperm, it is not going to be making white blood cells."

When you are using Sexual Kung Fu to help heal serious illness, it is essential that you give your body time to “digest” this growing energy. As one multi-orgasmic man, who had overcome a serious health problem, explained, “The sexual energy is very healing, but this healing process is a lot of work for your body. It can even be uncomfortable in the beginning. Old symptoms may come back.” Develop your practice slowly as you learn to work with this powerful healing force within your body. In addition to Sexual Kung Fu, you can gain great benefit from the other Taoist healing arts. (See the appendix for a listing of additional Healing Tao books and resources.)

Before You Call the Plumber

At some point in our lives, most of us experience some kind of sexual problem. You may find yourself ejaculating quickly with a new partner or having difficulty getting an erection with an old one. It is most important to recognize that these are temporary frustrations that reflect the different seasons of our lives and relationships.

In the West, we have a tendency to get fixated on often unhelpful labels like premature ejaculation and impotence, which cripple a man's self-esteem and his ability to deal with the changes in his sexuality in an easy, relaxed, and even lighthearted way. A sense of humor is often the best antidote to the overly serious way in which we deal with "sexual problems." The biggest danger, as Masters and Johnson and other sex therapists have pointed out, is getting caught in the cycle of "fear-failure-shame-fear" that often causes these difficulties to take up residence in our bedroom. So, even if you are not currently troubled by one of the following concerns, it is a good idea to read this section so that you will know what to expect and how to deal with these unwelcome guests should they someday crash the party.

It's Not Over Till It's Over: Ending Premature Ejaculation

According to Taoist sexuality, there is really no such thing as "premature ejaculation." We don't say this to put sex therapists and sex surrogates out of business, or to deny that many men ejaculate too soon to satisfy their partners, or for that matter themselves. The point is simply that from the Taoist standpoint, the vast majority of men ejaculate "prematurely." According to Sexual Kung Fu, you should be able to choose when you want to ejaculate, so any unwanted ejaculation is premature. Moreover, if ejaculation is no longer the goal, and you can have orgasms without ejaculation, then most ejaculations are by definition premature, or at least superfluous.

So the question is not whether you can last for a certain number of minutes on the stopwatch but whether you and your partner are satisfied with the duration of your lovemaking. If you practice the exercises you will learn to postpone your ejaculation for as long as you and your partner wish.

If the problem persists or is especially troublesome, you might want to seek professional help. A sex therapist or sex surrogate will help you figure out if there are deeper psychological reasons you are ejaculating quickly (for example, fear of getting caught," fear of losing your erection, and so on). A professional may give you a series of exercises with which you can build up your sexual confidence. Following is an example of a sequence of exercises that will help you build your staying power. They are based on the understanding that you must learn to detect, and eventually control, your arousal rate.

LEARNING CONTROL

First, you should have your partner stimulate you manually while you focus on the sensations in your genitals and on stopping as you get close to ejaculating. Once you feel confident of your ability to detect and postpone your ejaculation, you can try intercourse with the woman on top, so that you can continue to focus on your sensations. Next you can try intercourse in different positions, and finally you can try slowing don n instead of stopping. You also may want to avoid being on top, since the blood that gravity drains into your penis makes it more difficult for you to maintain control.

It is also best to be with a partner whom you know well and with whom there is no performance pressure. It is also good if your partner can encourage you and help you stay aware of your arousal rate ("That's great," "Nice and slow," "Relax"). Your partner also can learn how to move her hips and sacrum to rub your penis in different directions while you stay still. If your partner can learn this practice, you will both experience very high orgasmic levels without ejaculating.

Bear in mind that almost all young men are relatively quick ejaculators, and as men get older they generally have an easier time lasting longer. Also, as you may have noticed in your experience, the longer it's been since you had sex, the more difficult it is to control the ejaculatory urge. Therefore, the more you have sex, the easier it is to control your ejaculation. As we mentioned in the last section on safer sex, condoms can also help men diminish some of the sensitivity in their penis.

LEARNING SEXUAL SENSITIVITY

Many men think that a few drinks might distract them from their pleasure and help delay ejaculation. As one multi-orgasmic man recalls, "One of the things I used to do, and I think a lot of guys have learned to do, is to have a few drinks before you go to bed and suddenly you are not very connected with your groin and you can make love longer because it is harder to have an orgasm because you're buzzed and you are not really there. But it was very frustrating because I would usually ejaculate anyway." It may seem like ejaculating too quickly is the result of too much genital sensitivity, but in fact it is the result of too little. Alcohol is an anesthetic and therefore numbs sensation. Though alcohol may dampen your arousal, it also diminishes your ability to control it. The key to developing real, lasting control is more sensitivity, not less. For this reason baseball statistics also don't work. In addition, it is much more difficult to be airfare of your partner's needs when you are drunk or trying to remember Pete Rose's batting average.

Alcohol can also cause the other major male sexual complaint – impotence, or the inability to get an erection, sometimes called whiskey dick. Marijuana also has its sexual drawbacks if used regularly. Daily marijuana use has been found to lower androgens, which are directly responsible for your sex drive. This effect can cause decreased interest in sex and difficulty in getting erections. Other studies have shown that repeated use of marijuana can lower your sperm count. Prolonged lovemaking and multiple orgasms have been shown to increase the levels of your body's natural pleasure drug, endorphin. You are much better off skipping the social lubricants in favor of sexual lubricants. Not to mention, endorphins don't give you a hangover.

Snake Charming: Overcoming Impotence

The Yellow Emperor said, "I want to have intercourse but my penis will not rise. I feel so embarrassed that my perspiration comes out like pearls. In my heart I crave to make love and I wish I could help with my hands. How can I help? I wish to hear the Tao." Su Nü replied, "Your Majesty's problem is a problem of all men."

At some point in their sexual lives, all men have the experience of not being able to get an erection or of losing the one they have. The machinery is too complex to be foolproof, but most of the time there is little to worry about. Physical stress (exhaustion, a cold, intoxication) or emotional stress (adjusting to a new partner, performance anxiety, tension in the relationship) can cause your penis to remain limp or to shrink at an inopportune moment. The most important thing to remember at these troubling times is that it is best to take the situation in stride, with a sense of humor and without blaming yourself or your partner. It does not mean that you are any less of a man or that your partner is any less of a woman. Su Nü's first suggestion to the Yellow Emperor was to relax and try to harmonize with his partner.

EXERCISE 14

SOFT ENTRY

1. Your partner must be fully lubricated, and you should pleasure her until her fluids are flowing. If necessary, you can use a lubricant on her vagina or your penis or both.

2. It is generally easiest for you to be on top so that gravity helps draw the blood into your penis and so that you have as much freedom to move as possible.

3. Circle your thumb and forefinger around the base of your penis to form a finger ring and squeeze gently to push the blood into the shaft and head.

4. Carefully insert your penis into your partner and begin thrusting, keeping your finger ring around the base of your penis.

5. Focus on the blood and sexual energy that are filling your penis and concentrate on the sensations in your penis. Squeeze your perineum and buttocks to push blood into your genitals.

6. Your partner can help stimulate you by playing with your testicles, perineum, and anus.

7. Adjust the tightness of your finger ring to keep your penis engorged enough for thrusting and then remove your fingers when your penis is sufficiently erect for continued thrusting.

8. Reapply the finger ring if your erection wanes (although you generally won't need to do so).

ENTER SOFT, EXIT HARD

Recognizing that all men experience situational impotence at some time or another, the Taoists developed a fail-safe technique they called Soft Entry. The Taoists realized that a man could help with his hands, just as the Yellow Emperor had wished. With this technique and with the cooperation of your partner, you can enter your partner even when you are completely flaccid. Once you are inside your partner, the warmth and sensation of lovemaking will allow you to get an erection in short order. The Soft Entry technique dispels the old belief that a man must have a steel-hard erection before having intercourse, and it is a useful part of any man's sexual repertoire. Knowing that you have mastered this technique and can use it when necessary will give you greater confidence when faced with the awkward, but common, situation of a penis that is slain to rise.

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

If you tend to have erection problems every time you make love, you may be one of the 22 million men in America who have a more serious erection problem. First, you should make sure a physiological cause can be ruled out. Diabetes, prostate surgery, hardening of the arteries, alcoholism, spinal-cord injuries, and back problems, among other things, can cause impotence. Medications such as tranquilizers, antidepressants, and antihypertensives (for high blood pressure) can also cause impotence. In the 1950s, few cases of impotence (about 10 percent) were believed to have an organic source, but most urologists now believe that as many as half of all cases, and more in older patients, have some biological basis.' (Bear in mind that urologists have a vested interest in cases having a biological basis, since that's what they know how to treat and what they get paid to do.) To see if this is your problem, you can do a little self-diagnosis.

While sleeping at night, most men have at least one or two erections, each lasting about a half hour. First, try to recall whether you have awakened in the last week or two with a medium to hard erection. If so, you probably do not have a physiological condition. If you can't remember, there is a simple test you can do at home. Before going to sleep, lick a strip of postage stamps and attach them in a ring around the base of your limp penis. If, upon awakening, the ring is broken, you are physically capable of getting erections. If the ring is unbroken and you are unable to get an erection through solo cultivation, you should see your doctor.

Even if you do have an organic condition, you should remember that this need not stop you from practicing Sexual Kung Fu. Just as orgasm and ejaculation are separate, so too are erection and orgasm. Hartman and Fithian tell the story of an older couple who had a very happy sex life throughout their marriage, although the man was completely impotent as a result of diabetes. Though he and his wife relied on oral and manual lovemaking, both of them were multi-orgasmic. As you learn to expand your orgasms throughout your inhale body, your genital erections and genital orgasms will no longer be the alpha and omega of your sexual life.

GETTING AN ERECTION

Perhaps because our model of male sexuality is based on the experiences of eighteen-year-old men, who tend to get hard quickly and frequently, we think in terms of having a hard-on or not, of being fully erect or not. In reality, there are a number of stages of erection and a number of changes that our penises undergo in becoming erect. As we mentioned, the Taoists noticed that there are actually four stages of erection, or four attainments, as they called them: firmness (also referred to as lengthening), swelling, hardness, and heat.

A common reason for erection trouble is mechanical – not getting enough stimulation of your genitals. Most men need their penises directly touched, rubbed, or massaged to get hard, and this need increases as men get older. Since women often prefer to have their genitals approached slowly and in ever-smaller circles of touch, they think that men do too. Most men, however, prefer quick and direct stimulation. (Don't forget, this is how most men learn to masturbate.)

Your partner should take a very active role in directly stimulating your genitals with her hands and mouth. Tell your partner what you need and how it feels. You should also be willing to use your hands to help yourself get or keep an erection.

Some men, however, find that too much focus on them and their genitals results in pressure to get an erection. It may help for you and your partner to recognize that soft penises have as many nerve endings as hard penises and can be extremely pleasurable. Certain kinds of touch, especially of the testicles, can be highly pleasurable without leading to an erection. Let your partner know that she can pleasure you even if you don't get hard right away. If you find that focusing on your genitals only makes you more anxious, switch the focus to your partner, which was Su Nü's second suggestion. Taking a detour from the man's erection and simultaneously focusing on the woman's pleasure can often be very arousing to the man.

THE WISDOM OF THE PENIS

The process of erection is dependent on both physical and psychological factors. Assuming you have found that your plumbing is working and that you are getting the right amount of direct stimulation, you need to consider the possibility that the problem may be related to performance anxiety, guilt, fear, stress, or other psychological reasons. Occasional impotence, once again, may result from what Bernie Zilbergeld aptly calls "the wisdom of the penis," reminding your brain that you don't really want to be sexual at that moment. We assume that erections should be as automatic as salivation and that "real" men should be able to have sex at any moment, but neither is true. So the first thing you want to do is have a heart-to-crotch conversation and decide if you are really doing what you want to be doing. If the answer is no, tell your partner why and/or suggest a better time.

If the answer is yes, and you still have erection trouble, you may want to seek out psychological or sexual therapy. It is no wonder, given all the misinformation and hype about men's penises and male sexuality in general, that most men see sex as in some way a performance. The more you can shift your focus from how you did, how long you lasted, and how much you satisfied your partner to the pleasure that you and your partner are experiencing, the better off you and your erection will be. As Bernie Zilbergeld wisely points out, "It can help men to realize that most women are less concerned about a man's performance than they are about his reaction to it and to her. Women are more likely to get upset about the man's negative reaction to a performance problem (anger, guilt, constant apologies, withdrawal) than to the problem itself."

PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION

According to the Taoist physicians, erection trouble is caused not only by physiological or psychological problems. It can also be caused by an energetic problem – specifically, weak sexual energy. Difficulty in getting or maintaining an erection is understood as resulting from a man's physical and sexual exhaustion. Many older men who have not conserved their seed suffer from this problem. The cure for impotence is to cultivate the sexual energy while avoiding ejaculation at all costs. As we mentioned, a man is generally more yang than yin. As he becomes more and more aroused, he becomes more and more yang, but after ejaculating he becomes yin. Men who have erection trouble need to become more yang and therefore must avoid ejaculation even more vigilantly than other men.

EXERCISE 15

TESTICLE MASSAGE

1. Rub your hands together to warm them up.
2. Hold one testicle between the thumb and fingers of each hand (see figure 36). (Your testicles should feel like small apricots between your fingers.)
3. Firmly but gently massage your testicles with your thumbs and fingers for a minute or two. If your testicles ache or are sensitive, rub lighter but longer, until the pain goes away. The pain is caused by a blockage, and the massage will help bring blood and sexual energy to the area, which will disperse any blockage.
4. Hold your penis up to expose your testicles and tap them with your longest finger for a minute or two (see figure 37). This helps invigorate your testes and increase sperm production.
5. Finally, hold your penis and scrotum with your thumb and forefinger (see figure 38). Now lightly pull your penis and scrotum forward with your hand as you pull back with your pelvic muscles. Then repeat, pulling to the right with your hand and to the left with your pelvic muscles. Then pull to the left with your hand and to the right with your pelvic muscles. Finish by pulling your hand down and your pelvic muscles up. Do this exercise nine, eighteen, or thirty-six times. It will keep the ducts that carry your sperm healthy.

TESTICLE MASSAGE

The Taoists also developed exercises to help you generate more sexual energy. Lovemaking (using the Soft Entry technique, if necessary) and the Big Draw were a commonly prescribed duo-cultivation method. In addition, there were a number of solo-cultivation exercises that would help a man restore his sexual energy. According to the Taoists, your sexual energy is dependent on three things: the abundance of your sexual hormones, the strength of your kidneys, and the circulation of your bioelectric energy, or chi. Western medicine has confirmed that the sex hormone testosterone is produced in your testicles, and Taoists believe that you can increase the production of sex hormones by using the Testicle Massage exercise. This exercise is an excellent way to strengthen your sexual energy in general and also to relieve any pressure that you may feel after lovemaking. By massaging your testicles, you also help circulate the blood through them and keep them healthy.

A WHOLE-BODY APPROACH

The Taoists saw illness, including impotence, as an expression of the health of your whole body. They recognized that your penis was just part of the problem. Poor circulation, superficial breathing, and an unhealthy diet could all make it worse. Smoking is especially bad for your circulation, since it causes the blood vessels and arteries to constrict and interferes with your breathing. Alcohol and caffeine also drain the body and should be avoided while you are trying to strengthen your sexual energy. An erection problem is a condition that must be treated throughout your body by strengthening your sexual energy and by maintaining proper health.

Please, Sir, May I Have Some More: Enlarging Your Penis

Any man who has been in a locker room knows that there are differences in the size and shape of men's penises. But these differences have little to do with the pleasure a woman experiences during lovemaking – especially if a man practices Sexual Kung Fu. In the words of Su Nü, "There are indeed distinctions in physical endowment. Large and small, long and short, and physical differences are matters of external appearance. Deriving pleasure from sexual intercourse is a matter of inner emotion. If you first bind them with love and respect and press them with true sentiments; then of what relevance are large and small, long and short?"

Even with this and other assurances, many men still worry about the size of their penis, and quite a few men have even undergone “penile enhancement” surgery. This new surgical procedure typically involves lengthening the penis by cutting the suspensory ligament that connects the base of the penis to the pubic bone (see figure 39). In addition to the lengthening procedure, men can also have their penis “thickened” by having fat that has been liposuctioned from their thighs, pubic area, or hips injected into the shaft of the penis."

IF IT AIN'T BROKE, DON'T FIX IT

What man wouldn’t like a few extra inches? But before you run out and have surgery, you should know that there are serious risks. According to an article in the San Francisco Chronicle, the lengthening procedure can result in nerve damage and decreased sensation, impotence, lower angle of erection, skin protrusions, scarring, infection, and gangrene. The thickening procedure can cause an embolism in the heart or brain from the fat released during liposuction, tissue death from reduced blood supply in the penis caused by too much fat in the penis, or a lumpy or lopsided penis.

Figure 39 - THE SUSPENSORY LIGAMENT THAT CONNECTS THE BASE OF THE PENIS TO THE PUBIC BONE

The article in the Chronicle also describes the experience of a thirty-five-year-old auto mechanic who had a number of complications from the surgery, including a “grotesque lump” at the base of his penis. His penis was also black and blue for several weeks. “I thought it was going to fall off. I thought I was left deformed for life.” He finally took his “new” penis to a urologist, who did repair surgery. Dr. C. Eugene Carlton, president of the American Urological Association, also states that he has heard reports of a dozen serious infections and several cases of impotence. He had to treat one man with an infection so severe he required skin grafting to replace half the skin on his penis.

Even putting aside these medical risks and horror stories, penile-enhancement surgery is misguided according to the Tao. The strength of an erection is much more important than its size. After their suspensory ligaments have been cut, men often have a lower angle of erection and the increased fat adds girth but not strength. To have an erection your penis needs blood and sexual energy. If the penis is made too large, without enough blood and sexual energy you will have difficulty getting hard. According to Su Nü, "Long and large, but weak and soft, does not compare to short and small, but firm and hard.”

IN THE LOCKER ROOM

The truth is, it is in the locker room that most men are concerned about the size of their penis – not in the bedroom. For this reason, it is worth keeping in mind that there is more variation in flaccid penises than in erect ones. Penises that look small in the locker room expand more in the bedroom than ones that look bigger in the locker room. Also, given the particular angle from which you look at your penis, it seems smaller to you than to anyone else – a cruel divine joke that is guaranteed to cause inferiority complexes. Try looking down at yourself and then look in the mirror. Surprise! You just gained an inch or two. Most men have an exaggerated sense of how big other men are, partly because of the angle of observation and partly because they don’t know the facts. According to urologist Claudio Teloken, who injected 150 men with a medicine that causes erections and then measured their penises from the pubic bone to the tip of the glans, the "average" man's erect penis is 5.7 inches long. Contrary to popular belief, neither race nor body type makes any significant difference, and the size of the penis has nothing to do with sexual sensitivity.

If you are still concerned about the size of your penis, there is an ancient Taoist exercise for extending your penis that is certainly worth trying before you go to the expense and danger of surgery. It is based on exercising and stretching your penis. There is little scientific confirmation for the success of penis-enlargement exercises, but Alan and Donna Brauer report that 110 men who undertook their extensive sexual-enhancement program reported permanent increases in the size of their penis, from a quarter of an inch to an inch.' It is clear that lack of use can cause the penis to shrink – literally to retract into the body – so it should also stand to reason that frequent use should cause it to extend slightly.

You have no doubt noticed some shrinkage after a swim in cold water. The reason this occurs, and that some expansion may be possible, is that your penis actually extends back into your body two to four inches. These additional inches are held in place by your suspensory ligament, which is what the penile-enhancement surgeons cut. It is probable that frequent erection and sexual activity can cause this ligament to stretch, allowing the hidden part of the penis to move out of the body somewhat.

The time-tested Enlarging Your Penis exercise has been known to extend the penis by as much as an inch within a month or two, but this will depend on your body structure, your health, and your age. The exercise is more likely to work for younger men, whose bodies are still elastic. Weak circulation will make it more difficult. You can determine any gains by measuring your erect penis before you begin and over the duration of your practice. (Make sure you measure from your pubic bone to the tip of your penis and that your erection is at a ninety-degree angle from your body.) No matter what success you have in stretching your penis, this exercise also massages and energizes the entire urogenital system, including the prostate gland.

EXERCISE 16

ENLARGING YOUR PENIS

1. Inhale through you nose into your throat and then swallow this bubble of air, pressing it down into your stomach. (It should not stay in your chest.)

2. Imagine this breath as a ball of energy, chi, which you want to push down from your stomach through your pelvis and out into your penis. This will help you bring more energy to your penis.

3. Once you have pushed this ball of energy into your penis, use the three middle fingers of your left hand to press the Million-Dollar Point between the anus and scrotum. This will lock the energy into the penis.

4. Breathe normally while keeping your fingers on the Million-Dollar Point. At the same time, begin the following stretches.

5. With the right hand, grip your penis and begin rhythmically pulling it forward and away from your body. Pull six to nine times. Them pull to the right six to nine times. Then pull to the left six to nine times. Finally, pull down six to nine times.

6. Use your thumb to rub the head of your penis. Rub the penis until it becomes erect. If your are not getting erect, pull some more while you rub, until you have an erection.

7. Holding the shaft of the penis, circle the penis at its base with your thumb and forefinger and pull forward about an inch. This forces the energy to the head of your penis. Do this nine times.

8. Pull the penis to the right with your right hand and rotate the penis in small circles. Do this six to nine times in one direction and then the other, maintaining the outward pressure. Repeat, pulling it to the left and making six to nine small circles in one direction and then the other.

9. In the final stretch, gently slap your erect penis against your inner right thigh, remembering also to keep pulling outward. Do this six to nine times and then repeat the motion against your inner left thigh.

10. After completing these stretches, soak your penis in warm water for a minute. This will help your penis absorb the warm (yang) energy and expand.

IN THE BEDROOM

If you are concerned more about the bedroom than the locker room, there is something you can do for your partner that is much better than undergoing penile surgery or even doing penis-extension exercises; Arouse her fully before entering her. If her vagina is engorged, your penis will seem larger to her. As we mentioned earlier, women generally experience the most sensation in their clitoris and the first couple of inches of their vagina, which means that even a man with a small penis can reach these most sensitive spots. The position adjustments we described will also help any couple accommodate differences in genital size.

Some couples actually have the opposite problem: the man's penis is too large for his partner. Though a woman's vagina can expand considerably, this imbalance can be painful if the partners are truly mismatched. One solution is to tie a handkerchief or a shoelace around the base of the man's penis at the point of desired depth. This also has the added benefit of expanding the head of the man's penis, which can give greater pleasure to both partners. Just as you must allow your penis size to decrease about every twenty minutes to allow the blood to circulate, you must make sure to remove the handkerchief or any other tie on your penis so that the blood does not stagnate. The woman-on-top position also helps the woman control the depth and make sure intercourse does not become painful.

It is worth repeating that if you practice Sexual Kung Fu, you and your partner's sexual desires will be so satisfied that concern about your penis size will fade into a distant memory. You will wonder how something as insignificant as having large ears or small ears could have taken up so much mental energy. In the words of the wise and experienced Su Nü, "When two hearts are in harmony and the energy flows freely throughout the body, then the short and the small naturally become longer and larger, the soft and the weak naturally firm and hard."

How Many Sperm Does One Man Need? Raising Your Sperm Count

According to the research of Danish endocrinologist Niels Skakkebaek, sperm counts of men in the United States and twenty other countries have fallen dramatically over the last half century – by as much as 50 percent. The cause of this precipitous decline is still being debated, and possible culprits range from tight underwear to chemical pollutants. In reporting on the environmental dangers that seem at least partly to blame, University of Florida researcher Louis Guillette told a panel of U.S. Congressmen, "Every man in this room is half the man his grandfather divas."

Low sperm counts are a major reason that couples have difficulty conceiving a child. Given the declining sperm counts, it may not come as a surprise that infertility is an increasing problem worldwide. The World Health Organization has reported that one in ten couples are involuntarily infertile. In the United States, a staggering one in six couples is infertile – twice as many as ten years ago. It is worth mentioning that infertility is a vague and imprecise diagnosis that, like impotence, has a tendency to become stigmatized. More to the point, this diagnosis of infertility is simply made after a certain amount of time has passed (usually a year of unprotected intercourse) without conception. According to one medical textbook, "Pregnancy is the only irrefutable proof of the sperm's capability to fertilize." You are diagnosed as infertile until you conceive. Guilty until proven innocent! So even if you have a low sperm count, you may still be able to conceive a child.

Problems in ovulation are also a significant cause of infertility, and if there is no egg to fertilize, it doesn't matter how many sperm you have. Nevertheless, if there is an egg, the more sperm you have, the better the chances of your partner getting pregnant. Though only one sperm finally joins with the egg, all the sperm actually work together to get through the uterus and fallopian tubes and fertilize the egg.

If you have a low sperm count, you will be relieved to know that there are Sexual Kung Fu exercises you can use to help raise it. Engaging in nonejaculatory sex is the most important thing you can do to increase the volume, concentration, and count of your sperm. According to Western medical research, each day you do not ejaculate, you raise your sperm count by 50 to 90 million sperm.

In addition to storing up your sperm, you can help your testicles produce more by shaking, massaging, and tapping them. When our testicles were able to swing freely (before tight underwear and pants), they rubbed together and against our thighs naturally, but now that we sit most of the day and spend very little time running through the jungle naked, we must help them. You can stand with pants that are loose in the crotch and shake your testicles up and down. Then rock your lumbar region and sacrum left and right and forward and back (this will help bring blood to your genital area). The Testicle Massage exercise described earlier in this chapter is also quite effective – especially step 4, which involves tapping your testicles.

My What? Preventing and Helping Prostate Problems

Many men only hear about their prostate gland when they are diagnosed with a prostate problem, such as infection, enlargement, or cancer. Almost one in ten men is eventually diagnosed with prostate cancer, which is now so common an ailment that the medical profession generally assumes that if a man lives long enough, he will develop it. According to the Taoists this disease is not inevitable, and Sexual Kung Fu can help keep your prostate healthy.

Two exercises described – Stopping the Stream and PC Pull-Ups – will help you to strengthen your PC muscle, which surrounds your prostate. By squeezing this muscle you can keep your prostate healthy. As we mentioned, the pubococcygeus is actually a group of muscles that stretch between your pubic bone ("pubo") and your coccyx ("coccygeus"). Make sure you squeeze lightly. If you squeeze too hard, you may find that you are too tense to breathe correctly. You can do the prostate exercise every day, as often as you like. Remember, as with any exercise, you may have initial soreness if you practice a lot. According to Taoism your prostate is closely related to your brain's hypothalamus, so if you squeeze correctly, you will eventually feel a sensation in your brain.

In addition to exercising your prostate, you can also massage your prostate directly, which is what the doctor does when you have a prostate infection. The doctor massages your prostate through your anus, which you can also do. You can also massage your prostate by pressing in at your Million-Dollar Point and making small circles in one direction and then the other (see the Pelvic Massage exercise). Using the Big Draw when you self-pleasure or make love will also help keep your prostate healthy. If you have prostate problems, make sure you use the Finger Lock when you ejaculate.

One multi-orgasmic man explained his experience with prostate pain before and after he started practicing Sexual Kung Fu: "I used to have serious pain in my prostate gland that began during adolescence. Several times a month, I would experience terribly sharp pain in that area that would last several minutes. One time the pain was so bad that a friend of mine claimed that my face actually turned green. Doctors suggested ejaculating regularly to relieve the pressure in the prostate gland. This helped somewhat, but I always knew that letting all that semen out was a tremendous waste of energy. When I was in my late twenties, I discovered Sexual Kung Fu. Within several weeks of practicing the PC muscle contractions, the prostate and testicle massage, and the Big Draw and Finger Lock, the problems with my prostate virtually disappeared. I have not had prostate pain for several years now, and though there was some prostate swelling initially after I stopped ejaculating, this condition gradually declined. Given the number of men who suffer from prostate trouble, these techniques are nothing short of miraculous if they work for others like they did for me."

EXERCISE 17

HELPING YOUR PROSTATE

1. Exhale completely, at the same time lightly contracting your perineum and anus.
2. Inhale, and then as you exhale, picture your prostate, which is just above your perineum, and contract your ac muscle around your prostate.
3. Inhale and relax.
4. Repeat this exercise nine or eighteen times.

Sex Is Not Like Pizza: Healing Sexual Trauma

There is a joke attributed to Yankees coach Yogi Berra that goes: "Sex is like pizza. When it's good, it's really good. And when it's bad, it's still pretty good." Unfortunately, sex is not really like pizza, as many men who have had negative sexual experiences can testify.

Bad sexual experiences can linger in our libidos, returning at moments of intimacy years later.

Consensual sex sometimes ends up being hurtful, but coercive sex almost always does. Over the last few years there has been an enormous increase in the reporting of sexual abuse, sexual harassment, and sexual assault. Our willingness to address these formerly taboo subjects is an extremely important societal advance. Understandably, the shocking (and not uncontested) statistics about the prevalence of these social ills have resulted in an ever-greater desire to define exactly what consensual sex is. Although most of the media attention has focused on the sexual abuse of women, men can also be victims of exploitative sex. And both women and men can experience consensual sex that goes bad.

Consent (or the lack of it) is sometimes clear and sometimes not, since sexual partners are almost never totally equal in age, strength, experience, power, and so on. In communicating sexual interest, it is best to be as explicit as possible, rather than relying on silent signals. Fortunately, as women have discovered that they are sexual beings as much as men are, we are abandoning the confusing and dangerous mixed messages of earlier generations. "No" can finally mean No! and "Yes" can finally mean Yes!

If you have experienced coercive sex or consensual sex that went bad, you may be left with sexual scars that can cause sexual or emotional problems. If this is the case, you will probably want to seek professional therapy or sex counseling. However, there are also some things you can do on your own to help you stay focused on the pleasure of the present rather than the pain of the past.

Staying present and in your body is a challenge for anyone who has experienced sexual trauma. Paying close attention to the sensations in your body, both positive and negative, is far better than allowing your thoughts to wander or to "rise above" your body, causing you to become an observer instead of a participant. The Belly Breathing and the Century Count exercises described in chapter 3 will help you improve your concentration and your ability to stay focused. Sound, whether in the form of mantras or moans, can also clear your mind of distracting thoughts. Positive reinforcement will also help you stay present. Remind yourself as often as necessary of where you are, whom you are with, and how good it feels. When old feelings arise, it is generally best to stop what you are doing and share with your partner the feelings that are coming up.

EXERCISE 18

TOUCH MEDITATION

1. Sit facing one another with your legs crossed or on your heels. The lighting should be low, preferably candlelight.
2. Using both hands, start touching your body, generally from head to toe. (Avoid any parts of your body that you do not want your partner to touch and generally avoid your genitals or leave them until last.)
3. Your partner should use her hands to follow yours, touching each place that you have just touched.
4. Switch and have your partner use her hands followed by your hands to introduce you to her body.
5. Hug and feel each other breathing.

If you do not feel comfortable discussing your sexual trauma with your partner, especially if she is a new partner, you should try to tell her what you do want now. If she is doing something that is uncomfortable or does not feel good, tell her, but do so by saying what you'd prefer her to do rather than criticizing what she is doing. If you are not feeling particularly sexual, suggest that you hold each other, massage each other, or meditate with each other by looking into one another's eyes. You can also suggest that you do the Touch Meditation exercise. It is especially good at reestablishing intimacy that has been damaged in some way.

With Touch Meditation you reconnect with your body and share with your partner the parts of your body that you feel good about sharing. You will probably find that your partner is responsive to taking it slow and developing greater intimacy before being sexual. If your mind and body are not present, you will have very little sexual energy to share with your partner. Neither you nor she will benefit much from your lovemaking, and your pleasure will be minimal. By taking it slow and stroking your entire body, you will be able to gather your sexual energy and have an experience that is both passionate and meaningful. As already mentioned, the Taoists recognized long ago that sex has great power for healing or for harm, so use this power wisely and lovingly.

Making Love for a Lifetime

In Taoism, our bodies are considered to be microcosms of the natural world, so we must think of ourselves and our sexuality as changing like the seasons: spring, summer, fall, winter. Yet the Taoist masters were able to turn the seasons one more time, experiencing a second springtime in old age. Consumed with the search for immortality, they found in Sexual Kung Fu a true fountain of youth. Indeed, all modern studies show that an active sex life is essential for counteracting the effects of aging and for maintaining one's health. We will now explore how sex can actually help you live longer and what specifically you need to know as your sexuality changes.

Sex and Aging

You are never too young to read about sex and aging. In the West, we tend to think of aging as something that happens late in life, but the aging process begins at birth, and our sexuality changes every few years. As Kinsey put it, "The sexagenarian – or octogenarian – who suddenly becomes interested in the problems of aging is nearly a lifetime beyond the point at which he became involved in that process."' The sooner you read this section, the better off you'll be.

You are also never too old to read this chapter, for according to the Tao, sex is a lifelong activity that is possible and desirable until the day you die. In the West, older men who are still interested in sex are considered lecherous – "dirty old men." The Tao never had this prejudice; on the contrary, sex was seen to be even more important for the health and longevity of men and women in old age, or what we now call late adulthood. The Chinese are not alone in this belief. A cross-cultural survey has shown that sex is vitally important for older men in 70 percent of cultures and for older women in 80 percent.

Closer to home, a Consumer Reports survey demonstrated how different the realities of sexuality among the elderly are from the cultural stereotypes: among those surveyed, over 80 percent of the married men and 75 percent of the unmarried men over seventy years old remained sexually active. Fifty-eight percent had sex at least once a week, 75 percent reported "high enjoyment of sex," and 43 percent still masturbated.' You also shouldn't assume that your partner's sexual appetite diminishes after menopause. Many women find that their interest in sex actually increases after menopause, perhaps because of their changing hormonal levels.

In the West, we glorify adolescent male sexuality and see a man's sexual power as peaking at age eighteen and declining steadily thereafter. In the words of one sexologist, "The adolescent penis is the penis at its ultimate power. From here on until the end of life, there is a gradual tapering off." The problem comes from a general misunderstanding of sexual power in the West. In terms of potency, it is true that a man's ability to produce sperm peaks during early adulthood, but this is important only if we are concerned with reproduction. A woman's fertility and ability to bear a child also peak in early adulthood.

However, in terms of pleasure rather than potency, a man's ability to satisfy his partner and himself only increases as he gains more experience and control. Although a man may no longer get hard instantly or be able to shoot his ejaculate as far as he could as an adolescent, these changes hardly compromise his ability as a lover. The Taoists knew that as a man leaves the fever of adolescent sexuality with its quick ejaculation. his Sexual Kung Fu practice and his partner's pleasure only increase.

AS YOUR BODY CHANGES

Inevitably, there are a number of physiological changes that take place as you age. For example, if you are over fifty, you probably need more direct stimulation of your genitals to get an erection than you did when you were younger: this is not because your sexual appetite or your attraction to your partner has disappeared, but simply because your physiology changes as you get older. Also, your erection is probably less firm and angles down more than it did when you were younger. In addition, if you ejaculate, the force of the ejaculate is less and your recovery time is longer.

These changes of decreased physical strength and stamina are no different from changes in any other physical ability as you get older. You don't expect to be able to run as fast or as far at sixty as you could at twenty. But there is one difference between sex and sports with regard to aging: your ability in bed may actually improve. Older men can actually maintain an erection longer than before (although if you lose your erection for whatever reason, it will be more difficult to regain). This will make it easier for you to satisfy your partner and to become multi-orgasmic without ejaculating. In Dunn and Trost's recent study, half the men had become multi-orgasmic after the age of thirty-five. A number had become multi-orgasmic between the ages of forty-five and fifty-five. And the older men who had learned to become multi-orgasmic, all now over fifty, were still multi-orgasmic and going strong.

Most of the western sexual literature also suggests that the intensity of the sexual experience diminishes as a man ages. This is not the case according to the Tao. The Taoists do not measure intensity according to the number of genital contractions, which do decrease as you get older. Since they recognize that sexual energy is a inhale-body affair, they judge the intensity of sex on a man's ability to cultivate and circulate his sexual energy, Which only increases as he gets more experience. Your sexuality will no doubt change over time, and you may miss some of the feeding frenzy of youth, but the more refined pleasures of older age are just as delectable, if not more so.

YOUR BODY AND SEX

We hope you now understand that sexuality for the older man is not a slippery slope to sexual inadequacy. Still, you will find that you are able to climb much more easily to the peaks of pleasure if you observe the basic needs of your older body. First, a healthy body and regular exercise are essential. One reason so many people's sex lives shrivel as they age is that their bodies become weak or ill. The wisdom of the East and all physiological studies in the West have concluded that exercise not only improves sexual ability but increases sexual desire and orgasms. Your abdomen, hips, buttocks, and thighs are especially important large muscles, as is the smaller PC muscle we discussed earlier. Keeping these muscles strong is essential for maintaining sexual vitality. Although swimming, jogging, and other Western sports are excellent ways of maintaining physical health (as long as they are not overdone), regular sex is as important, if not more so. Use it or lose it quite accurately describes the aging male body.

According to the Tao, a great deal of sexual energy leaks out of our anus and buttocks. Try squeezing your buttocks together and you will see how powerful this muscle is for containing energy and sending it up your spine. The Taoist doctors considered the strength of a person's anal sphincter an important sign of health. A loose, weak sphincter is a sign of poor health; a tight, strong sphincter, a sign of good health. You can strengthen your anus and buttocks by using the following exercise. In addition, this exercise will help you relieve stress while energizing your body and developing your sexual control. It also will help energize your prostate and Cowper's glands and circulate your blood and strengthen your erections. It has even been known to help cure hemorrhoids.

EXERCISE 19

STRENGTHENING YOUR ANUS

1. Exhale completely through your nose and then pump and pull up the muscles in your anus and buttocks for several seconds (You will be repeatedly squeezing and releasing these muscles.)

2. Inhale slowly and relax.

3. Repeat steps 1 and 2 nine, eighteen, or thirty-six times, or until your groin and anus start to feel warm. This energy may gradually spread to your head and down to your navel, or you can draw it up consciously to the tailbone and the sacrum, and up the spine to the head along the Microcosmic Orbit. Rest and spiral the energy in the head eighteen to thirty-six times. If you feel too much energy, remember to touch your tongue to the roof of your mouth to let the energy come down to your navel.

EJACULATION AND AGING

By now it should be obvious that the place you lose the most energy is out your penis through ejaculating. For aging men, nonejaculatory lovemaking is even more important as each ejaculation becomes more exhausting to the body. As we mentioned once before, the long-lived Chinese physician Sun Ssu-miao recommended that men at forty ejaculate no more than once in ten days, that men of fifty ejaculate no more than once in twenty days, and that men at sixty no longer ejaculate. These are maximum amounts, and if you are able to transform your sexual energy by drawing it up, the less frequently you ejaculate, the better off you will be. This may be difficult at first if you are just starting to practice Sexual Kung Fu, but once you experience the pleasure of nonejaculatory orgasms and understand their health benefits, you will be extremely motivated to learn quickly. Even better, if you start when you are younger, your appetite for ejaculation will quickly decrease and as you get older you will have little or no interest in it.

Sun Ssu-miao's recommended frequencies are just guidelines, and every few years you can simply decrease the number of times you ejaculate. This will naturally allow you to keep your frequency of ejaculation in line with your increasing needs for conservation. It is interesting to point out that even Masters and Johnson recognized that men do not need to ejaculate every time they make love, especially once they reach the age of fifty. If a man recognizes this important point, they concluded, "he is potentially a most effective sexual partner."' Once again, it is important that you not become obsessed with nonejaculation and that you not berate yourself if you do ejaculate. If you ejaculate, let go and enjoy it.

Keeping Love Alive

In the West, we tend to think that love and passion peak on the wedding night and die shortly thereafter. The reasons for this decline are never fully explained to us, but it seems that after the thrill of courtship is over, boredom (supposedly) sets in. For Taoists, the wedding night is just the beginning of a lifetime of expanding love and intimacy. With Sexual Kung Fu, love and sex are better at fifty or even sixty than they are at twenty. Here's why.

MAINTAINING THE SEXUAL CHARGE

According to Taoism, our attraction to our partner is dependent on the strength of the yin-yang charge that exists between us. The greater the charge, the greater the passion. The lesser the charge, the lesser the passion. The loss of this charge is the reason many relationships become flat or boring. (It is also the reason many of these couples experience a flicker of passion after one of the partners has been away on a business trip, since-temporary separation tends to recharge the polarity of the partners.)

One of the main reasons for the loss of this charge over time is ejaculatory sex. When the man ejaculates, he depletes his yang charge. Whether consciously or not, the man also starts to realize he is being exhausted by lovemaking. This can often lead to resentment and a desire to withhold sex. Although as mentioned the more common stereotype is of the ever-desirous husband and the frigid wife, the truth is that men as often as women determine the frequency of lovemaking. Over time, the depletion of a man's energy and specifically his yang charge can lead to disinterest and boredom for both partners.

Some couples are able to temporarily recharge their relationship by sleeping in separate beds or spending time apart. Duo cultivation allows couples to maintain this polarity and keep their relationship fully charged. There is no reason that love must go flat or that boredom must set in. Though there are numerous reasons that people have extramarital affairs, boredom and sexual dissatisfaction are certainly two of the main ones. Maintaining the power of attraction in your relationship decreases the desire to seek out the charge of a new lover. Inexhaustible pleasure exists in every couple if they are able to conserve and exchange sexual energy. One multi-orgasmic man describes his and his partner's experience: "The practice has deepened our relationship, our love is growing, and the magnetic attraction for each other seems not to decrease, but rather to intensify."

Contrary to the stereotypical idea that sex in marriage is unsatisfying, most studies show that married couples have better sex with one another than they have in affairs. Bernie Zilbergeld points out that men and women tend to have less variety and to experiment less in affairs than in marriage and that women tend to be far more orgasmic with their husbands than with lovers. Women are not the only ones who are more orgasmic with their spouses. Kinsey also found that men often fail to reach orgasm in extramarital affairs but almost never experience this failure with their wives.

Good sex is not the only benefit of long-term relationships. A study conducted at the University of California at Berkeley concluded that couples in long-term marriages become happier and more affectionate as they age. In our society, we endlessly praise new love in songs, literature, and films. We dismiss love between older couples as passionless and boring. "What we actually thought we would see is a kind of fatigue quality in these relationships," said Robert Levenson, one of the researchers. "But that's not what we see. They're vibrant, they're alive, they're emotional, they're fun, they're sexy, they're not burned out." Recent biological studies suggest that the presence of a long-term lover increases the body's production of endorphins, natural painkillers that give partners a sense of serenity and security in their lives.'

Couples who do choose to love one another without getting married can have lovemaking that is just as holy and intimate as the lovemaking of those who have the state's official stamp of approval – as long as they practice the union of yin and yang. Yet it is important to keep in mind that it takes years to reach the heights of physical, emotional, and spiritual intimacy and to master the union of yin and yang. It is said in Taoism that it takes seven years to know a seaman's body, seven years to know her mind, and seven years to know her spirit. The saving does not mean that after this you stop learning or start growing bored; rather, it simply means that it takes twenty-one years to really get acquainted.

The Seasons of Our Sex Lives

Relationships, the Taoists knew, are not linear. They do not peak on the wedding night or on any other night. Rather, they wax and wane with the cycles of family, work, health, and even nature. It is important to be aware of these cycles and to know how to live harmoniously with them, in and out of the bedroom.

First and foremost is the need to communicate with your partner about these cycles, to be aware of your own waxing and waning desire, and to be able to talk about it in such a way that neither of you feels judged or blamed. Many women (and an increasing number of men) see a direct correlation between their partner's desire and their own attractiveness. It is important for you and your partner to escape this trap by recognizing that sex has as much to do with your hearts, minds, and spirits as it does with your bodies.

Western materialism encourages us to look at one another's bodies as commodities. We are taught to "get off" on a woman's full breasts or a man's washboard stomach. Our fetishes and media-generated fantasies are endless. So when our bodies age, we think we should stop having sex or should look for partners who are "new and improved." Taoists view the body as dynamic, realizing that the real charge comes from the interplay of subtle energies and not from the pounding together of two hard, static bodies.

Joseph Kramer explains the difference in Taoist sexuality: "In the Eastern tradition, there is eye contact almost all the time during sex. 'I am having sex with you. I am breathing with you. I am relaxed with you. I am connected in the heart with you. I am connected in the genitals with you. Sex in a Taoist relationship is better at sixty than at twenty." Legs, stomachs, and genitals get old, but eyes just gross adviser.

SEX BEGINS LONG BEFORE YOU TOUCH

Since sex is a dynamic force, you need to be very conscious of the energy you bring to it. Sex really begins as much as forty-eight hours before you actually make love; the energy and emotions that you have accumulated during this time follow you into the bedroom. So, a day or two before making love, try to work through any negative emotions, especially anger that will block the exchange of energy between you. The more calm and connected you are when you begin, the easier it will be to reach higher levels of intimacy and ecstasy. Clearly, few couples plan sex two days in advance, so you need to be conscious of your emotions in general and try to work them through as soon as possible.

Foreplay, too, begins before you touch one another. The setting you create – candles, soothing music, and romantic, loving words – will help harmonize your energies. During and after lovemaking be sure to stay present with your partner: remember the eyes. You are trying to experience a more profound state of being together, not just a momentary climax.

If lovemaking becomes routine or mechanical, stop for a while. This will allow the polar passion between you to recharge. Yet don't forget the importance of touch and intimacy. The fact that you are not making love does not mean you should not hold each other or be emotionally intimate. In fact, observing a "sex fast" can allow you to focus on these other parts of your relationship, which are as important. Focus on the quality of your love, and the quality of your sex will naturally improve.

THE CYCLES OF YOUR DESIRE

You will also find that the cycles of your sexual desire do not always coincide. At times you will feel more desire than your partner, and at times you will feel less. No one who is truly in touch with his or her body and emotions wants sex all the time. However, what should you do if one of you is interested in sex but the other one is not. There are several options that correspond to different ways of making love.

Let's assume that tonight you are feeling aroused and your partner is not. Of course, if your partner is interested, she can pleasure you orally or manually. If she is not in the mood, she may be milling to touch or hold you as you pleasure yourself. If she is not in the mood for this, either, she may be willing to exchange nonsexual touch. You can exchange a great deal of powerful, healing energy through holding each other or touching each other. (The Touch Meditation exercise is one option.)

If sex is specifically what you need and sex is specifically not what your partner is interested in, you can of course make love to yourself (that is, self-pleasure). Remember, all of us have yin and yang, feminine and masculine aspects, within ourselves. Self-intercourse, or the union of these two aspects, is a very powerful part of the Taoist practice. Michael Winn explains: "It is possible to harness the sexual energy of the genitals and kidneys and the emotional energy of the heart through meditation. This meditation practice, known as the water-and-fire method (called the Lesser Kan and Li), allows you to literally make love inside yourself and have an even higher level of orgasm, one that dissolves the boundaries between your body and spirit. This practice also has a great many health benefits and was traditionally referred to as a method of repairing the body and the soul."

Because of the societal stigma regarding masturbation, many people are too embarrassed to self-pleasure when anyone else, including their partner, is around. However, if this natural part of human sexuality can be discussed in an open sexual dialogue, you will find that you can harmonize your individual sexual cycles with ease and a great deal of pleasure.

INTEGRATING YOUR SEXUAL ENERGY INTO YOUR LIFE

Often people turn to sex when all they really need is loving touch. As one multi-orgasmic man explains, "The biggest discovery for me was that I could have sex with my clothes on, just by being with somebody and sharing the energy. It feels very sexual, just touching and holding hands and feeling the sexual energy flow through your bodies. This is really sexual freedom, because sex is not just something you engage in periodically. Your sexuality is integrated into our whole life, adding color and intensity, interest and passion to everything."

If you are a parent dealing with the demands of work and family or a person who has an extremely demanding career, the increased energy that comes from practicing Sexual Kung Fu can help you avoid burning out. The ever-increasing demands of work and family in our overcommitted, overworked, overstressed lives are enough to exhaust anyone. Once you are able to cultivate your energy both in and out of the bedroom, you will find that you have more energy than you ever thought possible.

FANTASIES

Many Western sex experts recommend having an active fantasy life, and indeed fantasies can help you to generate sexual energy when you are self-pleasuring. When you are with your partner, however, there is a danger in relying on sexual fantasies. The exchange of yin and yang energy with your partner is real, not imaginary. If you focus your sexual attention on some idealized lover or some pornographic image, you will not be able to feel the real and profound flow of energy between you and your partner. Fantasies prevent you from being present and from appreciating what is truly fantastic about your partner and about your potential to experience the heights of ecstasy together.

NATURAL RHYTHMS

Finally, remember to observe the general rhythms of your body and of nature. Avoid making love right after a big meal. After you have eaten, your body needs to focus its blood and energy on digestion. When you finish a meal, you should be satisfied, not stuffed, with a little hunger remaining. (As the food settles, you will become full.) When you finish lovemaking, you also should be satisfied but not sated, with a little desire left over. (As your energy settles, you will become content.)

If you are ill, remember to make love with your partner on top so that you can absorb her healing energy. And remember the seasons of nature. Plants and animals all reproduce in the spring. Though humans are unique in their ability to make love all year long, don't expect yourself or your partner to be as sexually active in the fall and printer as you are in the spring and summer.

Sexual Kung Fu offers you the potential for multi-orgasmic lovemaking far beyond what most people settle for in their sex lives, but this does not mean that you need to reach the heights of ecstasy every time you are intimate with your partner. Listen to the rhythms of your body and your desire.

AVOID INCREASING THE STAKES

Every time a sexual possibility is introduced to Western readers, the sexual stakes tend to get raised. Once women's orgasms were "discovered," couples were expected to start having simultaneous orgasms. When some women were found to be multi-orgasmic and to have G spots, all women were expected to have multiple orgasms and G spots. Every man has the potential to become multi-orgasmic and to experience whole-body orgasms, but not every man will want to experience them every time. Try to avoid creating performance expectations and anxiety. The Taoist sexual techniques we are teaching are also called the healing love. If you focus on love and healing, for yourself and for your partner, the rest will naturally follow.

No Free Love

Monogamy is back, even if as nothing more than a health precaution. But monogamy is much more than an onerous requirement of the times. With the right partner, it can be a crucible for a most powerful alchemical process of physical pleasure, emotional intimacy, and spiritual growth.

If the indiscriminate accumulation of sexual energy where the goal of Sexual Kung Fu, it might be best to sleep with as many people as possible and to exchange energy with all of them. And indeed, there were ancient texts that recommended this practice. But it is not just the amount of sexual energy you have that is important, it is also the quality of that energy. The goal of Sexual Kung Fu is to eventually transform sexual energy, into more refined and subtle energies of the heart, mind, and spirit.

SEXUAL ENERGY AND EMOTIONS

If you are sleeping with people who have a great many negative emotions (such as anger or sadness), you will internalize their emotions. No matter how much latex you put between you and your partner, you are always exchanging emotional and spiritual (as well as sexual) energy. So avoid violating your bodily, emotional, and spiritual integrity by having sex with someone you do not respect and love. In choosing a partner, you are quite literally choosing your spiritual destiny.

In reality, men (and women) who have not found a loving partner have sexual urges that need satisfaction – an itch that needs to be scratched. If this is your situation, you would be better off practicing solo cultivation and learning to circulate and transform your sexual energy. This training period will allow you to raise the level of your internal energy; eventually you will attract an equally aware and mature partner. If you sleep with someone you do not love, your energy will be in disharmony and either drain you or cause imbalances. For the same reason, you should make love with your partner only when you feel true affection for her. If you feel you must sleep with women you do not love, try to be as kind and loving to them as you can be. Otherwise, it will be impossible for you to truly practice Sexual Kung Fu.

Quite a few men find they are attracted to or interested in being in a relationship with more than one woman. Few men, however, can love more than one woman at a time and feel true serenity. If you think you can, be prepared to spend a great deal of effort trying to transform and balance their energies.

Remember, sexual energy simply magnifies whatever emotions you are feeling. Sex is the most powerful tool for cultivating a relationship and joining our lives together, but it can also be a sharp weapon that can sever those ties and leave lasting scars. As many who experienced the sexual revolution of the 1960s learned, there is no "free love": sexual knowledge comes at a high price and should be cherished accordingly.

Teaching Our Sons

Chances are you were not told about Sexual Kung Fu when you were growing up and learning about your sexuality. Few people are so fortunate. Most boys learn very little about sexuality and practically nothing that is of use. They are left to grope in the dark for sexual intimacy and pleasure. As one multi-orgasmic man explained, “For me, discovering Taoist sexuality was like coming across information and guidance that I felt should have been explained to me from the beginning. It felt like the right way to make love, and the old way seemed so ridiculous, embarrassing, even selfish.” You have a chance to help your son avoid this situation and save him from a great deal of the fear and frustration we mistakenly assume is an inevitable part of growing up.

NO BIRDS AND NO BEES

Both parents have an important role to play in the sexual education of their sons and daughters, but since this is primarily a book for men, we will focus specifically on fathers and sons, although much of what we have to say is applicable to mothers and daughters as well. When most people think about discussions of sex between fathers and sons, they generally think of the famous man-to-man talks about the birds and the bees when a boy comes of age. Kids grow up much too fast today to make quaint discussions about birds and bees of any use – if they ever were. Adolescence is in reality much too late a time in your son’s development for you to begin establishing a dialogue with him about sexuality.

If you succeed in maintaining an open relationship with your son, such a talk will never be necessary. Children’s curiosity about sex begins early, and their sexuality begins even earlier. Anyone who has witnessed an infant boy touching and pulling on his penis and scrotum (often quite hard!) knows that this is not just random exploration. The boy is receiving pleasure – more than he receives when, for example, he pulls on his toes.

Babies are sexual beings, or perhaps we should say sensual beings, since we generally associate sexuality with later stages of development. However, their physical and genital pleasure is undeniable – as much as we try to deny it. Freud called infant sensuality "polymorphous perversity," but there is nothing perverse about it except our own attempts to repress it. How you respond to your son’s explorations of and questions about his and your bodies will teach him a great deal about his sexuality. Developing a healthy, lowing relationship to your sexuality and encouraging him to develop the same with his sexuality is the first thing you can do for your son.

YOUR RELATIONSHIP TO YOUR PARTNER

Children also learn a great deal about intimacy from watching their parents. How you treat your wife or partner will be a model for how your son should treat girls and, later, women. Learning about sex is really learning about sex roles, about communication, about love. What you model will have a much greater impact on your son than what you say, so remember that you are always teaching – when you are hollering at one another as well as when you are holding hands.

In this culture, we worry about children seeing their parents being physically affectionate with one another, but there is nothing wrong with children witnessing these expressions of love. In fact, there may be a problem with them not witnessing it. Its absence not only leaves children often wondering whether their parents love each other but also leaves them without models of how to express affection to their own partners. Modeling a healthy, loving relationship with your partner is the second thing you can do for your son – not to mention for your partner and yourself.

YOUR RELATIONSHIP TO YOUR SON

Many men are becoming more involved in child care than their fathers were, and this naturally leads to more affectionate and loving father-son relationships. However, a lot of fathers still feel uncomfortable expressing affection, especially physical affection, toward their sons – holding them, hugging them, or kissing them.

Or, if they are able to do this with their young sons, they quickly stop as the boys grow older. Many of these men never experienced this love from their fathers and have no model for how to express it.

Some men worry that if they are too affectionate, their boys will become soft, or sissies, or gay. There is no evidence in support of any of these ideas, but it is clear that homophobia in our culture prevents men from expressing their affection for one another and, most tragically, for their sons. Over the last ten years, another issue has begun to prevent fathers from being physically affectionate toward their sons or daughters. The legitimate concern over protecting children from sexual abuse and incest has led to a suspicion of all male physical affection – since most of the perpetrators, although certainly not all, are men.

Touch is the most basic of human needs, and several studies report that babies who did not receive enough of it died. But babies are not the only ones who need touch. Your son will need your loving touch throughout his life. Don't be surprised, however, if your son goes through stages in which he refuses your affection – especially around adolescence, when he may be concerned about his peers' opinions or may be trying to become more independent. However, if you have maintained an open and loving relationship with him, this separation will be only temporary. Martial artist and actor Chuck Norris recounted one of his greatest joys in raising his two sons: "One of my biggest gratifications today is that my grownup sons aren't embarrassed to kiss me hello or good-bye in front of anyone and that they come willingly to me for advice or help if they have problems."

Physical affection is just part of a loving relationship. Emotional intimacy and respect for your son are essential for keeping an open dialogue. Norris, whose father was alcoholic, explains how he tried to present a different role model: "I wanted my sons to know that I was there, that I cared, and that I was always in their corner. I am very close to my sons. I have played with them, listened to their problems, held them in my arms when they were hurt, and shared most of the major events, crises, and successes of their lives." Listening to your son and acknowledging his feelings and his fears will allow him to know he can come to you. If you are willing to hear his pain, he will also be able to share with you his questions about pleasure. Building a healthy, loving relationship with your son is no doubt the most important thing you can do for him.

SHARING TAOIST SEXUALITY WITH OUR SONS

Though people are never too old to benefit from the Tao, the earlier they begin to practice, the more they will gain. This is also true for our sons. If you are able to share with your son some of the Taoist insights in this book, you will help him avoid a great deal of suffering and wasted energy.

Since sexual practices are done in privacy, your son cannot learn from your actions. Sexual Kung Fu is something you must tell him about through words – your own or others.

Long before boys are interested in sex, they experience sexual energy. Boys (and men) get erections and aroused for all sorts of reasons – boredom, among others. (Remember those "woodies" during math class?) One multi-orgasmic man described his experience: "My son called to me from the bathroom one morning and said, 'Dad, I can't pee.' I went into the bathroom and noticed that he had woken up with an erection, which was preventing him from being able to pee. I taught him the Cool Draw, which he has been able to use ever since to manage his sexual energy." Boys are often tortured by their inability to understand and control their sexual energy. If you can help your son understand how to channel this vital energy, you will save him from an enormous amount of sexual frustration.

Young people, however, are often not able to understand the Tao. In the words of Dr. Sun Ssu-miao in his Priceless Prescriptions, "When a man is in his youth, he usually does not understand the Tao. Or even if he does hear or read about it, he is not likely to believe it fully and practice it. When he reaches his vulnerable old age, he will, however, realize the significance of the Tao. But by then it is often too late, for he is usually too sick to benefit fully from it."

You can wait for an opportunity when your son has approached you for advice, or you can give him this book or other materials to read, explaining that you wish you had read about these practices when you were his age. If you leave this book on your bookshelf or out in a conspicuous place, you may find that he reads it on his own, but it is important for him to realize that he does not have to lock himself in his bedroom or the bathroom to read it. You may worry that he should not read books (such as this one) that are explicit about sexuality until he reaches an appropriate age, but the appropriate age is really when he is curious enough to want to read them. Rest assured that he will not read them before he is ready, and that when he is ready, he will learn about sex one way or another.

Sexuality, Secrecy, and the Tao

It should be quite clear by now that Taoism, unlike many other spiritual traditions, encourages us to acknowledge the fact that we are embodied and that sexuality is a vital part of our humanity. For most Westerners who have been taught to be ashamed of their bodies in one way or another, this is a revolutionary idea. Ironically (some would say hypocritically), Western culture titillates at the same time that it condemns. So, for most people who are used to seeing sex being used to sell everything from beer to automobiles, the idea that sexuality is also a spiritual practice is equally revolutionary.

In this book, we have tried to explain the ancient Taoist insights about love and lovemaking and how they can be used by people today. If you do nothing more than practice the techniques in this book, your life will certainly be enriched. However, we would be negligent if we did not explain that sexuality is just part of the Taoist practice and that there are equally powerful insights and exercises for cultivating your body, your emotions, your mind, and your spirit outside the bedroom as well.

The medical traditions of Taoism, known in the West as Chinese medicine and acupuncture, have helped countless people regain their health; chi-kung and Tai-chi exercises have been the foundation of the internal martial arts now popular around the world; and the core philosophical text of Taoism, the Tao Te Ching (pronounced DOW DE JING), is one of the most translated and read works of world literature. In addition, over the last twenty years, the arts of the bedchamber have begun to transform the sexual lives of people all over the globe. Taoism has a great deal of practical wisdom to offer – wisdom that can help people of any religion live healthy and meaningful lives today.

The philosophy and practices that we have taught in this book were for millennia closely guarded secrets handed down from mater to disciple after years of training. We have presented them here because we believe that human culture as a whole can benefit from their dissemination. Carnal confusion is just one of the many dilemmas we face today, but as we heal ourselves and our relationships, we will begin to heal the planet itself – for, according to the Tao, we are as much a part of nature as nature is a part of us. We believe that this healing must begin in the bedroom, for it is here that the next generation is conceived. It is through love and sex that humanity continues, and it is in loving and in making love that the power of transformation is perhaps the greatest.

However, these teachings are not to be taken any less seriously or valued any less because you did not have to pay a million gold pieces or study for a decade with a master to learn them. Cherish them and they will reward you in manifold ways. Read, reread, practice, and share them with others. The more pleasure you give, the more pleasure you receive. The more you heal, the more you are healed. This is the true secret of Taoist sexuality.

The meditations, practices and techniques described herein are not intended to be used as an alternative or substitute for professional medical treatment and care. If any readers are suffering from illnesses based on mental or emotional disorders, an appropriate professional health care practitioner or therapist should be consulted. Such problems should be corrected before you start training. This booklet does not attempt to give any medical diagnosis, treatment, prescription, or remedial recommendation in relation to any human disease, ailment, suffering or physical condition whatsoever.

Sealing of the Five Senses

Our senses are like antennas which receive waves of vibration, sound and light that come to us. If that wave makes sense, our brains will start to think. Thinking consumes more energy than any other bodily activity. As humans we can not stop thinking, looking and listing nor stop fantasizing. This sensory-linked brain function in reaction to the external world is known as the monkey mind.

Our mind connects with the heart. When the mind is disturbed, the heart too will become disturbed. The good-minded good heart is the compassionate heart (harmony), therefore its good intention connects to the earth and nourishes it. When the wood meets the earth, the wood will grow. When the water meets the earth, the water will gather. When the metal meets the earth, the metal will condense. When the fire meets the earth, the fire will tone down.

If we can make the senses stronger, and seal the senses with external and internal force, we can accumulate profound energy.

Fig. 1 Waves of Vibration Coming into Senses

1. First, we will strengthen the senses.
2. Second, we will make the connection.
3. Third, we will seal the senses.

The formula of Sealing the Five Senses effects a literal transmutation of the warm current or Chi into spiritual energy or energy of the soul. To do this, we must seal the five senses, for each one is an open gate of energy loss. The power flows out from each of the sense organs unless there is an esoteric sealing of these doors of energy. They must release energy only when specifically called upon to convey information.

Abuse of the senses leads to far more energy loss and degradation than people ordinarily realize. Examples of misuse of the senses are as follows: if you look too much, the seminal fluid is harmed; listen too much the mind is harmed; cry too much, and the blood is harmed; have sexual intercourse too much, and the marrow is harmed.

Fig. 2 Sense Energy Turning inward. Content Person sitting in Meditation. Vibration turned Inward.

A. First Formula Strengthening the Senses

The first step of strengthening our senses is very important. When the senses are strengthened we will be less affected by the stimuli coming from the outside world as criticism or praise. This strength leads to a connection with our center, where the mind becomes still, and the thoughts rest. A great deal of energy is spent thinking warring. Sealing the senses conserves this energy to be used for spiritual development.

Turning the senses inwardly to the center of the brain and down to the navel, and use the three cauldron coupling to help the suck in the natural and universal force.

1. The left ear corresponds to the metal element force.
2. The right ear corresponds to the wood element force.
3. The chin and the mouth correspond to the water element.
4. The nose corresponds to the earth star; this will tonify the earth.
5. The left eye corresponds to the sun.
6. The right eye corresponds to the moon.
   (Raise the water and lower the fire, and let it couple on the tip of nose.

Fig. 3 Elements Connected to Senses

Practice Formula One

a. Be aware of the left ear and the metal force.
b. Be aware of the right ear and the wood force.
c. Draw these two forces together into the crystal room, combine them into the fire force.

Fig. 4 Metal and Wood Transforming to Fire Crystal Room

d. Be aware of the mouth and breath into the throat center and the lower abdominal suction and the tiger and the dragon breath to create the suction, and feel the Chi entering the mouth and gathering the water force into the Chi Ball.
e. Create the collection points to contain the water in the mouth.

f. Let the water rise up, and lower the fire down and couple at the tip of the nose. Turn the awareness inward and feel the three-cauldron coupling at the same time.

Fig. 7 Coupling of Five and Water

g. Let it steam to the crystal room. The lower cauldron steams to the organs and the glands.

Fig. 8 Steam to the Crystal Room

h. Feel the four cauldrons couple at the same time, the normal breath stop and the true breath begin. Let the skin start to breath first, and the bones in the arms and the legs.

Fig. 9 Skin, Bones Breathing

i. Suck in the crown and expand to the nature and the universe. Suck in the mideyebrow, the third eye, the palms the soles of the feet, the perineum, the sacrum and the Door of Life. Eventually the whole body is breathing.

Fig. 10 Whole Body Breathing

B. Practice Formula Two

a. Be aware of the left eye as sun power.
b. Be aware of the right eye as moon power.
c. Combine these two forces into the bridge of the nose and let them become fire force.

Fig. 11 Combine to Nose

d. Be aware of the Chi in the mouth, use the throat center and the lower abdominal and the Tiger and Dragon breath to create the suction to breathe in the external Chi to form a chi ball in the mouth.

e. Raise the water and lower the fire and let them couple at the tip of the nose.

Fig. 12 External Chi

f. Feel the four cauldrons couple at the same time, the normal breath stop and the true breath begin. Let the skin start to breath first and the bones in the arms and the legs.

g. Suck in the crown and expand to the nature and the universe. Suck in the mideyebrow, the third eye, the palms the soles of the feet, the perineum, the sacrum and the Door of Life. Eventually the whole body is breathing.

Fig. 14 Eventually the whole body is breathing.

C. Practice Formula Three: Sealing of the Five Senses

a. The left ear connects to the left kidney, known as the true kidney, the activator of the stored energy of the kidneys.

Fig. 15 Stored Energy of the Kidneys

b. The right car connects to the right kidney, which is yin, and is represented by a Weaving Maiden who stores the essence of the sexual energy (sperm and ovum), as well as the inner yang that attracts the active yang known as the Gate of Life.

Fig. 16 Weaving Maiden who stores the essence of the sexual energy.

c. Be aware of the left kidney as fire force and let it gradually rise up to the left ear, creating a collection point to contain the fire force.

Fig. 17 Left ear creating a collection point to contain the fire force.

d. Be aware of the lower cauldron. Feel the fire start to warm the abdomen. The fire and steam power goes down to the sexual organs to transform the sexual energy into Chi or arousal sexual energy. Let this energy rise to the right kidney to activate the stored essence of sexual energy, the inner yin. Feel the connection of the right kidney to the right ear and let the essence yin energy rise up the ear. Create a collection point to contain the energy.

Fig. 18 Create a collection point to contain the energy.

e. Let the left and right ear, fire and water couple in the crystal room (middle of the ear).

Fig. 19 Fire and water couple in the crystal room

f. Be aware of the mouth and gather the water force into a Chi Ball.

g. Let the water and fire couple at the nose, the earth.

Fig. 20 Connecting to Earth

D. Practice Formula Four: Sealing of the Five Senses

1. Clean out the Thrusting Channels. Be aware of the sole of the feet and feet, the universe force and earth force, rising up to the left side of the sexual organ and up the left thrusting channel and up to the left side of the crown.
2. Activate the Sexual Energy in the Lower Tan Tien.

Fig. 21 Activate Sexual Energy

3. Turn the Wheel.
   a. Up the spine to the T-11 and then down to the Lower Tan Tien.
   b. Up the spine to the C-7 and then down to the solar plexus.
   c. Up the spine to the brain and then down to the heart.

Fig. 22 Turn the Wheel

4. Build the Aura
   a. Breathe red mist into the heart.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the heart, send out the red mist to create an aura around the body.

Fig. 23 Breathe into the heart.

b. Breathe yellow mist into the spleen.

1. Breathe out any gray color.
2. From the spleen, send the yellow mist to all over the body and send radiance out around the body.
3. From the mouth, breathe out the yellow mist to create an aura.

Fig. 24 Breathe into the Spleen.

c. Breathe white mist into the lungs.

1. Breathe out any gray color.
2. From the lungs, send the mist to the nose and out the nose and the skin.
3. From the nose, breathe out the white mist to create an aura.

Fig. 25 Breathe into the Lungs.

d. Breathe blue mist into the kidneys.

1. Breathe out any gray color.
2. From the kidneys, send the mist to the ears and send radiance out for whole body radiance.
3. From the ears, breathe out the blue mist to create an aura.

Fig. 26 Breathe into the Kidneys.

e. Breathe green mist into the liver.

1. Breathe out any gray color.
2. From the liver, send the mist to the eyes.
3. From the eyes, breathe the green mist out to create an aura.

14. This coupling does not produce steam, yet you will clearly feel the suction.
15. Let the fire cool.
16. Bring the energy down to the Lower Tan Tien.

E. Practice Formula Five: Sealing of the Five Senses

The harmonizing of the four forces (stopping the draining of the essence)

1. When the eyes (green dragon, east, wood) are not seeing, the eternal soul will stay in the liver. Turn the eye power inward.

2. When the ears (Tortoise, north, water) are not hearing, the sexual essence stay in the kidneys. Turn the ears inward.

3. When the tongue (red pheasant, south, fire) is not speaking the spirit stays in the heart.

4. When the nose (white tiger, west, metal) is not smelling, the corporal soul (pui) stays in the lungs. Holding the tongue power inward regulates the breath.

5. When all four are not moving, these four essences will harmonise at the earth and will be nourished, strengthened, and sealed.

Fig. 36 Five Sealing of the Five Senses

When all the four essences are not draining out, sexual essence - water, spirit - fire, eternal soul - wood, and the corporal soul (pui) - metal all will gather at the earth, at the tip of the nose.

When there is no desire in the heart - fire is not activated, the green dragon in the liver will sound, the red pheasant will close its wings, and the sexual essence stays and gathers. Wood burns to become fire, and thus gives birth to the heart energy. The white tiger (Lung) gives energy to the water (kidney) which is the life essence (body). If we do not drain out the life essence (take care of our body) the white tiger will sound, the wind will start to move. The tortoise will stay dormant, the sexual essence will be conserved and stay in. When the sexual essence and the Chi stays in us, the metal, wood, water, fire forces will harmonize together and not leak to the earth. So the sexual essence, spirit, eternal soul will gather in the good intention.

1. Clean out the Thrusting Channels.
2. Activate the Sexual Energy in the Lower Tan Tien.
3. Turn the Wheel.
    a. Up the spine to the T-11 and then down to the Lower Tan Tien.
    b. Up the spine to the C-7 and then down to the solar plexus.
    c. Up the spine to the brain and then down to the heart.
4. Build the Aura
    a. Breathe red mist into the heart.
        1. Breathe out any gray color.
        2. From the heart send out the red mist to create an aura around the body.
    b. Breathe yellow mist into the spleen.
        1. Breathe out any gray color.
        2. From the spleen, send the yellow mist to the nose.
        3. From the nose, breathe out the yellow mist to create an aura.
    c. Breathe white mist into the lungs.
        1. Breathe out any gray color.
        2. From the lungs, send the mist to the nose.
        3. From the nose, breathe out the white mist to create an aura.

d. Breathe blue mist into the kidneys.
   1. Breathe out any gray color.
   2. From the kidneys, send the mist to the ears.
   3. From the ears, breathe out the blue mist to create an aura.

e. Breathe green mist into the liver.
   1. Breathe out any gray color.
   2. From the liver, send the mist to the eyes.
   3. From the eyes breathe the green mist out to create an aura.

Fig. 37 The Pill Connecting to the Dipper

   4. Send out the pill to connect with the Big Dipper.
   5. Bring the Big Dipper down and connect it to the left and right temples, left and right mastoid, the chin, the base of the skull, and the crown.
   6. Bring the North Star into the crystal room.
   7. See the Big Dipper full of violet light; that light is now pouring into your crown.

8. Draw the Sun down to the left eye to collect the fire energy.
9. Draw the Moon down to the right eye to collect the water energy.
10. Bring the fire to the bridge of the nose.
11. Bring the water to the mideyebrow.
12. Draw the fire and water together and begin the coupling and simmer slowly and send the steam up to the third eye.
13. Draw the fire energy up from the left kidney to the left ear collection point.
14. Draw the Sexual Energy up from the sexual organs and the right kidney to the right ear collection point.

Fig. 38 Sexual Energy Rising Up

15. Draw the fire and water into the crystal room and begin the coupling. The steam produced here will become the fire for the next coupling.
16. Bring the Sexual Energy up to the Pineal Gland and allow it to drip down to the mouth. Mix it with the Saliva and fill the mouth with the sexual energy.
17. Draw the Fire Energy down from the Crystal Room to the upper lip.
18. Draw the Water Energy up from the mouth to the bridge of the nose.
19. Couple at the tip of the nose.
20. Be aware of the ears. Feel the blue energy turning into the tortoise in each ear to seal and protect the ears.
21. Be aware of the nose. Feel the white energy turning into the white tiger in the nose to seal and protect the nose.
22. Be aware of the eyes. Feel the green energy turning into the green dragon in the eyes to seal and protect the eyes.
23. Be aware of the tongue. Feel the red energy turning into the red pheasant at the tongue and in the mouth to seal and protect them.
24. Draw the green, wood energy of the eyes down to the tongue (fire) and combine the two to create one fire energy. Send the fire to the crystal room.
25. Draw the white, metal energy from the nose over to the ears (water) and combine the two to create one water energy. Send the water to the crystal room.
26. Start the coupling in the crystal room.
27. Slowly simmer for a long time.
28. Empty your mind into the Lower Tan Tien anytime thoughts arise. Feel the stillness of your senses. Feel how they are sealed.
29. Slowly let the fire cool down.
30. Gather the energy in the Lower Tan Tien.

F. Practice Formula Six: Sealing of the Five Senses

1. Clean out the Thrusting Channels.
2. Activate the Sexual Energy in the Lower Tan Tien.
3. Turn the Wheel.
   a. Up the spine to the T-11 and then down to the Lower Tan Tien.
   b. Up the spine to the C-7 and then down to the solar plexus.
   c. Up the spine to the brain and then down to the heart.
4. Build the Aura
   a. Breathe red mist into the heart.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the heart send out the red mist to create an aura around the body.
   b. Breathe yellow mist into the spleen.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the spleen, send the yellow mist to the nose.
      3. From the nose, breathe out the yellow mist to create an aura.
   c. Breathe white mist into the lungs.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the lungs, send the mist to the nose.
      3. From the nose, breathe out the white mist to create an aura.
   d. Breathe blue mist into the kidneys.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the kidneys, send the mist to the ears.
      3. From the ears, breathe out the blue mist to create an aura.
   e. Breathe green mist into the liver.
      1. Breathe out any gray color.
      2. From the liver, send the mist to the eyes.
      3. From the eyes, breathe the mist out to create an aura.
      5. Send out a pill to connect with the Big Dipper.

6. Connect the Big Dipper to the various points on the head (L&R mastoid, L&R temples, chin, base of skull, and crown), bring the North Star to the crystal room.
7. See the Big Dipper pouring violet light down into your crown.
8. Wash the whole body and especially the marrow with the violet light.
9. Bring the left kidney up to the left ear and make a collection point in the ear for the fire energy.
10. Bring sexual energy from the sexual organs and up from the right kidney to the right ear. Make a collection point in the right ear for the water energy.
11. Bring and fire and water energies into the crystal room.
12. Start the coupling in the crystal room.
13. Bring the Sun down to the left eye to collect the fire energy.
14. Bring the Moon down to the right eye to collect the water energy.
15. Bring the fire energy from the left eye to the bridge of the nose.
16. Bring the water energy from the right eye to the mideyebrow.
17. Bring the fire and the water together and start the coupling.
18. Draw the sexual energy up to the collection point in the mouth.
19. The steam from the crystal room coupling will now be used as the fire energy for the coupling at the tip of the nose. Bring the fire energy down to the upper lip.
20. Bring the water energy from the mouth to the bridge of the nose.
21. Bring the water and fire together at the tip of the nose and start the coupling.
22. Be aware of all three couplings simultaneously, the steam at the crystal room will form a pearl and open the third eye.

23. Send the liver energy out to draw in the green planet, Jupiter.
24. Bring Jupiter in to seal and protect the eyes.
25. Send the heart energy out to draw in the red planet, Mars.
26. Bring Mars in to seal and protect the tongue (mouth).
27. Bring the eyes down to the mouth and combine the eyes and tongue to create one fire energy.
28. Draw the fire energy up to the crystal room.
29. Send out the kidneys to draw in the planet Mercury.
30. Bring Mercury in to seal and protect the ears.
31. Send out the lungs to draw in the planet Venus.
32. Bring Venus in to seal and protect the nose.
33. Bring the ears to the nose and combine them to form one water energy.
34. Draw the water energy up to the crystal room.
35. Start the coupling of the fire and water at the crystal room.
36. Let go of all thoughts, send them down to the Lower Tan Tien.

Fig. 39 The Planets connect to the Organs.

37. Feel the stillness of all the essences as they are not being used to spend energy. Feel their energy staying with you. (eternal soul, spirit, corporal soul and the sexual essence)
38. Set the fire cool down.
39. Bring the energy down to the Lower Tan Tien.

G. Practice Formula Seven: Sealing of the Five Senses

1. Do the Bellows Breathing.
2. Connect with the Lower Tan Tien.
3. Build the Aura:
   a) Red mist from the heart.
   b) Yellow mist from the spleen.
   c) White mist from the lungs.
   d) Blue mist from the kidneys.
   e) Green mist from the liver.

Fig. 40 Big Dipper and North Star

4. Send out the pearl to connect to your own personal star and to attract the Big Dipper.
5. Look for the light.
6. Draw the Big Dipper in and connect it to the head (L&R temples, L&R mastoid, chin, base of the skull, and the crown). Bring the North Star to the crystal room.
7. See the Big Dipper pouring out violet light down into your crown and through your whole body. Wash your body in the violet light and especially the marrow.
8. Feel your body so full of violet light it starts to overflow and create and aura around your whole body.
9. Be aware of the coupling at the mideyebrow, crystal room, and the tip of the nose.
   Give yourself plenty of time to feel the suction in each place.
10. Now expand your mind outward to the constellations.

Fig. 41 Violet Light and Aura

11. Feel the connection of the constellations to your organs to the elements.
    a) The east constellations connect to the liver (wood).
    b) The south constellations connect to the heart (fire).
    c) The west constellations connect to the lungs (metal).
    d) The north constellations connect to the kidneys (water).
    e) The crystal room is in the center.
12. Combine the South Constellation (fire) and the East. Constellation (wood) to create one fire energy.
13. Combine the North Constellation (water) and the West Constellation (metal) to create one water energy.
14. Couple the two at the crystal room.
15. Now, feel your aura as another layer of your skin. Feel it move in and out with each breath. Take in the refined energies from the constellations.
16. Let the fire cool.
17. Gather the energy at the Lower Tan Tien.

Fig. 42 Star Constellations

H. Practice Formula Eight: Sealing of the Five Senses

1. Clean the Thrusting Channels.
2. Turn the Wheel.
3. Create the Auras.
4. Send a pill out to connect with the Big Dipper.
5. Connect with the Big Dipper at the L&R Mastoids, L&R Temples, Base of the skull, Chin, and Crown. Feel the Dipper pouring violet light into your crown and washing your whole body.
6. Create the 3 cauldrons (Bridge of nose, Crystal Room, Tip of nose).
7. Feel your aura as an extra layer of skin. Feel it move in and out with each breathe. Feel your breathe drawing in chi through your skin to your whole body.
8. Be aware of the Planets and Animals protecting and sealing your senses.

Fig. 43 Energy Body Going Out and Growing.

9. Shoot your energy body out and make yourself very large.
10. Connect with the constellations: Liver, Wood, East
    - Heart, Fire, South
    - Lungs, Metal, West
    - Kidneys, Water, North
11. Combine the East and South Constellations (wood and fire) to create one fire energy.
12. Combine the West and North Constellations (metal and water) to create one water energy.
13. Start the coupling and feel the vast amounts of energy.
14. Beam the energy down to your crystal room, to your heart and see the rainbow beams coming out from your heart to the rest of the body wherever they is needed.
15. Bring your awareness to the Lower Tan Tien and start the coupling there.
16. Bring the energy from above, now into the Lower Tan Tien.
17. Use this energy to heal any part of the body or mind that is in need.
18. Slowly allow the fire to cool.
19. Gather the energy in the Lower Tan Tien.

Master Mantak Chia is the creator of Universal Tao System, Healing Tao, Tao Yoga and is the director of the Universal Tao Master School at Tao Garden Wellness Retreat in the beautiful northern countryside of Chiangmai, Thailand. Since childhood he has been studying the Taoist approach to life. His mastery of this ancient knowledge, enhanced by his study of other disciplines, has resulted in the development of the Universal Tao System which is now being taught throughout the world.

Sealing of the Five Senses

In this booklet for the first time ever Master Chia has revealed the final level of the Immortal Tao Practices of the Universal Tao System. You can divide your practice into several sections starting with the Three Levels of Kan & Li to set up the alignment of the body for the Opening of the Crystal Room in the Sealing of the Five Senses practices. Your training should be progressive; that is, once you have mastered one section, you can progress on to the next. Be sure to spend at least one or two weeks on each section as shown in this booklet, allowing enough time to thoroughly master each part before adding on the next section. Remember that you should always do the Chi Kung Warmups before going on into the meditation; it is very important to loosen the spine before meditation that helps your focus.

In this booklet we have divided the entire Microcosmic Orbit practice into Eight Formulas: Strengthening the Senses, Activating Sun & Moon, Connecting Senses to Organs, Activating Thrusting Channels, Opening the Virtuous Animals, Clearing the Conception Vessel with the Three Tan Tiens, Clearing the Planets, Building the Aura and Connecting with the Big Dipper and North Star. This booklet explains and reveals how to activate the Sealing of the Five Senses by spiraling, touching, coloring and small air sipping techniques.

This booklet is designed so you can use it to do your practice at your home or a cave anywhere in the world. We are happy to welcome you to the Advanced Level of the Universal Tao System and to join the Universal Tao family as a Advanced practitioner.

Hands on CNT II: Working Procedures

The following are the procedures to follow in a session with a student.

A. CNT I

In order to work with the winds in your student's body, you must first integrate the procedures of Basic Chi Nei Tsang. This involves carefully sensing and touching the abdomen, clearing the large and small intestines, toning, detoxifying and pumping the organs and clearing the lymphatic system. If the person's abdomen is full of knots and tangles, the winds will not be able to circulate and leave the body. Releasing the abdomen may take a few sessions. Once you have released the main blockages, you can then begin with the work on the winds.

B. Opening the Wind Gates

In this practice we'll make "traps" for the winds. One trap is created by using the "elbow in the navel". A second trap comes from "opening the navel with the thumbs". A third and quite powerful way is "making space in the Pakua". These traps present an open space for the winds to move to and from there they can be easily flushed and vented down the legs and out of the feet.

a. Elbow in the Navel

In this level of Chi Nei Tsang one way of opening the wind gates is through the use of the elbow placed directly on the student's navel. In order to explain this procedure, we will divide the navel area into a 360 degree circle divided into four sections. It is equivalent to a compass lying on the person's belly. When we talk about left or right sides, we refer to the left or right side on your student's body. The top of the navel, is South/180°. The left side is West/270°. Below the navel is North/0°/360°. The right side of the navel is East/90°. Every degree of the navel circle connects to different parts of the body. 180° - 270° describes the upper left quadrant of the abdomen. 270° - 360° describes the lower left quadrant. 0° - 90° describes the lower right quadrant. 90° to 180° describes the upper right quadrant.

Push Down and Toward the Side

Fig. 1 Opening the Wind Gates with the Elbow.

Fig. 2 Sick winds spiral out of fingers into the earth.

The procedure to open the wind gates with the elbow is the following:

1. Place your elbow on the navel and press down.
2. Holding the pressure, move your elbow out towards the left side of your student's body at 270° toward 180° and from 180° back to 270°. Rest, twist the wrist and fingers and let the sick winds out of your finger tips down into the earth. Release the pressure, go back to the center of the navel and press down and out from the center to 280°, then from the center to 290° and continue until you have worked your way to 360°and from 360° toward 270°. When you are finished with this lower left quadrant, ask your student to breathe deeply into the navel to push your elbow out.
3. Flush the winds down the legs and out through the toes.
4. Repeat this procedure on the lower right quadrant from 90° towards 0° and from 0° toward 90°, and from 90° work toward 180° This will open the whole navel which will create a place for the wind to gather and the tightness of the abdomen will be released. For people who have back pain this work will greatly release the back pain. Flush and vent 15-20 times until you feel the navel is warm.

b. Opening the Navel

Taoists believe that there are trapped winds in the intestines and abdomen and also all the tendons from the body that join around the navel. Release the navel by pressing your thumbs on the ring muscle of the navel and pushing down and in opposite directions, for an approximate count of 15.

Fig. 3 Push Down and in Opposite Directions.

1. 0°-180° / N-S
2. 90°-270° / E-W
3. 45°-225° / SE-NW
4. 135°-315° / SE-NW

Your aim is to stretch the muscle below the skin, so you will need to place your fingers on the sides of the navel and not inside. Be careful not to hurt the skin as you push in opposite directions. Flush and vent 15-20 times.

c. Making Space in the Pakua

Opening the area around the navel following the shape of a Pakua discharges tensions from the body, releases pinched or tight nerves and reestablishes the proper flow in blood vessels and lymph channels. This follows the later heaven Pakua energy flow. To know more about the Pakua see the Fusion book. In Fusion I, organs are related to the different "Kuas" (forces). For example, the kidneys are related to Kan (water) in the North and the liver to Chen (thunder and lightning) in the East. In CNT II we relate the organs not to the kuas but to the reflexology points of the organs themselves. For example, the left kidney is at the Western Gate (4) and the right kidney at the Eastern Gate (3).

With the side of your hand, the heel of your palm, or thumbs press into the abdomen with both hands, one pushing on the other. If you feel too much wind when pressing down, stop, flush and vent down and out. This will make a big space and force the winds that are stuck in the organs and body to come and gather in the Pakua area.

Use the side of the hand, bottom of the palm (wrist), or use the thumbs.

Fig. 4 Pressing the Side of the Pakua.

Press the eight sides of the pakua in the following order:

1. The Northern Gate (related to the bladder and the sexual organs, on the bottom of the pakua, at 0°/360°),
2. The Southern Gate (related to the heart, on the top of the pakua, at 180°),
3. The Eastern Gate (related to the right kidney, on your student's right side, at 90°),
4. The Western Gate (related to the left kidney, on your student's left side, at 270°),
5. The Southwestern Gate (related to the stomach and spleen, on your student's upper left, at 225°),
6. The Northeastern Gate (related to the intestines, on your student's lower right, at 45°),
7. The Southeastern Gate (related to the liver and gall bladder,on your student's upper right, at 135°).
8. Finally, the Northwestern Gate (related to the intestines, on your student's lower left, at 315°). Flush and vent 15-20 times.

This work includes releasing the navel area and then chasing and flushing out the winds as described in the previous section. The next chapter of this book provides a detailed explanation of the procedure to follow for specific winds and their manifestation. Most of the work is done with the elbow on the student's navel and by working on related points in the back, head and limbs.

Fig. 5 Monkey Dancing

D. Closing the Session

When you perform Chi Nei Tsang, the blood and energy concentrate in the abdomen. Before your student gets up when you have finished the session, guide her to do “monkey dancing”. Ask her to lie on her back and to raise her arms and legs toward the ceiling and to shake them enthusiastically and loosely and to laugh while breathing deeply in the abdomen. This will help activate the lymph and blood circulation. (Fig. 5)

E. Encouraging Students to Work on Themselves

It is important to teach your students to do Chi Nei Tsang II on themselves between sessions. At the end of the session point out to them the areas that were particularly tight or congested; it is important that they continue to work on releasing them at home. Show them how to work on themselves using their fingers with their hands relaxed and elbows extended to their sides. Their shoulders, neck and arms should be relaxed and connected to the spine.

Tell your students that it is important for them to be responsible for their health and take the time to work on themselves. If they are confident of their own abilities to care for themselves they will feel more positive, stronger and free. Refer them to any additional practices that could help them to deal with their situation. In the Taoist way, suggest that they simplify their lives by allowing one unnecessary thing to fall away each day. This will settle their organs and calm their minds.

A daily routine of moderate exercise (for instance walking briskly) activates blood circulation and movement of the lymphatic system and keeps the body in good shape. It is also good for them to massage their belly every day stimulating the four corners of the intestines: the ileocecal valve (in the lower right abdomen approximately at the midpoint between the navel and the right pelvic bone); the hepatic flexure in the right upper abdomen, (under the bottom right corner of the rib cage and under the liver); the splenic flexure (in the upper left quadrant of the abdomen under the bottom of the left rib cage); and the sigmoid colon (from the lower left corner of the abdomen between the midline of the abdomen and the left pelvic bone). Following a healthy diet is also very important.

In the way of the Tao, each individual in the world is responsible for his own enlightenment and well being. As Universal Tao Chi Nei Tsang practitioners and teachers, we are responsible for encouraging our students to be themselves and grow. As they do their work and feel the results they will want to do more for themselves.

First Wind
Wind that attacks the Liver and the Pericardium and the Heart

This wind rises from the small intestines and spleen and attacks the liver, pericardium and heart making them weak and tired. Symptoms usually manifest as a burning itching feeling and restless sleep, sometimes accompanied by a burning rash. The liver and heart tend to hold the heavy duty emotions of anger, envy, hatred, etc. Working on the First Wind can be a strong emotional release.

A. Navel Points for the First Wind

Use your elbow to press the following points:

Fig. 7 Navel Points for the First Wind

Follow the arrows; this will help spiral all winds out from the organs.

1. Point 35 located just above the navel, on the left side.
2. Point 35 on the right side.
3. Point 32 located below the navel towards the outside of the body, on the left side.
4. Point 32 on the right side.
5. Point 37 located on a line right above the navel, on the right side.
6. Point 37 on the left side.
7. Point 30 located below the lower end of the sternum. Be careful not to press on the tip of the sternum as it is very delicate.

B. Liver

To release the wind from the liver, observe the shape of your student's rib cage. If there is a problem, the ribs may be raised on one side.

1. Loosen the area under the ribs and massage the liver the liver, "Shhhhh", sound.
2. Press your knuckles on and between the rib bones all around the bottom of the ribcage on your student's right side. This might be particularly painful since the emotional energy stuck on the liver tends to rise and get stuck in the rib bones.
